CATALOGUE

OF

THE PERSIAN MANUSCRIPTS

IN

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

LONDON : GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, ST. JOHN'S SQUARE, CLERKENWELL, E.C.

CATALOGUE

OF

THE PERSIAN MANUSCRIPTS

IN

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

BY

CHARLES RIEU, PH. D. REEPER OF THE ORIENTAL MSS.

VOLUME II.

PRINTED BY ORDER OF THE TRUSTEES.

SOLD AT THE BRITISH MUSEUM;

AND BY

LONGMANS & CO., 39, PATERNOSTER ROW; B. QUARITCH, 15, PICCADILLY; ASHER & CO., 13, BEDFORD STREET, COVENT GARDEN, AND TRÜBNER & CO., 57, LUDGATE HILL.

1881.

.5 210 561

.

52104 3619/00

•

NOTICE.

This Second Volume completes the description of the Persian Manuscripts which were in the Museum at the end of the year 1876 (the date at which the printing of the catalogue began), and of such of the later acquisitions as came in time to be incorporated into their respective classes.

The manuscripts which it comprises are 1128 in number, forming with the 947 manuscripts noticed in the first volume a total of 2075. They are arranged under the headings of Sciences, Philology, Poetry, Fables and Tales, a few minor divisions, and, lastly, the considerable class of manuscripts of mixed contents.

First and foremost in importance and extent is the poetical section, which occupies nearly one half of the present volume and includes several early and valuable copies of the classical poets from Firdūsī to Jāmī, as well as a fair muster of their successors in Persia and in India down to the most recent times. Among the many remarkable works which it contains, the following may be pointed out as either unique or extremely scarce :—

The Yūsuf and Zulaikhā of Firdūsī (p. 545). A fragment of the Shahryār Nāmah of Mukhtārī, one of the episodic poems engrafted upon the Shāhnāmah (p. 542). The rare Dīvāns of Abul-Faraj Rūnī and Mas'ūd i Sa'd, poets of the Court of Ghaznīn (pp. 547, 548), of Adīb Ṣābir and 'Imādī Shahryārī, who lived under the Saljūkis (pp. 552, 557), and of Saif Isfarangī, who survived the invasion of Chingīz Khān (p. 581). A poetical version of Kalīlah and Damnah, composed about A.H. 658 by Ķāni'ī, a panegyrist of the Saljūk Sultans of Iconium (p. 582). The poems of Khwājū Kirmānī, written by the celebrated penman Mīr 'Alī Tabrīzī, A.H. 798 (p. 620). The Dīvāns of two hitherto unnoticed poets, Haidar Shīrāzī, a contemporary of Hāfiz (p. 623), and Nazīrī Tūsī, who lived under the Bahmanī sovereigns of the Deccan, about A.H. 860 (p. 641). Some poems in the Guran dialect, which supply materials for the study of a yet unexplored province of Persian speech (pp. 728—735).

In compiling the biographical notices of poets valuable assistance has been derived from the new and copious sources of information collected, and critically sifted, by Doctor A. Sprenger in the first volume of his Catalogue of the Oude Libraries, a work the discontinuance of which must be regretted as a grievous loss to Oriental studies.

Out of the rare and interesting manuscripts described under the remaining classes the following may be noticed here as especially worthy of attention:—Durrat ut-Tāj, an encyclopædia of philosophical sciences, written about A.D. 1300, by Kutb ud-Dīn Shīrāzī, for the Dubāj, or king of Gīlān (p. 434). The Tafhīm, or manual of astronomy, by al-Bīrūnī: a copy dated A.H. 685 (p. 451). The Zakhīrah i Khwārazmshāhī, a complete treatise of medicine, so ealled from the founder of the dynasty of the Khwārazm-Shāhs, to whom it was dedicated about A.H. 504 (p. 466). Ma'din ush-Shifā, a medical work, compiled from Sanskrit sources for Sikandar Shāh Lodi, A.H. 918 (p. 471). A treatise on the art of war, dedicated to the Sultan of Dehli, Shams ud-Dīn Īltatmish, A.H. 607—633 (p. 487). Several of the earliest Persian dictionaries, as Adāt ul-Fuzalā, dated A.H. 822, Sharaf-Nāmah i Munyarī, written about A.H. 862, and others (pp. 491, 492). Kitāb Sindbād, the tale of the king's son and the seven Vazīrs, translated into Persian for Kilīj Tamghāj, Khān of Turkistān, about A.H. 556 (p. 748). An early, and yet unnoticed, translation of the memoirs of Baber, dated A.H. 994 (p. 799). Simt ul-'Ulā, an account of the Karā-Khitā'īs of Kirmān, written by a contemporary historian, A.H. 716 (p. 849).

A third volume, now in a forward state of preparation, will comprise the description of the Elliot MSS. purchased in the year 1878, and of some other recent acquisitions, as well as indexes of names, titles, and subjects to the entire catalogue.

CHARLES RIEU.

February 24, 1881.

(vii)

CONTENTS OF THE SECOND VOLUME.

					PAGE
SCIENCES.
ENCYCLOPÆDIAS					433
Ринозорну	•			•	438
Етніся	•	•			440
Politics					444
MATHEMATICS		•		•	449
ASTRONOMY			•		451
NATURAL HISTORY		•			462
MEDICINE	•		•		466
FARRIERY AND FALCONRY					480
ALCHEMY AND CABALISTIC					486
ARTS AND GAMES	•	•	•		487
PHILOLOGY.

LEXICOGRAPH	Y: PERS	LAN DIC	TIONA-
	RI	IES		491
	ARABIC-I	ERSIAN	Dic-
	TI	ONARIES		505
	TURKI-PE	RSIAN	VOCA-
	Bt	LARIES		511

LEXICOGRAPHY: PERSIAN - TURKISH

DICTIONARIES	513
Miscellaneous Dic-
TIONARIES	516
GRAMMAR : PERSIAN GRAMMAR	519
— ARABIC GRAMMAR	521
PROSODY	525
INSHA, OR THE ART OF COMPOSITION .	527
TREATISES ON CALLIGRAPHY	531
POETRY	533
ANTHOLOGIES	734
ORNATE PROSE	740
FABLES, TALES, AND ANECDOTES	745
PROVERBS	773
Collectanea	774
BIBLIOGRAPHY.	776
DRAWINGS AND SPECIMENS OF CALLI-
GRAPHY	778
MANUSCRIPTS OF MIXED CONTENTS .	789

DICE

· ·

SCIENCES.

ENCYCLOPÆDIAS.

Or. 16,830.

Foll. 283; 9 in. by 43; 11 and 15 lines, 3 in. long; written by two different hands, apparently in the 17th and 18th centuries. [WM. YULE.]

دانش نامه علاتي

A manual of philosophical sciences.

Author : Khwājah Ra'īs Abū 'Alī B. Sīnā, خواجه رئيس ابو على ابن سينا 428 (See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 221, b).

Beg. سپاس و ستایش مر خدارند آفرید کار خردرا The author wrote this work, as he states in the preface, for the prince in whose service he had found safety, wealth, and leisure, and by whom he had been desired to compose in Parsi Dari a compendious manual of the five branches of the philosophy of the ancients.

The prince, whose name and title are written عضد الدين علاو الدولت و فخر الماة و تاج written بالائمة ابو جعفر محمد ابن اشهرار دشنميزاز was really called 'Alā ud-Daulah Abu Ja'far Muhammad B. Dushmanziyār, and surnamed Ibn Kākavaih, or "uncle's son," because VOL. II. his father was the maternal uncle of Sayyidah, a Buvaihide princess, who, in the name of her son Majd ud-Daulah, exercised sovereign power. From her he had obtained, A.H. 398, possession of Isfahan, where, although temporarily ejected by the Ghaznavis, he maintained himself till his death, which happened A.H. 433. See Kāmil, vol. ix. pp. 146, 397, 433, Jahānārā, Add. 7649, fol. 24 b. Compare De Slane, Ibn Khallikān's translation, vol. i. p. 445.

Ibn Sinā, who spent the last years of his life at the court of 'Alā ud-Daulah, wrote the present work in Isfahān. Such is the statement of his disciple, 'Abd ul-Vāḥid Ibn Muḥammad Jūzjānī, who was his master's constant companion for five-and-twenty years previous to Ibn Sīnā's death, and wrote the account of his life which has been preserved by Ibn Abi Uṣaibi'ah; see Add. 7340, fol. 124 a, and fol. 127 a.

'Abd ul-Vāḥid, who edited the present work after the author's death, and who designates it by the title of Dānish Nāmah i 'Alā'ī, states, fol. 207 b, that the section treating of mathematics was lost, because "the master" was not in the habit of keeping copies of his writings, and that he had taken upon himself to supply that deficiency with a condensed translation in Pārsī Darī of the following treatises of Ibn Sīnā, which were in his possession: an abridgment of Euclid, a treatise on astronomical observations, another on music, and the arithmetical section of the "Shafā." It is therefore the first three sections alone, that contain the original work of Ibn Sīnā.

Contents: Logie, علم منطق fol. 3 a. Metaphysics, علم الهي or علم برين fol. 67 b. Physics, fol. 207 b. Astronomy, fol. 233 b. Arithmetic, fol. 260 b. Music, fol. 273 b.

The work is commonly known, as stated in the endorsement, under the name of حکمت علائی. It is mentioned by Haj. Khal. under حکمت علائی, vol. iii. p. 184, and under under مانش نامه, vol. v. p. 118. In the Durrat ut-Tāj, Add. 7694, fol. 18 a, it is quoted under its proper title, Dānish Nāmah i 'Alā'i.

It is stated in a note written on the first page by a former owner, Muḥammad Naṣīr ud-Dīn, that he had purchased the carlier portion of the MS., and had had the rest transcribed for him, in Lahore, A.H. 1127.

Add. 7694.

Foll. 428; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 33 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in close and fair Nestalik; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 1020 (A.D. 1611).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

An encyclopædia of philosophical sciences. Author: Kuţb ud-Dīn Maḥmūd B. Mas'ūd قطب الدين محمود بن مسعود الشيرازی ,Beg. نکرچه بر ضميرارباب كياست وخاطر اصحاب . فواست

Kuth ud-Dīn Shīrāzī, the greatest of the disciples of Nașīr ud-Dīn Ţūsī, came of a family of physicians in Shīrāz, where he was born A.H. 634. He spent most of his life at the court of the Moghul sovereigns, and died in Tabrīz, A.H. 710, leaving numerous works, mostly written in Arabic, and treating of philosophy, medicine and astronomy. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 189, Tārīkh Guzīdah, Add. 22,693, fol. 237, and Wüstenfeld, Geschichte der Arabischen Aertzte, p. 148.

The last word of the above title, which is distinctly written "Dubāj" in various places, and is unknown to Persian dictionaries, points to Gilān. We are informed by 'Abd ur-Razzāk, Maţla' us-Sa'dain, Add. 1291, fol. 350, and by Ghaffārī, Jahānārā, Add. 23,516, fol. 484, that Amīrah Dubāj مرع دباج اwas the hereditary title of the Isḥākāvand or Isḥākiyyah princes of the Bayah Pas, or Western Gīlān, whose capital was Fūman, and for one of whom, the Durrat ut-Tāj was composed. The same title, written مرباح امدر دباج درباح درب

The present copy is defective at the beginning. Although there is no apparent break in the writing, the main portion of the preface and the initial part of the introduction are wanting. The preface probably included a dedication to the prince of Gilan, and that account of his genealogy which, according to 'Abd ur-Razzāk, l. c., formed part of the work.

The Durrat ut-Tāj is divided into an introduction (Fātiḥah), six books (Jumlah), and an Appendix (Khātimah), which are enumerated with all their numerous subdivisions, foll. 11 b—17 α . The main divisions are the following :—

Fātiḥah, treating of science in general and its branches, in three Fasls, fol. 1 b. Jumlah I. Logic, in seven Makālahs, fol. 17 a. Jumlah II. Philosophy proper, فللسفة اولى in two Fanns, fol. 45 a. Jumlah III. Physics, العلم السفل, in two Fanns, fol. 63 b. Jumlah IV. Mathematics, علم ارسط, in four Fanns, fol. 81 a. Jumlah V. Metaphysics, علم اعلى, in two Fanns, fol. 242 b.

Khātimah, divided into the following four Kuths: 1. The fundamental principles of faith, اصول دين, fol. 264 b. 2. The secondary points, فروع دين, fol. 333 a. 3. Ethics, fol. 373 a. 4. Rules of religious life, سلوك, fol. 410 b.

The contents are fully stated in the Jahrbiicher, vol. 88, Anzeigeblatt, pp. 17-21. See also Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 201, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 35, Dorn, Preface to Sehir-Eddin's Geschichte, p. 7, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. ii. p. 57.

Add. 7695.

Foll. 148; 9½ in. by 5½; 19 lines, 2§ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A portion of the same work, viz. the first Fann of Jumlah IV., treating of geometry, and corresponding to Add. 7694, foll. 81— 140.

Add. 16,827.

Foll. 593; 9⁴/₄ in. by 6; 21 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WILLIAM YULE.]

نفائس الفنون في عرائس العيون

An encyclopædia of the sciences known to the Muslims.

Author: Muhammad B. Mahmud ul-Amuli,

محمد بن محمود الاملي

Beg. حمد و ثنا و شکربی انتبا حضرت پادشاهیرا The author was a Mudarris in Sultaniyyah during the reign of Uljäitū (A.H. 703—716), and frequently engaged, as a decided Shī'ah, in controversy with his famous Sunni contemporary, 'Azud ud-Dīn ul-Ījī (who died A.H. 756). He left, besides the present work, commentaries upon the Kulliyyāt of the Ķānūn of Ibn Sīnā, upon the Kulliyyāt of the Ķānūn of Sharaf ud-Dīn Īlāķī, and upon the Mukhtaşar fil-Uşūl of Ibn Hājib. See Majālis ul-Mūminīn, Add. 23,541, fol. 373, Haft Iķlīm, Add. 16,734, fol. 475. The first of the works above mentioned was written, according to Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 500, A.H. 753. See the Arabic Catalogue, pp. 222 a, 774 a.

The author states in his preface that he had devoted his whole life to the pursuit of science, and, having visited in his wanderings the leading scholars of the period, had availed himself of their teaching in every branch of knowledge, and written special works on several sciences. After an eulogy upon the reigning sovereign, "Jamāl ud-Din vad-Dunyā Abu Ishāk Mahmūd Shāh," he dedicates the present work to a Vazir designated by the following titles:  جهانیان صاحب قرآن دستور سلطان نشان آصف عهد but whose ,وزمان واسطه قلاده سلك وزارت الز proper name does not appear. The preface concludes with a statement of the plan and divisions of the work, foll. 23 b-25 b.

Amīr Jamāl ud-Dīn Shaikh Abu Ishāk, whose father, Amir Mahmud Shah, had governed Fars during the reign of Abu Sa'id, made himself master of Shīrāz, A.H. 742, during the period of anarchy which followed the death of that sovereign, and, having added Isfahan to his dominions, remained for twelve years the recognized ruler of Fars and 'Irak. He succumbed at last to the rising power of Amir Muhammad Muzaffar, who wrested from him Shīrāz, A.H. 754, and, after seizing him in Isfahān, had him publicly executed in the former city, A.H. 757, according to Hafiz Abrū, or A.H. 758, as stated by 'Abd ur-Razzāk; see Or. 1577, fol. 104, and Add. 17,928, fol. 98.

The date of composition, which is incidentally mentioned at the end of Muhammad's life, fol. 270 b, is A.H. 735; but the historical section is brought down to the death of Abu Sa'id and proclamation of Arpā Khān, which took place A.H. 736, and the preface, which names Shaikh Abu Ishāk as the reigning sovereign, cannot have been written before A.H. 742.

The work consists of two parts (Kism), treating respectively of the modern or Muslim sciences, and of those of the ancients.

Kism I. treats of eighty-five arts or sciences, in thirty-six Fanns, classed under four categories (Makālah) as follows:

Makalah I. comprises the literary sciences in the following fifteen Fanns: 1. Writing, علم خط, fol. 25 b. 2. Language, fol. 30 a. 3. Flexion, علم نصريف, fol. 30 a. العنة, fol. علم لغة 39 b. 4. Derivation, علم اشتقاق, fol. 45 a. 5. Syntax, تلم تحو, fol. 48 b. 6. Rhetoric, ,علم بسيان, fol. 53 a. 7. Eloquence, عام معانى fol. 58 b. 8. Ornaments of speech, علم بديع, fol. 62 b. 9. Prosody, علم عروض, fol. 71 a. 10. Rhymes, علم قوانى, fol. 78 a. 11. Poetical composition, علم تقريض, fol. 82 a. 12. Proverbs, علم امثال, fol. 86 a. 13. Knowledge of the Divans, علم دواوين, fol. 99 a. 14. Epistolary composition, علم انشا, fol. 108 b. 15. Collection of revenue and accountkeeping علم استيفا, fol. 117 b.

Makālah II. Legal sciences, شرعيات, in علم كلام كلام, بعلم كلام, solution fol. 125 a. 2. Exegesis of the Kur'ān, علم علم , fol. 125 a. 2. Exegesis of the Kur'ān, تفسير , fol. 126 a. 3. Traditional sayings, تفسير, fol. 136 a. 3. Traditional sayings, علم حديث , fol, 149 a. 4. Fundamental principles of the law, علم اصول فقه, fol. 158 a. 5. Law, علم المول فقه, fol. 168 a. 6. Various readings of the Kur'ān, علم قرآات, fol. 182 a. 7. Dialectic, علم جدل , fol. 194 a. 8. Forms of contracts and legal instruments, and the proper time for their recitation, معام شروط عام مار علم شروط عام fol. 200 a. 9. Forms of prayers, and the proper time for their recitation, معام fol. 211 b.

Makālah III. Sufism, in five Fanns: 1. Religious life, سلوك. 2. True knowledge, علم حقيقه 3. Degrees of knowledge, علم حقيقه fol. 221 a. 4. Mystic meaning of the letters, علم حروف, fol. 228 a. 5. Moral perfection, علم فتوت, fol. 235 a.

Twenty-seven leaves having been lost after fol. 220, the first two of the above Fanns are wanting. They are found in the next copy, Add. 23,555, foll. 96 a - 108 b.

Maķālah IV. Branches of conversational knowledge, علوم محاورى, in seven Fanns, as follows: 1. The art of conversation, عام علم fol. 242 b. 2 and 3. The science of dates and lives, معاررت (an abridgment of universal history), fol. 257 b. 4. Religious systems and sects, مالم مقالات اهل, fol. 295 a. 5. Genealogy, عالم fol. 303 b. 6. Battles and encounters (i.e. the expeditions of Muhammad), مالمواقفات علم المواقف, fol. 309 b. 7. The science of riddles, علم احاج, sol. 322 a.

Kism II. comprises the following five Makālahs :---

Maķālah I. Practical philosophy, حكمت عام تهذيب, in three Fanns, viz.: 1. Ethics, عالم تهذيب, fol. 331 a. 2. Government of the family, اخلاق, fol. 344 b. 3. Government of the city, عام تدبير منازل, fol. 351 b.

Makālah II. Speculative philosophy, in four Fanns, viz.: 1. Logic, عام منطق, fol. 363 a. 2. The first philosophy, or introduction to metaphysics, فالسفه اولى, fol. 373 b. 3. Metaphysics, عام الهى, fol. 383 b. Physics, عام الهى, fol. 393 a.

Makalah III. Mathematics, in four Fanns, viz.: 1. Geometry, علم اسطقسات, fol. 403 a. 2. Astronomy, علم اسطرنوميا, fol. 413 a. 3. Arithmetic, ارثماطيقى, fol. 419 a. 4. Music, موسيقى, fol. 429 a.

Makālah IV. Branches of physies, in nine Fanns, viz.: 1. Medicine, علم طب, fol. 443 b. (2. Alchemy, and 3. Magie, سيميا, are wanting; see Add. 23,555, foll. 225-234). 4. Interpretation of dreams, علم fol. 425 - 234). 4. Interpretation of dreams, علم fol. 481 a. 6. Astrology, علم أحكام نجوم, fol. 481 a. 6. Astrology, علم أحكام نجوم, fol. 485 a. 7. Properties of natural objects, علم ألخواص, fol. 493 b. 8. Physical crafts, تجواص, fol. 493 b. 8. Physical crafts, agriculture, etc., fol. 509 b. 9. The art of holding the breath, and other austerities, practised by the Jogis of India, علم دم و علم وهم, fol. 514 a.

Makālah V. Branches of mathematics, in thirteen Fanns, as follows : 1. Spherology, علم , fol. 576 a. 2. Optics, علم مناظر, fol. 526 b. 3. Knowledge of the "intermediates," علم متبسطات, i. e. of nineteen treatises, which are taken up, in the mathematical course, between Euclid and Almagest, fol. 532 b. 4. Practical arithmetic, علم حساب, fol. 533 b. 5. Algebra, مقابله, fol. 540 a. 6. Surveying, fol. 541 b. 7. Knowledge of علم مساحت the constellations, علم صور الكواكب, fol. 545 a. 8. The art of making almanaeks, and using علم ارقام واعمال زيج و تقويم واسطرلاب ,the astrolabe خلم مسالك و ممالك , Geography في الك و ممالك , fol. 549 a. fol. 554 b. 10. Numerical diagrams, al , عام حيل , fol. 562 b. 11. Mechanics , وفق اعداد fol. 576 b. 12. The art of divination, al , fol. 577 b. 13. Games, رمل, fol. , all , fol. 581 b.

Detailed accounts of the Nafā'is ul-Funūn will be found in the Vienna Jahrbücher, vol. 61, Anzeigeblatt, pp. 2—10, and in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. pp. 38—42. See also Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 364, Uri, p. 282, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 734, vol. v. p. 261.

A full table of contents is prefixed, foll. 1—16; but the numbers indicating the folios do not apply to the present copy.

Add. 23,555.

Foll. 296; 14¹/₄ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 30 lines, 7 in. long; written by different hands, and in various characters, with 'Unvān and goldruled margins, apparently in the 14th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

The same work.

Two leaves, which contained the greater part of the preface (Add. 16,827, foll. 18 a— 22 b), and about two pages at the end, are lost.

Contents : Ķism I. Maķālah I., fol. 5 b. Maķālah II., fol. 53 b. Maķālah III., fol. 96 a. Maķālah IV., fol. 118 b.—Ķism II. Maķālah I., fol. 162 a. Maķālah II., fol. 177 b. Maķālah III., fol. 197 a. Maķālah IV., fol. 216 b. Maķālah V., fol. 260 a.

The following inscription in ornamented Kufi shows that this valuable copy, dating probably from the author's time, was written for a Vazīr named Rukn ud-Din Salām Ullah: مردسم خزانة الكتب الصاحب قران الاعظم ركن الحق بردسم خزانة الكتب الصاحب قران الاعظم ركن الحق A diamondshaped ornament on the same page contains what at first sight seems to be a geometrical design, but is in reality an inscription in a fanciful square character. It consists of honorific epithets applying to the same Vazīr, of which tho following may be deciphered الفقيا العالم في العالم

Add. 16,828.

Foll. 396; 121 in. by 81; 26 lines, 51 in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1054 (A.D. 1644). [WILLIAM YULE.] The same work. This copy omits that part of the preface which contains the mention of the reigning sovereign and the dedication. It wants also the twelfth Fann of Makālah V., Ķism II.

Add. 7718.

Foll. 286; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The following detached sections of the same work.

Ķism I., Maķālah I., Fanns 7—15 (the last imperfect), fol. 2 α . Maķālah II., Fann 9, fol. 68 α . Maķālah III., complete, with the exception of the third Fann, fol. 71 b.

Ķism II. Maķālah II., Fann 1, fol. 116 α . Maķālah I., Fanns 1—3, fol. 126 b.

Kism I. Makālah IV., Fanns 1—7, fol. 158 b.

Kism II. Makālah IV., Fann 4 (here numbered 6), fol. 241 b. Fann 5 (numbered 7), fol. 261 b. Fann 9, fol. 264 b. Fann 10, fol. 283 b. The last is defective at the end.

PHILOSOPHY.

Add. 16,659.

Foll. 582; 9 in. by 6; 31 lines, 33 in. long; written in small Naskhi, with Unväns, and ruled margins, dated (fol. 34 b) A.H. 1182 (A.D. 1768). [WILLIAM YULE.]

