

in the book is the minute discussion of each of the terms used of Jesus. One will find the work a handy place to turn to for data on this subject. The book is not a discussion of the whole question of the deity of Jesus, but only of this one aspect. This it does thoroughly.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

The Man of Galilee. A new enquiry.

By George R. Wendling. Olcott Publishing Co., Washington, D. C., 1907. Pages 270.

Mr. Wendling has a series of very able, popular lectures which he has delivered to enthusiastic audiences all over the country. One need not doubt that much good has been done to the cause of religion and morality by these addresses. He is now publishing seven of them under the title of Modern Doubt Series. They treat some of the central questions of faith. The present volume is the most important of the series. Mr. Wendling comes at the problem of Jesus not from the standpoint of a technical theologian, but from that of a cultured publicist who has read widely the criticisms of sceptics and has done his own thinking. His treatment is therefore independent and fresh rather than exhaustive. He follows large general lines of thinking which form a fine groove for the mind of the modern man. I suspect that many a busy man of to-day who has been thrown into doubt by the noise of present-day sceptics will find a way out into the open by means of Mr. Wendling's address which is here published in expanded form. It has all the elements of Mr. Wendling's characteristic style and is readable clear through.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

The Teaching of Jesus Concerning His Own Person.

By Wayland Hoyt, LL.D. American Tract Society, New York, 1907. Price, 75 cents. Pages 199.

Dr. Hoyt writes with enthusiasm on this noble theme and with admirable good sense. He is alert and sane and skilfully puts the various aspects of the problem in a way to help the young readers whom he has in mind. But older minds will