We are pleased to announce the reappearance of the AlQalam journal of medical and applied sciences (AJMAS) having been interrupted for one year and half, except for conference proceeding. The current issue will be the first online issue under the sponsorships of the University of Tripoli Alahlia (UTA), Janzur, Libya.

Despite the uprising difficulties in Libya, we are delighted to re-construct the journal's earlier track record funded by UTA. We assigned online International Standard Serial Number (eISSN: 2707-7179), an international Identifier for serials and other continuing resources, and also uploaded all previous issues and conference proceeding on the new webpage of the journal <sup>[1]</sup>.

We are working to make this journal be indexed in different online database and searching engine, which will enhance the journal's visibility and quality to meet the global standards of scholarly publishing. We would like to declare our gratitude to the auspices host and counsellors who have supported the journal from the inception of the journal. Their hard work and ideal commitment were the source behind the welfare of the journal and its reliability over the past 3 years.

Together, the editorial board attained the in-house editorial review and construction (proofreading, copyediting, and layout editing), as well as other editorial services starting with receiving the submissions, scanning, managing the peer-review process and correspond their comments to pass an editorial decision and statement with authors with aim of improving their production.

Today, AJMAS completes three years and steps into the fourth year of its stage, with the motivation to continual support of Libyan young scientist with their academic carrier particularly at different stages and landmarks to yield a productive work appear to the rest of the world despite the disappointing situation due to the COVID-19 outbreak. We should take the opportunity now to thank the authors for choosing AJMAS as their means of sharing their outcomes and represent their insights. We also thank the reviewers and the editorial team for their unceasing support and perhaps most highly our readers who make it all valuable.

Two volumes and three conference proceeding were published including over 322 pages constructed by the extensive insistence of the editorial team. We thankfully declare that the first volume released online were precisely within 5 working days of the due date. In addition, the full text of journal appears completely and freely open access for both authors and readers.

AJMAS publishes reports in all areas of medical, biomedical, life sciences, biotechnology, pharmacy, nursing and other applied sciences. The journal allows free access to its contents, which is likely to attract more readers and citations [2]. Reports are published in the form of editorial, original article, review articles, case reports, discussion papers, letters to the editor, and book reviews. AJMAS also publishes abstracts of scientific meetings in the form of conference proceeding. Commentaries or perspectives in the scope of the journal that highlights the current clinical or scientific concerns may either be considered.

Moreover, the article processing charge (APC) is currently waived.

The current issue will be the first issue to be published under the online ISSN number assigned by the ISSN international center. Being an internationally recognized and peer review journal, will give AJMAS an inclusive distribution and hopefully, be able to get the journal listed on different indexes. However, the editorial board remains dedicated to the actual spirit of open access for both authors and readers, and will stay enthusiastic to support young authors particularly Libyan scholars.

Finally, we will keep up our permissive copyediting and layout editing services, owing that various authors over the world may not sufficiently capable of yielding a readily publishable document. We affirm our commitment to the journal's mission and we invite all scholars in the journal-related field to support us as authors, reviewers, and readers.