Philosophical works of Abu 'Alī Ibn Sīnā. The contents are mostly Arabic, and have been described in the Arabic Catalogue, pp. 447-451. The following are Persian:

I. Foll. 101—140. A Persian version of the second, or metaphysical, part of the work entitled الاشارات والتنبيبات which is, according to Ibn Abi Usaibi'ah, Add. 7340, fol. 127 a, the latest and most excellent of Ibn Sinā's philosophical writings. Beg. سپاس ان خدایرا که آفریدکار جهان است. The translation is divided, like the original, in ten sections called انهاط The contents of the work, and the numerous commentaries written upon it, are stated by Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 300. Compare Uri, pp. 118, 119, Casiri, p. 195, the Petersburg Catalogue, p. 60, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 320.

II. Foll. 228–235, حكمت البوت "Philosophy of death," a treatise attributed in the subscription to Abu 'Alī Sīnā.

بباید دانستن که اول چیزی که بر بندکان Beg. واجبست شناختن حق است

The author states that he wrote it at the request of one of his disciples, whose mind had been enlightened by true knowledge, and warns readers against divulging it to those who were still groping in the dark ways of received belief.

This work, which is not mentioned by Ibn Abi Uṣaibi'ah, is distinct from the treatise entitled نى دنع الغم من الموت, noticed in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iv. p. 312.

III. Foll. 258-352. Dānish Nāmah i 'Alā'ī, the work described vol. ii. p. 1.

IV. Foll. 373-381. شرح معراج, a tract on the spiritual interpretation of Muhammad's ascension.

سیاس خداوند آسمان و زمین ا ستایش Beg.

The author, who does not give his name, states at the beginning, that he had written this tract in answer to the repeated questions of a friend, and with the permission of a spiritual guide designated as مجلس عالى علائى and further on as مدان الدوله

No work of the kind is mentioned among the writings of Ibn Sīnā, either by 'Abd ul-Vāḥid Jūzjānī, or by Ibn Abi Uṣaibi'ah. Its attribution to the celebrated philosopher rests on the doubtful authority of Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 443, on the heading in the present MS.: اين رساله ايست در معراج كه شيخ الرئيس MS.: اين رساله ايست در معراج كه شيخ الرئيس MS.: اين رساله ايست در معراج كه شيخ الرئيس MS.: بعن رساله ايست در معراج كه شيخ الرئيس MS.: Nadon a similar title in another copy, Add. 16,839, art. xxv. It was probably suggested by the 'Alā ud-Daulah mentioned in the preface, who, however, as a religions teacher, has nothing but the name in common with the prince to whom the Dānish Nāmah was dedicated. A celebrated saint of that name, 'Alā ud-Daulah Simnānī, died A.H. 736; see Nafaḥāt, p. 524.

V. Foll. 381—402. A Persian version of Ibn Sinā's treatise on the immortality of the soul, ترجمه رسالة المعاد للشيز الرئيس

سپاس مر خدایرا که هستی همه حقایق ازوست .Beg

The translator, whose name does not appear, states that, having been shown by a friend a version which was found to be much abridged and defective, he undertook at his desire to write the present fuller and more faithful translation. It is divided into sixteen chapters (Faşl).

The original work کتاب العاد was written, according to Ibn Abi Uşaibi'alı, Add. 7340, fol. 27 a, in Rai for Majd ud-Daulalı. See Arabic Catalogue, p. 450, art. xxxii., and Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 442.

VI. Foll. 403—410. A shorter version of the same work, in sixteen chapters (Bāb), with the heading : ترجمه رسالة النفس للشيز الرئيس الحدد لله رب العالمين والعاقبة للمتقين ولا عدوان . Beg.

VII. Foll. 411-413. A short metaphysical tract on the origin and end of existence, with the heading : رسالة المبداء والمعاد,

It is divided into two parts (Kism); the first, treating of the origin, comprises six chapters (Fasl), the second, treating of the end, four. This short tract is distinct from the work entitled کتاب المبدام والمعاد which was written, according to 'Abd ul-Vāhid, in Jurjān, for Abu Muḥammad Shīrāzī. See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 442, and the Arabic Catalogue, p. 450, art. xxiii.

VIII. Foll. 424—435. A Persian commentary upon Ibn Sīnā's allegorical tract, Risālat ut-Ţair, برسالة المرموزة المسماة برسالة الطير للشيئ الرئيس

کیثرت التهاس دومتان Beg. of the Comm. دومتان ومتان وبیزرکان مرا دلیر کردانید

The commentator, who is named in the subscription الشيخ الفاضل عمر بن سهلان الساوحي was a metaphysician, of the time of Sultan Sanjar (A.H. 512—548); see Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 412. The allegory is intended to show, according to 'Abd ul-Vāḥid, by what steps the author had attained true insight. See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 418, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 329.

On fol. 4 is a note by Abu Țālib ul-Hnsainī, stating that he had bought this volume in Murshidābād, A.H. 1208, on his way from Calcutta to Lucknow.

Add. 16,829.

Foll. 249; 8½ in. by 4⅔; 17 lines, 2⅔ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.] I. Foll. 1-42. دانش نامد جهان A treatise on physics.

Author: Ghiyāş ud-Din 'Alī ul-Husainī ul-Işfahānī, غياث الدين على الحسيني الاصفهاني

Short extracts and tables of eontents of the same work are to be found in Or. 1839, fol. 267, and Or. 1947, fol. 37, where, to the author's name, as given above, the patronymic ابن على ميران is added.

The author mentions occasionally phenomena observed by himself in Badakhshān (see foll. 28 b, 38 b), while he speaks of Turkistān and Fārs by hearsay. From the fact that he refers to Fakhr ud-Din Rāzi, fol. 29 b, as one of the "moderns," it may be inferred that he was not considerably later than that philosopher, who died A.H. 606.

A short preface is devoted to considerations on true immortality, which is shown to consist of the good name or useful work which inan leaves behind him. The work, which is described as فوائد از علم حکمت طبيعي comprises ten sections called Fasl, twenty more termed Asl, four entitled Natijah, and an appendix (Khātimah), the headings of which are given in the preface. The first series, beginning on fol. 4 b, contains clementary notices on the spheres, the elements, and bodies in general. The second, or Asls, fol. 13 a, treats of meteorological phenomena, such as vapours, winds, rain, thunder, shooting stars, etc. The four Natijahs, beginning fol. 40 a, treat severally of minerals, plants, animals, and man, and the Khātimah of the anatomy of the human body.

The present copy breaks off after the first five pages of Natijah I.

II. Foll. 43—249, Arabic tracts. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 455.

Add. 25,869.

Foll. 87; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 18 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. CURETON.]

Commentary upon a short treatise on logic, with the text.

The MS. is slightly defective at the beginning, and contains neither title nor author's name. The treatise is divided into several short sections headed نصل, but not numbered. It is found, without commentary, in another MS., Add. 7720, art. I., where it begins as follows : بدانکه آدمی را قوتیست دراکه که بدانکه آدمی را قوتیست دراکه که منتقش کردد دروی صور اشیا چنانکه در آئیذه لیکن در آینه حاصل نشود مکر صور محسوسات

The first word of the text in the present

MS., fol. 1 a, is توتیست, which is explained as follows: توق در اصطلاح چیزیست که مبداء تاثیر درغیر شود و تاثر ازو باشد و مراد باو ^{این}جا نفس ناطقه است

The commentator refers occasionally, foll. 12b, 62b, to glosses written by the author of the treatise upon the Shamsiyyah, a well-known manual of logic, written in the time of Hulākū; see Arabic Catalogue, pp. 250 a, 775 b.

A former owner, Muḥammad 'Alī, states at the end that the MS. came into his possession A.H. 1089.

Add. 26,288.

Foll. 180; 13 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

A philosophical treatise, without preface, title, or author's name, endorsed كتاب موسوم

برایات عالیات اسم مولف معلوم نشده رایت دربیان تعریف حکمت بدانک، در Beg. اخلاق ناصری در تعریف حکمت

It treats at considerable length of questions of metaphysics and physics, in a number of sections headed j_{ij} , and contains extensive extracts from the following works: a commentary on the Akhlāk i Nāṣirī, the Ḥayāt un-Nufūs, and the Gauhar i Murād, the last of which was written in the reign of Shāh 'Abbās II.; see vol. i. p. 32 α .

ETHICS.

Or. 457.

Foll. 120; 11 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 27 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, with ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century.

جاویدان خرد

Moral precepts of the ancient sages of Persia, India, Arabia, and Greece, collected by Ahmad B. Muhammad B. Miskavaih, who died A.H. 421 (see Arabic Catalogue, p. 627 a), and translated from the Arabic by Takī ud-Dīn Muhammad B. Shaikh Muhammad ul-Arrajānī ut-Tustarī, محد تقى الدين نوراني تر آيتي كه سيمرغ قاف بلاغت وبراعت Beg.

Taķī Shushtarī, a scholar and poet of Persian birth, repaired to the court of Akbar, by whose command he turned the Shāhnāmah into prose. He was appointed to the office of Şadr by Jahāngīr, in whose reign he died. See Badaoni, vol. iii. p. 256, Țabaķāt i Shāhjahānī, Or. 1673, fol. 296, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, Add. 16,729, fol. 196. He describes himself in the preface as a servant of Jahāngīr, and states that it was by that emperor's order that he translated the above work, which was written in an elegant, but abstruse, language.

Contents: Preface of the translator, fol. 3 b. Preface of Ibn Miskavaih, fol. 5 a. Precepts of Hūshang, fol. 6 a. How the Jāvidān Khirad came to Māmūn, fol. 15 b. Precepts of Buzurjmihr, fol. 20 a, Kisrā Ķubād, fol. 27 b, Nūshīrvān, fol. 32 a, Bahman B. Isfandiyār, fol. 38 a. Maxims of the sages of India, fol. 59 a, of 'Alī, fol. 70 b, Luķmān, fol. 79 a, Hasan Baṣrī, fol. 94 a, Aktham B. Ṣaifī, fol. 99 a. Proverbs of the Arabs, fol. 111 b. Hermes and Greek sages, fol. 119 a. The present copy breaks off in a notice on Diogenes.

For accounts of the original work of Ibn Miskavaih see Haj. Khal, vol. i. p. 213, vol. ii. p. 581, the Bodleian Catalogue, vol. i. p. 86, vol. ii. p. 576, S. de Sacy, Notices et Extraits, vol. x. p. 95, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iv. p. 191.

Add. 5626.

Foll. 272; 9²/₄ in. by 5²/₄; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, on goldvol. 11. sprinkled paper, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 997 (A.D. 1589).

[NATH. BRASSEY HALHED.]

A treatise on ethics.

Author: Nașir ud-Din Muḥammad B. نصير الدين محمد بن الحسن الطوسي

This celebrated philosopher and astronomer was born in Tūs, A.H. 507, and died in Baghdād, A.H. 692. Notices on his life are to be found in the Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1., p. 60, Haft Iklīm, Add. 16,734, fol. 407, and Majālis ul-Mūminīn, Add. 23,541, fol. 368. See also Jourdain, Mémoire sur l'observatoire de Méraghah, and Audiffret, Biographie Universelle, voce Nassir-eddyn.

He states in the preface that, having been desired by the governor of Kuhistān, Nāşir ud-Dīn 'Abd ur-Rahīm B. Abi Manşūr, to translate into Persian the Kitāb uț-Tahārah of Abū 'Alī B. Muḥammad Ibn Miskavaih (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 745 b), he had complied with his wish by writing an abridged version of that treatise, to which he had added the ethics of civil and domestic life, and had given to the work a title derived from his patron's name.

Nāşir ud-Dīn, surnamed Muḥtasham, was governor of Kuhistān under the Ismā'ili prince 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad, who died A.H. 653, and under his successor Rukn ud-Dīn Khwurshāh. On the approach of the Moghul army in the same year, he came out of his fortress, Sartakht, and made his submission to Hulāgū, by whom he was graciously received, and appointed to a post of honour; but he was enfeebled by old age, and died shortly after, A.H. 655. See Rashīd ud-Dīn, Jāmi' ut-Tavārīkh, Add. 16,688, fol. 90. The author, who was then with Rukn ud-Dīn Khwurshāh, in Maimūndiz, urged that prince to submit to the conqueror. He was employed by him in his negotiations with Hulāgū, and passed with him into the Moghul's camp on the first of Zulka'dah, A.H. 654. The circumstances of his stay at the Ismā'īli court and of his reception by Hulāgū are told in the Jāmi' ut-Tavārīkh, l. c., in Rauzat uṣ-Ṣafā, Bombay edition, vol. v. p. 70, and in Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 80, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 54.

In a later preface, subsequently prefixed to the work, Naşīr ud-Dīn, alluding to his rescue by a powerful prince from the hands of the infidels (Malāḥidah), apologizes for the praises he had been compelled by circumstances to bestow upon those unbelievers, and requests the owners of the first edition to substitute the present preface for the former.

One only of the Museum copies, Add. 25,843, contains the earlier preface, which contains eulogies upon 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad and Nāṣir ud-Dīn 'Abd ur-Raḥīm.

Several editions of the Akhlāķ i Nāṣirī have been published in India, Bombay, A.H. 1267, Calcutta, A.H. 1269, Lucknow, A.H. 1286, Lahore, A.D. 1865. A sketch of its contents has been given by Lieut. E. Frissell in the Bombay Transactions, vol. i. pp. 17—40. See also Abul Faraj, Historia Dynastiarum, p. 358, Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 343; Schier, specimen editionis libri اخلاق ناصرى, Dresden, 1841, and Sprenger, Zeitschrift, vol. xiii. pp. 539—41.

The last page of the MS. contains three 'Arz-Dīdah, the first two of which are dated the 13th and the 37th year of the reign (of Aurangzīb).

Add. 7616.

Foll. 218; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalīk; dated Sūbah of Orissa, Muharram, A.H. 103, probably for 1003 (A.D. 1594). [Cl. J. RICH.] The same work.

Add. 16,815.

Foll. 243; 9 in. by 5; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1063 (A.D. 1653).

[WM. YULE.]

The same work.

Add. 18,808.

Foll. 236; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 14 and 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page, written in Indian Nestalik, probably in the 17th century.

The same work.

Add. 26,290.

Foll. 151; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 16 lines, $3\frac{7}{3}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, in Ahmadnagar, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

A treatise on ethics.

Author: Muhammad B. As'ad Davānī,

تحمد بن اسعد دوانی Beg. افتتاح کلام بنام واجب الاعظام سلطانی سزد Jalāl ud-Dīn Davānī, who is also called Ṣiddīķī, as claiming descent from Abu Bakr Ṣiddīķ, was reputed the greatest philosopher of his time. He was born, A.H. 830, in Davān (spelt Davvān by Yāķūt), a village of the district of Kāzarūn, in which his father, Sa'd ud-Dīn As'ad, was Ķāzī, and spent the greater part of his life in Shīrāz, dividing his time between his professorial duties in the Madrasah called Dār ul-Aitām, and his functions as Ķāzī of the province of Fārs. He died A.H. 908 near Kāzarūn, and was buried in his native place. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 4, p. 111, Tuḥfah i Sāmī, Add. 7670, fol. 46, Mirāt ul-Advār, Add. 7650, fol. 229, and Majālis ul-Mūminīn, Add. 16,716, fol. 404.

After an eulogy on the reigning sovereign, Hasan Beg Bahādur Khān, the author states that he had written the present work at the request of that prince's son, Sulțān Khalīl.

Hasan Beg, the founder of the Ak-Kuyunlu dynasty, died A.H. 882, after a reign of nine years and a half. His eldest son Khalil, who during his father's life had been governor of Färs, succeeded him on the throne, from which he was soon deposed by his brother Ya'kūb Beg. See Jahānārā, Or. 141, fol. 190, and Mirāt ul-Advār, Add. 7650, fol. 228.

The work, which is commonly known as Akhlāķ i Jalālī, is divided into an introduction and the following three books, called المعمه, and subdivided into chapters, لامعم I. Ethics proper, در تهذیب اخلاق, fol. 19 b. II. Government of the family, در تدبیر منزل, fol. 83 a. III. Government of the city, مدن در تدبیر, fol. 100 a.

The author acknowledges, fol. 144 a, that he had drawn most of its contents from Naşîr ud-Din Tūsi's work, Akhlāķ i Nāşirī. See Haj. Khal. vol. v. p. 341, and vol. i. p. 202, Stewart's catalogue, p. 51, the Munich catalogue, p. 62, the Copenhagen catalogue, p. 6. The Akhlāķ i Jalālī has been printed in Calcutta, A.D. 1810, and in the press of Navalkishor, A.H. 1283. An English translation by W. F. Thompson has been published under the title of "Practical Philosophy of the Muhammedan people," London, 1839.

Add. 25,845.

Foll. 381; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [WM.CURETON.]

The same work:

Add. 25,844.

Foll. 230; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik, with goldruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.]

A work on ethics.

Author : Husain ul-Kāshifī, حسين الكاشفى (died A.H. 910; see p. 9 b.)

حضرت پادشاہ علی الاطلاق عـزت کلمتہ . وجلت عظمتہ

After mentioning, as the reigning sovereign, Abul-Ghāzī Sulţān Ḥusain, the author praises one of that Sultan's sons, Abul-Muhsin, for his noble qualities, of which, he says, he had given a signal proof by his dutiful behaviour when, at the first beck of his father, he left the seat of his government, Merv, to come to Court. It was on that oceasion that the author, having paid his respects to the Prince, wrote the present book as a suitable offering for him, and graced it with his name. It is stated in a versified chronogram at the end that it was completed A.H. 900, a date expressed by the above title.

Abul-Muhsin did not long continue to deserve the author's commendation, for in A.H. 904 he combined with his brother, Muhammad Muhsin, governor of Abīvard, to raise the standard of rebellion. He was, however, defeated by his father, and subsequently repaired to the capital, where he received his pardon, A.H. 906. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, pp. 280, 283, 260.

The Akhläk i Muhsini has been edited in Hertford, 1823 and 1850, in Calcutta, in the Selections for the use of students, 1809, and in Lucknow, A.H. 1279. An English translation by H. G. Keene has been published in Hertford, 1851. See Garcin de Tassy, Notice du traité persan sur les vertus, de Hussein Vaëz, Paris, 1837, Krafft's catalogue, p. 183, the Copenhagen catalogue, p. 6, the Munich catalogue, p. 63, and the St. Petersburg catalogue, p. 257.

POLITICS.

Add. 23,516.

Foll. 153; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ahmadābad, Rajab, A.H. 1032 (A.D. 1623).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

A treatise on the art of government.

Author : Nizām ul-Mulk, نظام الملك

سپاس خدایرا عنر و جل که آفریدکار زمین .Beg و آسمانست

This celebrated Vazīr, the first who bore the title of Nizām ul-Mulk, and whose proper name was Abu 'Alī ul-Hasan B. 'Alī, was born in Ţūs, A.H. 408. He carried on for thirty years, under Alp Arslān and Malak Shāh, the government of the vast empire of the Saljūķis, until he fell under the dagger of an assassin, near Nahāvand, A.H. 485. Accounts of his life will be found in Ibn Khallikān, de Slane's translation, vol. i. p. 413, Kāmil, vol. x., pp. 137—142, Rauzat uş-Ṣafā, Bombay edition, vol. iv. pp. 85—90, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, pp. 90-93.

The present work, which is designated by the editor in his epilogue as سير الملح المتكلمين, is called in the subscription سير الملح المتكلمين. It is generally known by the title of خواجه نظام الملك, which is found in the heading of another copy, Or. 1930. The same title is assigned to it by Haj. Khal., vol. iii., p. 638, who adds that it was written for Malak Shāh, A.H. 469. The author of the Guzīdah, who mentions it among his sources, Add. 22,693, fol. 3 a, calls it سبر الملوك نظام. See also Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 236, vol. vi. p. 114, the Library of King's College, Cambridge, No. 219, and Sir Wm. Ouseley's Collection, No. 475.

The Siyar ul-Mulūk was published some years after the author's death. The editor, Muhammad, who describes himself as the eopyist of the Royal Library, ناسز کتابهای خزانه, and further on, fol. 151 a, محمد ناسخ نویسنده gives the following account, کتابهای خاص خزینه of its origin :- In A.H. 484, Malak Shāh ordered some of the great office-holders of his court, such as Nizām ul-Mulk, Sharaf ul-Mulk, Tāj ul-Mulk, Majd ul-Mulk, and others, to submit to him in writing their ideas for the better government of the empire and the management of secular and religious concerns. The memoir of Nizām ul-Mulk met with the Sultan's complete approval, and was by his order transcribed for the royal library.

The work in its present shape consists of fifty chapters (Fasl). Nizām ul-Mulk, who had, according to the editor's statement, written in the first instance only thirty-nine, added subsequently eleven more, suggested by dangers he saw threatening from certain enemies of the state, at the same time enlarging those he had previously written. When he set out, A.H. 485, on his last journey to Baghdād, he left his work for transcription in the hands of the editor, who, after the author's death, did not think it advisable to publish it, until the time came when the reign of justice and Islām was restored by the "Master of the World." At the end is a Kasidah in praise of the work of Nizām ul-Mulk, addressed to that new sovereign, who is there mentioned by name. It was Ghiyas ud-Din Muhammad, son of Malak Shah, whose accession in A.H. 498 restored for a time peace to the distracted empire.

The following are the headings of the chapters :---

.ه اندر نکاهداشتن حساب و مال ولایت و نسق آن ایم اندر ترتیب بار دادن خاص و عام

445

The work is written in plain and archaic language. It contains many historical narratives and anecdotes relating to former dynasties, especially to the Abbasides, \overline{Al} i Buvaih, Sāmānis and Ghaznavis. Sometimes the author relates incidents of his own life, as for instance, fol. 62 a, his sending a secret emissary to watch and report upon the private utterances of the envoy of Shams ul-Mulk, Khān of Māvārā un-Nahr. Chapters 44—47 have a special historical value; they treat of the rising of some subversive sects, such as the followers of Mazdak, the Bāținis, Karmațis, and Khurramdīnān.

On fol. 151 b, is found a subscription transcribed from an earlier MS., which is stated to have been written in the town of Urmiyah, A.H. 564, by order of the Amīr Hājib Alp Jamāl ud-Dīn.

Or. 256.

Foll. 93; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1127 (A.D. 1716).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Counsels of Nizām ul-Mulk to his son, Fakhr ul-Mulk, respecting the responsibilities of the Vazīrate, illustrated by incidents of his own life, and various historical ancedotes.

It appears from the preface, which is slightly defective at the beginning, that the work was dedicated to an Amīr Fakhr ud-Dīn Hasan, امير فخر الدوله و الدين حسن بن الصدر المبرور on his appointment as Vazīr (in whose reign is not stated). The genealogy of that personage is traced up to the great Nizām ul-Mulk, who was his ancestor in the twelfth degree. It shows also that the Vazīr's great-grandsire, Amīr Mu'izz, had been Ṣāḥib Dīvān, or first Vazīr, to Ţughātīmūr, who reigned in Khorasan from A.H. 735—753. (See Jahānārā; and Ḥāfiz Abrū, fol. 298.) From this it may be inferred that the work was written in the ninth century of the Hijrah. The compiler, whose name does not appear, states that he had drawn the contents partly from books, and partly from traditions handed down in his family, which was also descended from Nizām ul-Mulk.

Fakhr ul-Mulk (Abul-Muzaffar 'Alī), to whom the counsels are addressed, was the eldest son of Nizām ul-Mulk. Appointed Vazīr by Barkyāruķ, A.H. 488, he afterwards held the same office under Sanjar in Naishāpūr, until he was assassinated, like his father, A.H. 500. See Kāmil, vol. x., pp. 172, 287.

The work, which is designated in the preface as "the Counsels," نصائح ', is more generally known by the name of رصايای نظام الملك, by which it is referred to in the Rauzat us-Ṣafā (Notices et Extraits, vol. ix. p. 149, and the Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 91). Compare Hammer, History of the Assassins, p. 45, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. vi., p. 115. Several extracts, translated by a Munshī, will be found, under the title of Majma'i Wasáyá, in Sir H. Elliot's History, vol. ii. pp. 485-504.

