

ter than Paul the Illuminated, though Barnabas the Chastened and Mark the Steadied are delightful. Matthew the Exalted and Cornelius the Transplanted also challenge attention. The prayer at the close of each discussion has a wonderful sympathetic touch and reverential feeling. The book is really so suggestive that it palls on one after awhile. It is best not to read it all at once, but a character at a time.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

Complete Index to the Expositor's Bible. Topical and Textual.

By S. G. Ayres, B. D., Librarian of Drew Theological Seminary. New York, A. C. Armstrong & Son. 1905. Pages 312.

This volume adds much to the handy efficiency of the Expositor's Bible. A General Preface to the entire series has been provided by the editor, Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll. Prof. W. H. Bennett, of New College, London, writes the Introduction to the Old Testament section. He makes a plausible plea for the new views of the Old Testament. Certainly there is much less objection to criticism than formerly, but Prof. Bennett rightly admits that the critics hinder their own cause by their numerous disagreements. The majority of the books in the Old Testament section of the Expositor's Bible follow the new criticism. But it is too soon to say that their views will be final. There will inevitably come a soberer reaction that will be nearer the truth as has already happened in the New Testament field. Prof. W. F. Adeney, Manchester, England, who writes the Introduction to the New Testament section points this out well. He gives a fair and just survey of the New Testament problems of the present day as well as the progress made.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

The Isle That Is Called Patmos.

By William Edgar Geil. Marshall Brothers, London.

Dr. Geil made two trips to Patmos and gathered the most important facts about the present condition and history of the island. He gives abundant illustrations of the life of the people at the present day. Mr. Geil has traveled much and his books have the element of life though also of haste. He is addressing himself to present readers rather than to permanent value. He is the author of "A Yankee on the Yangtze," etc.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

The Student's Chronological New Testament.

By Prof. A. T. Robertson, D. D. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York and Chicago. Price $1.00 net.

Professor Robertson has given to the public in this admirable manual the results of long and patient research in the New Testament. The introductions to the different books are brief, but quite comprehensive, few matters of importance being passed over in silence. The outlines of the various books are in themselves an interpretation of the thought, and are expressed in a fresh and suggestive way. The author often packs into a short, ringing sentence the ripe results of long research.

The chronological arrangement is not rigidly carried through, but is modified by practical considerations. Thus the four Gospels are placed at the beginning, inasmuch as the story of our Lord's life lies at the foundation of New Testament Christianity. It is only in the epistolary literature that the order of composition is carefully observed in the arrangement of the literature. Pastors and Sunday-school teachers will derive much profit from the constant use of this excellent manual. The text used is that of the American Standard edition.

JOHN R. SAMPEY.

X. MISCELLANEOUS.

The Baptist World Congress. Authorized Record of Proceedings.

London, Baptist Union Publication Department. 1905. Pages 346.

Rev. J. H. Shakespeare furnishes an introduction that sets forth admirably the spirit of the great meeting held in London last July. The volume is a verbatim report of everything said and done and forms a book of the greatest interest to every intelligent Baptist. There are numerous pictures of prominent Baptists from all over the world. The significance of this first Baptist World Congress will only be fully appreciated in coming years.