Many years ago, I used to have many cattle and now I only have nine. That is painful and people who have lost livestock are badly affected. But the worst are those who have nothing at all, the poor and there is no word to describe the situation of the widows, they are at the mercy of life. They have no way to support their children and sometimes they come here asking for food. If you give them maize flour, they eat just porridge, no sauce or anything else to eat with. We are left behind in this area. The widows are suffering.

The government could perhaps give us solar panels to run generators, instead of electricity and fuel. Also perhaps irrigation and water storage facilities. If we are provided with these, it will help us. We also need water tank with enough pressure like the ones in Etunda irrigation project. They should be erected on a good height to have enough pressure. If we are using energy from the sun, we won't run out. The intervention by the government is helpful but not sufficient. For example, they give orphans and vulnerable children N$250 per child and this is not enough. It does not help much because imagine what you can buy with N$250, when children need food and cloths such as school uniforms. If they make it N$1000, it is better and will feed the families. We do not have power and no assistance with even loans to help us with farming activities. Interventions such as small business loans to even start a take away, will be helpful to make a living and because you sign a contract, you need to find a way to be paying it back. These things are not implemented in this community.

themselves in every way. Meanwhile others are being helped. When my husband was alive he took care of us and built houses and looked after the livestock.

Many people look up to them and they have a heavy burden on their shoulder, not to mention that these people are just farmers and livestock is their wealth, so if they lose them, they have lost everything.