Contents: Preface, fol. 4 a. Mukaddimah. Notice on the life of Nizām ul-Mulk, fol. 5 b. Fasl I. Warnings against the dangers of the Vazīrate, fol. 13 a. Fasl II. Rules and duties of the Vazīrate, fol. 42 b.

Another copy, Add. 26,267, begins as follows:

شرایف تحمیدات پادشاهی راست که انبساط نخر دین A short notice on the work is prefixed to the present volume, foll. 2, 3. It is signed نیر رخشان, and dated Dehli, April 17, 1866. Nayyir i Rakhshān is the nom de plume of Navvāb Muḥammad Ziyā ud-Dīn Aḥmad Khān, son of Navvāb Aḥmad Bakhsh Khān, a distinguished scholar and poet of Dehli, to whom Sayyid Aḥmad Khān has devoted a notice in his Āṣār uṣ-Ṣanādīd, vol. iv. p. 152.

Or. 254.

Foll. 72; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, apparently in the 15th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

A work treating of the duties of kings and the art of government.

Author: Islām B. Ahmad B. Muhammad

ul-Ghazzālī, [sie] اسلام بن احمد بن محمد الغرالي

Beg. حمدى كه اسماع ارباب صوامع جوامع ملكوت. The preface contains a wordy panegyrie on the reigning sovereign, Amīr Sultān Husain.

It includes a Kaşīdah in his praise by Salınān, the court poet of the Ilkānīs, which leaves no douht as to his identity. Sulţān Husain was the son of Shaikh Uvais, the second prince of the Ilkānī dynasty. He ascended the throne in Tabrīz, after his father's death, in A.H. 776, and was put to death, after a short and chequered reign, A.H. 784, by his brother, Sulţīn Ahmad. See Rauzat uş-Ṣafā, vol. v., p. 172, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 137.

It is stated in the preface that the work had been originally written in Greek by Aristotle, and that the present version was made from the Arabie by order of Sultān Husain. A legendary account of Alexander and his "Vazīr," the sage Aristotle, addet adde

The work is written in prolix and ornate prose, interspersed with numerous verses. The present copy is imperfect at the end.

The MS. is endorsed سلوك السلطنت, and on the first page is written the following title: هذا كتاب من تصنيف الامام الهمام امير اسلام بن احمد بن محمد الغرالي في معرفه سلوك السلطنه

The same page is covered with the notes and seals of former owners. One of the latter contains the name of an Amīr of Shāhjahān's reign with the date 1054, while some of the more recent belong to the kings of Oude.

Add. 7618.

Foll. 250; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 9; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 996 (A.D. 1588). [CL. J. RICH.]

ذخيرة الملوك

A treatise on political ethics, and the rules of good government.

Author : 'Alī B. ush-Shihāb ul-Hamadānī,

Amir Sayyid 'Ali B. Shihāb ud-Din B. Mir Sayyid Muhammad ul-Husaini, of Hamadan, a celebrated saint, and founder of an order of Sūfis, led the itinerant life of a Darvish, and is said to have visited all parts of the Muslim world. He is especially known as the apostle of Kashmir, which he entered, in A.H. 781, with a train of seven hundred followers, and where he acquired great influence on the Sultan Kuth ud-Din. He spent in that country the last years of his life, died shortly after setting out on his return to Persia, on the 6th of Zulhijjah, A.H. 786, at the age of seventy-three, and was buried in Khuttilan. Notices on his life will be found in Javahir ul-Asrar, Add. 7607, fol. 121, Majālis ul-Mūminin, Add. 23,548, fol. 340, Nafahāt ul-Uns, Calcutta ed., p. 515, Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 87, Vāki'āt i Kashmir, Add. 26,282, fol. 40, and Newall, History of Cashmere, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. xxiii., p. 414, and vol. xxxiii., p. 278. Some of his works are mentioned in the Arabic Catalogue, 406 a.

The Zakhīrat ul-Mulūk is divided into ten books (Bāb). Its contents have been stated by Hāj. Khāl., vol. iii., p. 329, Tornberg, Upsala catalogue, p. 290, and Flügel, Vienna catalogue, vol. iii., p. 284. Compare Stewart, p. 50, Uri, p. 273, and the Leyden catalogue, vol. iv., p. 220.

POLITICS.

Add. 16,818.

Foll. 218; 9½ in. by 5; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

The same work.

Or. 253.

Foll. 173; 9 in. by 5; 21 lines, 3 in. long; written in small Naskhi; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1089 (A.D. 1678.)

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

سلوك الملوك

A treatise on the mode of governing in aceordance with the Muslim law.

Author: Fazl B. Rūzbahān Isfahānī, ابن روزبهان اصفهانی فتر الباب هرک تاب بحمد آن ملك وهاب . Beg.

The oceasion on which the work was written is told at great length in the preface. After the death of Abu-l-Fath Muhammad Shaibānī Khān, at Merv, A.H. 916,* the Uzbak princes retired to Turkistan, and Mavaraun-nahr, invaded by the Chaghatāï forces under Bābar, became overspread with heresy and perverse practices. When, two years later, Abu-l-Ghāzī 'Ubaid-Ullah Khān resolved to attempt the recovery of the lost kingdom, he performed, in Muharram, A.H. 918, a pilgrimage to the tomb of Khwajah Ahmad Yasavi, and there took a solemn vow that, if successful, he would conform in every act of his rule with the behests of divine law. He attaeked Bukhārā a few days later, and completely routed Babar, who had brought from Samarkand superior forces against him. After re-establishing Uzbak rule throughout Māvarā-un-nalır and taking his residence in Bukhārā, he sent for the author, then living in Samarkand, who by his desire wrote the present work in order to assist the young sovereign in the performance of his vow.

The author adds that he sets forth on every point the teaching of the Hanafi and Shāfi'i schools.

'Ubaid Ullah Khān, more commonly known as 'Ubaid Khān, was the son of Maḥmūd Sulṭān, a brother of Shaibānī Khān. He was the most powerful Uzbak chief during the reign of Kūchkunjī Khān, A.H. 916—936, and a formidable foe to Shāh Ismā'il and Ṭahmāsp, whose dominions he repeatedly invaded. He was raised to the Khānship A.H. 940, and died A.H. 946. See Erskine, History of India under Baber, vol. i. pp. 309, 322, and Rauzat ut-Ṭāhirīn, Or. 168, p. 365.

The work is divided into an Introduction and fifteen chapters (Bāb), as follows: Mukaddimah. Legal meaning of the titles Imām, Sultān, Amīr, and Vazīr, fol. 14 b. Bab. I. Maintenance of the law; appointment of the Shaikh ul-Islām and Muftīs, fol. 19 b. II. Appointment of Kāzīs and their duties, fol. 31 b. II. Appointment of the Muhtasibs and their functions, fol. 54 a. IV. Appointment of Daroghahs, watchmen, vālī-mazālim, and frontier guards, fol. 65 a. V. Public alms (Sadakāt), fol. 78 b. VI. Tithes and imposts, fol. 93 a. VII. Treasuretrove and heirless estates, fol. 112 b. VIII. Penal laws, fol. 120 b. IX. Observance of pilgrimage, Friday-assemblies, festivals, etc., fol. 134 a. X. Repression of mutinies, fol. 144 a. XI. Religious war, fol. 148 a. XII. Booty and its division, fol. 154 b. XIII. Laws concerning renegades, fol. 160 b. XIV. Treatment of Zimmis (Christians and Jews), fol. 164 b. XV. Engagements contracted with unbelievers, fol. 170 a.

The end of Bāb XIV. and the beginning of the next are wanting.

[•] See Memoirs of Baber, translated by Wm. Erskine, p. 239 seqq.

MATHEMATICS.

Add. 23,570.

Foll. 136; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; written in minute Nestalik; dated Yazd, A.H. 1014—1018 (A.D. 1605—1609). [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

A collection of mathematical tracts, mostly Arabic (see Arabic Catalogue, p. 622). The following is Persian.

Foll. 117-133; 17 lines, 13 in. long.

A manual of geometry, translated from an Arabic work entitled اشکال الناسیس

Translator : Maḥmūd B. Muḥammad B. Muḥammad B. Ķivām ul-Ķāẓī ul-Vābashtā'ī, commonly called Maḥmūd ul-Haravī ul-Hai'avī, محمد بن محمد بن قوام القاضى محمود الوابشتايي [sic] المشتهر بحمود الهروى الهيوى Beg. حمد بى حدو ثناء بى منتها و سپاس بي قيادس كه قدم شهسوار

The translator calls the author of the work Shams ud-Din Sayyid Hakim Samarkandi. (According to Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 322, it was Muhammad B. Ashraf us-Samarkandi, who died about A.H. 600.) He dedicates his translation to an Amīr Jamāl ud-Din Sulțān Husain, in whose honour he gave it the above title.

That prince's name is preceded by the following titles: العجم افتخار اعاظم امراء, from which it would appear that he was not a sovereign, but a provincial governor.

The translation is divided, like the original, into a Mukaddimah and thirty-five theorems the last of which is imperfect at the end.

The original work, Ashkāl ut-Ta'sīs, was written A.H. 593. See Casiri, vol. i. p. 380. A commentary upon it by Ķāzī Zādah is mentioned in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 119.

Add. 7693.

Foll. 72; 7 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān, apparently in the 17th century. [CL. J. RICH.]

A treatise on some ingenious arithmetical operations invented by the author.

خلیل بن ابرادیم ,Author : Khalil B. Ibrāhīm شکر و سپاس سزاوار حضرتیست که ذات او .Beg از صفت امکان

The work is divided into a Mukaddimah, ten chapters (Fasl), and a Khātimah. This is the treatise which is apparently twice mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 29, under two different forms of the author's name; it is attributed in the first instance to الفاضل, it is attributed in the first instance to خير الدين, and in the second to Khalil B. Ibrahim, as in the present copy. As the honorific title Khair ud-Din is commonly coupled with the name of Khalil, it is very probable that both belonged to one and the same writer. The author states in the preface that he wrote the treatise at the request of some friends, and that it owed its success to its appearance in the auspicious days of the great Sultan Muhammad B. Murād B. Muhammad (i.e. Muhammad II., A.H. 825-855).

Add. 5649.

Foll. 86; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Calcutta, Zulhijjah, A.H. 1190 (A.D. 1777).

[NATH. BRASSEY HALHED.]

ليلاوتى

Lilāvatī, a treatise on algebra and geometry, translated from the Sanskrit.

D

VOL. II.

اول زثنای بادشاهی کویم .Beg وانکه زستایش الهی کویم

Shaikh Abul-Faiz, with the poetical surname of Faizi, which he subsequently altered to Fayyāzī, was the eldest son of Shaikh Mubārak Nāgūrī, and the brother of Abul-Fazl. He was born in Agra, A.H. 954, became a great favourite of Akbar, who bestowed upon him the title of Malik ush-Shu'arā, or poet laureate, and died on the 10th of Safar, A.H. 1004. The present work is mentioned by Abul-Fazl, among various translations made for Akbar, in the A'in i Akbari, vol. i. p. 116. The same author gives notices of Faizi's life, with copious extracts from his poetical compositions, in the Akbar Nāmah, vol. iii. pp. 716-738, and in the A'in i Akbari, vol. i. p. 235, while Badaoni inveighs against him with the bitter rancour of Muhammadan bigotry, in Muntakhab ut-Tavārīkh, vol. iii. pp. 299-310, a passage translated in Elliot's History, vol. v. pp. 544-9. See also Mir'āt ul-'Alam, Add. 7657, fol. 452, and Blochmann, translation of A'in i Akbari, vol. i. p. 490.

After a panegyric on Akbar, by whose order the translation was written, Faizī states in the preface that the Hindi (i.e. Sanskrit) original was due to Bhāskarāchārya بهاسکراچار, of the city of Bedar, in the Deccan. The time of composition, he adds, is not exactly known; but an astronomical treatise of the same author, entitled بیکرن کتوهل, had been written in the year 1105 of Sālivāhan, i.e. 373 years before the "eurrent year," namely the 32nd of the Ilāhī era (A.H. 995—6). The preface concludes with a legend on a daughter of Bhāskara called Līlāvatī, and on the circumstance which led to the composition of the book of the same name.

The Sanskrit text has been printed in Calcutta, 1832, and English translations have been published by John Taylor, Bombay, 1816, and by H. Colebrooke, London, 1817. Faizi's version has been printed in Calcutta, 1828. For accounts of Bhāskara's mathematical works see Edward Strachey, "Early History of Algebra," Asiatic Researches, vol. xii. pp. 159—185, and "Observations on the mathematical science of the Hindoos, with extracts from Persian translations of the Leelawutee and Beej Gunnit," Calcutta, 1805, Colebrooke's Miscellaneous Essays, vol. ii. pp. 419—450, and A. Weber, Vorlesungen, p. 231.

The present volume contains marginal notes by N: B. Halhed, extracts from which by J. H. Hindley are preserved in Add. 7032.

Add. 16,869.

Foll. 156; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz; dated Shāhjahānābād, Jumādā I., A.H. 1141 (A.D. 1728). [WM. YULE.]

بيج گنت A treatise on algebra, translated from the Sanskrit Vijaganita of Bhāskarāchārya.

Translator: 'Ațā Ullah Rashīdī B. Ahmad Nādir, عطاء الله رشيدي بن احمد نادر

اول زستـایش آلهمی کـویـم .Beg پس نعت رسول او کماهي کویم

The translator states that he wrote this work in A.H. 1044, the 8th year of Shāhjahān, to whom it is dedicated. It is divided into a Mukaddimah and five Makālahs. The same translation is noticed by Aumer, Munich Catalogue, p. 136.

For editions and translations of the Vijaganita see Zenker, Bibl. Orient. vol. ii. p. 340.

Add. 16,744.

Foll. 113; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; from 13 to 19 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, dated Sha'bān, the 7th year of Farrukhsiyar, A.H. 1130 (A.D. 1718).

[WM. YULE.]

450

I. Foll. 3-56.

منتخب

A treatise on arithmetic, translated from the Arabic treatise entitled خلاصة الحساب, by Bahā ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. Ḥusain ʿĀmilī (d. 1031; see Arabic Catalogue, p. 622 b.)

Translator : Lutt Ullah Muhandis B. Us-لطف الله مهندس , tād Ahmad Mi'mār Lāhaurī ابن استاد احمد معمار لاهوری

الحمد لله . . . اما بعد ميكويد فقير لطف الله .Beg

The translator is known as the author of a rhymed abridgment of Daulatshāh's Tazkirah. He uses مهندس as his Takhalluş. See Oude Catalogue, pp. 116, 122.

He states that he wrote the present translation by desire of the noble Sayyid Mir Muhammad Sa'id B. Mir Muhammad Yahyā, and that the above title conveys the date of composition, viz. A.H. 1092.

II. Foll. 57-99.

خلاصة راز

A treatise in verse on arithmetic, mensuration, and algebra, in ten sections (Bāb).

Author: 'Ațā Ullah B. Ustād Aḥmad Mi'mār عطا الله بن استاد احمد معمار, a brother of the preceding, and probably identic with the translator of Bijganit (p. 450 b).

Beg. شكر بيحد بواحد ازلى حمد بيحد بفرد لم يزلى The author begins with eulogics on Shāh Jahān and Prince Dārā-Shikūh, to the latter of which the work is dedicated.

III. Foll. 100-107.

A treatise on the properties of numbers خواص اعداد, in four Makālahs, by Luțf Ullah Muhandis; see Art. I.

الحمد لله . . . ميكوبد فقير لطف الله متخلص Beg. بمهندس

ASTRONOMY.

Add. 7697.

Foll. 157; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in fair Naskhi; dated Ramazān, A.H. 685 (A.D. 1286). [Cl. J. RICH.]

A treatise on astronomy.

Author: Abu Raiḥān Muḥanmad B. Aḥmad ul-Bīrūnī, الب يرونى تحمد بن احمد الب يرونى Beg. دانستن صورت عالم و جكونكى نهاذ اسمان وزمين to which the following heading is prefixed: تفهيم كردن استاذ ابو ريحان محمد بن احمد الب يروني رحمة الله عليه مر ابتداء علم مجوم را بطريق مدخل

Al-Birnni, the celebrated philosopher, and contemporary of Ibn Sinā, was born in the city of Khwārazm, A.H. 362, and was so ealled, according to Sam'ani, Add. 23,355, fol. 98, from "Birun," the outskirts of the البيروني بكسر البا . . . نسبة الي خارج خوارزم town, He lived at the courts of Kabus B. Vashmagir, prince of Jurjan, who reigned A. H. 388-403, and of Abul-'Abbās Māmūn B. Māmān, the last of the independent rulers of Khwārazm, who was put to death by rebels A.H. 407. Having repaired, shortly after, to Ghaznah, al-Birūni spent the rest of his life under the patronage of the Ghaznavi Sultans, Mahmūd and Mas'ūd, whom he accompanied in their Indian campaigns. Ho died in Ghaznah, A.H. 440. See Professor Sachau's introduction to "Chronologic Orientalischer Völker von Alberuni," pp. 1-38, Reinaud, Introduction à la Géographie d'Aboulféda, pp. 95-8, and Sir H. Elliot's notice, enlarged by Professor Dowson, History of India, vol. ii. pp. 1-8.

The author, after remarking that, before entering upon the investigation of astronomical problems, it was necessary to make one's self acquainted with the configuration of heaven and earth, and the technical terms used by astronomers, states that he had written the present elementary treatise at the request of Raihānah, daughter of al-Hasan, of Khwārazm, and had set forth in it, by questions and answers, the principles of geometry and arithmetic, the figure of the world, and judicial astrology, احكام الجوم.

The text is divided into short sections by the questions, which are written in red, as headings. A table of these sections (Bāb), 530 in number, occupies foll. 1—7. The work contains numerous diagrams, astronomical tables, and drawings of the constellations. These last fill twenty-seven pages, foll. 41—54. Some leaves are wanting after fol. 140; the lacune extends from Bāb 475 to Bāb 481.

The date of composition is fixed by a passage of the chronological section, fol. 98 a, in which the author states the very day on which he was writing; this was the 25th of Ramazān, A.H. 420 (in another copy, Add. 23,566, A.H. 425).

The Tafhim is extant in a Persian and an Arabic edition, neither of which purports to have been translated from the other. Two copies of the latter are preserved in the Bodleian library ; their contents, which perfectly agree with those of the Persian edition, have been fully stated by Nicoll, pp. 262—268.

The above title, which is found in the subscription of the present copy, is nearly the same as that by which the author designates the work in his Fihrist (Sachau's introduction, p. 44), viz. كتاب التفهيم لاوائل صناعة ^{التن}جيم This last form is given by Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 385, who adds that the work had been written, A.H. 421, for Abul-Hasan 'Alī B. Abil-Fazl ul-Khāṣṣī, a notice probably applying to another recension of the same work.

The present copy was written by Ibn ul-

Ghulām ul-Ķūniyavī ابن الغلام القونيوى, who wrote also, as has been noticed by Professor Sachau, p. xv., the valuable Leyden MS. (Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 296), containing an account of Rāzi's and Bīrūnī's works, written by the latter, and dated A.H. 692.

On the first page is a note by a former owner, whose name has been erased, stating that he had purchased the MS. in Sīvās, A.H. 732.

Add. 23,566.

Foll. 79; 11 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 23 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 19th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

The same work.

This copy has, instead of the preface, a short doxology, which begins thus: الحبد لله

الذي جعل ^{ال}نجوم زينة للسموات ومسخرات There are two lacunes in the body of the work, viz. one after fol. 72, extending from Bāb 478 to 489 (according to the numeration found in the table of Add. 7697), and another after fol. 76, extending from Bāb 513 to 523. The language is, to some extent, modernized.

Add. 7700.

Foll. 69; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 27 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 15th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

مختصر در معرفت تـقويم

A compendious manual on the computation of the almanack, by Naşīr ud-Dīn Tūsī (see above, p. 441 b), with a commentary, the author of which is not named.

این مختصریست در معرفت : Beg. of the manual تقویم مشتمل بر سی فصل

The work is divided into thirty chapters (Fasl), and, from that circumstance, it has become generally known as Sī Fasl, سی فصل. Its contents have been stated in the Vienna Jahrbücher, vol. 67, Anzeigeblatt, p. 44, Bodleian Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 300, and Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 490. See also Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 642, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 14S. An Arabic version is noticed in the Arabic Catalogue, p. 188 a.

The work was written, as incidentally stated by the author, Fasl 22, fol. 55, in A.H. 658, that is to say, as the commentator remarks, some time before the commencement of the observations in Marāghah, which extended from A.H. 860 to 872.

In the preface, which is somewhat defective at the beginning, the commentator, after describing the gradual steps by which men were led to the observation of the motions of the heavenly bodies, bewails the sad neglect of astronomy in his day, and complains that, in spite of his long and distant travels, he had not succeeded in meeting with a competent master of that science.

From a passage, fol. 56 a, in which the commentator indicates the positions of the planets for A.H. 824, it appears that this was the year in which he wrote.

Or. 1585.

Foll. 38; $7\frac{1}{3}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, 2 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jumāda II.; A.H. 1079 (A.D. 1668).

[SIR HENRY C. RAWLINSON.] A treatise on the astrolabe, without author's name. It is the well known manual of Naşīr ud-Dīn Ṭūsī, which, from its division into twenty chapters (Bāb), is known under the name of Bīst Bāb, بيست باب. See Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 83, Uri, p. 287, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, pp. 112, 306, and the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 9.

Add. 22,752.

Foll. 136; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1221 (A.D. 1806).

A commentary on Nașir ud-Din Tūsi's treatise on the astrolabe, with the text.

Author: 'Abd ul-'Alī B. Muḥammad ul-Barjandī, عبد البرجندي

Nizām ud-Dīn 'Abd ul-'Alī ul-Barjandī was a pupil of Manşūr B. Mu'in ud-Din Kāshī, and of Saif ud-Din Taftazani, the Shaikh ul-Islām of Herat (who died A.H. 916). He wrote commentaries upon the Tazkirah of Nașir ud-Din Țūsi, the Tahrir Majisti of the same author, and upon the Zij of Ulugh Beg (this last is dated A.H. 929; see p. 457 b). He left also a treatise on the distances and sizes of planets, dedicated to Habib Ullah, Vazir of Khorasan (see p. 98 a), and another on the construction of almanacks, which was completed in A.H. 883, and which has been lithographed in Tabriz (?), A.H. 1276. The author of Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 4, p. 117, writing A.H. 930, speaks of him as still living, and he is mentioned in Mir'at ul-Advar among the great scholars of the reign of Tahmāsp. See also Uri, p. 284, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 111, and Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 471.

This copy was written, as stated in the subscription, for Abu'l-Fath Sultān-Muḥammad, called Shāh Khudābandah, a descendant of the Ṣafavis who fled to India A.H. 1205, and settled in Lucknow; see p. 133 b. Foll. $1 \ b$ —5 a and 133 b—136 a contain some additional tables.

Add. 7698.

Foll. 162; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Naskhī, apparently in the 14th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The astronomical tables constructed by order of Ilkhān, i.e. Hulāgū, by Nașīr ud-Dīn Ṭūsī, نصير الدين طوسى

الحمد الله رب العالمين . . . خداى تعالى .Beg. جنكز خان را قوت داذ

After giving a short account of Chingiz Khān and his successors down to Hulāgū, the author states that the latter prince, after rescuing him, Nasir of Tus, from the land of the Mulhids (Ismā'īlis), and appointing him his chief astronomer, had called together other adepts to assist him in the work, viz. Fakhr ud-Din Maraghi from Mausil, Mu'ayyid ud-Din 'Urzi from Damaseus, Fakhr ud-Din Khalātī from Tiflis, and Najm ud-Din Dabiran from Kazvin. Having selected the site of Maraghah, and provided the requisite buildings and instruments, the astronomers commenced a series of observations, which were completed under Abakā Khān, and Nasir ud-Din compiled their results in the present tables, which he presented to the reigning sovereign.

The author then proceeds to review the earlier tables to which they had referred for comparison, namely those of Hipparchus, 1400 and some years anterior to the beginning of their observations, of Ptolemy, 285 years later than Hipparchus, of al-Māmūn, 430 and some years before their own time, of al-Battānī, somewhat later in Syria, of al-Hākim in Egypt, and of Ibn al-A'lam in Baghdād, the latter two being 250 years earlier than the present tables.

