Prof. Ramsay's books are an event for all students of the New Testament and in particular of Paul and Luke. But it is not alone the Acts and Paul's Epistles that have had so much light thrown upon them by this distinguished investigator. His specialty in research is Asia Minor. For this purpose the University of Aberdeen, where he is Professor of Latin, grants him half the year and he has a fund at his disposal with which to prosecute research. As a result of his brilliant powers in this enterprise he is today the master of the world on all topics relating to Asia Minor. He continues his investigations year by year to the enrichment of the world's knowledge. This work has already borne rich fruit on the interpretation of Paul's life and Epistles, the Apocalypse of John, and early eastern church history. The present volume gets its title from the first chapter which is a discussion of Harnack's Lukas der Artz, with very acute criticisms of the whole work of Luke. There is one chapter also on the possible Lukan authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews, one on St. Paul's Use of Metaphors, one on the Oldest Written Gospel (Q or the Logia of Matthew), one on the Chronology of the Life of Christ, one on Sanday's The Life of Christ in Recent Research. The remaining chapters deal with problems of archæology and Lycaonian Church History. The illustrations are original and interesting. Like all of Sir W. M. Ramsay's books fresh points greet one at every turn. He never leaves a subject exactly where he found it. His testimony as a whole is distinctly confirmatory of the value of Luke as an historian.
