

sian scenery and life she presents heroism, adventure, romance, love in a dramatic story. As a novel it should be a popular success. As a missionary volume it may serve a useful end.

IV. BIBLICAL LITERATURE.

Biblical and Theological Studies. By the Members of the Faculty of Princeton Theological Seminary. Published in Commemoration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Founding of the Seminary. Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York. 1912. Pages 634. $3.00, net.

This massive volume is a worthy memorial of the Princeton Seminary Centennial. The leading chapter in the book is by President Patton on "Theological Encyclopedia," in which he contends for a well-rounded course in theology. Dr. Warfield writes ably on "The Emotional Life of Our Lord," while Dr. J. D. Davis discusses "The Child Whose Name is Wonderful." Dr. Vos treats "The Eschatological Aspect of the Pauline Conception of the Spirit," while Dr. Armstrong gives "The Place of the Resurrection Appearances of Jesus." So the volume moves on a high plane of ability and dignity. Dr. Robert Dick Kilson stoutly maintains that "The Aramaic of Daniel" suits best the early date of the book, not long after the founding of the Persian empire.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

The Historicity of Jesus. By Shirley J. Case, of the Department of New Testament Literature and Interpretation in the University of Chicago. 1912: University of Chicago Press, Chicago. Pages 352. $1.50, net.

Dr. Case undertakes to answer the wild theories of W. B. Smith, of New Orleans, and Arthur Drews, of Germany, that Jesus never lived at all. It is not a difficult task to demolish that contention and Case has done it successfully, and with great ability. But in Chapter X, he undertakes to set forth "Jesus' Significance in Modern Religion." This he does in a shrewd and suave criticism of the deity of Jesus in justification of the Unitarian view. He holds the primitive interpretation of