The work is divided into four books (Makālah), as follows : I. On eras, in a Mukaddimah and two Bābs, fol. 3 b. It treats of the Chinese era تاريخ قلتا, the eras of the Greeks, " Arabs, and Persians, and that of Malakshāh. II. On the motions of the planets, and their position in longitude and latitude, in thirteen Faşls, fol. 21 b, with tables, full. 30-82. III. On the determination of the times and of the horoscopes of each time, در معرفت اوقات in fourteen Fasls, fol. 83 b; وطالعها هر وقستمي tables, foll. 90-110. IV. On other astronomical operations, in two Babs: Bab 1. on horoscopes of nativity, in seven Fasls, fol. 111 b, with tables, foll. 116-119. Bab 2. Prognostics connected with the ascendant of در دلایل که تعلق بطالع عالم دارند , foll. 120 a-122 b.

Foll. 123—152 contain various additional tables, with explanations in Arabic and Persian, and foll. 153—160 an Arabic tract, with the heading شرح العمل بالمجدول المعروف بدقايق النسب

The appointment of Nașīr ud-Dīn by Hulāgū, A.H. 657, and the erection of the observatory, are recorded in the Jāmi' ut-Tavārīkh. See Add. 16,688, fol. 105, Quatremère, Reshid eddin, p. 325, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 59.

In the last work, p. 61, the Zij of Naṣīr ud-Dīn is designated by the name of تنسوق istead of its usual title نامه أيلخان See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 561, Jourdain, Magazin Encyclopédique, 1809, vol. vi. p. 97, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 149. A table of longitudes and latitudes, extracted from it, has been edited by John Greaves, who published in the same year, London, 1652, the introduction of a commentary upon it by Mahmūd Shāh Khuljī, under the title of Astronomica quædam ex traditione Shah Cholgii Persæ. An Arabie version of the Zij i Ilkhānī is mentioned by Uri, p. 195.

Add. 11,636.

Foll. 69; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 27 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Baghdād, Rabi' II., A.H. 795 (A.D. 1393).

An enlarged recension of the preceding work.

Author: Al-Hasan B. ul-Husain B. ul-Hasan Shahanshāh us-Simnānī ul-Munajjim, الحسن بن الحسين بن الحسن شهنشاد السمنانى المنجم This is the author's autograph, as shown by the following subscription: تم الكتاب بفضل الله تعالى وحسن توفيقه فى رابع ربيع انثاني سنه ١٥٠ هجريه كاتبه و مولفه الحسن بن الحسين ... السمنانى المنجم هداد الله تعالى صراطا مستقيما بمدينة السلم بغداد حرسها الله تعالى من الافات

His name appears again, in a more complete form, in the signature of an Ijāzah, or licence, on the opposite page, dated in the middle of Muḥarram, A.H. 796. This licence was granted by the author to an astronomer called Shihāb ud-Dīn 'Abd Ullah, with whom he had read the Zīj i Ilkhānī in Tabrīz, A.H. 788. On the same page is written, by another hand : خط مولانا الاعظم سلطان ^{المن}جمين كمال الدين :

After praising the original work, which he had tested by his own observations, the editor states in the preface, the first page of which is wanting, that a desire to facilitate its use to beginners had induced him to prepare the present Tauzih, or "lucid exposition," in which, while eliminating some superfluous portions, he had inserted useful explanations, and some supplementary tables of his own composition. The Tauzih is divided, like the original work, into four Makālahs. The MS., however, is very defective, and contains only the following portions: Makālah I. The Mukaddimah and Faşls 1-4, fol. 2 b. Makālah III. Faşls 12-14, fol. 8 a. Makālah IV., fol. 8 b. Supplementary tables, to which a statement of their contents is prefixed, foll. 16 a-68.

Add. 7703.

Foll. 31; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19—23 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ jn. long; written by two hands, apparently in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

ارشاد

A short manual on the use of the astrolabe, divided into fifty short sections (Bāb), a table of which is given at the beginning.

Author : Nāṣir ud-Dīn Aḥmad B. Muḥam-ناصر الدین احمد بن محمد شیرازی ,Beg. شکر و سپاس بسی حد و عد آفریدکاری را جل .

مالاله

The titles مولانائی معظم جاسوس انلاك are prefixed, in the opening lines, to the name of the author, who describes the work, in a short preamble, as مختصري در علم اسطرلاب From the repeated mention of Isfahan in the examples, it appears to have been written in that city. The year 697 of the Hijrah, for which the position of some stars is indieated, fol. 29 b, is probably the date of its composition.

Add. 16,742.

Foll. 158; 9¼ in. by 6; 19 lines, 35 in. long; written in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.] The astronomical tables of Mīrzā Ulugh

Beg. Author: Ulugh Beg B. Shāhrukh B. Tī-

. الغ بيك بن شاهرنج بن تيمور كوركان , mūr Kūrgān

Beg.

تبارك الذي جعل في السماء بروجا Ulugh Beg, the eldest son of Shāhrukh, signates the work of Ulugh Beg by the title of زيج جديد سلطاني, while the Rauzat uṣ-Ṣafā, vol. vi. p. 202, and the Habīb us-Siyar, l. c., born in Sultaniyyah, A.H. 796, was appointed زیج جدید کوکانی call it by his father, A.H. 812, to the government

The above statement of Ulugh Beg, combined with the date assigned in the Mațla' us-Sa'dain to the building of the observatory, shows that Kāzī Zādah cannot have died so early as A.H. 815, as asserted by Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 322, or Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Jamshīd so late as A.H. 887, as stated in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 118. Both died during the course of the observations, which were carried on from A.H. 823 to 841.

The author of the Haft Iklim mentions, under Kāshān, Add. 16,734, fol. 387, both Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Jamshīd and Mu'in ud-Dīn as eminent astronomers. He adds that the former was ignorant of the etiquette of courts, but that Ulugh Beg was obliged to put up with his boorish manners, because he could not dispense with his assistance. Ghiyāş ud-Din wrote for Ulugh Beg, A.H. 818, a treatise on astronomical instruments. See the Levden Catalogue, vol. v. p. 237.

'Ala ud-Din 'Ali B. Muhammad Kushji became, as a youth, a great favourite of Ulugh Beg, who called him his son, and used, while hunting, to intrust him with his hawk; hence his surname Kūshjī, "the falconer," which, however, according to the Shaka'ik, was derived from his father's office. Having left his master clandestinely, 'Alī proceeded to Kirman, where he prosecuted his studies under the best masters, and wrote his well known commentary upon the Tajrīd of Nasīr ud-Dīn Tūsī. It was after his return to Samarkand that Ulugh Beg employed him on the completion of his great astronomical work.

Sometime after the death of that prince, finding himself neglected by his successors, 'Alī Kūshjī repaired to Tabrīz, then the residence of Uzun Hasan, the Ak Kuyunlu ruler,

'Abd us-Latif. See Matla' us-Sa'dain, foll. 45, 119, 256, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 151, Price's Retrospect, vol. iii. pp. 566-75, and Sédillot, Introduction aux Prolégomènes, pp. 125-131. The observations embodied in the tables were commenced, as the author states in the preface, by his master Salāh ud-Dīn Mūsā, called Kāzī-Zādah Rūmī, and by Ghiyāş ud-Din Jamshid. The latter, however, having died in the early stage of the work, and the former before its conclusion, it was carried on and completed with the assistance of a youthful astronomer, 'Ali B. Muhammad Kushji, whom Ulugh Beg calls his beloved son. The date of composition is not expressly stated. It was probably A.H. 841; for that year is taken as the starting point of several of the tables.

of Māvarā un-Nahr, which enjoyed under his rule a long period of prosperity, and established his residence in Samarkand. After his father's death, and a victorious encounter with his nephew and competitor,

'Alā ud-Daulah, he ascended the throne in Herat, A.H. 852. His short and troubled reign came to a tragic end in A.H. 853,

when he was put to death by his son Mirza

The building of the observatory, N.E. of Samarkand, is recorded by the contemporary author of the Matla' us-Sa'dain among the occurrences of A.H. 823. The same historian names four astronomers to whom the observations were intrusted, viz.: Salāh ud-Din Mūsā Kāzī Zādah Rūmī, 'Alā ud-Din Kūshjī, both inhabitants of Samarkand, Ghiyās ud-Dīn Jamshīd, and Mu'in ud-Dīn, the last two from Kāshān. He adds that the new tables received the name of زيج سلطانى كوركاني. The commentator, 'Abd ul-'Ali, dewho sent him on a friendly mission to Muhammad II. Received with great honour by the latter, he presented him with a manual of arithmetic, called, in honour of the Sultan, al-Muhammadiyyah.

A treatise on astronomy, subsequently written by him for the same sovereign, was entitled al-Fathiyyah in memory of the conquest of the Irak Ajam. 'Alī Ķūshjī died in Constantinople in the reign of Muhammad II., and, according to Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 198, A.H. 879. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 160, Shaķā'iķ, Add. 9583, fol. 57, Scheref-Nameh, edited by Veliaminof, vol. ii. p. 123, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 303.

The Zij i Jadid follows the arrangement of the Zij i Ilkhani, and is divided, like the latter work, into four Makalahs, with similar headings. They begin respectively on foll. 2 b, 13 a, 66 a, and 149 a. The contents have been stated in full, from an Arabic version, in the Bodleian Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 239. The explanatory part of the work has been edited, with an introduction, by L. P. E. A. Sédillot, Paris, 1847, and a French version by the same scholar was published in 1853. Detached portions have been edited under the titles of "Epochæ celebriores ex traditione Ulug Beigi," by John Greaves, London, 1650, and "Tabulæ longitudinis et latitudinis stellarum ex observatione Ulugh Begi," by Thomas Hyde, Oxford, 1665. See also Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 239, Quatremère, Journal des Savants, 1847, pp. 562-76, Uri, p. 281, No. lxv., etc.

Add. 11,637.

Foll. 212; 10 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century.

The same work.

This copy is more correct than the preceding, but is slightly imperfect at the end; it breaks off at the second page of the concluding table, fol. 200. An additional table without any heading is appended, foll. 201 -212.

VOL. 11.

Add. 7699.

Foll. 139; 11 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 33 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi; dated A.H. 1081 (A.D. 1670). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work.

At the end are two additional tables. The first is headed جدول عمل سبتينى the second shows the time of midday and midnight for the latitude of Antioch, foll. 131—139.

محمد بن رمضان افندى الانطاكي : Copyist

Add. 16,743.

Foll. 41; 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

The explanatory text of the preceding work, without the tables.

Add. 23,567.

Foll. 261; 10 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, 5 in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1045 (A.D. 1635).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

شرح زيج جديد سلطاني

A commentary on the preceding work. Author : 'Abd ul-'Alī B. Muḥammad B. Husain Barjandī, عبد العلى بن محمد بن حسين (see 453 b).

Beg. It is a start of the Zij, here designated The entire text of the Zij, here designated as the start of the Zij, here designated tables, is inserted in the exception of the tables, is inserted in the commentary, and distinguished by a red line drawn over it. The four Makālahs begin respectively on foll. 5 b, 48 b, 128 a and 235 b. The commentator says in the preface that he had selected the Zij of Ulugh Beg as being the best known in the present time, and that he had not only elucidated its too concise diction, but often corrected its errors.

It is stated at the end that the work was composed in A.H. 929, corresponding to the year 892 of Yazdajird, 1834 of the Greeks, and 445 of the era of Malakshāh (A.D. 1523).

The same commentary is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 103, and in Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 252.

فضل الله بن محمد مومن سبزواري : Copyist

Add. 23,440.

Foll. 47; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 19 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 16th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.] I. Foll. 2-9. An Arabic treatise on prosody (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 644). II. Foll. 10-47. A treatise on astronomy, without title.

الحمد لله . . . اما بعد این کتاب یست مشتمل .Beg. بر مقدمه ودو مقاله

The author's name, which does not appear in the text, is found in the heading على على ``Alī Ķūshī, or Ķūshjī, and his works, have already been mentioned, p. 456 b. The present treatise is, no doubt, the astronomical manual which he composed for Muhammad II. Some copies contain a dedication to that Sultan. See the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 489. Haj. Khal. mentions it under the title of رسالة في الهيئة, vol. iii. p. 458. The work noticed by him as فتحيد , vol. iv. p. 379, appears to be a more extended Arabic recension of the same treatise.

Contents: Mukaddimah. Preliminary notices of geometry and physics, in two Kisms, fol. 10 b. Makālah I. The heavenly bodies, in six Bābs, fol. 13 a. Makālah II. Figure of the globe, its division into elimates, and the effects resulting from the various positions of the planets, in eleven Bābs, fol. 31 a. Khātimah. Distances and sizes of the planets, fol. 46 b.

The contents are fully stated by Krafft, p. 139. See also Uri, p. 284, No. lxxv., the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 303, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 9, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 137. A Turkish translation by Kātibī Rūmī is preserved in Add. 7891.

Or. 1560.

Foll. 109; 8 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi; dated A.H. 1054 (A.D. 1644).

[SIR HENRY C. RAWLINSON.] Four astronomical treatises, three of which are in Arabic, and one in Persian, viz.:-- Foll. 64—101. A manual of astronomy, without author's name. It is the رسالة في of 'Alī Ķūshjī, described under the preceding number.

Add. 25,871.

Foll. 78; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, 4 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, in the 19th century. [WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 2—35. An Arabic commentary, by Mīr Sharīf, on the Isagoge; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 243.

II. Foll. 36—78. The treatise on astronomy above mentioned. Some spaces reserved for diagrams have been left blank.

Add. 7702.

Foll. 32; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in minute Nestalik, dated A.H. 1112 (A.D. 1700-1). [Cl. J. RICH.]

A treatise on the instruments used for astronomical observations, especially in the observatories of Alexandria, Marāghah, and Samarkand. Author: 'Abd ul-Mun'im 'Amili, تبد المنعم عاملي

ربنا ما خلقت هذا باطلا سجانك فقنا .Beg. عذاب النار

From the preface, which is incomplete, it appears that the work was written in Işfahān by order of the reigning Shāh (Țahmāsp), and nearly three hundred years after the completion of Naşīr ud-Dīn's tables, i.e. about A.H. 970. The instruments are minutely described, and illustrated by diagrams.

The work bears no title, but is endorsed

كتاب تعليم الات زبج

Foll. 27 b-32 contain miscellaneous extracts.

Or. 1573.

Foll. 137; 8¹/₄ in. by 5²/₄; 21 lines, 3⁴/₄ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 19th century. [SIR HENRY C. RAWLINSON.]

حل و عقد I. Foll. 1—111. حل و عقد

A treatise on the computation of almanacks and of nativities.

Author: Kuţb ud-Din [B.] 'Izz ud-Din [B.] 'Abd ul-Hayy uz-Zāhidī ul-Kabrī ul-قطب الدين عزالدين عبد الحي , Husainī ul-Lārī الزاهدي الكبرى الحسيني اللاري mat'يش دور از آلايش صانعي ا سزاواراست . كه اطباق

The author's object was, as stated in the preface, to elucidate for beginners the directions given by Mirza Ulugh Beg B. Shāhrukh.

A prayer for the continuation of the reign of Shāh 'Abbās, with which the work concludes, refers approximatively the date of composition to A.H. 996—1038. The year 1027, which is repeatedly used in the examples of calculation, foll. 5 b, 44 b, was probably the current year at the time of writing.

The author states incidentally, fol. 90 b, that he had left his native country, Lär, for a short residence in Shīrāz with the object of perfecting himself in astrology, but was anxious to return speedily to Lār, where he had judicial functions, and was known as the Muftī.

Contents: Preface and table of chapters, fol. 1 b. Makālah I. Computation of almanacks, in five Bābs, fol. 4 b. Makālah II. Nativities, in three Bābs, fol. 74 a. Khātimah. Mode of writing horoscopes, fol. 101 a.

The date 1113, which appears in the subscription, has probably been copied from an earlier MS.

II. Foll. 113-131.

An Arabic treatise by Muḥammad Sibṭ al-Māridīnī (see Arabic Catalogue, p. 201 a) on the method of reckoning degrees and minutes. It is abridged from the كشف ¹¹لحقايق of Shihāb ud-Dīn Aḥmad Ibn ul-Majdī (Haj. Khal., vol. v., p. 205), and is entitled دقائق ¹¹لحقائق في حساب الدرج و الدقائق

Or. 372.

Foll. 419; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 31 lines, 6 in. long; written in fair Nestalik with goldruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

Astronomical tables of the reign of Shāhjahān.

فرید ابراهیم ,Author: Farīd Ibrāhīm Dihlavī دهلوی

Mullā Farīd Dihlavī was the court-astronomer of Shāhjahān. The horoscope of that emperor, calculated by him, is inserted at length in the Pādishāh Nāmah, vol. i. p. 97.

The author says in the preface that, after. Shāhjahān had ascended the throne, on the 8th of Jumāda II., A.H. 1037, it occurred to the Vazīr Aṣaf Khān to make that year the starting point of a new era, similar to the Tārīkh i Jalālī, and to be called Tārīkh i Ilāhī Shāhjahānī. The project having been submitted to Shāhjahān and approved, the author received the royal commands to prepare a new Zīj in accordance with it, and, as there was not sufficient time for fresh observations, the work was based upon the tables of Ulugh Beg, which, however, received many corrections and improvements.

The year 1041 of the Hijrah, for which the positions of the stars are calculated, was probably the current year at the time of writing. If so, the statement of the Ṭabakāti Shāhjahānī, Or. 1673, fol. 320, that Mullā Farīd Munajjim died A.H. 1039, must be incorrect. Mullā Farīd wrote, according to the same authority, an historical work, تاريخي, dedicated to Shāhjahān.

The work is divided, in agreement with the Zīj of Ulugh Beg, into a Mukaddimah and four Makālahs, as follows :---Mukaddimah, or prolegomena, treating of Zijs in general, and of the peculiar features of the present work, in five Kisms, fol. 3 b. Makalah I., treating, in nine Babs, of the following eras and their reductions, viz.: 1. Ilāhī Shāhjahānī, beginning on the first day of Farvardin of the year of Shāhjahān's accession. 2. Hijrah. 3. Greek 4. Persian era. 5. Malakī, or Jalālī, era. 6. Sambat. 7. Chinese and Uighūr era. eras, fol. 6 b. Makālah II. Knowledge of times, and of the ascendant of each time, in twenty-two Babs, fol. 13 b, with tables, foll. 21-89. Makālah III. Motion of the planets and stars, and their positions, in fiftcen Babs, fol. 90 a, with tables, foll. 98-417.

Of Makālah IV. the present copy contains only the last three Fașis, 5--7, foll. 418, 419. They agree with the corresponding sections of Bāb I. in Ulugh Beg's fourth Makālah.

The MS. bears the stamps of the kings of Oude.

Add. 14,373.

Foll. 222; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, $4\frac{5}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [FRANCIS GLADWIN.]

زيج جديد محمدشاهي

١.

Astronomical tables by Rājah Jai-Singh Sawā'ī, راجه جي سنك سوائي

ثنای که خرد خرده بین مهندسان عقده کشای .Beg.

Jai Singh, a Rijput of the princely house of Kachhwāhah, originally called Bijai Singh, succeeded to his father Bishan Singh, as Rajah of Amber, in A.D. 1699, the 44th year of Aurangzīb's reign, and held high military commands under that emperor and his successors. Under Muhammad Shāh he was governor of the provinces of Agra and Malvah. He founded in A.D. 1728 the new capital of his estate, called after him Jaipur, and died after a prosperous rule of 44 years, in A.D. 1743, the 25th year of Muhammad Shāh. See Skinner, Add. 27,254, fol. 75, Ma'aşir ul-Umarā, fol. 221, Tazkirat ul-Umarā, Add. 16,703, fol. 137 b, Tod, Annals of Rajasthan, vol. ii. p. 356, Ma'āşir i 'Alamgīrī, p. 424, and Tārīkh i Muzaffarī, Or. 466, fol. 222.

The author, having observed, as he states in the preface, that the current almanacks, based upon the Tables of Ulugh Beg زيج جديد upon the Zīj i Khāķānī, and upon the explanations تسهيلات written by Mullā Chānd in Akbar's reign, and by Mullā Farīd in the reign of Shāhjahān, were all more or less incorrect, represented the matter to Muhammad Shāh, and received in consequence the emperor's commands to call together skilled astronomers, Muslim, Brahman, and European, in order to institute new and more accurate observations. He had, therefore, astronomical instruments made at Dehli, first, some similar to those used at Samarkand, and subsequently some others, larger and truer, of his own invention. With these he caused concurrent observations to be made in Dehli, Jaipūr, Mathurā, Benares, and Ujjain. When they had been carried on for seven years, he sent some competent persons, with Padre Manoel, to Europe, and, after their return, compared the tables they had brought back, namely those of de la Hire ", with his own. The results of those combined observations were then embodied in the present work, which was completed, according to Tod, vol. ii. p. 360, in A.D. 1728 (A.H. 1140—1).

In its division and arrangement the present work agrees in the main with the Zij of Ulugh Beg. It contains the following three Books (Makālah):

I. On the four current eras, viz. those of the Hijrah, of Muhammad Shāh, of Christ, and of Samvat, in four Bābs, fol. 5 b. II. On the determination of the ascendant of each time, determination of the ascendant of each time, time, constant of the second time, time, constant of the second time, second time, constant of the second time, time, second time, second time, time, constant of the second time, time, constant of the second time, time, constant of time, tit, time, tit, time, time, time, time, time, t

See the "Account of the astronomical labours of Jaya Sinha," by Dr. W. Hunter, Asiatic Researches, vol. v. p. 177-211, where Jai Singh's preface is given in the original language with a translation.

The fly-leaf contains an English notice of the work and contents, in which the date of composition is wrongly given as A.D. 1696.

Add. 7714.

Foll. 46; 10¹/₂ in. by 7; 17 lines 4¹/₄ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 15th century. [Cl. J. RICH.] An astrological work, with the heading māsp, treating of the horoscopes of the prophets."

Beg. الحمد لله هادى الانسان الى تمهيد قواعد الاحسان The work is ascribed to the sage Jāmāsp, حكيم جاماسپ, Vazīr of Shāh Gushtāsp. It treats of the conjunctions of the planets, and their influence on the fate of mankind, as illustrated by the horoscopes of the chief prophets and kings.

The introduction consists of a Muhammadan doxology, a chapter on the high place of man in creation, and a detailed description of the planets in their human shapes, showing the number of their hands and the various emblems which they hold.

In the early part of the work the history of the prophets of the Muslim tradition is curiously blended with that of the early kings of Persia. From the time of Gushtasp, fol. 11 a, the narrative assumes the form of prophecy. The principal dynastics of the East are foreshadowed in more or less transparent language, the advent of each being heralded by some particular conjunction of the planets shown in a diagram. The Saljūķis, fol. 28 b, the Ayyūbis, fol. 31 a, Atsiz ادميز the Khwārazmshāhī, fol. 31 b, lastly Chingiz Khān, fol. 33 b, are distinctly mentioned. Further on the vatieinations become vague and confused. They conclude with the end of the world, preceded by its traditional forerunners.

It will be seen from the above that the contents are mainly of Muhammadan origin. The work has probably little more than the name in common with the Jāmāsp Nāmah of the Pārsis. See Wilson, Parsi Religion, p. 445, and Spiegel, Einleitung in die traditionelle Literatur der Parsen, p. 182.

Add. 8897.

A single sheet, 34 in. by 48, containing a

^a De la Hire's Ephemerides were published in 1700 and 1702.

Planisphere, or pictorial representation of the cosmic system of the Hindūs, with the symbolical figures of the signs of the zodiac, of the mansions of the moon, constellations, presiding divinities, etc. The names are written in both the Devanagari and Nestalik characters, with short explanations in Persian; 18th century.

Add. 16,874.

Foll. 59; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Lucknow, Sha'bān, A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1802).

[WM. YULE.]

كنز العاشقين

Translation of a treatise on the virtues and influences of the eight and twenty lunar mansions, رساله خواص منازل قهر, apparently from the Arabic.

Translator: Muhammad B. Muhammad Şādik 'Alam (sic) محمد بن محمد صادق علم

The translator says that the original work had been extracted by Aristotle from the books of Hermes. The text is accompanied by figures representing the lunar mansions. The translation was completed, as stated at the end, fol. 47 b, in A.H. 1216.

