I. Overview of the data sets

The data in the Correlates of War IGO data sets capture state memberships in the network of international governmental organizations (IGOs). The expanded version 3.0 updates the original Wallace and Singer (1970) data set and version 2.1 to provide membership information from 1816-2014.

Similar to version 2.1, version 3.0 comprises three different data sets, each with a different unit of analysis. First, version 3.0a contains membership data based on the IGO-year unit of analysis. Thus, each line of data in 3.0a represents a specific IGO's membership in a given year (e.g. the U.N. in 1970). Second, version 3.0b presents membership data based on the country-year. This data will allow the research to see which IGOs an individual country belonged to in any annual period (e.g. Canada in 1992). Finally, version 3.0c aggregates the individual country memberships into joint dyadic memberships. This version of the data set presents shared memberships for each dyad and which individual IGOs are included in a dyad's membership profile (e.g., Thailand-India in 2000).

II. Defining a Population of IGOs

IGOs have become a ubiquitous part of international life. IGOs are created to deal with political, economic, social, cultural, and environmental problems. IGOs, most succinctly, are “set up by three or more states to fulfill common purposes or attain common objectives” (Feld and Jordan 1994: 10).

Wallace and Singer (1970) originally provided the following operational coding definition of an IGO:

- (1) An IGO must consist of at least two members of the COW-defined state system;
- (2) An IGO must hold regular plenary sessions at least once every ten years;
- (3) An IGO must possess a permanent secretariat and corresponding headquarters;

Consistent with Version 2.1, from Version 1.0, this version of the IGO data incorporates criteria two and three. However, we have chosen to alter the first criterion to the following:

- (1) An IGO must consist of at least three members of the COW-defined state system.

A survey of literature on IGOs suggested that many studies used a minimum of three states as a defining criterion, including the Union of International Associations' (UIA) Yearbook of International Organizations (also see Feld and Jordan [1994], Luard [1988], and Archer [1992]). Because much of the literature on IGOs appears to have converged to the three-state definition, we have adopted this convention as well. This leads to a small number of exclusions from the original version 1.1 data, which are also listed in Appendix 1. In our search for new IGOs, moreover, we found very few bilateral IGOs that met the other criteria.

Although the first criterion is modified in terms of the number of actors involved it still contains an important component of the original definition—IGO memberships are comprised of sovereign states. This point serves to delineate IGOs from other types of international organizations, such as NGOs, that have memberships comprised of non-state actors.¹ Criteria two and three are adopted for the purposes stated by Wallace and Singer—to distinguish formal IGOs from ad hoc conferences with no permanent bureaucratic structure.

Emanations

Many IGOs—known as emanations—are formed by extant IGOs as opposed to being formed by states. Again, this issue is addressed by Wallace and Singer (1970) in the documentation for version 1.1 of the data when they argued for the exclusion of confederations of IGOs and treaties administered by other IGOs. Wallace and Singer primarily base their argument on the idea that emanations are not independent of the IGOs that created them.

We agree with this assessment and while we do plan to code state membership in emanations in future iterations of the data, we have not done so here. Version 3.0 is thus similar to the original COW data in that emanations are excluded. Given that emanations are almost exclusively a post-1965 phenomenon, this does not have a significant effect on the merging of versions 1.1 with the post-1965 data.

The end result of these coding criteria results in membership data for 534 international governmental organizations for the time period 1816-2014.

Changes

Several IGOs that appeared in version 1.1 and/or version 2.1 of the data have been dropped in version 3.0. The following list of IGOs contains those organizations that were dropped. IGOs were removed when they violated the above criteria for inclusion as an IGO, that is: (1) the IGO had only two states as members; (2) the organization was determined to have non-state memberships or the member states were not COW system members; (3) no information was found to support even the most fundamental level of activity or structure; or (4) the organization was found to lack a secretariat.

III. The Data

A. Version 3.0a – Monadic/IGO Unit [igo_year_formatv3.0.dta; igo_year_formatv3.0.csv]

Version 3.0a of the data contains IGO membership information by IGO – in other words, the IGO is the unit of analysis, with each state as a variable (IGOs down, States across). Each observation represents an IGO-year with a vector of data pertaining to whether each state was a member of the IGO in that year. The remainder of this section discusses each variable in Version 3.0a.

IOname: Short abbreviation of the IGO name. [See below for a discussion of name changes.] The abbreviation in the IOname variable matches the variable abbreviation in Version 3.0b.

Orgname: Full IGO name.

Year: Calendar Year

Afghanistan-Zimbabwe: Each of these variables represent the status of that state in the IGO. The following codes are used to represent membership information:

Category	Numerical Value
No Membership	0
Full Membership	1
Associate Membership	2
Observer	3
Missing data	-9
State Not System Member	-1

In addition to these basic membership variables, version 3.0a of the data contains additional variables pertaining to the organizations.

ionum: IGO id number in v2.1 and v3.0 of the data (see below for a complete list).

igocode: IGO id number in v1.1 of the data (see Wallace and Singer 1970).

sdate: start date (year) that the IGO started.

integrated/replaced: Each IGO that has terminated via one of these three processes is coded as a “1” in the data set.²

dead: those organizations that simply cease operations receive a “1” in the year in which the termination occurs.

longOrgname: a longer version of the IGOs name (including previous names)

version: COW version number

Imputation: an indicator variable that is coded as “1” when the pre-1965 observation was imputed.

