

Studies in the Character of Christ. An Argument for the Truth of Christianity.

By Rev. Charles Henry Robinson, M. A. New Impression. Six penny edition. Longmans, Green & Co., New York and London. 1907.

It is a good thing that this cheaper edition of Mr. Robinson's book has been produced. It is a valuable presentation of the character of Christ and makes a conclusive argument for the deity of Jesus that will have weight with the average man who may have trouble on that subject. The author seizes clearly the salient points and makes good use of sharp contrast in showing how Christ differed from other men. Where the book lacks in my judgment is in a rather vague conception of the atonement and an over emphasis on the mere example of Jesus to the neglect of the more vital union of the Christian with Christ. But as a whole the volume will serve its purpose.

The Life of Christ.

By the Very Rev. Alexander Stewart, D. D., Principal of St. Mary's College, St. Andrews, Scotland. J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia, 1907. Pages 124.

The volume belongs to the Temple Series of Bible Characters and is worthy of its place. The writer is very cautious about committing himself on critical questions, but his sympathies lie with the conservative side of things. For a simple handbook one wonders if there is not too much criticism and too little of the devotional spirit. But you cannot get everything in this compass. The treatment is fresh, clear, able and reverent.

Here we have a most delightful volume, worthy of the best traditions of British scholarship, on a par with the work of Swete, Plummer, Sanday and men like them. It is to be observed that this notable commentary comes from the pastor of