The latter part of the volume contains :---1. An appendix, by the translator, on the "seals," or symbols of the planets, معاركه خواتيم كواكب, with drawings, completed in Jumāda II., A.H. 1217, foll. 48 b-56 b. 2. A short tract on precious stones, foll. 56 b-59 b, apparently by the same writer.

A note on the first page shows that the MS. came, A.H. 1217, into the possession of the Ṣafavī Prince, Abul-Fatḥ Sulṭān-Muḥammad (see p. 133 b).

Or. 1120.

Foll. 14; $12\frac{3}{4}$ by $8\frac{1}{2}$; written in fair Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, A.D. 1777. [WARREN HASTINGS.]

An almanack for the 18th Ilāhī year of the reign (of Shāh 'Alam), which began on the 10th of Ṣafar, A.H. 1191 (March, A.D. 1777), calculated for Dehli.

Add. 16,861.

Foll. 16; 11¹/₄ in. by 7; written in Nestalik, A.D. 1801. [WM. YULE.]

An almanack for the 85th Ilāhī year of the cra of Muḥammad Shāh, beginning on the 5th of Zulḥijjah, A.H. 1215 (March 21, A.D. 1801), calculated for Dehli.

Add. 18,421.

Foll. 30; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; written in Nestalik, A.D. 1803. [WM. YULE.]

Two almanacks for the 87th Ilāhī year of the era of Muhammad Shāh, beginning on the 27th of Zulka'dah, A.H. 1217 (March 21, 1803), calculated for Lucknow and Dehli.

NATURAL HISTORY.

Add. 16,739.

Foll. 416; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated A.H. 965 (A.D. 1558). [WM. YULE.]

عجائب المخلوقات وغرائب الموجودات

The "Wonders of Creation," translated from the Arabic of al-Kazvīnī.

Beg. The Arabic text has been edited by F. Wüstenfeld, Göttingen, 1848, and a German translation has been published by Dr. H. Ethé, Leipzig, 1868. See also S. de Sacy's Chrestomathie, vol. iii. pp. 427—450, Newbold, Journal of the Asiatic Soc. of Bengal, vol. xiii. pp. 632—66, Nicoll, Bodleian Catalogue, p. 234, Reinaud, Géographie d'Aboulféda, Introduction, pp. 427—450, etc. The work has also been printed in Tehran, A.H. 1264. Another Persian version, entitled خفت الغرائب, is fully described in the Vienna Jahrbücher, vol. lxvi., Anzeigeblatt, pp. 48—50.

The author's name differs in various copies. It is written here زكريا بن محمد بن محمود الكموذ in agreement with the statement of a nearly contemporary writer, Hamd Ullah Mustaufi, of Kazvin, who, in the Nuzhat ul-Kulūb, ascribes the present work, as well as the Asār ul-Bilūd, to the same author.

This copy contains drawings in Persian style, both plain and coloured, representing the planets and constellations, foll. 14-39, 250-253.

• A set of coloured drawings in Indian style, representing constellations, animals, and plants, with Arabic names, is appended at the end, foll. 328-416.

Foll. 108—153, 170—180, 292—300, have been supplied by later hands.

Add. 7706.

Foll. 286; 114 in. by 7; 21 lines, 4 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICU.] The same work.

In spite of some verbal differences, this version agrees in the main with the preceding. The first two leaves, supplied by a later hand, contain a preface beginning thus : حمد متوافر , which contains neither the author's name, nor the dedication above mentioned. The final lines, which are wanting, have been replaced, in the same handwriting, by a spurious conclusion, dated A.H. 1051 (A.D. 1641).

This copy contains neat astronomical diagrams, foll. 10—16, a map of the world, fol. 59 b, and a great number of fair drawings in Indian style, mostly in gold, representing constellations, foll. 19—29, the wonders of the islands and seas, foll. 60—83, plants, foll. 128—148, demons, foll. 222—225, animals and monsters, foll. 233—285.

Or. 1371.

Foll. 405; 11³/₄ in. by 7¹/₄; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century; bound in richly painted covers. [SIR C. ALEX. MURRAY.]

The same version.

This copy contains numerous drawings, in Indian style, carefully executed in gold and colours.

Add. 16,738.

Foll. 248; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 27 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in plain Nestalik, about the close of the 17th century. [WM. YULE.] The same work, with rather coarse drawings.

Add. 5603.

Foll. 380; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in plain Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1097 (A.D. 1685). The same work, with coloured drawings of constellations, plants, and animals.

On the first page is a seal containing an European name in the Persian character رجوهانس متى اس روس, apparently Johannes Matthæus Reuss.

Add. 16,740.

Foll. 404; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.] The same work.

The blank spaces reserved for drawings have been left empty.

The first page bears the stamp of General Claud Martin (see p. 2 a).

Add. 23,564.

Foll. 342; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Naskhi, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A. H. 845 (A.D. 1441). [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

Another translation of the same work.

The first page is lost; the second contains the latter part of the untranslated doxology of the original.

This version differs materially from the preceding; it is shorter, more archaic in language, and follows the Arabic much closer.

The author's name is written Muḥammad B. Muḥammad B. Muḥammad ul-Kazvīnī. The same form of name is found in an addition to Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 189, in the Bodleian MS., and in other copies; see de Sacy's Chrestomathie, vol. iii. p. 444.

This copy contains coloured drawings of constellations, animals, and plants, some of which have been purposely defaced.

Or. 373.

Foll. 581; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins; dated A.H. 125 (probably for 1205, A.D. 1790).

[Geo. WM. HAMILTON.] Another version of the same work.

The translator, whose name does not appear, states in a short preamble, which follows the Arabic doxology of the original, and begins ' الما بعد در عهد خلافت و ايام سلطنت پادشاه عاليجاد, that this version was written in the reign of Abul-Muzaffar Ibrāhīm 'Ādil Shāh B. 'Ādil Shāh B. 'Ādil Shāh, and for His Majesty's library. He adds, at the end of al-Ķazvīni's preface, that it was completed in the beginning of Sha'bān, A.H. 954.

Ibrāhīm, the third of the 'Adilshāhis of Bijāpūr, reigned, according to the Futūḥāt i 'Adilshāhī, Add. 27,251, foll. 55, 77, 297, from A.H. 941 to 963, or, according to Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 64, till A.H. 965.

The present version, which differs from the preceding by its modernized and prolix diction, has been lithographed in the press of Naval Kishor, A.H. 1283.

The MS. contains numerous coloured drawings in Indian style, representing planets and constellations, foll. 31—84, angels, foll. 87—103, the wonders of the seas and islands, foll. 165—223, plants, foll. 336—394, and animals, foll. 470—581.

Add. 23,565.

Foll. 79; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1206 (A.D. 1791). [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

A treatise on precious stones and metals. Author: Muhammad B. Mansūr, محبد بن

مئصور

ستايش و سپـاس بـي انـدازه و قياس .Beg صانعيرا

A detailed abstract of the contents by Hammer will be found in the Mines de l'Orient, vol. vi. p. 126—142. See also the Vienna Jahrbücher, vol. 66, Anzeigeblatt, p. 52, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 95, and Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 516.

The work was written, as stated in the preface, by desire of a prince called Abul-Fath Khalil Bahadur Khan, son of the Sultan Abu Nasr Hasan Bahadur Khan, who appears from the following pompous titles, السلطان الاعظم الاكرم الخاقان الاجل الافخم مجدد مراسم المله محى مآثر الدوله موعود المائة السابعه . . . السلطان بن السلطان بن السلطان ابو نصر حسن بهادر to have been the , خان خلد الله مدى الزمان زمانه الز reigning sovereign, but whose time and country have not been ascertained. The only elue to the period in which he lived is found in the following epithet, "the promised one of the seventh hundred," which seems to imply that he reigned about A.H. 700, and which is apparently the sole authority for the date given by Stewart, l.c., viz. A.D. 1300. The work must, however, have been written at a somewhat later period, for Ghāzān Khān, who died A.H. 703, is spoken of, fol. 77 a, as a king of the past.

It is divided into an introduction (Mukaddimah) on minerals and their origin, fol. 7 a, and two books (Makālah). Makālah I., fol. 9 a, comprises twenty chapters (Bāb), treating of as many species of precious stones. Makālah II., fol. 66 a, contains seven chapters on metals.

The authorities most frequently quoted are the philosopher Abu Raihān (al-Bīrūnī), and Taifāshī, the author of an Arabic treatise on precious stones, who died A.H. 651 (Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 582).

Add. 25,870.

Foll. 88; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{7}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about the beginning of the 19th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

VOL. II.

Another copy of the preceding work, in which the dedicatory portion of the preface has been omitted.

Or. 30.

Foll. 221; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, dated Rajab, A.H. 951 (A.D. 1544). [G. C. RENOUARD.]

A work treating of the properties and uses of natural substances, also of divination and astrology.

Author: Abu Bakr ul-Muṭahhar B. Muḥammad B. Abil-Ķāsim B. Abi Saʿid ul-Jamāl, called al-Yazdī, ابو بكر المطهر بن محمد بن

ابي القاسم بن ابي سعيد الجمال العروف باليزدي

The author, who in his verses uses the Takhallus Jamāli, describes himself as an inhabitant of the village of Mayakh, in the مقيما بقريد مايخ من فاحيد تون , district of Tin, [sic] عن كورد" اصطريز [sic] . He states in the preface, which is slightly defective at the beginning, that he was addicted to poetry, and was preparing a fair copy of his poem Tāriķ u Jauzā when some friends, assembled in , طارق و جوزا his house on the occasion of the birth of his son Abul-Kāsim, praised the Nuzhat Nāmah i 'Ala'i as a book replete with useful knowledge, and urged him to write one of the same description. Yielding to their entreaties he composed the present work, and dedicated it to the Vazir Majd ud-Din Ahmad صدر عادل مجد الدوله والدين ملك الوزرا B. Mas ūd, الوزرا احمد بن مسعود, who was his father's benefactor, as well as his own. He adds that he completed it in the month of Ramazan, A.H. 580, and claims indulgence on the score of his youth, as he was then in his eighteenth year.

The title is written نقرخ نامد but the reading of Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 412, فرح نامه , is, on account of its parallelism with منامه , is, on account of its parallelism with منامه , in ore likely to be correct. The same writer gives A.H. 560 as the date of composition, and, in his notice on the Nuzhat Nāmah, vol. vi. p. 336, which he knew only from the above preface, takes 'Alā'ī to designate the author. Jamālī, however, gives him another name, but one which cannot be read with certainty in the present copy; for the passage is incorrectly written, as follows: it an autor is a construction of the section of the section of the construction of the section of the passage is incorrectly written, as follows:

The Farah Nāmah comprises the following sixteen books (Makalat), subdivided into chapters (Fasl): 1. Useful properties of various parts of the body in men and quadrupeds, fol. 8 b. 2. Useful properties of birds, reptiles, and insects, fol. 53 a. 3. Properties of trees, vegetables, and seeds, fol. 84 b. 4-6. Properties of herbs and leaves, fol. 119 b, of gums, fol. 122 b, of stones and metals, fol. 125 a. 7. Drugs and perfumes, fol. 135 a. 8. Oils, and Firāsat, fol. 144 a. 9. Divination by shoulder-blades, and astrology, fol. 150 a. 10. Auguries derived from throbbings of the muscles; divination of the death or recovery of the sick; vocabulary of Pehlevi words, fol. 181 a. 11. Poisons and antidotes, fol. 198 b. 12. Mode of dissolving gold, pearls, etc., fol. 207 b. 13. Conjuring tricks, magic inks, etc., fol. 210 b. 14. Khavatim, or symbols, of the planets, fol. 217 a.

The latter part of the fourteenth book, the fifteenth, and all but the concluding lines of the sixteenth, are wanting.

محمد بن ابراهيم المعروف به.وى : Copyist

A copy of a similar work is described in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 517. The same volume contains the second Makālah of the Nuzhat Nāmah i 'Alā'ī,

$\mathbf{M} \mathbf{E} \mathbf{D} \mathbf{I} \mathbf{C} \mathbf{I} \mathbf{N} \mathbf{E}.$

Add. 23,556.

Foll. 492; 18 in. by 11; 27 lines, $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [ROB. TAYLOR.] I. Foll. 2-477.

An encyclopædia of medical science.

Author : Zain ud-Dīn Abu Ibrāhīm Ismā'īl B. Hasan B. Ahmad B. Muhammad ul-Husainī ul-Jurjānī, المعيل الدين ابو ابراهيم السعيل بن حسن بن احمد بن محمد الحسيني الجرجاني Beg. الحمد لله . . . سيد امام اجل زين الدين نجم

الاسلام . . . میکوید جُوْن تـقدیر ایزد تعالی جنان بود که جمع کننده این کتاب

The author calls himself, in the opening lines, the devoted servant of the just and wise Pādishāb, Kutb ud-Dunyā wad-Dīn Khwārazm Shāh Abul-Fath Muhammad B. Yamin ud-Din, Mu'in Amir ul-Müminin. He states that, having been brought by the divine decree to Khwārazm in A.H. 504, he had been induced by the fair climate of that country, and the able and righteous rule of its sovereign, to fix there his abode. He dedicates the present work to His Majesty, as a grateful return for the favours showered upon him. His object in compiling it was to supply a want which he had felt himself while studying, that of a comprehensive work which would offer the required information on every branch of the medical science, and save a physician the trouble and loss of time involved in consulting other books.

Muhammad, son of Nüshtigin, the founder of the Khwārazmshāhī dynasty, was a vassal of the Saljūkis. He was appointed governor of Khwārazm by Sanjar, in the reign of Barkyāruk, and received the titles of Kutb ud-Dīn and Khwārazm Shāh in A.H. 491. His son Atsiz, who succeeded to him A.H. 522, and assumed independence A.H. 535, died A.H. 551. See Jāmi'ut-Tavārīkh, Add.7628, Guzīdah, and Kāmil, vol. xi. p.490.

Yākūt, who mentions our author, Abu Ibrāhīm B. ul-Hasan B. Muhammad ul-Husaini, among the illustrious natives of Jurjan, says that, after staying a long time in Khwarazm, he repaired to Marv, where he died A.H. 531; see Mu'jam, vol. ii. p. 55. Ibn Abi Uşaibi'ah, who calls him Sharif Sharaf ud-Din Isma'il, Add. 7340, fol. 132, speaks of the great regard in which he stood at the court of 'Alā ud-Din [sic] Muhammad Khwārazm Shah, and mentions the four following works as composed by him in Persian for that prince-the present work, in twelve volumes, the Khafi 'Alā'i in two small volumes, the Aghraz in two, and the Yadgar in one. All four are noticed by Haj. Khal. vol. i. p. 368, vol. iii. pp. 162, 330, and vol. vi. p. 507, who calls the author Isma'l B. ul-Husain, and gives in one place A.H. 535, and in another A.H. 530, as the date of his death. Khwand Amir, who gives him the same name, Habib us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz. 4, p. 176, is manifestly wrong in stating that he lived under Tukush, who reigned A.H. 568-596. The appendix to the Sivan ul-Hikmah contains a notice on the author, who is there called Zain ud-Din Ismā'il B. ul-Hasan ul-Jurjani; see the Levden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 295. Compare Stewart's Catalogue, pp. 106 and 108, Krafft's Catalogue, p. 147, and De Jong, Catalogus Codd. Orr. Bibl. Acad. Regiæ, p. 228, note 2.

The Zakhirah consists of ten books (Kitāb), which are enumerated in the preface, and to each of which is prefixed a full table of numerous subdivisions termed Guftārs and Babs. They are as follows: I. Definition and utility of medicine; composition, structure, and powers of the human body, fol. 4a. II. Health and disease; causes and symptoms of disease; accidents of the body, fol. 42 b. III. Preservation of health, fol. 79 b. IV. Diagnosis of diseases; erisis and prognosis; fol. 151 b. V. Fevers, their various kinds, their symptoms and treatment, fol. 168 b. VI. Local diseases and their treatment, fol. 205 b. VII. Tumours, ulcers, etc., fol. 388 b. VIII. Care to be taken of the external parts of the body, hair, skin, nails, etc., fol. 411 b. IX. Poisons and antidotes, fol. 417 b. X. Simple and compound medicaments, fol. 431 b.

Some leaves of book ix., viz., foll. 418, 426—8, which are partly in another handwriting, contain a portion of a different recension, in which that book is divided into five Guftars, instead of six Makalahs.

At the end is a note, written by the same hand as the text, and stating that the transcriber, Muḥammad Bāķir B. 'Ināyat Ullah ul-Ḥusainī, had completed the collation of the present copy on the 17th of Rajab, A.H. 1095.

II. Fol. 478-492. A treatise on the anatomy of the human body.

Author: Manşūr B. Muhammad B. Ahmad, منصور بن محمد بن احمد

The preface contains a dedication to an Amīr-zādah Pir Muḥammad, who is addressed as the reigning sovereign with the following titles, السلطان الاكرم ... السلطان الاعظم الاعدل الاكرم بن السلطان بن السلطان ضياء الحق والسلطنت والدنيا والدين امير زادة بير محمد بهادر خان

That prince, whose age and country are not indicated, is called in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 109, perhaps on the authority of the copy there described, "Pir Muḥammad Jahāngīr, grandson of Tīmūr."

Mīrzā Pir Muḥammad, second son of Mīrzā Jahāngīr, the eldest son of Tīmūr, was proclaimed Valī 'Ahd, or heir apparent, on the death of his elder brother, Sultan Muhammad, in A.H. 805. Having been appointed some years previously to the government of Kābul, he was the first of the Timuride princes who invaded India, and held an important command in the Indian campaign, undertaken at his instigation by Timur. At the latter's death he was left in possession of the Indian provinces and Zābulistān, but did not enjoy it long, being murdered on the 14th of Ramazān, A.H. 809, by one of his Amirs. Another grandson of Timur who bore the same name, viz. Mīrzā Pīr Muhammad B. 'Umar Shaikh, ruled in the province of Fars from A.H. 796 to 812. See Matla' us-Sa'dain, Or. 1291, fol. 25, and Jahānārā, foll. 174, 177.

F 2

The work is divided as follows: Mukaddimah. Component parts of the human body, fol. 479 a. Makālah I. Bones, fol. 480 a. II. Nerves, fol. 483 a. III. Muscles, fol. 485 b. IV. Veins, fol. 486 b. V. Arteries, fol. 489 a. Khātimah. Complex organs; development of the embryo, fol. 490 a. It is illustrated by five anatomical drawings, occupying a whole page each.

It has been edited under the title of تشريح by Manşūr 'Alī, Dehli, A.H. 1264.

Another work of the same author, عفايد will be mentioned further on, p. 470 b.

Add. 26,307.

Foll. 41; 15 in. by 9; 23 lines, 5 in. long; written in large Naskhī, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

A treatise on the anatomy of the human body, designated as مختصر در علم تشریح

Author: Abul-Majd ut-Ţabīb ul-Baizāvī,

Abul-Majd ul-Baizāvī is mentioned as the author of a commentary on the Mūjīz ulKānūn of 'Alā ud-Dīn 'Alī Ibn un-Nafīs ul-Kurashī, a work published in Caleutta, 1828. See the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 266. In the present work he quotes several times that celebrated physician, and it appears from the formula which he adds to his name, امام علاء الدين قرشى رحمة الله عليه, that he was writing after his death, which took place A.H. 687. See Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 251, and Wüstenfeld, Geschichte der Arabischen Aertzte, p. 146.

After some considerations on the high importance of a knowledge of anatomy, the author sets forth at length the divisions of his treatise. It consists of an introduction on the parts of the body in general, and of two books (Kitāb). The first treats of the simple parts of the body, and comprises six chapters (Bāb), as follows :----I. Bones, in fifteen sections (Fasl). II. Nerves, in five sections. III. Veins, in five sections. IV. Arteries, in four sections. V. Muscles, in thirty sections. VI. Skin. The second book treats, in seventeen Bābs, of as many complex organs.

The present copy, which appears to have been transcribed from a defective MS., contains only the following disjointed portions of the work: Mukaddimah, fol. 4 a. Book I., Bāb I., Fasl 1. Bones in general, fol. 5 b. Fasl. 2. Bones of the head, fol. 6 b. Fasl 3. Bones of the upper jaw, fol. 8 a. Fasl 4. Bones of the nose, fol. 9 b. Bab V. Muscles, in thirty Fasls, complete, fol. 10 a. Book II. Bāb I. The brain, fol. 31 a. Bāb II. The eye, fol. 33 a. Bāb III. The ear, fol. 36 α . Bāb IV. The nose, fol. 36 b. Bāb V. The tongue, fol. 37 a. Bab VI. The throat and gullet, fol. 37 b. Bab VII. The diaphragm and chest, fol. 38 a. Bāb VIII. The heart, fol. 38b. Bab IX. The gullet and stomach, fol. 39 b. Bab X. The liver, fol. 40 b.

Of the last. Bab the beginning only is extant. Fol. 41 contains the latter part of the fourth Bāb of Book I., which treats of the arteries.

.

Add. 16,748.

Foll. 347; 9³/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 19 lines, 4 in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Jumāda I, the 5th year of Bahādur Shāh, (A.H. 1123, A.D. 1711). [WM. YULE.]

اختيارات بديعي

A work on materia medica.

Author: 'Ali B. ul-Husain ul-Anṣārī, abs بن للحسين Aṭṭār, يالانصارى المشتهر بحاجى زين العطار

امداد حمد بني عد و اعداد سپاس بي .Beg قياس مبدعي را

Zain ud-Dîn 'Alī, who traced his pedigree to 'Abd Ullah Anşārī, was born A.H. 730, in Shīrāz, where his father, Jamāl ud-Dīn Husain, a physician of Işfahan, had settled A.H. 715. He stood high in the favour of Shāh Shujā' (who reigned A.H. 760—786), and was during sixteen years in constant attendance upon him. He died A.H. 806, leaving, besides the present work, the following medical treatises: Miftāh ul-Khazā'in, Tuḥfat ul-Mulūk, and Risālah dar Şifat i Mardān u Zanān. See a notice on his life written by his son in Or. 165, fol. 108.

The Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī is so called from Badī' ul-Jamāl, the name of the princess to whom it is dedicated. The date of composition, which is found in some copies, as Add. 6001 and 17,950, and in Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 197, is A.H. 770.

The work is divided into two books (Makālat). The first contains the simple medicaments in alphabetical order, fol. 3 b. The second, which treats of compound medicaments, fol. 298 b, comprises sixteen chapters (Bāb), treating of as many different kinds of preparations, as follows: الفرحات + ۲ المعاجین ۳ لجوارشات ۴ الاطریفلات ه المربیات
 ۲ الاشربه والردوب ۷ اللعوقات ۸ السفوفات ۱ لحبوبات
 ۱۰ الاقراص ۱۱ الایارجات ۱۲ الشیافات ۱۳ القریاقات
 ۱۹ السنونات ۱۵ الادهان ۲۱ المراهم

See R. Seligmann, Ueber drei seltene Persische Handschriften, p. 24, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 109, Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 277, De Jong, Catal. Bibl. Acad. Reg., p. 227, and Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 13.

Add. 7711.

Foll. 253; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 22 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 832 (A.D. 1429). [Cl. J. RICH.] The same work.

ابو مسلم بن حسن سلطان الدست : Copyist بیاضی

Foll. 251—53 contain Ibn Sīnā's poem on the soul (see the Arabie Catalogue, p. 402, xiii.), with a version in Persian verse, and an Arabie commentary.

Add. 17,950.

Foll. 286; 11¹/₄ in. by 7; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Sha'bān in the 26th year of the reign (of Aurangzīb), A.H. 94 (i.e. 1094, A.D. 1683).

The first Makālat of the same work, with copious marginal corrections.

Add. 6001.

Foll. 151; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 26 lines, $5\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1109 (A.D. 1697-8).

The first Makalat of the same work.

Add. 23,559.

Foll. 270; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{5}{6}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 17th century.

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

The first Makalat of the same work.

Foll. 266—270 contain a fragment on various kinds of soil and of water, designated by their Hindū names.

حافظ محمد حسين ولد محمد على : Copyist

Add. 17,957.

Foll. 77; 9 in. by 6; 11 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Lahore, Rabi' I., in the fourth year of the reign, without designation of the sovereign; probably of the 17th century.

[Edward Galley.]

