

THE ENDOWMENT FUND OF THE JOURNAL OF DENTAL RESEARCH

WILLIAM J. GIES

On page 5 of this volume it was stated that "the JOURNAL OF DENTAL RESEARCH will be financed, as a University is supported, with public-spirited special gifts for this purpose and from a cumulative, permanent, endowment fund to be created; also from subscriptions for its successive volumes—not from advertisements of goods for sale."

The purpose to create an endowment fund was announced recently in a prospectus issued to dentists, and to others presumed to be interested in the successful development of the JOURNAL OF DENTAL RESEARCH, in which it was said: "Although the JOURNAL OF DENTAL RESEARCH is assured of receiving special gifts that will be sufficient to cover all possible deficits in its financial affairs, it is desired, nevertheless, to base the continuing support of the JOURNAL on a permanent endowment fund, the proceeds of which will be available for the maintenance (later) of the JOURNAL at an exceptionally low subscription price, and for the direct promotion of dental research with grants of money for its advancement."

Despite the fact that manifestation of special interest in this fund could hardly be expected before the appearance of the first number, generous supporters of the plan to issue a research journal in dentistry have already shown the faith that is in them by contributing $2,000. It gives me very great pleasure to publish, below, our first report in this relation.

The JOURNAL OF DENTAL RESEARCH will publish, in each successive volume, a standing cumulative list of the names of the donors to this fund, as a recurrent testimonial to the generosity of those who will thus have become the founders of the first research journal to represent dentistry in particular and stomatology in general.

Contributions to this permanent endowment fund, in any amount, are invited from all who may be interested in the welfare and continuing success of this JOURNAL. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the JOURNAL OF DENTAL RESEARCH, Inc., and forwarded to the writer at the address given below.
