We regret that few of those who conduct the business of producing and selling dental supplies have accepted the long-standing invitation, in these reports, to manifest practical interest in the development of non-commercial dental literature by contributing to the development of our Endowment Fund. Under these circumstances, it is all the more agreeable to call special attention to the generosity of the dental business men and organizations named below, who have contributed effectively to the permanent support of this JOURNAL without qualification, condition or reservation, and who have shown, by the cordiality of their specific approval, that they wish to encourage and foster the development of independent research and scientific journalism in dentistry.