The second Makālat of Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī, treating of compound medicaments. At the end is added a ehapter on some Hindu preparations called Pāk, تراكيب هندى ياكات foll. 76 b—79.

Copyist: جانعيد

Add. 17,948.

Foll. 136; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Sūrat, A H. 1222 (A.D. 1807).

جامع الفاظ عيسوى

A dictionary of drugs, written in four columns, comprising the names found in the Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī, with their Arabic, Persian, and Hindustani equivalents.

It was compiled, as stated at the end, in Sūrat, A.H. 1222, for a Doctor Pudget (?) داختر پوجهت. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 459 b.

Egerton 1010.

Foll. 422; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, 3 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in the 18th century.

A manual of medicine.

شکر و سپاس مر خالقی ا که در خلقت .Beg

The work has been lithographed, with the title of كفاية منصورى, in Lueknow, A.H. 1290. The author is evidently the same as that of the treatise of anatomy already described, p. 467 b, who there calls himself Mansur B. Muhammad B. Ahmad. In a portion of the preface, which is omitted in the present copy, but is found in the next, as well as in the Lucknow edition, he dedicates the present manual to a sovereign to whose court he had been attracted by the wide-spread fame of his justice and liberality, and whose titulature bears a close resemblanee to that which precedes the name of Pir Muhammad in the author's other work. The proper name of that prince, which is wanting in Add. 19,003, is supplied by the lithographed edition, in which it reads . مجاهد السلطنة والدين سلطان زين العابدين

The king thus designated is probably Sultan Zain ul-'Abidin of Kashmir, who lived at about the same time as Mīrzā Pīr Muhammad, having reigned from A.H. 826 to 877, and is described as a generous patron of arts and science. His conquest of Tibet and Panjāb is amply sufficient to justify, in Oriental parlance, the epithet of "second Alexander," bestowed upon him by the اسکندر ثانی author. That epithet has been mistaken for a proper name by A. Stewart, who describes the work, p. 107, as "dedicated to Sekunder Shah the Second, of Dhely, A.D. 1300." It has led the authors of the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 276, to the equally unfounded conclusion, that the prince to whom it is applied could be no other than 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad Shāh Khiljī, who reigned A.H. 695—716.

The work is divided into two Fanns, the first of which treats in two parts (Kism) of theoretical and practical medicine, and the second, of ailments and medicaments. They are subdivided as follows :- Fann I. Kism I. Theoretical medicine, comprising four Makālahs, viz., 1. substantial elements of health, ماوى محت , i.e. constituent parts of the body and its organs, fol. 9 a. 2. Apparent conditions of health, Implement . e. temperaments and faculties, معرى صحت fol. 27 4. 3. Efficient causes of health, اسباب فاعلى صحت, such as air, motion, sleep, food and drink, evacuation, age, habits, etc., fol. 32 a. 4. Various conditions and accidents of the body, and their symptoms, fol. 50 a. Kism II. Practical medicine, in five Makalahs, viz., 1. Preservation of health and general treatment, fol. 70 b. 2. Local diseases, in twenty Babs, fol. 100 b. 3. Fevers, fol. 258 b. 4. Diseases of the external parts, fol. 280 b. 5. Animal poisons, fol. 310 b. Fann II., comprising two Makālahs, viz. 1. Simple aliments and drugs, fol. 332 a. 2. Compound aliments and medicaments, fol. 319 a.

Add. 19,003.

Foll. 187; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{3}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

The first portion of the same work, ending with Bāb 4 of Maķālah 2, Ķism II., and corresponding to foll. 1—146 of the preceding copy.

Egerton 1011.

Foll. 103; 9 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in a cursive and rude character, apparently in the 18th century.

A translation of the Arabic work which bears the above title, and which treats of the means of increasing, or restoring, the virile powers.

Translator : Muḥammad Sa'id uṭ-Ṭabīb B. Muḥammad Ṣādiķ ul-Iṣfahānī, حمد سعيد

The translator says that, the above Arabic work, which he ascribes to Ahmad B. Yūsuf ush-Sharīf, being the best treatise written on the subject, he had translated it at the request of Sayyid Jābir. The version is divided, like the original, into two parts (Juz'), each of which comprises thirty ehapters. The present copy breaks off in the twenty-second chapter of Part II.

Hāji Khalīfah, who mentions the work without author's name, vol. iii. p. 349, says that it had been translated into Turkish for Sultan Salīm in A.H. 940.

Add. 17,951.

Foll. 372; 12 in. by 7; 29 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century.

A treatise on Indian medicine.

حمد خدایرا که بحکمت بالغه وقدرة کامله .Beg.

Miyān Bhuvah, or Bhūvah, son of Khavāş Khān, is mentioned by Nizām ud-Dīn Ahmad in the Țabakāt i Akbarshāhī, Add. 6543, foll. 124, 132, 135, and, after him, by Firishtah, vol. i. pp. 330, 345, 350, as one of the greatest Amīrs of the reign of Sikandar Shāh Lodī (A.H. 894—923). He is designated, like his father, by the title of Khavāş Khān, and is described in one place as Lord of the Chamber , and in another as Chief Justice , and use place as Chief Justice , and use place as Chief Justice , and was place Sultan Ibrāhīm, the successor of Sikandar Shūh, he was cast into prison, soon after that king's accession in A.H. 923, and was put to death two years later. His name, which is written ببرو in the best MSS. of the above quoted works, has been changed to prove in the Bombay edition of Firishtah, and to Bhoory in Briggs' translation, vol. i. pp. 566, 594, 597. Compare the extracts from Mushtākī in Sir H. Elliot's History of India, vol. iv. p. 451, notes, and p. 544.

It appears from the preface that the author, having represented to Sikāndar Shāh that Greek medicine was not suitable to the constitution of the natives of India, obtained His Majesty's assent to the composition of the present treatise, which was compiled and translated from Indian, i. e. Sanscrit, works enumerated in the text, A.H. 918.

The preface, and an extract from the work, have been published, with a German translation, by Dr. Haas, Zeitschrift der D. Morg. Gesellschaft, vol. xxx. pp. 630—642, and an account of the work, from a Hamburg MS., which contained neither title nor author's name, will be found in Dietz's Analecta Medica, p. 171. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 108, and Mehren, Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 10.

Contents : Mukaddimah. Definition of medicine, its value, and its origin, fol. 6 a. Bāb I. Introduction to therapeutics, c_{1} , c_{2} , c_{3} , c_{3

The work is stated in the endorsement, fol.5 a, to be commonly known as , and the state due , du

A full table of contents is prefixed, foll. 2-4. The latter part of the MS., foll. 364-372, is in a late handwriting, although the subscription is dated Shāhjahānābād, Ṣafar, A.H. 1089.

The name of Miyan Bhuvah seems to point to a Hindu extraction, and, if he was, . as he pretends in the preface, the real author of the Ma'dan ush-Shifa, he must have been well versed in the Sanscrit treatises from which that work is compiled. His identity, however, with the Hindu Misra Bhava, author of the Bhāva Prakāşa (see Aufrecht, Bodleian Catalogue, p. 309), which Dr. Haas, l.e. p. 641, considers possible, is more than doubtful. The title of Khān, which belonged to him, and to his father before him, suffices to show that both were Muslims. It is, moreover, quite impossible to suppose that a fieree Multammadan zealot and ruthless persecutor of the Hindus, as Sikandar Shāh is known to have been, could have conferred the highest offices of state upon men of Hindu faith.

Add. 16,745.

Foll. 646; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 20 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1079 (A.D. 1669). [WM. YULE.] The same work, slightly imperfect at the beginning, with a table of contents, foll. 1-4.

محمد عارف ولد شیخ یحیی ساکن اود، : Copyist

Add. 18,680.

Foll. 877; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with Unvān and ruled margins, probably in the 17th century. [J. HADDON HINDLEY.]

The same work, with a table of contents, foll. 1-7.

In identical notes written on the first and last pages it is stated by Muhammad Vajih ud-Dīn, that he had purchased the MS. from the Masjid Akbarābādī on the 6th of Zulhijjah, A.H. 1171.

Add. 16,746.

Foll. 371; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 1Sth century. [WM. YULE.]

The same work, slightly imperfect at the end, and wanting the rubries.

Add. 17,947.

Foll. 230; 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6 $\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1060 (A.D. 1650).

A treatise on therapeutics.

Author: Sulţān 'Alī Ṭabib Khurāsānī, سلطان على طبيب خراسانى سپاس و ستايش حضرت عليمى ا كه نسخه . بى سقم

The author states in the preface that he composed this work in A.H. 933, and that he had previously spent forty years in the study and practice of the medical art in Khorasan and Māvarā un-Nahr, and especially at Samarkand, in the service of Abu 'l-Manşūr Kūchkūnjī Khān (the Uzbak Khān, commonly called Kūchum Khān, who reigned from A.H. 916 to 936; see p. 104 a). It was written at the request of another prince, Abu l-Muzaffar Maḥmūd Shāh, who had called the author to the seat of his government, رلايت اجنى, and had been cured by him of a dangerous illness.

It is divided into the following two books (Makālah): I. Local diseases, in twentyfive chapters (Bāb), fol. 6 b. II. General diseases, in eight Bābs, fol. 170 b. A table of contents is prefixed, foll. 1-4.

The same work is mentioned in Stewart's vol. 11.

Catalogue, p. 107, where it is stated to have been dedicated to "Abu Sa'īd Bahādur Khān, Emperor of the Moghuls, A.D. 1334" (i.e. A.H. 734—5), and in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 277, where the same erroneous statement is repeated. The Dastūr ul-'Ilāj has been lately lithographed, together with the introduction described under the next number, in the Hindu Press, Dehli, without date.

Add. 17,946.

Foll. 143; 11¹ in. by 6¹/₄; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in large Indian Nestalik; apparently in the 18th century.

An introduction to the preceding work, by the same author.

Beg. جواهر حمد و ثنا خدايرا عزوجل كه حكيم حاذق This work is dedicated to Abu 'l-Ghāzī Sulṭān Abū Sa'id, whom the author had attended for twenty years. It is stated to have been written subsequently to the Dastūr ul-'llāj, and as a complement to it. It is divided into sixteen chapters (Bāb), treating of hygiene, of the definition of medicine, health and disease, pulse, crisis, etc. It is described, with the preceding work, in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 277.

Abu Sa'id, son of Kūchkunji, was raised to the Khanship after his father's death, A.H. 936, and reigned till A.H. 939; see p. 104 a, and Erskine, History of India under Baber, vol. ii. p. 99.

Add. 26,310.

Foll. 129; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

A pharmacopœa ترابادين, in which compound medicaments are described in alphabetical order. Author: Muzaffar B. Muḥammad ul-Ḥu-مظفر بن محمد الحسيني الشفائس, الشفائس Beg. الحمد لله العليم الحكيم والصلوة على من اوتى الحكمة

The author, who was a poet as well as a physician, is mentioned by his townsman and . contemporary, Taķī ud-Dīn, of Kāshān, in his Tazkirah, where he is stated to have died A.H. 963. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 22.

A Latin translation has been published by Father Ange de St. Joseph, of Toulouse, Carmelite monk and missionary, under the title of "Pharmacopœa Persica," Paris, 1681. The work is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 110, No. xxiii., Munich Catalogue, p. 135, Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 15, and by De Jong, Catal. Codd. Orr. Acad. Regiæ, p. 232.

Add. 23,560.

Foll. 311; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Shikastah-āmīz; dated Zulļujjah, A.H. 1099 (A.D. 1688).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.] I. Foll. 2—98. A manual of medicine, رساله ينبوع حکيم عماد 98. The heading ينبوع حکيم عماد to Hakīm Imād ud-Dīn Maḥmūd. Beg. الحمد لله . . . اما بعد بدانکه آدمي مرکبست ازين جسد

The author, who in some of his works calls himself Mahmūd B. Mas'ūd, was a native of Shīrāz, and a near kinsman of a celebrated physician of the same city, Kamāl ud-Dīn Husain, who died A.H. 953 (Tuhfah i Sāmī, fol. 49). The author of the 'Alam Ārāi mentions him, Add. 16,684, fol. 43, among the great scholars who lived about the close of the reign of Shāh Țahmāsp, i.e. A.H. 984. He says that he was an eminent medical writer as well as a skilled physician, and that, after being attached for some time to the service of 'Abd Ullah Khān Istājlu, governor of Shirvan, he had been transferred by order of Shāh Țahmāsp to Mashhad. Ķāzī Nūr Ullah had in his youth studied under him the medical works of Mīr Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Manşūr, a renowned philosopher of Shīrāz, who died A.H. 948; see Majālis ul-Mūminīn, Add. 23,541, fol. 381.

The work, which has no preface, is divided into nineteen chapters (Fasl) of very unequal length, as follows: I. Preliminary notices, fol. 2 b. II.—XVI. Anatomy and diseases of the following parts of the body:—head, eye, ear, nose, mouth, throat, breast, heart, stomach, liver, gall-bladder and milt, kidneys and bladder, bowels, genital parts, and joints, fol. 5 a. XVII. Tumours, ulcers, etc., fol. 13 b. XVIII. Fevers, fol. 14 b.

Faşl xIX., which forms the main portion of the work, is subdivided into two sections (Kism), viz. 1. Aliments and drinks, fol. 20 a. 2. Simple and compound medicaments, classed according to their effect and the diseases for which they are used, fol. 46 a.

II. Foll. 98 b—214. An Arabic treatise on compound medicaments, entitled المركبات , and ascribed in the heading الشاهيه , and ascribed in the heading الشاهيه to the same writer (see Arabic Catalogue, p. 633 a).

In the preface the author states that he had applied himself from his childhood to the study of the standard medical works under his father and other physicians, and had carried on for nearly twenty years the practice of the healing art, when he repaired to the court of Shāh Tahmāsp, to whom he offered the present work. He adds that he was engaged upon the composition of a manual of medicine (probably the preceding treatise), which he had then brought down to the chapter treating of the anatomy of the tongue.

Foll. 215—218 a contain various medical recipes.

III. Foll. 218-262.

خنی علائی

A manual of medicine.

Author: Amīr Sayyid Isma'īl B. ul-Ḥasan B. ul-Ḥusain ul-Jurjānī, امير سيد اسمعيل بن الجرجاني للحسن بن للحسين المجرجاني Beg. للجد لله . . . اما بعد چنين كويد امير سيد اسمعيل

The author states in the preface that, after he had completed the Zakhirah i Khwārazmshāhī (see p. 466 b), he had been told by a prince whose name will be given further on, that a handy compendium of that voluminous work would be very desirable, and that he had, in compliance with that wish, written the present abridgment. He had given to it the name of Khafi, or "hidden," because it was written in two volumes of oblong shape, which could be conveniently earried by the owner in his boots. The second part of the title, 'Alā'i, is apparently derived from 'Alā ud-Daulah, one of the titles of the prince above mentioned. The author's patron is styled امیر سیہسالار اجل سید عالم عادل بها الدين عمدة الاسلام علاء الدوله ضياء المله . . . نظام المعالى قزل ارسلان ولى العهد ابو and in المظفر اتسز بن خوارزمشاد حسام امير المومنين an earlier copy, Add. 27,261, written A.H. امير سيهسالار بهاء الدين عمدة الاسلام علاء ,814 الدوله و الدين ضياء الامه . . . نظام المعالى قزل ارسلان ابو المظفر اتسز بن خوارزمشاة حسام امير المومتين

If قرل ارسلان may be taken as an honorific epithet, and اتسز as the prince's real name, it would follow that the work was written in the reign of Muḥammad Khwārazmshāh, A.H. 491—522, and for his successor, Atsiz, who was then commander of the army and heir apparent, a conclusion confirmed by the date which is assigned to the Khafī 'Alā'ī in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 106, viz. A.D. 1113, i. e. A.H. 506—7. It is also stated in the preface of the Aghrāz, as quoted by Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 368, that the present compendium was dedicated to Atsiz B. Khwārazmshāh.

The Khafī 'Alā'ī consists of two parts, treating severally of theoretical and practical medicine. They are subdivided as follows. Part I., in two Makālahs, viz., 1. Preservation of health, in sixteen Bābs, fol. 219 a. 2. Diagnosis of disease, in seven Bābs, fol. 232 b.

Part II., comprising the following seven Makālahs:—1. Advice to physicians, fol. 238 a. 2. Treatment of local diseases, in eighteen Bābs, fol. 238 b. 3. Fever, measles, and smallpox, fol. 257 a. 4. Tumours, sores, and wounds, fol. 260 a. 5. Fractures, bruises, and dislocations, fol. 261 b. 6. Treatment of the hair and of the skin diseases, fol. 261 b. 7. Antidotes, fol. 262 a.

IV. Foll. 262—264. Extract from the Jāmi' ul-Favā'id i Yūsufī, جامع انتخاب كتاب جامع

Yūsufi is the Takhallus of Yūsuf B. Muhammad, a physician of Herat, who lived under Babar and Humayun. His medical works are the following: Favā'id i Akhyār, written A.H. 913, Kasidah fi Hifz Sihhat, i. e. a poem on hygiene, dedicated to Babar, A.H. 937, Rivāz ul-Adviyah, written for Humāyūn, A.H. 946, 'Ilāj ul-Amrāz, a versified treatise of therapeutics, and the above work, Jāmi' ul-Favā'id, which is a commentary on the preceding. See Fleischer, Leipzig Catalogue, p. 511, Krafft's Catalogue, p. 148, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 112, Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. pp. 279, 280, Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 564, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 261. It is doubtful whether he may be identified with the author of the well known manual of epistolary composition called Badā'i' ul-Inshā, or Inshā i Yūsufī, which in the Khulasat ul-Insha, Or. 1750, fol. 158, is ascribed to Hakim Yüsufi, Munshi of Humāyūn.

V. Foll. 264 b-311.

موجز کمی

A manual of medicine, without author's name.

Beg. جنين كويد جامع اين مختصر كه چون پير شدم The author states, in a short preamble, that, feeling his memory weakened by age, he had compiled this short compendium from the most esteemed Arabic and Persian works, and had given it the name of Mūjiz Kummī because its small size would allow of its being carried in the sleeve (Kumm). The following Persian works are mentioned as sources: هداية الاجويني و كفاية احمد فرج و ذخيره خوارزمشاهي هداية الاجويني و كفاية احمد فرج و ذخيره خوارزمشاهي three were written by Sayyid Ismā'īl Jurjānī in the early part of the sixth century of the Hijrah (see p. 467 α).

The work is divided into thirty-eight chapters (Bāb), subdivided into sections (Fasl), all of which are enumerated at the beginning. The chapters are as follows: I. Treatment of infants, fol. 266 b. II. Signs of the temperament, fol. 268 a. III. Seasons, ib. IV. Properties of various articles of food, fol. 268 b. v. Perfumes, fol. 270 a. vi. Garments, ib. vii. Bathing, ib. viii. in the customary order, fol. 270 b. XXXI. Fevers, fol. 296 b. XXXII. Tumours, fol. 302 a. XXXIII. Sores, fol. 303 a. XXXIV. Skin diseases, fol. 303 b. xxxv. Treatment of the hair and skin, fol. 305 b. xxxvi. Bleeding and cupping, fol. 308 a. xxxvII. Pulse, fol. 309 a. xxxvIII. Urina, fol. 310 a.

Add. 18,543.

Foll. 385; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 1002 (A.D. 1593).

[J. H. STERNSCHUSS.]

A treatise on materia medica. Author: Afẓal B. Yaḥyā Jīlānī, انضل بن جيلانی يحيي جيلانی Beg. حمد و ثنای بی پايان آفريننده را که بلطائف حکمت خود

The author's name is found, as above, in the preface, fol. 2 b; but it is written by a second hand, and over an erasure. In the following subscription, which is in the same handwriting as the text, the transcriber, Muḥammad Ḥusain B. Ziyā ud-Dīn ul-Jurjānī, calls the author Kamāl ud-Dīn Afẓal: bild شد از تسويد اين تاليف شريف وجمع و تحرير bild أرغ شد از تسويد اين اليف شريف وجمع و تحرير منيف بر علم ابدان بعنوان اطول از مصنفات عاليخضرت امجد اجل ڪال الدين افضل محمد حسين بن ضياء الدين الجرجاني در روز شنبه هيجدهم ماه ربيع الاول سنه اتني و الف

The work is dedicated to Abul-Muzaffar Shāh 'Abbās (i.e. 'Abbās I., who reigned A.H. 996—1038).

Contents: Introduction (Mukaddimah), treating, in fourteen sections (Fā'idah), of medicaments, their degrees, preparation, and use, in general, fol. 3 b. Makālah I. Simple drugs, arranged according to the Abjad, fol. 20 a. Makālah II. Various kinds of compound medicaments, in twenty-four sections (Bāb), fol. 279 a. Makālah IV. Diseases of the skin and their treatment, in twenty-four chapters (Fasl), fol. 356 b.

Add. 23,557.

Foll. 304; $11\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 25 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shamākhī, Shīrvān, Ramazān, A.H. 1121 (A.D. 1709).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

I. Foll. 2-274.

تحفة المومنين

A work on materia medica. Author : Muḥammad Mūmin Ḥusainī, المحجد

مومن حسيني

476

مسجحانك اللهم يا قدوس ويا طبيب النفوس .

The author says in the preface that, having inherited the experience gathered by his father Mir Muhammad Zamān Tanakābuni Dailami, and his ancestors, and having himself practised the medical art according to their method, he had been induced to compile the present work by the inaccuracies which he had noticed in the then current pharmacopœa, Ikhtiyārāt i Badi'i (p. 469 a). He had based it on the most trustworthy authority on the subject, viz. the book entitled مالا يسع الطبيب جهله (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 632), and commonly called Jāmi' Baghdādī, to which he had made copious additions, gathered from the Jāmi' of Ihn Baitar, the Tazkirat Uli-I-Albab of Da'ūd ul-Antākī, the Mughnī, the Shāmil, the Kāmil ul-Adviyah, the Jāmi' ul-Adviyah of Amin ud-Daulah, etc., and, lastly, from several works of Indian physicians, such as Bähar, Charak, Sat Jog, Firúzshähi, Bhojdev, Susrut, and others. He adds, in conclusion, that, as his father and grandfather had been court-physicians to the Safavi sovereigns, and as he had himself attended the present ruler, Shah Sulaiman (A.H. 1077-1105), he had adorned his page with the exalted name of the last-named sovereign.

The work comprises two main divisions, the first of which contains five chapters called Tashkhiş, and the second, which is termed Dastürnt, consists of three parts (Kism), as follows:—

Tashkhiş 1. On the reason of the divergence of the opinions of physicians respecting the nature, properties, and doses, of drugs, fol. 3 b. Tashkhiş 2. On the qualities of simple drugs and aliments in general, and their preparation, fol. 5 b. Tashkhiş 3. Nature and properties of simple drugs and aliments, in alphabetical order, fol. 9 b. Tashkhiş 4. On the treatment of poisons, fol. 192 b. Tashkhiş 5. On weights, fol. 197 a.

Dastūrāt. Ķism I. Manipulation of simple drugs, in five sections (Țarīķ), fol. 198 b. Ķism II. Manipulation of compound medicaments, in twenty-four chapters (Bāb), fol. 208 b. Ķism III. Treatment of diseases.

As the last-named part is wanting in the present and other known copies, it appears probable that it never was written. The fifth section (Țariķ) of Ķism 1. has been transposed in the present copy; it is found at the end of Ķism 11., foll. 262—274.

The author's Nisbah Tanakābunī is derived from Tanakābun, a Buluk of the district of Amul, which is sometimes joined to Gīlān (see the Zeitschrift der D. Morg. Gesellschaft, vol. xxi., pp. 242, 245), and which appears to have been his birth-place. He quotes occasionally some local names of animals or plants as current in the dialect of Tanakābun. On the other hand, his acquaintance with the medical works and the simples of India shows that he had been living a considerable time in that country.

The Tuḥſat ul-Mūminīn has been printed in Dehli, A.H. 1266, and in Isfahan, A.H. 1274. It is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 108, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 13, the Munich Catalogue, p. 134, and the Ouseley Collection, No. 402.

