The Citation File Format (CFF) - Overview

- Community format for providing software citation metadata in `CITATION.cff` (YAML)
- Focus on (advanced) citation use cases and usability
- Actively developed
- Used, e.g., in the Research Software Directory CMS
-  Integrated with GitHub, Zenodo, Zotero
- Compatible with CodeMeta (conversion tools available)

cff-version: 1.2.0
message: If you use this software, please cite it using these metadata.

Citation File Format integration in GitHub

A screenshot of a GitHub repository page. At the top, there are three commits from 10 days ago. Below them is a "Cite this repository" section. This section includes a "Cite this repository" button, a note about citing the software, and links for APA and BibTeX citation styles. A "View citation file" button is also present.

View citation file

- Detect CITATION.cff files
- Render information (BibTeX, citation styles)
 - Based on currently viewed commit
 - Uses ruby-cff Gem
- Link to CITATION.cff file
- Documentation and template

Citation File Format integration in Zenodo

- Uses citation information in `CITATION.cff` via GitHub-Zenodo integration
- No conversion to `.zenodo.json` needed for basic use ...
 - ... unless user supplies advanced (e.g. contributors) information (coming in future CFF version)

Zenodo @ZENODO_ORG

We've just added support for CITATION.cff files in our GitHub integration.

Just push a CITATION.cff file in your repo and we'll use it when registering the DOI via the @ZENODO_ORG @github integration guides.github.com/activities/cit....

Enjoy! 🎉

- Zotero connectors pick up the information in CITATION.cff

 Zotero @zotero

We've added support for GitHub's new citation feature. When saving GitHub repos to your library, Zotero can now use the enhanced metadata provided by developers.

If there's no citation file, Zotero will continue to use the existing repo metadata (Company, Prog. Language, etc.).

Citation File Format - Conclusion & outlook

- “One giant leap for the Citation File Format, one small step for software citation.” 🚀
 - (~300 files before GitHub integration, 1,400+ today)
 - Open development continues
 - Governance will be more formally established