Note that this coding scheme differs from the scheme used in the version 1.1 data set. In the original Wallace and Singer data full members were also represented by a ‘1,’ but associate members were identified with a ‘3.’ In the post-1965 data we are able to discern between associate members and observers, the latter of which was not included in version 1.1.

A new variable in version 3.0 is Imputation. In version 3.0, all yearly pre-1965 membership data is coded. The original Wallace and Singer COW v1.1 data was coded in five-year period form and was included in this format for all versions of 2.1 data. For version 3.0, the majority of the pre-1965 data was coded from archival research, but for years that could not be found, the remaining data was imputed based on the original Wallace and Singer five-year measures.

An observation only receives a ‘-9’ if an organization existed or a state was in the system but no membership information could be found for that year.

Number of Observations: 19,333 [csv data should contain 19,334 lines with variable names]

Number of Variables: 230 [columns]

Issues concerning IGO-years in the data set

(a) When does an IGO actually begin?

Consistent with version 1.1 of the IGO data, we begin to code an IGO by identifying the first year in which the organization functions. In some cases, individual members are listed by year of accession or signature. These exceptions are listed below (see section IV).

(b) When does an IGO die?

Wallace and Singer (1970) identify two ways to mark the termination of an IGO. First, an IGO is considered dead if it has gone ten consecutive years without a plenary meeting. Second, an IGO is considered dead when it has been integrated or replaced by another IGO. The post 1965 data sources provide more concrete information for termination dates. However, terminology concerns force researchers to decide when an IGO has actually terminated and when an IGO has simply continued under a new identity.

² Note that those organizations that simply terminate are not included in this group of variables. For more info on the nature and timing of IGO termination, replacement, and integration see below.

Several terms are used to describe the end of an IGO. Version 3.0 of the IGO data set uses the following criteria for determining termination dates. An organization is considered terminated when the following words were used to describe the context of the organization: Replaced; Succeeded; Superseded; Integrated; Merged; Dies.

Example: The European Space Vehicle Launcher Development Organization (ELDO) and the European Space Research Organization (ESRO) were replaced by the European Space Agency in 1975. In this case, both ELDO and ESRO are considered dead as of 1975 (the same date is then listed for the formation of the ESA).

An organization is considered to be continuously in existence when the following words were used to describe the context of the organization: Rename; Reorganize; Reconstituted.

In other words, an organization does not terminate if there is no suggestion of any structural change.

Example: The Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization was formed under the name Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee. The name changed but the organization did not undertake any structural changes. Hence, there was no termination.

(c) When is an IGO considered integrated or replaced?

IGOs are determined to be integrated or replaced through research on the termination of an IGO. To distinguish between integrated and replaced IGOs the following definitions are used:

(1) An IGO is coded as integrated when (a) it is merged with another IGO to form a new IGO or (b) one IGO becomes part of an already existing IGO.

(2) An IGO is coded as replaced when (a) an IGO dies and a completely new IGO with a similar agenda is created or (b) an existing IGO becomes a part of a new IGO.

B. Version 3.0b – Monadic/State-Level [state_year_formatv3.0.dta; state_year_formatv3.0.csv]

Version 3.0b contains membership data organized by state. The unit of observation in this data is the state-year. The variables contained in this data set include:

ccode: COW country number.

country: Full state name.

state: Abbreviated state name [no spaces] – identical to variable names in Version 3.0a.

year: Calendar Year

AAID-Wassen: IGO variables containing information on state membership status. For each variable [the variable name is an abbreviation of the IGO name – in the STATA data, each variable has a variable label giving the full name of the IGO] the following codes are used:

Category	Numerical Value
No Membership	0
Full Membership	1
Associate Membership	2
Observer	3
Missing data	-9
IGO Not In Existence	-1

version: COW version number.

Number of Observations: 15,560 [data should contain 15,561 lines with variable names]

Number of Variables: 535 [columns]

C. Version 3.0c – Dyadic [dyadic_formatv3.0.dta; dyadic_formatv3.0.csv]

Version 3.0c includes the dyadic version of the data. It is closest in form to the Monadic/State-Level data (Version 3.0b). Although the unit of observation is the dyad, each variable is an IGO coded in the following manner:

Category	Numerical Value
No Joint Membership	0
Joint Full Membership	1
Missing data	-9
State Not System Member	-1

If one state in an IGO is a full member but the other is an associate member or observer, that IGO is not coded as a joint membership. There are thus fewer membership categories in the dyadic version of the data. The variables for this data set are:

state1: COW code for the first state in the dyad.

state2: COW code for the second state in the dyad.

year: Calendar year.

dyadid: A unique dyad identification number. It is equal to $(1000 * \text{state1}) + \text{state2}$.

AAAID-Wassen: Variables containing joint membership information for each IGO.

version: COW version number.

Number of Observations: 918,341 [data should contain 918,342 lines with variable names]

Number of Variables: 535 [columns]

NOTE: To create a dyadic count of common IGO memberships, the following command can be run in STATA: `egen NUMIGO = rsum(AAAID-Wassen)`

NOTE: A long version of this codebook is also available. The long version contains descriptive information about all IGOs in the data (listed below in Appendix A).