II. Foll. 276—304. A treatise on therapeutics, with the heading: رساله حكيم علاء علاء : الدين بن هبة الله سبزوارى در معالجات امراض بدن Author: Muhammad 'Alā ud-Dīn B. Hibat Ullah Sabzavārī, called Ghiyāş ut-Ţabīb, محمد علاء الدين بن هبة الله سبزوارى المدعو بغياث الطبيب

الحمد لله الذي خلق الانسان و جعله اشرف .Beg مواليد الاركان

The work, which was compiled, as stated in the preface, at the request of some friends, from the standard works on the subject, is divided into fourteen ehapters (Bāb), according to the organs affected. The author gives his name, as above, at the end, stating that the treatise was completed in Rābī[•] I., A.H. 871.

ابن محمد رضا محمد تقى الرازى : Copyist

On the first page of the MS. is a note, stating that it was purchased by Mīr Muhammad Hādī ul-Ḥusainī, of Ķazvīn, in the town of Shamākhī.

Add. 17,953.

Foll. 433; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 22 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century.

Another copy of the تحفة المومذين

Foll. 360-433, comprising the latter portion of the work, from the beginning of Tashkhīş 4 to the end of Ķism 11., are in a later hand.

Add. 16,747.

Foll. 382; 12 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 27 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written by several hands, in Indian Nestalik; dated Rajab, the third year of 'Alamgir II. (A.H. 1170, Ad. 1757).

The same work.

Add. 6642.

Foll. 531; 10 in. by 6¹/₄; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently early in the 18th century. [J. F. HULL.] The preface and the first three short

The preface and the first three ehapters (Tashkhīş) of the same work.

Add. 26,308.

Foll. 103; $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 7; 23 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

[WILLIAM YULE.]

A portion of the same work. It contains Kism I. of the Dastūrāt, with the exception of its last section, Țarīķ 5, and the whole of Kism II. The 24th chapter of the latter, which treats of the diseases of birds of chase and their treatment, has a separate heading, , of the diseases of found in other copies.

Add. 26,311.

Foll. 187; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written on European paper, about the close of the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

A dictionary of simple drugs, extracted from the Tuḥfat ul-Mūmīnīn, Tashkhīş 3, and written in tabulated form, with the addition of the Latin, and, in a few cases, of the French, equivalents.

On the first page is impressed a seal with the name يتال كيونت (Vital Guyonnet ?).

Egerton 1006 and 1007.

Two uniform volumes, containing respectively 256 and 257 foll.; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 20 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 125 (for 1125 = A.D.1713).

طب الأكبر

A treatise on the symptoms of diseases and their treatment, translated from the Arabic work entitled شرح السباب و علامات (written for Mīrzā Ulugh Beg by Nafīs B. 'Ivaẓ Kirmānī; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 224).

Translator: Muhammad Akbar, called Muhammad Arzānī, B. Mīr Hājī Muķīm, 2000

اکبر عرف ^محمد ارزانی بن میر حاجی مقیم

صحیح ترین کلامی که مشام ناطقه دانش آئینرا .Beg

Mīr Muḥammad Akbar, better known as Shāh Arzānī, lived in India, where his medical works are in high repute. It is stated in the Yādgār Bahāduri, Or. 1652, fol. 96, that he first applied for instruction to Sayyid 'Alavi Khān, a well known Shīrāz physician, who had come to the court of Aurangzib A.H. 1115 (see the Mir'at Afitabnuma, fol. 132, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 157), and that, on his refusal, he betook himself to Shirāz in order to study medicine there. The dates of his works, however, range, as far as they can be ascertained, from A.H. 1112 to 1130. In the latest of them, Karābādin i Kādirī, the author gives the following list of his previous compositions: Tibb un-Nabi, translated from Jalal ud-Din Suyūtī, Tibb ul-Akbar, Mufarrih ul-Kulub, Mizan ut-Tibb, Ta'arīf ul-Amrāz, and Mujarrabāt i Akhari.

478

Muhammad Akbar says in his preface that, after completing the usual course of studies, and making himself acquainted with medicine, he had selected the "Sharh Asbāb va 'Alāmāt'' (whose author he does not name) for translation, as the best treatise on that science. He had omitted, however, in his version some superfluous arguments of the original work, and had made useful additions to it from the following books: Kānān, Havi, Aksara'i, Sadidi, Mujiz, Zakhirah (see p. 466), Kifāyah i Mujāhidiyyah (see p. 470), and others. The work was completed, he adds, in the year expressed by the above title, with deduction of the weak letters () and ,), i.e. 1122 - 10 = A.H. 1112, and at the time when 'Alamgir, after subjugating the Deccan, "had washed the blood-stained spears of his victorious armies in the waters of the Kishnah."

After the capture of Sattārah and of the fortress of Parlī, Aurangzīb crossed the swollen stream of the Kishnah, or Kistnah, with great difficulty and considerable loss, in the month of Safar, A.H. 1112. See Ma'āşir 'Alamgīrī, p. 429. The same event is placed by Khāfī Khān, vol. ii. p. 473, in A.H. 1111.

The Tibb ul-Akbar comprises seven-and-twenty chapters (Bāb) on local and general discases, and an appendix (Khātimah) on compound medicaments and technical terms. It has been repeatedly printed in the East, Calcutta, 1830; Dehli, A.H. 1265; Bombay, A.H. 1264, 1275, and 1279; Teheran, A.H. 1275; and Lucknow, A.H. 1289. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 110, and Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 345.

Add. 17,949.

Foll. 45; 12 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, $6\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1155 (A.D. 1742).

ميزان الطب

A manual of medicine by the same Muhammad Akbar.

The work has been printed in Calcutta, A.D. 1836, Cawnpore, 1874, and Lucknow, without date. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 111, and Ouseley's Collection, No. 400.

A leaf appended to the present volume contains a short notice on the Pārsī work, entitled شارستان چهار جمن, written by the Bihdīn Bahrām Farhād in the time of Akbar.

Add. 17,954.

Foll. 113; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1221 (A.D. 1806).

A treatise on compound medicaments by the same author.

الحمد لله الذي هدانا الى الصراط المستقيم . والصلوة

The author, having written down on loose slips such recipes as he had obtained from experienced physicians, found it necessary to reduce them to order for his own convenience. Hence grew the present work. It is divided into a number of chapters (Bāb), in which the medicaments are arranged under the various diseases for which they are used.

A table of contents is prefixed to the present copy, and another is appended to it. The latter is said to have been transcribed from the author's autograph.

ديارام قوم كايته ماتهو : Copyist

The Mujarrabāt i Akbarī has been printed in Lucknow, A.H. 1280, and in Bombay, A.H. 1276. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 110, and the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 11.

Add. 17,952.

Foll. 880; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated A. 1159 of Yardajird, Jumādā I., A.H. 1204 (A.D. 1789).

قرابادين قادري

A treatise on compound medicaments, by the same author.

ثنای که شایان جناب مستطاب حضرت الهی. Beg.

The author states in the preface, after enumerating his previous works, that he had commenced the present in A.H. 1126, and that he had given it the name of Karābādīn i Kādirī, because he was a disciple of the most holy Sayyid 'Abd ul-Kādir Jīlānī (i. e. a member of the Kādirī order). In the chapter on China root, fol. 832, A.H. 1130 is mentioned as the current year. The work is divided into three-and-twenty Bābs, in which medical preparations are described under the diseases for which they are intended. In each Bāb they are arranged in alphabetical order.

The Karābādīn i Kādirī has been printed in Bombay, A.H. 1277, and in Dehli, A.H. 1286. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 110, xx.

Add. 26,309.

Foll. 9; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in small Shikastah-āmīz in the early part of the present century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

Author: Firūz B. Mullā Kā'ūs, فيروز بن

Beg. برارباب طبايع واذهان سليمة و اصحاب عقول. A short tract in defence of the inoculation of the smallpox.

The tract was written, shortly after the introduction of inoculation in Sūrat, with the object of refuting the religious objections which Dastūr Barzūrjī, a Pārsī of Rustampūrah, had raised against the practice. It contains some Zend and Pehlevi texts in the original character.

Mullā Fīrūz is known as the editor of the Desatir, published in Bombay, 1818, and the author of a treatise on the intercalary year of the Parsis, Bombay, 1828; see Zenker, vol. i. p. 108.

FARRIERY AND FALCONRY. Add. 14,057.

Foll. 90; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a rude Indian Shikastahāmīz, apparently in the 19th century.

I. Foll. 3-60.

A treatise on farriery, translated from the Sanscrit work known as Sālihotra. Translator : 'Abd Ullah B. Ṣafī, عبد الله , Translator : بن صفى

Beg. لله الذي خلق الافراس على احسن الصورت 'Abd Ullah states, in a short preamble, that he had, in the reign of Sultān Ahmad Valī ul-Bahmanī, and by his order, translated into Persian the Sālihotra from the original of Durgarāsī, son of Sargarāsī, بنده ضعيف عبد الله بن صفي بر فرمان شاه جهانيناه از درك راسي بن سركراسي ساكن قصبه المله ترجمه سالهوتر را فارسي كرده

He adds that the work was written in the city of Kulbargah. The date of composition which follows is, in the present copy, defectively written "A. H. . . . hundred and ten," with a same work is dated in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 96, A.D. 1407 (A.D. 810). As, however, Ahmad Shah Valī Bahmanī reigned from A.H. 825 to 838, that date cannot be correct.

Contents: Preface and table of chapters, fol. 3 b. Legendary account of the creation of the horse, which is said to have been originally endowed with wings, fol. 4 b. Defects of the horse, in fifty-two chapters, (Faşl) fol. 5 a. Good points of the horse, in thirteen chapters. fol. 22 a. Signs of the age of horses, fol. 26 a. Diseases of the horse, with their treatment, and management of the horse, fol. 29 b.

The treatise is illustrated with a great number of coloured drawings of a rather rude style of execution.

Sālihotra is the traditional inventor of the veterinary art. He is stated in the introductory chapter to have been instructed by his father, Aspasti اسپستی, in the knowledge and management of horses, while in the next following work he appears as a Brahman, the master of Susruta. The same name, however, is defined by Abul-Fazl, in the A'in i Akbarī, vol. ii. p. 144, as applying to the art itself, and it has come to be used as a common designation of the works in which it is set forth. See Weber, Verzeichniss der Sanskrit Handschriften, p. 291, Elliot, Bibliographical Index, p. 263, and History of India, vol. v. p. 574.

II. Foll. 61-73. A treatise, without title, on the same subject.

In the opening lines the Sultan Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Muḥammad Shāh B. Maḥmūd Shāh Khiljī is mentioned as the reigning sovereign, and the 21st of Muḥarram, A.H. 983, سند ثلث, as the date of composition. As Ghiyāş ud-Dīn B. Maḥmūd, king of Mālvah, who is here meant, reigned from A.H. 873 to 906, the above date is obviously wrong; it is probably a clerical error for A.H. 883.

The work is divided into twelve chapters (Bāb), subdivided in sections (Faşl), and enumerated at the beginning, as follows: 1. Breeds of various countries, fol. 62*a*. 2. Mode of choosing horses, fol. 62*b*. 3. Omens derived from the motions of horses, fol. 63*a*. 4. Colours of horses, ib. 5. Their blemishes, fol. 63*b*. 6. Their limbs, fol. 65*b*. 7. Diseases and remedies, fol. 66*b*. 8. Bleeding, fol. 69*a*. 9. Dict and food, fol. 69*b*. 10. Fattening, and treatment of sores, fol. 71*b*. 11. How to know the age of horses by their teeth.

In the body of the work, however, the last chapter is replaced by the two following: 11. On various remedies, fol. 73 a. 12. On lucky and unlucky marks in horses, fol. 73 b.

A fuller copy of the same work, with the title of Kurrat ul-Mulk, will be found among the Elliot MSS., Or. 1697, art. ii. See also Elliot, Bibliographical Index, p. 263.

III. Foll. 74-89. Treatise on the diseases of horses and their treatment, imperfect at the beginning and end.

Prefixed to the volume is an English letter written by "Tirmal Rão, son of Rão Bahadoor

4S1

VOL. II.

FARRIERY.

Venkut Rāo, principal Ṣudr Ameen of Dharwar," on sending the work to the Rev. John Wilson, D.D., president of the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. It is dated Dharwar, 20th August, 1840.

Add. 16,854.

Foll. 122; 8 in. by 5. [WILLIAM YULE.] I. Foll. 3-74; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik on gold-sprinkled paper, with gold-ruled margins, in the 17th century.

A treatise on farriery, translated from the Sanscrit, with a preface by Kwājah 'Abd Ullah, entitled 'Abd Ullah Khān Bahādur Fīrūz Jang, خواجه عبد الله ^{ال}مخاطب بعبد الله خان بهادر فيروز جنك

اسپ فکرت چو زین کند دانا Beg. به که کوید مخست حمد خـدا

'Abd Ullah Khān says that the sages of India had written of old, on the knowledge of the horses and their maladies, a treatise in the Sanscrit tongue, consisting of 16,000 Slokas. Most people being ignorant of that language, he called together, in the reign of His exalted Majesty, Shāhjahān, some Pandits well versed in Sanscrit, and had that work, there designated as سالوتر اسپاں, translated into Persian. He adds that the original copy in his possession had been found, with other Hindu books, in some chests captured by him after defeating the rebel Amar Singh, Rānā of Chītor.

'Abd Ullah Khān had been sent against the Rānā by Jahāngīr in the fourth year of the reign (A.H. 1018); but Amar Singh did not make his submission until A.H. 1023. 'Abd Ullah Khān died A.H. 1054, at the age of seventy years. See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, Tazkirat ul-Umarā, and Elliot's History, vol. vi. pp. 335—9.

Contents : Introduction, treating of the ereation of the horse and of its colours, partly abridged from a Persian Faras Nāmah, written in the time of Maḥmūd Ghaznavī, fol. 6 b. Knowledge of horses, and of their good and bad signs, in twelve Bābs, fol. 13 a. Diseases of the horse, and their treatment, in thirty-eight Bābs, fol. 33 b. This copy contains three coloured drawings of horses.

An English translation of 'Abd Ullah Khān's version has been published by Joseph Earles, Calcutta, 1788. See also Sir H. Elliot, Bibliographical Index, p. 264, note, and Mehren, Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 16, no. xxxix.

II. Foll. 75—121; 16 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1098 (A.D. 1687).

The same work.

Beg. الاختدام بكرمة العميمة والاعتصام بحبله للجسيمة This copy wants the preface and introduction; it begins with a short statement that the work had been translated from the Indian into the Persian language in A.H. 926. But in spite of this, and other minor discrepancies, the substantial identity of the two versions is fully established by their general verbal agreement, especially in the Persian verses frequently inserted in the text.

Add. 7716.

Foll. 47; 6 in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A treatise on farriery.

Author: Nizām ud-Dīn Ahmad, نظام الدين أحمد مياس ديقياس خداوند جهان را كم ابلق Beg. ليل و نهار

The author is called in the heading of another copy, Add. 23,562, Mīrzā Nizām, son of Mullā Sadrā. It appears from the preface that this treatise was compiled from earlier works by order of Shāh 'Abbās II. (A.H. 1052-1077). Reference is made, fol. 45 a, to a census of the Shāh's horses taken A.H. 1067, and, as it is stated further on that four years had elapsed since then, it follows that the date of composition is A.H. 1071.

Contents: Mukaddimah. Creation and domestication of the horse, fol. 3 b. Marhalah I. Its good and bad qualities, and other things relating to the knowledge of horses, in nine Bābs, fol. 6 b. Marhalah II. Rules concerning the rearing of horses and the running of races, in nine Bābs, fol. 21 b. Marhalah II. Treatment of the diseases of the horse, in nine Bābs, fol. 31 a. Khātimah, on the horses of the Shāh, and on amulets, fol. 44 b.

Add. 8989.

Foll. 87; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, 3 in long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century.

Another copy of the same work, wanting a few lines at the beginning.

Add. 23,562.

Foll. 92; S¹/₄ in. by 5⁴/₄; 21 lines, 3¹/₂ in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1213 (A.D. 1799). [ROBERT TAYLOR.] L. Foll 1-18 The same work

I. Foll. 1-48. The same work.

II. Foll. 49-67. Another treatise on farriery, with the heading analy,

Author: Hazin, -

سواران مضمار بندگی و سرافکند کی را چه مجال .Beg.

The author, who has been already mentioned, p. 372 b, says that he had composed in his youth, and in his native place, an extensive work on farriery, and that, unable to procure a copy of it in India, where he was residing, he had now written what he calls a mere sample of his former work. The earlier Faras Nāmah here referred to is mentioned by Hazīn in his memoirs, Balfour's edition, p. 97. It was written in Isfahan about A.H. 1127.

The present treatise comprises nine sections termed Hulyah, on the knowledge of horses and their diet, and ten chapters (Faşl) on the diseases of horses and their treatment.

III. Foll. 67–90. A treatise on zoology, with the heading رساله در خواص الحيوان, by the same Shaikh Hazin, who here calls himself Muhammad B. Abī Ṭālib uz-Zāhidī Jīlānī, surnamed 'Alī, ابن ابی طالب الزاهدی جیلانی محمد المشتہر بعلی Beg. سپاس بی قیاس کہ مدارک اوہام

Beg. سپاس بی قیاس که مدارک اوهام This tract is called in another copy, Or. 207, II., Tazkirah i Ṣaidiyyah.

Contents: Mukaddimah. Legal precepts concerning hunting and the slaying of animals, fol. 67 b. Bāb 1. Account of some animals of land and sea, arranged in alphabetical order, fol. 72 b. Bāb 11. Origin of animal life and its nature, fol. 88 a. Bāb 111. Senses and faculties of animals, fol. 89 b.

IV. Foll. 90—92. A short tract on the weight of coins and on legal measures in Khorasan, with the heading: رساله در اوزان مثقال و درهم و دينار و غيرة

Author: the same Hazin, who here calls ملى بن ابى Hazin, who here calls الم himself 'Ali B. Abi Tālib ul-Jilānī, على بن ابى الجيلانى لخمد الله . . . وبعد افقر فقراء باب الله . Beg.

Add. 23,563.

Foll. 169; 8¹/₄ in. by 5³/₄; 17 lines, 3³/₈ in. long; written in Naskhi, dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1246 (A.D. 1830). [ROBERT TAYLOR.] A transcript of the preceding MS.

Add. 23,561.

Foll. 100; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 19th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.] خیل نامه

A treatise on farriery, without author's name.

It is divided into two books (Kitāb), the first of which treats of the knowledge of horses and of their training, in forty chapters, and the second, of the diseases of the horse and their treatment, in sixty chapters.

The work is noticed by Fluegel in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 553, where the contents are fully stated.

Add. 7715.

Foll. 80; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 12 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Baghdād, Ramazān, A.H. 1204 (A.D. 1790). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work.

Add. 19,528.

Foll. 63; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 19th century. [Sir Tho. Phillips.]

A portion of the same work, extending from the second chapter of book 1. to the twenty-ninth of book 11.

Or. 374.

Foll. 77; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 16 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, written in eursive Persian Naskhi, probably in the 13th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] A treatise on falconry, without author's name.

It is imperfect at beginning and end. What is now the first leaf of the original MS., fol. 6, contains the end of a table of contents, showing that the work comprised 135 chapters (Bāb), and the beginning of Bāb 1, which is as follows:

باب اول بدانکی این شکره جون بیدا شد روایت

This first enapter contains a legendary account of an ancient work from which the present treatise purports to be derived. Written by the sages of the town of Balnas شهر بلناس, it passed, in the time of Alexander and Aristotle, to Alexandria, and subsequently to Antioch. When the empress Helen and her son Constantine, wishing to force a new religion on their people, resolved to burn the contents of the royal library, it was rescued with some other books, and conveyed to Baghdad (sic), where it was translated into Syriac. Hearing of its existence, the Khākān of the Turks, who was passionately fond of falconry, sent for it, and had it translated by a learned Turk of Pāriyāb i Marv, پارياب مرو. Then follow various traditions relating to the invention of hawking, which is ascribed in turn to king Demetrius, to Shāpūr B. Salm, to Abul-Haris Mu'āviyah, to a Roman emperor called , and to Constantine.

The following chapters, $B\bar{a}b \ 2--30$, foll. 13 b--35, treat of various kinds of birds of prey, the names of which are given in Persian, Arabic, Turkish and Greek, of their selection and training, and of their appearance in a state of health. The remaining chapters treat of the diseases to which they are liable, and of their treatment. The present copy breaks off before the end of $B\bar{a}b \ 131$.

Among authorities occasionally adduced are Ghitrīf B. Kudāmah, described as living at the court of Hārūn al-Rashīd, Mahdī B. Ahram, the Khākān of the Turks, and Khalīl of Māvarā un-nahr, a contemporary of the author.

484

It may be noticed as a dialectic peculiarity that the third person of the plural is generally written without the final ۵, as بودن for بردن, so as to become identical in form with the infinitive.

Foll. 2—5 contain a short preamble and a table of chapters, written apparently in the 17th century. On the first page is written the title ميديد, and on the fly-leaf بنكرد. The passage above quoted shows that بشكرد, the common designation of hunting birds, is there applied to the work itself.

For Oriental works on falconry, see Hammer Purgstall, Falknerklee, bestchend aus drei ungedruckten Werken über die Falknerei, Pesth, 1840.

Egerton 1013.

Foll. 108; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Rabi I., the thirtieth year of the reign (probably of Muhammad Shāh, i.e. A.H. 1161, A.D. 1748).

باز نامه

A treatise on falconry.

Author: Muhibb 'Ali, surnamed Khān Khāş Mahalli B. Nizām ud-Din 'Ali Marghulāni, محب على الملقب بخان خاص محلى ابن نظام الدين الدين على مرغلاني

Beg. بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم طاير فرخندة حى قديم. Muhibb 'Ali Khān, son of Nizām ud-Dīn 'Ali Khalifah, prime minister of Bābar, was raised to the Khanship in the first year of Akbar's reign, and died as governor of Dehli, A.H. 989. See Erskine, History of India under Baber, vol. i. p. 385, Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 448, Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 87, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 420.

The author states that he was nearly sixty years old at the time of writing, and that, having from his youth upwards accompanied illustrious monarchs on the chase, he had acquired considerable experience. He dedicates the work to Akbar, whose skill and prowess in the hunting field he praises at great length.

The work is divided into sixty-one chapters (Bāb), a full table of which is given in the preface.

Contents: Preface, fol. 2 b. Precepts of the law relating to the chase, fol. 9 b. Qualifications of a perfect huntsman (Mīr Shikār), fol. 12 b. Capture and breeding of hawks, fol. 13 a. How to select hawks and other kinds of hunting birds, fol. 20 a. Signs of health and disease, fol. 24 a. Directions relating to hunting in general, and to the diet and training of the different kinds of hunting birds, fol. 26 b. Diseases of hawks, and their treatment, fol. 68 b. Snares and decoys, fol. 87 b. Selection and training of panthers, j_{22} , fol. 101 a.

Egerton 1012.

Foll. 124; 9²/₄ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-Amīz, apparently in the 17th century.

A treatise on falconry. Author: Bahādur, ببادر

Bahādur is the poetical surname assumed by the author in a versified preamble, foll. 1—5, containing eulogies on 'Abd ul-Ķādir Jilāni, on his own spiritual guide, Mīr Muḥammad Ashraf, and on the reigning sovereign, Aurangzīb. He states in the next-following prose preface, that he had undertaken the present work at the urgent request of Ja'far Beg, whom he calls his master in the craft, ارستاد, and of his own brothers, La'l Beg and Habib Ullah, adding further on that he had written it in the town of Bhaskar $i \to i$, Sūbah of Berār Bālāghāth, in the 25th year of the reign of 'Alamgīr, corresponding to A.H. 1091. It must be observed, however, that in the poetical preamble, fol. 5 a, mention is made of the capture of Sanbhā, which took place A.H. 1101.

The work is divided into forty-three chapters (Bāb), a list of which is given at the end of the preface, fol. 8. The first thirty-nine treat very fully of the training of hawks and other hunting birds, and of their employment in the chase. Then follow—Bāb XL. Diseases of hunting birds, in sixty-eight sections (Faşl), fol. 84 b. Bāb XLI. Their treatment, in as many sections, fol. 93 b. Bāb XLII. Miscellaneous instructions, in four sections. The present copy breaks off before the end of the fourth section of this last Bāb.

ALCHEMY AND CABALISTIC.

Add. 17,956.

