

The treatment is characterized by the thorough scholarship for which the author is well and widely known. Mastering of the text of Scripture, and of the mass of opinion upon it, is easily in evidence. Reverence of mind and heart toward the Great Teacher is shown everywhere. There is sane, balanced, but not colorless discussion of the great problems involved. Our author knows what and why he believes, and is not afraid to stand up and speak his mind. The style is crisp, vigorous and forcible. There is no dullness or dragging, but perhaps a too great fondness for short sentences, not giving the requisite variety; and both smoothness and clearness sometimes suffer. But far better is a string of aphorisms than a flow of vapid sweetness! The little book deserves and will receive wide and careful reading.

E. C. DARGAN.

Our Lord's Resurrection.

By the Rev. W. J. Sparrow Simpson, Chaplain of St. Mary's Hospital, Oxford. Longmans, Green & Co. New York and London. 1906. Price $1.40 net. Pages 320.

This is a very timely book, for the resurrection of Jesus is denied by the modern radical critics. We need fresh accent on this great fact, this fundamental Christian reality. Mr. Simpson has done a fine service in this sane and scholarly discussion of the subject. It is a book that laymen as well as ministers would find helpful. While it is thoroughly able and modern, the style is clear and the arguments easily grasped. It is a comfort to get hold of so fresh and frank a book that does not truckle to modern infidel views in the least. A. T. ROBERTSON.

The Last Message of Jesus Christ.—Or the Apocalypse in a New Light.

By John Hamilton Timbrell. Eaton & Mains, New York. 1905. Price $1.75 net. Pages 456.

We are making headway in understanding the book of Revelation. Prof. W. M. Ramsay has done a great service in his Letters to the Seven Churches in pointing out the relation of the book to the history of Asia Minor,