Seminar presenting the H2020 project www.Crosscult.eu

In this seminar we discuss the evolution of a prototype mobile App for digital humanities and cultural heritage from the perspective of how to trigger reflection, best described as a geo-located outdoor exhibition played between different cities. It uses gamification as a framework to motivate users to discover historical objects associated with reflective history topics and to encourage contributions to collective public history. By exploiting serendipitous discovery and the stimulation of curiosity we look at how to motivate user reflection. In this seminar we explore the use of a paper prototyping process using a board game to investigate the modes and forms of reflection and perspectives of players.
