How we collect information

Many of the ways in which you interact with our site allow us to learn more about you. We collect and store statistics and other information about the online activities of our visitors on an aggregated (collective) basis. For example, we can track the number of people who view each page to learn which features are the most popular. However, in these and almost all other instances, we do not obtain personally identifiable information about you.

How we use and disclose your information

As a general practice, we do not sell your personal identifiable information to third parties. For example, we do not sell your email address or your name and personal demographic information to mass marketers. We use your information on an aggregated basis to do such things as operate and enhance our site along with selling and delivering advertising. We also use this data, both aggregated and personally identifiable, to enhance your onsite experience by displaying content and messages that we believe will be of interest to you. In some cases, we use your personally identifiable information to provide information to you, such as to send site updates and events information to you.

Second, cookies can also help us tailor our website or messages to better match your needs and interests. Third, cookies allow us to better understand how users use our site, which helps us focus our resources on features that are most popular with our users. You are always free to decline our cookies if your browser permits (but some parts of our site may not work properly if you do).

Limits on our abilities

Although your privacy is very important to us, due to the existing legal, regulatory, and security environment, we cannot fully ensure that your private communications and other personal identifiable information will not be disclosed to third parties. The government or third parties under certain circumstances may intercept or access transmissions or private communications. In the unlikely event we need to investigate our entities, we can (and you authorize us to do so) disclose any information about you to private entities, law enforcement, or other government officials as we, in our sole discretion, believe necessary and appropriate.
