

CONP Portal Terms of Use

(Last updated on 2021-07-05)

The user agrees:

- to obtain required ethics or other approvals before using shared resources.
- to respect any use restrictions and conditions based on consents or ethics approvals associated with shared resources.
- to ensure the confidentiality of restricted access resources, and to establish appropriate security safeguards.
- to cite any shared resource used to produce a scholarly publication or other publicly disclosed research output according to generally accepted practice, including respecting any preferred means of citation for the resource articulated on its landing page, and using any persistent digital identifier associated with the resource.
- to respect any licensing terms associated with shared resources.
- that the CONP has the right to change or update these Terms of Use at any time without prior notice to the user. It is the user's responsibility to check the CONP platform's website to ascertain whether the Terms of Use have been changed or updated.
- that all resources available on the CONP are provided on an "as is" basis, and the Platform disclaims all warranties, express or implied, including but not limited to any warranty that the use of resources will not cause injury or infringe any third party rights.
- that the CONP excludes all liability, to the greatest extent permitted by applicable law, with respect to the use or distribution of resources.
- to contact the dataset creator immediately if it becomes apparent that data have not been sufficiently de-identified.

The user agrees not to:

- use shared resources to re-identify or re-contact individual participants.
- claim intellectual property rights, or any other proprietary right, over shared resources in such a way that could interfere with the freedom of others to access and use shared resources.