

A History of Textual Criticism of the New Testament. By Marvin R. Vincent, D.D. Macmillan Co. New York. 1908. $1.00 net.

One of the series of "New Testament Hand-books," edited by Dean Shailer Mathews, designed to present in brief and scholarly form the results of the scientific study of the New Testament. Each volume covers its own special field; this one by the well-known specialist, Dr. Marvin Vincent, in a most complete and admirable way. Though higher criticism has grown so fast in recent years as to cast a shadow over its elder brother, the value of textual criticism remains unaltered, sterling and constant, and the demand for its use by the preacher will last as long as the Christian religion endures. In this "History," a rich mine of suggestions for the picking of the preacher, as in the "Science," will be found still, one of his vital helps to sermon preparation.

The Plain Man and His Bible. By Len. G. Broughton, D.D. American Baptist Publication Society. 1910. 60 cents, net.

In his unique and telling way, Dr. Broughton gives his message and testimony in this characteristic book. The range of subjects gives variety to the contents and opportunity for a lively style of treatment, and from the beginning to the end the keen, quaint, earnest preacher sustains the interest and makes his treatment practical. Here are "chapters" that are really popular addresses on, "How We Got Our Bible," "The Divine Origin of the Bible," "The Bible and Science," "An Answer to Bible Critics," "Testimony of History and Experience," "The Bible Our Critic," "How to Study the Bible," and "How to Form a Bible Class." With the fervor of a preacher who "believes something," the author argues that such is the Bible and such God's purpose and plan that science and criticism cannot disprove or hurt it. Witness especially its conquests in the teeth of the Rationalism of the 18th century and its fruits in Christian experience and life in every age.
