During drought I am concerned about survival of my garden and my livestock because they are the most affected by drought. Drought affects my farm production and cattle are more affected by drought than goats. So my main concern is my cattle and the garden.

Apart from the concern of my cattle and garden during drought, nothing else really affects me.

The main issue is the crocodiles attacking our goats. During drought, the goats roam around the river feeding on the pods of the Anna tree and these only grow near the river. These makes our goats an easy prey for crocodiles. There are also other problems that I am concerned with such as wild animals e.g. jackals. Furthermore, I am always worried about our children going to the river, either to fetch water or to look after the livestock. Crocodiles are deadly

Reference 2 - 3.59% Coverage

The other issue is the fact that the only fertile land available is near the river which is also dangerous because of crocodiles and the area is prone to flooding. We also have a problem of pests and diseases,

The river is really a huge risk because of the crocodiles, preying on my livestock. When livestock go and drink from the river, the crocodiles are waiting for them. The Anna trees near the river produce pods liked by the goats, so they always roam near the river and we lose many livestock because of this. During drought, sometimes these pods are the only food available for our livestock. Crocodiles have increased since they introduced the conservancy, protecting the crocodiles and we are not allowed to kill them or we will face prison, so we keep losing our livestock and we can't do anything about it.

Hunger, drought and wild animals such as jackals and cheetah. Cheetah is so dangerous, it is worse than a crocodile, it can kill even 50 goats, it just kills without eating, it can kill the whole herd at once. We are having many problems in these area. We also have wild dogs, this one can eat goats day and night. Nderipopera

I have no money to buy cattle and goats that will somehow assist me, even in a form of a loan to have some start up capital. I am always thinking about this. The government can then be monitoring to see how the loan schemes are doing

Furthermore, I have no capital to enlarge the farm and buy more livestock.

Drought for animals is my main concern. I am always worried about my livestock, when there's nothing in the wild, they go to the river where they are either killed by the crocodiles or stolen.

I have a big concern with goats dying every day because of the crocodiles. We also have jackals preying on our goats but at least we can control the jackals but we can't do anything about the crocodiles. I am also afraid of dying of hunger, we go without food sometimes and food is so expensive

Monkeys are a problem, they eat our produce from our gardens even coming into our homes, stealing food. Such a nuisance.
