Who speaks with researchers?

Content

This session will cover:

- Background to Cambridge
- How not to start with RDM
- Alternative approach
- Reflections is democracy the right system?

Background to Cambridge

- 18,000 students; 9,000 staff
- 6 Schools:
  - Arts and Humanities
  - Biological Sciences
  - Clinical Medicine
  - Humanities and Social Sciences
  - Physical Sciences
  - Technology
- 150 Departments and Institutes, 31 colleges
- Fragmented support services

How not so start with RDM

You must do it

EPSRC do random checks to make sure data are shared in publications that acknowledge their funding

https://www.epsrc.ac.uk/files/aboutus/standards/clarificationsofexpectationsresearchd atamanagement/

Immediate reaction:

- This is not my priority
- Why would I do that?
- People will steal my results!
- Data management is a waste of time
- Nobody will understand my data
- It would take me 5 years to find all my data!

Let's re-think the approach

Alternative approach

Let's try to be more collaborative

Building trust

Never dismiss questions – be open for discussion

"Open Data – moving science forward or a waste of money & time?"

Ask questions, but explain why you're asking

 Researchers are busy – they need to know you're not wasting their time

Let researchers shape RDM services

1. What should research data management support look like at the University of Cambridge?

Quick questionnaire

29 responses Please help us s t support available We have prepared a short we would greatly appreciate your feedback. The questionnaire questionnaire takes 1 min to fill in.

Researchers wanted:

- Online information
- Support with data management
- Support with data management plans
- Training
- Repository
- Easy way to find these resources

Online information

On-demand consultancy

Follow-up survey in July 2016 (with Jisc)

1. The University of Cambridge needs your feedback on research data services

Is the University providing you with enough surprise of the data management? Are there are provision? What research AAO response your research.

The University of Cambridge is part of a pilot project on developing UK-wide shared research data services. We need your say to develop services useful to our research community. Please fill in this survey (10 minutes of your time) to tell us about your research data management expectations.

Answers inform service development

Why wouldn't you be willing to share your data publicly?

- Top reason: contains personal/sensitive data
- We're now scoping for providing managed access to data

The benefits of good data management and sharing

Sharing your data is 'A Good Thing'

Some other very important reasons to share

Intrinsic motivations are more effective

Research relies on the principle that we share our findings

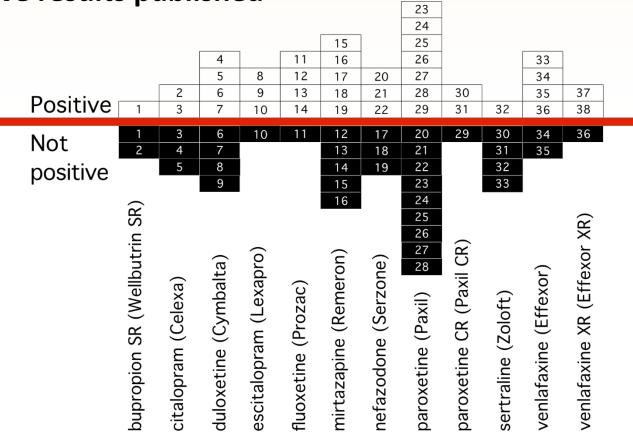

Ideas and results need to be shared to move human knowledge forward

Science relies on the principle that findings are shared

Only positive results published

Description

Original or unprocessed data is provided in support of the article "Microfluidic Droplet-Facilitated Hierarchical Assembly for Dual Cargo Loading and Synergistic Delivery". The data is structured into three folders named: (1) Determination of Critical Micelle Concentration (CMC) of P1 micelles; (2) TEM of P1 micelles; and (3) Size distribution of microdroplets.

Get access to shared data

Two questions asked when discussing data sharing with researchers:

- 1. It would be useful if research data underpinning publications was available
- 2. I (/my group) regularly share research data underpinning publications

Empowering researchers

Let researchers shape the policy

Could Open Research benefit Cambridge University researchers?

This blog is part of the recent series about Open Research and reports on a discussion with Cambridge researchers held on 8 June 2016 in the Department of Engineering. Extended notes from the meeting and slides are available at the Cambridge University Research Repository. This report is written by Lauren Cadwallader, Joanna Jasiewicz and Marta Teperek (listed alphabetically by surname).

At the Office of Scholarly Communication we have been thinking for a while about Open Research ideas and about moving beyond mere compliance with funders' policies on Open Access and research data sharing. We thought that the time has come to ask our researchers what they thought about opening up the research process and sharing more: not only publications and research data, but also protocols, methods, source code, theses and all the other elements of research. Would they consider this beneficial?

Researchers' feedback on our services

Behavioural change in sharing

- Researchers used to panic and share their data at the last minute (compliance requirements)
- More and more frequently:
  - Data shared before publication access for peerreviewers
  - Placeholder requests for data in preparation
  - Richer metadata (new fields needed!)
- Data sharing seems to be more and more embedded in the publication process

Feedback on training

"I thought this was the best workshop I've attended so far. Very professional delivery, good balance of participant interaction."

"Course should be mandatory and done at the beginning of the year. It was excellent - thank you. I wish I did it at the beginning."

Informed discussions about barriers to sharing

Call for data champions

Would you like to become a Data Champion?

We are looking for people who would like to volunteer to become Data Champions within their departments, institutes and colleges to provide local expertise about Research Data Management (RDM) issues.

Who can become an Data Champion?

Anyone interested in research data management and sharing who would like to become the local expert on RDM. We welcome researchers, students, librarians, IT managers, data
