

Simon Nathan, Olga Ivanova, Fabio Rocha, Carolina Diamandis
 LCG RESEARCH
 Correspondence to diamandis@lazar-consortium.com

Peer reviewed by Swabian Research, completed on September 23, 2023

Preliminary diagnostic chart for the diagnosis of Oshtoran Syndrome

References

- Kelley et al. Iron overload is rare in patients homozygous for the H63D mutation Can J Gastroenterol Hepatol 2014
- Incidence of a clinically relevant H63D syndrome in carriers of a homozygous mutation of HFE gene H63D, abgerufen am 05.09.2022
- Séguéla et al., Eosinophilic cardiac disease: Molecular, clinical and imaging aspects, Arch Cardiovasc Dis, 2015
- Banaszkiwicz et al., Endocrine disorders in patients with hereditary hemochromatosis, European Journal of Translational and Clinical Medicine, 2018
- Charmandari et al., Adrenal insufficiency, The Lancet, 2014
- Lazar et al., Endocrinology: Patients suffering from H63D syndrome are at high risk to develop clinically relevant endocrine abnormalities affecting their adrenal glands as well as their HPA and SAM axes, Zenodo Publishing, 2022
- Ivanova et al., Diabetes in patients with iron metabolism disorders - including H63D homozygous mutation syndrome, Zenodo Publishing, 2023
- Wirkstoff aktuell - Eine Information der KBV im Rahmen des § 73 (8) SGB V in Zusammenarbeit mit der Arzneimittelkommission der Deutschen Ärzteschaft: Deferasirox (Exjade), Ausgabe 5-2008
- Seideman et al. Injury protection strategies for H63D syndrome patients suffering from cataplexy 2021
- Diamandis DC, Wilson J, Ivanova O, Seideman D. H63D syndrome (Oslo Syndrome) is clinically the iron sibling of Wilson's disease. Authorea Preprints; 2022. DOI: 10.22541/au.165459421.16231448/v1
- Diamandis DC, Rocha F, Honda R. Non-Transferrin-Bound Iron (NTBI) is an overlooked risk factor for iron poisoning and H63D Syndrome Type-1 in patients with chronically elevated transferrin saturation. Authorea Preprints; 2023. DOI: 10.22541/au.168245291.17560864/v1.
- Carolina Diamandis, David Seideman, Alexandros Balaskas, Anastasios Papadopoulos, and Riku Honda: Prevalence of narcolepsy in patients with H63D syndrome. <https://doi.org/10.21203/rs.3.rs-507295/v1>
- <https://irondisorders.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/12/Genetic-H63D-2020.pdf>

10. Further information

- Nandar und Connor HFE Gene Variants Affect Iron in the Brain The Journal of Nutrition 2011
- Mikhaylova, L. A. (2015). Heart rate variability in male teenagers with different types of vegetative reactivity. Pediatrics n.a. GN Speransky, 94(2).
- Adams et al. EASL International Consensus Conference on Haemochromatosis Journal of Hepatology 2000
- Liu et al. Mutant HFE H63D Protein Is Associated with Prolonged Endoplasmic Reticulum Stress and Increased Neuronal Vulnerability J Biol Chem. 2011

Further studies, papers and studies on Google Scholar:

