[The War has brought out clearly, even to people who could not see the fact before, that science must be given a larger place in education. The great defect in those who try to teach science lies in their neglect of literary studies, and thus we must humanise science. At the present time there is no such thing as 'scientific education'; for it is not humanised by a study of universal history. Programme for future education. IX.—NOTE.

I see, on looking through my paper in MIND, N.S., No. 107, that, although I at first speak of 'Whitehead and Russell,' I later generally refer to pieces of notation contained in Principia Mathematica as 'Russell's'. I did not mean by this to ascribe them to Mr. Russell rather than to Dr. Whitehead. I have no idea which of the authors is responsible for any given part of the book, and I only used 'Russell' as an abbreviation for 'Russell and Whitehead'. I should be sorry indeed to appear unfair to Dr. Whitehead, and my only excuse is the extreme difficulty of putting a phrase like 'Russell and Whitehead' into the possessive in English. Perhaps Dr. Whitehead will provide me with a suitable notation for this purpose, and Mr. Russell will guarantee it to be 'ethically neutral'.
