

GDPR in research - what does it mean for research institutions?

August the 30th, 09:30 – 18:00; TU Delft Library, Orange Room

09:30-10:00	Coffee, registration
10:00-10:30	Ethical aspects behind management and sharing of personal research data Veerle van den Eynden, UKDS
Practical aspects of managing and sharing personal research data – grounds for data processing
10:30-11:00	What's new with the GDPR Veerle van den Eynden, UKDS
11:15-11:45	'One stop shop' approach for ethical clearance, data management and GDPR at Tilburg University Jan Jans, Tilburg University
12:00-12:45	Panel discussion: Institutional approaches to supporting researchers working with personal research data
12:45-13:30	Lunch break
Access control and licensing of research data – case studies
13:30-13:45	Emilie Kraaikamp, DANS
13:55-14:15	Veerle van den Eynden, UKDS
14:15-14:35	Zosia Beckles, University of Bristol
14:45-15:15	Coffee break
15:15-16:00	Discussion: What are the requirements for an institution to provide controlled access to research data? Alastair Dunning, 4TU.Centre for Research Data
16:00-16:45	Tagging privacy-sensitive data according to the new European privacy legislation: GDPR DataTags - a prototype Ilona von Stein, DANS
16:45-17:00	Closing remarks
17:00-18:00	Drinks reception

GDPR? What does it mean for my research and what do I have to do?
August the 31st, 09:30 – 17:00; TU Delft Library, Blue Room

09:30-10:00	Coffee, registration
10:00-10:30	Ethical aspects of management and sharing of personal research data Veerle van den Eynden, UKDS
10:30-12:00	Legal grounds for data processing – what does GDPR mean in practice and how to prepare a GDPR compliant consent form? Veerle van den Eynden, UKDS
12:00-12:20	Data encryption Veerle van den Eynden and Cristina Magder, UKDS
12:20-12:40	De-identification and pseudonymisation of qualitative data Veerle van den Eynden, UKDS
12:40-13:30	Lunch break
13:30-15:00	De-identification of quantitative data, part 1 Cristina Magder, UKDS
15:00-15:30	Coffee break
15:30-16:45	De-identification of quantitative data, part 2 Cristina Magder, UKDS
16:45-17:00	Closing remarks