PROCESSING NOTES FOR ICPSR #2896
Historical, Demographic, Economic, and Social Data:
The United States, 1790-2002

- 1) More documentation for many of the variables in Parts 1-43 can be found in the original documentation for ICPSR 0003.
- 2) Each part of the codebook contains information identifying each data variable, and a textual description of every variable. The description includes a source citation consisting of a volume identification number and a table number. The volume numbers prefaced by "Dub" refer to the code number assigned to each volume published by the U.S. Census Bureau from 1790 to 1945; this number was assigned by Henry J. Dubester in Catalog of U. S. Census Publications, 1790- 1945 (Washington, D. C. 1950). For volumes published after 1945, this volume identification number was assigned by the ICPSR. All census volumes from which data were taken are listed at the front of the codebook, along with their identifying volume numbers. Data users can thus obtain the source citation for each variable in the collection. The user of the machine-readable data is also advised to consult the original census publications for information as to enumeration, tabulation, and classification procedures, and for precise definitions of the items of information presented.
- 3) The variables described in the accompanying codebook were selected from the information published in the census reports and other sources consulted. Therefore, the detail in which some categories of information are presented (most notably, age by race and sex in the pre-1870 data sets) reflects that presented in the original tabulations of the data. For example, county-level data by race and sex for ten-year intervals of age were published for the censuses of 1830-1860, and the information has been preserved in this form in the ICPSR files. When tabulation categories were collapsed for presentation in the published volumes (as in 1870), the variables stored in the ICPSR files would again be those which appeared in published form. Users of the data may thus discern a lack of continuity in the tabulation categories or detail presented from one ICPSR data set to the next; this is merely a reflection of the discontinuities in the original sources themselves. In some instances, variables representing category totals (such as total population, total number of farms, etc.) are not presented in the data sets, although they can readily be computed by summing their constituent parts.
- 4) For Parts 44-50, much of the basic information for 1840-1860 and 1880 was furnished by Lee A. Craig (Dept. of Economics, North Carolina State University) and Thomas Weiss (Dept. of Economics, University of Kansas). The price and output data for 1840-1860 were calculated by Lee Craig. Some variables were taken from ICPSR 0003. The present data sets were compiled and corrected by Michael R. Haines (Dept. of Economics, Colgate University).

- 5) Parts 7, 58-69, and 85 have been replaced with the updated version of the datasets. Also, Parts 86-106 have been added to this version of the data collection. Finally, SAS, PASW (SPSS), and Stata setup and ready-to-go files were produced for Parts 1-106.
- 6) Parts 98 and 105: No data sources were provided for these parts.
- 7) Parts 44-50, 85-97, 99-104, and 106: Variable labels for many variables are truncated; please refer to the “Variable List for Parts 44-50, 85-97, 99-104, & 106 (Provided by the Data Producer)” section of the ICPSR codebook for the full version of the variable labels.

For the other parts, variable labels for some variables are truncated; however, there is no documentation available for the full version of the variable labels.

- 8) Parts 88, 91, and 93: Variable FIPS is present in the data but is missing from the codebook; variable LEVEL is documented in the codebook but does not appear in the data; and variable COUNNAME is present in the data, but variable NAME appears in the codebook.
- 9) Part 96: Some of the geographic variables differ in names between the data and the codebook. They are listed in different order as well.
- 10) Part 96: Some of the variables in this part have large amounts of values. When tabulating these variables in Stata (Windows and Linux), an error message “too many values” appears.

The command bigtab can be used (e.g. bigtab Var1), but in Windows only. It is available via download by typing the Stata command ssc install bigtab. (bigtab Author: Paul H. Bern, Princeton University).

- 11) Parts 102 and 103: The order of geographic variables in the codebook does not match that of the data.
- 12) For most of the data files, the first seven variables and the last variable in the data set contain information identifying the unit of analysis and the data set in general. The following identification variables are used in all files:

State:	ICPSR State Code
	01 Connecticut
	02 Maine

Name: County or State Name.
Seventeen characters are used to store the alphabetic name of the unit of analysis.

County: County Identification Number.
Usually the last variable in each data set, this four-digit code number uniquely identifies each county within a state. The first three digits of this code correspond to the Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) code number assigned to counties in the contemporary period; a fourth digit was added to allow for the insertion of counties which existed in the past but which have disappeared.

- 13) For further information on the ICPSR version of the data collection, please refer to the SAS, PASW (SPSS), and Stata setup and ready-to-go files.

This set of files provides county level data from the United States Censuses of Agriculture for 1840 to 1910 and from 1950 to 1997. It also includes the state and national totals for the variables included. All variables at the county level were taken. Further censuses will be added. Please note that most of the basic crop output data apply to the previous harvest year. Since the censuses were taken in June, this means 1839, 1849, 1859, 1869, 1879, 1889, 1899 etc. Only after 1880 was a distinction made as to time period in the published data. The stock variables, such as value of farms, numbers of livestock, and acreage, apply to the time of the census.

Certain basic things were done to the data. First, all the data were checked for adding up. That is, counties should total up to states and states should total up to the United States total, whenever counts were involved. Second, some regular extra variables were added, including the county and state FIPS codes, codes for census region, and a variable "level" (1=county 2=state 3=USA) to allow for selection. Third, for 1840-1860, some additional variables were created. These involved the inclusion of prices (by state) for various commodities, the multiplication of the physical quantities by those prices to obtain value of output of those commodities, and the summing of various values to obtain different measures of the value of agricultural output. This was not done for 1870 and subsequent censuses.

The format of the present set of files is STATA version 9.0. What follows here is simply a listing of the variables and their labels using the STATA "describe" command. The STATA files may be readily converted into other formats with such programs as StatTransfer and DBMS Copy. The county files are labeled ag???co.dta, where "???" represents the last three digits of the census year, e.g., "840" represents 1840. More complete information for many of the variables may be found in the original census volumes.

Much of the basic information for 1840-1860 and 1880 was furnished by Lee A. Craig (Dept. of Economics, North Carolina State University) and Thomas Weiss (Dept. of Economics, University of Kansas). The price and output data for 1840-1860 were calculated by Lee Craig. Some variables were taken from ICPSR #0003. The present data sets were compiled and corrected by Michael R. Haines (Dept. of Economics, Colgate University).

The files contain basic information from 1850 to 1950 taken from ICPSR Study Number 0003. Additional information for 1950 and for the files 1954 to 1974 were taken from various digitized files that were done by the United States Bureau of the Census and the United States Department of Agriculture. The files from 1978 to 1997 are from the CD-Rom's provided by the Bureau of the Census. The file for 2002 is from a CD-ROM from the Department of Agriculture.
