Evidence-based chemical risk assessments are a large part of my daily work. There are a paradigm shift from using animal studies to using NAMs, also in chemical risk assessment. Therefore, I am interested in the development of tools for incorporation of data from NAMs as evidence in chemical risk assessments.

Notes

- (1) An "interest" is a commitment, obligation, duty or goal associated with a particular social role or practice. A conflict of interest arises when serving one interest could involve working at the expense of another. Interests may be financial or non-financial.
- (2) Contributors to a research project should declare any interests that a reasonable person would want to be aware of, in order to be confident that all relevant interests are known and can be evaluated for their potential to disrupt or compromise decision-making in the project.
- (3) It is unlikely that someone with no interests in relation to a project would still be interested in being involved in a project. Declaring no interests is therefore unlikely to be a valid response to the questions in this form.
- (4) Interests that cannot contractually be declared need not be described in detail, but their existence must be noted. If the contract specifies that not even the presence of a contractual limitation can be declared, the contributor should state they are unable to complete the form.

Interests Please place an X next to any interests relevant to your situation. See notes for term definitions.

Financial interests

Do you, your family, close relations or acquaintances, currently have, have had in the last 5 years, or expect to have in the next 2 years, any financial interests (potential gains or losses) that could be affected by the publication?

<input type="checkbox"/>	From employment or provision of services, such as directorships, consultancy, honoraria, etc.
<input type="checkbox"/>	From intellectual property, such as patents, copyrights, etc.
<input type="checkbox"/>	From investments such as shares, stocks, other financial instruments, etc.
<input type="checkbox"/>	From litigation or legal cases
<input type="checkbox"/>	From grants
<input type="checkbox"/>	Other financial interests

Non-financial interests

Do you have any of the following interests that could potentially influence or be affected by the publication?

<input type="checkbox"/>	Deeply held beliefs or convictions
<input type="checkbox"/>	Current and previous research findings or projects
<input type="checkbox"/>	Commitments to specific standards or processes
<input type="checkbox"/>	Publicly held positions
<input type="checkbox"/>	Personal relationships
<input type="checkbox"/>	Membership or active role in other organisations, e.g. societies, lobby or pressure groups, government agencies, etc.

Please provide details about the non-financial interests you have indicated above

I do not have any of the listed non financial interests. I am a scientist at the Radboud university of Nijmegen in the Netherlands, and I run the meta research team. A team that focusses on developing, applying and disseminating systematic review methodology across evidence streams, performing meta-research on research rigour and robustness principles and providing education within and beyond the Radboudumc.

Notes

- (1) An "interest" is a commitment, obligation, duty or goal associated with a particular social role or practice. A conflict of interest arises when serving one interest could involve working at the expense of another. Interests may be financial or non-financial.
- (2) Contributors to a research project should declare any interests that a reasonable person would want to be aware of, in order to be confident that all relevant interests are known and can be evaluated for their potential to disrupt or compromise decision-making in the project.
- (3) It is unlikely that someone with no interests in relation to a project would still be interested in being involved in a project. Declaring no interests is therefore unlikely to be a valid response to the questions in this form.
- (4) Interests that cannot contractually be declared need not be described in detail, but their existence must be noted. If the contract specifies that not even the presence of a contractual limitation can be declared, the contributor should state they are unable to complete the form.

(2) Contributors to a research project should declare any interests that a reasonable person would want to be aware of, in order to be confident that all relevant interests are known and can be evaluated for their potential to disrupt or compromise decision-making in the project.

(3) It is unlikely that someone with no interests in relation to a project would still be interested in being involved in a project. Declaring no interests is therefore unlikely to be a valid response to the questions in this form.

(4) Interests that cannot contractually be declared need not be described in detail, but their existence must be noted. If the contract specifies that not even the presence of a contractual limitation can be declared, the contributor should state they are unable to complete the form.

Please provide details about the financial interests you have indicated above

I have or am providing consultancy services for: the Evidence-Based Toxicology Collaboration (EBTC) at Johns Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Public Health; Lancaster University, mainly around securing impact of the research I was doing for my PhD (completed 2020); and for Yordas Group, to deliver training in SR methods for EU JRC. I also receive an Honorarium as Editor in Chief for the journal Evidence-Based Toxicology (EBT), to which this manuscript is being submitted. I am setting up the Institute for Evidence-Based Toxicology, a non-profit company based in Germany. The company will begin trading in 2023, and I am one of 4 Directors with a 25% share in the business. The work of the company will be providing services relating to evidence-based methods in toxicology and environmental health.

In general, my consultancy work is around development and promotion of systematic review methods in environmental health research, delivering training around these methods, and providing editorial services. While relevant to the present work, I am not aware of any way in which these interests could compromise the integrity of the research I am undertaking here.

Please provide details about the non-financial interests you have indicated above

I have a general public commitment to high quality systematic review methods in support of environmental health policy and decision-making, and am actively involved in a range of projects intended to improve research standards in evidence synthesis. I have developed conduct standards (e.g. COSTER), reporting checklists (e.g. ROSES), and critical appraisal tools (e.g. CREST_Triage, PRIVAT) to support the production of high quality systematic reviews and evidence maps. I am an active member of the GRADE Working Group, an informal UK NGO network promoting good environmental policy in the UK, have a senior role at EBTC that involves promoting SR and other evidence-based methods in toxicology and environmental health; similarly, my role at the journal EBT involves high-profile public advocacy for evidence-based approaches to evidence synthesis that includes advocating for the use of study appraisal instruments, of which the present manuscript is an example. In general, I have a strong interest in supporting precautionary, evidence-based approaches to environmental health policy. While relevant to the present work, I am not aware of any way in which these interests could compromise the integrity of the research I am undertaking here, as the standards implied by the work are consistent with those to which I have expressed public commitment.

(1) An "interest" is a commitment, obligation, duty or goal associated with a particular social role or practice. A conflict of interest arises when serving one interest could involve working at the expense of another. Interests may be financial or non-financial.

(2) Contributors to a SR should declare any interests that a reasonable person would want to be aware of, in order to be confident that all relevant interests are known and can be evaluated for their potential to disrupt or compromise decision-making in a SR project.

(3) It is unlikely that someone with no interests in relation to a project would still be interested in being involved in a project. Declaring no interests is therefore unlikely to be a valid response to the questions in this form.

(4) Interests that cannot contractually be declared need not be described in detail, but their existence must be noted. If the contract specifies that not even the presence of a contractual limitation can be declared, the contributor should state they are unable to complete the form.
