

"Well, I would say it is best that I start with the home screen. I would skip the login page, I think. Now, I just draw the icons in the bar at the top. I can't get together the icons anymore. I just write courses first, - what else was there- I just add calendar, bulletin board now. I do not remember all the icons, I cannot quite get that together completely. And then we had announcements here on the home screen. On the left side, what was on the left side? It is not so easy from memory. I must say it still looks a bit empty. Should I somehow add another page. Is this maybe my page 1. This is the course screen, I am now doing the current semester with the courses, then registered courses, last semester. Can I draw the individual pages or should this rather become one page? Then next I do the calendar. So, and then I think it was that in the calendar somehow you first get a weekly view with the entries of the time. Okay, then with a click you could somehow get to the timetable. Ah, yes here is also the subject that is entered in the calendar. With the timetable, it was only the name of the name of the course and the room. Here on the left side were the times somehow. Okay and then I maybe just remember the bulletin board. Offers, request, job offers, things to know, tutoring and transfer was there too, I think. I think I could draw another course page, maybe this is not bad either."