Foll. 127; 12¹/₄ in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 10 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Indian Nestalik; dated August, A.D. 1807.

A treatise on alchemy ascribed to Tankulūshāh the Great, کتاب تنکلوشاہ کبیر

اینست کنچ کهر شاهی که در بیان فضه است . و در کنچ کهر بیان ذهب است

It is divided into sections bearing the following titles: مفاتيح , اسرار سبعه , هفت کنج کهر , مفاتيح , مفاتيح الکنوز , مصابيح الانوار , انوار سبعه , سبعه

For an account of that mythical sage, more commonly known as an astrologer, see Chwolsohn, Ueberreste der altbabylonischen Literatur, p. 130, and Gutschmid, Zeitschrift der D. M. Gesellschaft, vol. xv. p. 79.

شيو لعل ولد سندر لعل قوم ناکر : Copyist

Add. 17,966.

Foll. 259; 10 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian Naskhi, apparently in the 18th century.

I. Foll. 7–101.

"The seven friends," a treatise on alchemy.

Beg. حمد ثنا قيومى را كه عجز عقول ذريات ادم The author of the preface, who calls himself Hamīd ud-Dīn Nāgorī, states that the work was the joint production of himself and six friends, each having contributed one of the seven parts (Bāb), of which it consists, in the following order:

I. Hamīd ud-Dīn Nāgorī, fol. 12 b. II. A Hindu Jogī, originally called Gyān, who is stated to have been brought over to the Muslim faith by the six others, and to have taken the name of Saʿādatmand, fol. 23 b. III. Shaikh Sulaimān Mandu'ī, fol. 51 b. IV. Mīr Sayyid Muḥammad Hāshim Bukhārī, v. Mīrān Sayyid Tayyib Audhī, fol. 62 b. VI. Shaikh Naṣīr ud-Dīn Nārnolī, fol. 76 a. VII. Maulānā Muḥammad Ṣādiķ Multānī, fol. 81 b.

The above names are those of Indian Shaikhs who lived in very different periods, as Hamīd ud-Dīn Nāgorī, who died A.H. 643, Shaikh Sulaimān Mandu'ī, who died A.H. 944, and Mīr Sayyid Tayyib of Bilgrām, who died A.H. 1066; see Riyāz ul-Auli'yā, Or. 1745, foll. 109, 131, and Or. 1804, fol. 38. Their connection with the present work is evidently fictitious.

Bāb II. contains a long piece in Hindī verse, with Persian glosses. Bāb IV. which has been transferred to the end, foll. 100— 101, is imperfect.

II. Foll. 102—119. An alchemical tract, treating especially of the tincture of metals, written, as stated in the heading, by Abu Alī Sīnā for Khwājah Ḥusain بييل [sic].

486

چنین کوید خواجه ابو علی سینا رحمة الله عایه . که میان من و میان خواجه ابو الحسن مشهدی

This is apparently a translation of Ibn Sinā's Arabie treatise on alehemy, written for Abul-Hasan Sahl B. Muḥammad us-Sahlī, and mentioned by Ibn Abi Uṣaibi'ah, A.D. 7350, fol. 127 b, المالي الشيخ ابي الحسن رسانة الى الشيخ ابي الحسن, Compare Wüstenfeld, Geschichte der Arabischen Aertzte, p. 72, no. 39.

III. Foll. 119 b—129 b. Short alchemical extracts, with a passage of Akhlāķ i Nāşirī, relating to philosophy and its divisions.

IV. Foll. 131-254.

تحفة الملوك

A Hindustani treatise on medicine and magic, without author's name.

Add. 7713.

Foll. 237; 7¹/₄ in. by 5; 19 lines, 3⁴/₈ in. long; written in a fair Naskhi, probably in the 13th century. [CL. J. RICH.]

A treatise on the construction of the cabalistic squares called روناق, in which the numbers added up in any direction produce the same total, and of some other arithmetical figures, with numerous diagrams.

The work is divided into a Mukaddimah, five chapters (Bāb), and a Khātimah. The headings of the Bābs are as follows:

Fol. 3 a. در ذکر وفتق مجرد وشيراييط وضع ان
 Fol. 126 a. در ذکر ونق تام وانچ منداسب انست
 Fol. 165 a. در ذکر شطری از نوادر وغرايب اوضاع اعداد .
 Fol. 165 b. بود عداد ان بود .
 Fol. 177 b. در وضع اسامي والقاب وانج در عداد ان بود .
 Fol. 228 b. ومد مثلث ومدور .

This copy wants the preface, a portion of the introduction, and all but a few lines of the Khātimah, which treats of the virtues of the above figures.

A spurious beginning, written by a later hand, ascribes the work to Abu-Ma'shar Balkhī.

On the last page is found the date Rajab, A.H. 608, مدر تاريخ يوم السبت شهر رجب سند ۲۰۰ probably copied from the original subscription of the MS.

Add. 23,582.

Foll. 30; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, written in Naskhi; dated Rajab, A.H. 1225 (A.D. 1810). [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

فال نامه.

A book of divination, in which certain predictions or omens are arranged under the names of five and twenty prophets.

Foll. 26—30 contain some verses by Vahshī and Sa'dī, transcribed by 'Alī Rizā, surnamed Mīrzā Bābā, Nūrbakhshī Shīrāzī.

ARTS AND GAMES.

Add. 16,853.

Foll. 190; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

A treatise on the art of war.

Author : Sharif Muḥammad [B.] Manṣūr [B.] Saʿid etc., Kuraishi, surnamed Mubārakshāh, commonly ealled Fakhr Mudabbir, شریف محمد منصور سعید قریشی ملقب بمبارکشاه معروف بفخر مدبر Beg. معایف و سپاس و ستایش Beg. بی غایة ان صانعی ا

The author, who in the preface traces his genealogy up to Abu Bakr, mentions incidentally, fol. 99 b, as his maternal ancestor, the Amīr Bilkātigīn, "who succeeded to the Great Chamberlain Alptigīn as king of Ghaznīn, where he reigned four years (A.H. 359—362), and was the father-in-law of Sultan Yamīn ud-Daulah Maḥmūd Ghāzī." (See Raverty's Țabakāt i Nāṣirī, p. 73, notes, and Elliot's History, vol. ii. p. 267, note, and p. 479).

Relating, in another passage, fol. 186 a, a marvellous instance of recovery from a deadly wound, the author states that it had come under his observation in Multān, fifteen years after the defeat of Khusrau Shāh by 'Alā ud-Dīn Ghūrī (A.H. 550; see Kāmil, vol. xi. p. 108), he being at the time (i.e. about A.H. 565) a mere youth ζ_{λ} , while in the preface he describes himself as old and infirm. Several other references to Multān make it probable that it was his native place.

He dedicates the present work to the Pādishāh of Islām, Shams ud-Dunyā wad-Dīn Abul-Muzaffar Iltatmish us-Sultān, Nāşir Amīr ul-Mūminīn (who ruled the empire of Dehli from A.H. 607 to 633), and calls himself the least of his servants.

The work is divided into thirty-four ehapters, which are enumerated in the preface, foll. 9, 10. The following table, written by Major Yule on the fly-leaf, gives a fair idea of the contents :—

Chapters 1 to 4. On the regal character and duties, fol. 12 b. 5. On the choice of ministers, fol. 51 b. 6. Intercourse with foreign states by ambassadors, fol. 56 b. 7. On counsel, and avoiding the extremity of war, fol. 66 a. 8. On horses, their qualities and use, fol. 71 a. 9. On their marks; on breaking in for the saddle, fol. 76 b. 10. On discovering the age of horses by inspecting their teeth; on food and medicine, fol. 87 a. 11. On the arms and armour of cavalry, fol. 96 b. 12. On reviewing an army, and preservation of order, fol. 109 b. 13. On encampments and changing of ground, fol. 112 a. 14. On guards, rounds, videttes and spies, fol. 115 a. 15. On night attacks, fol. 118 a. 16. On placing ambushes, fol. 119 b. 17. On the choice of a field of battle, " fol. 123 b. 18. On arranging the several descriptions of troops, fol. 126 b. 19. Order of battle, fol. 129 a. 20. On coming to action, and attention of commanders of corps, fol. 131 a. 21. On engaging battle, fol. 133 b. 22. On public worship in front of the enemy, fol. 138 b. 23. On the courtesies of the field, fol. 141 b. 24. On the unity and composition of an army, fol. 146 b. 25. On religious wars, fol. 151 a. 26. On plunder, fol. 154 b. 27. On the siege of fortified places, fol. 159 a. 28. On the efficacy of the prayers of the pious in an army, fol. 166 b. 29. On the omens of vietory, fol. 172 b. 30 and 31. On rewards and punishments, fol. 176 a. 32. On gymnastic exercises and military weapons, fol. 180 a. 33. On the fact that, whether you flee like a poltroon, or face the enemy like a hero, you will not die till your day come, fol. 185 a. 34. On certain maxims which it equally behaves the sovereign, subject, and soldier, to attend to, fol. 188 b.

The MS. breaks off before the end of the last chapter.

The work contains a great number of historical anecdotes, relating principally to the Ghaznavis.

Add. 26,306.

Foll. 62; $6\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

هدايت الرامي

A treatise on archery, in twenty-seven chapters (Bāb).

488

Author: Muḥammad Budha'ī, commonly called Sayyid Mīr 'Alavī, عرف سيد محمد بدة بي

میر علوی

حمد وثنای مر خدایرا جل و علا آن توانای که .Beg.

It is dedicated to 'Alā ud-Dunyā wad-Dīn Abu-l-Muẓaffar Husain Shāh, who reigned in Bengal, according to Ferishtah, from A.H. 904 to 927; see Briggs' translation, vol. iv. p. 349, and Marsden, Numismata, p. 577.

There are some drawings in the margins of foll. 17, 18, representing archers in Indian costume drawing the bow in various attitudes. There are also some notes and additions in the margins. See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1940.

Egerton 1031.

Foll. 55; 8 in. by 5‡; 15 lines, 3‡ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Şafar, A.H. 1200 (A.D. 1785.)

The same work.

Egerton 793.

Foll. 211; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1194 (A.D. 1780).

A treatise on music, translated from a Hindū work ascribed to Ahobal اهوبل.

روشن ضمير ,Translator : Raushan Zamīr

Beg. سرود اثر امود و اثر سرود نمود زمزمه حمد كار ساز The translator calls himself a born slave of Pādishāh 'Alamgir (A.H. 1068—1118). The title of the original work is uncertain; it appears in three different forms, viz. بارجاتك, fol. 2 a, تارجاتك, fol. 51 a, and بارچانك, in the subscription. It is not stated whether it was a Sanserit or Hindī work. The technical terms are Sanscrit, but several Hindi Dohrahs are introduced.

VOL. II.

The treatise is divided into three parts, as follows: 1. Gīti-kānda, کیت کاند, fol. 3 b. 2. Vāda-kānda, باد کاند, fol. 97 b. 3. Nrityakānda, نرت کاند, fol. 149 b.

Add. 16,662.

Foll. 119; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 17 lines, 5 in. long; written in large Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1205 (A.D. 1791).

[WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—94. Zauzanī's Commentary on the Mu'allaķāt; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 479.

II. Foll. 95—119.

رساله تخلبنديه

A work on agriculture, treating chiefly of the culture of fruit-trees, flowers, vegetables and grains, as practised in India.

Author: Ahmad 'Alī B. Muhammad Khalīl, of Jaunpūr, احمد علي بن محمد خليل جونفوري المائعي العمد علي بن محمد خليل جونفوري المائعي العمد العمد في المائعي المائي الله المائي الله المائي الله المائي الله المائي الله المائي ممائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مائي مائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي مالمائي

Add. 17,960.

Foll. 55; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

مجموعة الصنابع

A collection of useful secrets and curious recipes for making artificial pearls and jewels, preparing various inks and dies, engraving stones, dissolving and oxydizing metals, making artificial flowers, illuminating books, etc., without author's name.

I

Beg. حمد و سپاس بديع الاساس حضرت صانعىرا It contains forty-two chapters (Bāb), subdivided into one hundred and forty sections (Faşl).

According to Stewart's Catalogue, p. 97, the work was written by Zain ul-'Abidīn in the reign of Aurangzīb. But a Turkish version, which appears to have been written about A.D. 1655 (A.H. 1065), is described in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 525.

Add. 17,959.

Foll. 175; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, in the latter half of the 18th century.

A cookery-book, without author's name.

زخوان فضل خود فرمان نواله .Beg مکن برمطبخ غیری حوالـه

After an introduction treating of the rites and observances to be attended to before cating, the author gives, foll. 20, 21, a table of the forty chapters (Bāb) comprised in the book. Another title, viz. (t_{el}) , is found in the heading of a full table of contents prefixed to the volume by another hand, foll. 2—9. A frequent use of Hindi words shows that the work was written in India. It was completed, as stated at the end, in A.H. 1179; but it is not clear, whether the date relates to the composition, or to the present copy.

Add 16,856.

Foll. 63; 10 in. by 6; 10 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 1021 (A.D. 1612). [WM. YULE.] A treatise on the game of chess, abridged from an Arabic original.

Author: Muhammad B. Husam ud-Daulah,

The Arabic work entitled كتاب المنج في علم by Muḥammad B. 'Umar Kajīnā محمد أحمد أن الشطر في محمد is stated in the preface to be the most useful treatise on chess. As there was, however, only one copy of it in the land, and that an incorrect one, it appeared desirable to make an abridged version of it in Persian, and the author performed that task by the order of a sovereign who is designated by such titles as حضرت همايون قهرمان سلاطين عهد و زمان شهريار ربع مسكون قهرمان سلاطين عهد و زمان man does not appear.

It is divided into fourteen chapters (Bāb), as follows :--- 1. The companions of Muhammad and their disciples have played at chess, fol. 7 a. 2 and 3. Proofs of the lawfulness of the game, and its advantages, fol. 9 a. 4. Inventor of the game; multiplication of the squares, fol. 13 b. 5. Etymology of the terms of the game, fol. 17 b. 6. Polite rules to be observed in playing, fol. 22 a. 7. Advice to players, fol. 24 a. 8. How to tell the issue of a game, fol. 31 a. 9. Opening of the game, fol. 33 b. 10. On some ingenious games on the chess board, fol. 36 a. 11. Positions منصوبها, or ehess-problems, fol. 41 a. 14. On playing without looking at the board, fol. 62 a.

The present copy is defective. Of Bāb 9 the first three lines only are extant. The latter part of Bāb 11, and the whole of Bābs 12 and 13, are wanting. The last two are also omitted in the table of chapters at the end of the preface. An abstract of the work has been given by Mr. Bland in his "Persian Chess," London, 1850, pp. 18—25. The title above mentioned تصارير المارين المارين المارين was taken by him for a proper name, and led to the statement that the treatise had been compiled for the emperor Humāyūn.

Sloane 4095.

Paper roll; 16 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; written in plain Naskhi, apparently in the 18th century.

Explanation of some technical terms, designating various kinds of ornamental buildings, such as أيرد , طنبس , ايوان, etc.

PHILOLOGY.

LEXICOGRAPHY.

Persian Dictionaries.

Or. 1262.

Foll. 101; 114 in. by 7; 23 lines, 44 in. long; written in fair Indian Shikastah-āmīz; dated Zul-Hijjah, A.H. 1102 (A.D. 1691).

اداة الفضلا

A dictionary of words and phrases used by the standard Persian poets.

Author: Ķāzī Khān Badr Muhammad Dihlavī, called Dhārwāl, حدد محمد خان بدر

دهلوی العروف بدهاروال حمد و ثنای باقصی الحد والغایات وماوراء . الوصف والعبارات

This work is noticed by Blochmann, p. 7 of his learned "Contributions to Persian Lexicography," Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. xxxvii. pp. 1-72, a work which will be constantly referred to in the following pages. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 131.

The author had studied the Persian poets, as he states in the preface, under Kāzī Burhān ud-Dīn, known as Dahānah, and under Shaikh-Zādah 'Ashik (the author of a dictionary quoted in the Farhang i Jahängiri) He compiled in the present lexieon the matter contained in the following works :- Farhang Nāmah, by Fakhr Kavvās (mentioned by Firishtah, vol. i. p. 214, as one of the poets of the reign of 'Alā ud-Dīn Khiljī, A.H. 695-716; he is called, in the Farhang i Jahāngīrī, Maulānā Mubārak Shāh Ghaznavī; see Blochmann's list of sources, p. 4, No. 61), Risālat un-Nasīr (ib., No. 19; Haj. Khal. vol. iii. p. 450), Risālat i Asadī Tūsī (No. 2), Dastūr ul-Afāzil (No. 17), Lisān ush-Shu'arā (No. 46), and Favā'id i Burhānī u Firdausī (No. 40). To the above he added other words, names of kings and countries, etc., collected by him in the Divans, as well as poetical phrases used by Khākānī, Anvarī, Fariyābī, Firdausī, Sa'dī, and other classical poets.

In A.H. 812 (or, according to Stewart and Blochmann, A.H. 822) he set out from Jaunpūr to the end of kissing the threshold of the illustrious prince Kadr Khān B. Dilāvar Khān, تاعظم و خان معظم مسند عالى وزارت, whose fame as a munificent patron of learning had spread far and wide, and he made use of this Farhang Nāmah as an introduction to His Highness. Dilāvar Khān, the founder of the Ghūrī dynasty in Mālvah, had taken up his residence in the eity of Dhār, from which the author's surname, Dhārvāl, is evidently derived. His son Alp Khān reigned, under the name of Hūshang, from A.H. 808 to 838. Another son, Ķadr Khān, was in possession of the province of Chanderī (Thornton's Chandhairee), which, on his demise, was added to the dominions of Hūshang. See Tārīkh Muḥammadī, Or. 137, fol. 428, and Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 462.

The Adāt ul-Fuzalā is divided into two parts (Kism), viz. Kism I., containing single words arranged in alphabetical order, according to the first and second letters of each, fol. 5 b. Kism II., containing compounds and poetical phrases, arranged according to the initial and final letters, fol. 77 b.

The copyist states at the end that his MS. had been written by a blundering scribe, and that he had corrected it to the best of his ability.

Foll. 1—3 contain an extract on Persian particles, and foll. 97—101 a glossary of Arabic phrases in the Gulistān.

Add. 7678.

Foll. 285; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

شرفنامه احمد منيرى

A Persian dictionary.

Author: Ibrāhīm Ķivām Fārūķī, ابراهیم قوام فاروقی بنام خداوند هستی به است سراغاز هر نامهٔ را که هست

A prologue in verse contains a panegyric on a celebrated Shaikh, Sharaf ud-Din Ahmad Munyarī, in whose honour the above title was given to the work. It concludes with a prayer that the author may be accounted one of the dwellers in that saint's holy shrine, and may never be removed from it.

Sharaf ud-Din Ahmad B. Yahya Munyari, so called from his native place, Munyar, a village in Bihār, went to Dehli in quest of Nizām ud-Dīn Auliyā, but, finding him dead (Nizām died A.H. 725), became a Murid of Shaikh Najib ud Din Firdausi, who gave him the investiture of the Chishti order. He spent the latter part of his life in the city of Bihār (Thornton's Behar), where he died A.H. 782, and where his tomb became the resort of the devout. His letters (Stewart's Catalogue, p. 42) are much admired, as well as his discourses, collected under the title of Ma'dan ul-Ma'ānī (see Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 458). Notices on his life will be found in Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 113, Akhbār ul-Akhyar, fol. 97, A'ın i Akbarı, vol. ii. p. 219, and Blochmann's translation, p. 48, note.

It may be inferred from the above that the author lived in the eity of Bihār. The time of composition is indicated by a quatrain, with which, according to Blochmann's full account, l. e., pp. 7—9, the work concludes, and in which Abul-Muzaffar Bārbak Shāh is mentioned as the reigning sovereign. Bārbak Shāh reigned in Bengal, according to Țabakāt i Akbarshāhī and Tārīkh i Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 580, A.H. 862—879. See also Marsden, Numismata, p. 572.

The Sharaf-Nāmah is divided into several Bābs, each of which contain words beginning with the same letter. They are subdivided into Fasls according to the final letters. The pronunciation of words is stated at length, and their meaning illustrated by copious quotations of the poets, from Firdausī to Hāfiz. The author often adduces his own verses, and prefixes to each Bāb a Kaşīdah of his composition. Turkī words are given at the end of each Fasl.

The work, which is frequently called, from the name of its author, Farhang i Ibrāhīmī, is quoted in Tuḥfat us-Sa'ādat (see below, p. 493 b) and later dictionaries. Copies are mentioned in the Munich Catalogue, p. 103, and the Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 494. See also Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 325.

Or. 265.

Foll. 161; 9 in. by 5½; 19 lines, 3½ in. long; writted in small and neat Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century.

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2-60. Adāt ul-Fuzalā (see p. 491 a).

This copy wants the first page, the dedication to Kadr Khan, and Kism II.

II. Foll. 62-161.

مجمل العجم

A Persian dictionary.

Author : 'Aşim Shu'aib 'Abdusî, عاصم شعيب

عبدوسي

درر غرر سپاس و جواهر زواهر بیقیاس .Beg.

Requested by some friends to collect into one book all the words, Pärsi, Pehlevi, Rümi, Nabați, or Turki, necessary to a complete understanding of the poets, the author composed the above work, and presented it, A.H. 899, to a Vazir called 'Ali Akbar, and entitled Dä'ūd Khān, son of the Vazir 'Imād ul-Mulk, bid Khān, son of the Vazir 'Imād ul-Mulk, culo cilectice ... idd, neceji aidd nec eiler alla aalh cuea acle ... ryčice sekte signal sekted i sekted sekted in the sekted sekted sekted sekted is sekted in the sekted in the sekted se

The work is stated in the preface to be divided into two parts (Kism). The first, which comprises single words and compounds, arranged according to the initial and final letters, is alone extant in the present copy. It is slightly imperfect at the end, breaking off. in the compounds the first term of which is نفي. The words are illustrated by copious poetical passages headed نظير, but without the authors' names. The meaning is frequently explained by Indian equivalents.

This is no doubt the work designated as Farhang i 'Aşimī in the Farhang i Jahāngīrī (Blochmann, No. 34).

Add. 7683.

Foll. 198; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

تحفة السعادت

A Persian dictionary. Author: Mahmūd B. Shaikh Ziyā حمود

The author begins with a prologue in verse, containing eulogies on the reigning sovereign, Sultān Sikandar (Sikandar Lodī, A.H. 894—923), and on his patron and benefactor, Khwājagī Shaikh Sa'īd, also called Sa'īd ud-Dīn. He then states that he had hitherto cultivated poetry, and composed pieces of every kind, mostly in praise of the last personage, but that he had been prevailed upon by some friends to compile the present lexicon, which he completed on the tenth of Ṣafar, A.H. 916, and presented to the patron aforesaid.

He enumerates in the preface the following sources:—Zamīr (Blochmann, No. 33), Dastūr (probably Dastūr ul-Afāzil, No. 17), Farhang i Fakhr i Ķavvās (see p. 492 a), Zufān Gūyā (No. 21), Dastūr ul-Fuzalā (No. 18),

بن

Adāt ul-Fuzalā (p. 491 a), Sharh i Makhzan, Farhang i Kāzī Zahīr (No. 41), Farhang i Ibrāhīmī (i.e. Sharaf Nāmah i Munyarī, p. 492 a), Husainī (No. 16), and 'Ajā'ib (No. 36). For Arabic words he made use of the Surāh, Dastūr, Khulāsah, Nasīb ul-Vildān, and Tājain.

The dictionary is divided, according to the initial letters, into two and twenty Babs, and each Bab is divided into two sections (Fasl), the first of which contains the single words, arranged according to the final letters, and the second, the compound words and phrases, in the same order. There are no poetical quotations.

Surūrī, who states that he made use of the Tulifat us-Sa'ādat for the second edition of his dictionary, calls the author Maulānā Mahmūd B. Shaikh Ziyā ud-Din Muhammad. It is, no doubt, the work mentioned by Firishtah, vol. i. p. 346, under the title of Farhang i Sikandarī, as written in the reign of Sultan Sikandar. See also Blochmann's list of sources, No. 10.

On the last page of the present copy is a note stating that it was purchased A.H. 1003 by one Paramanand in Sirhind.

Or. 261.

Foll. 395; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1118 (A.D. 1706).

[Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

مودد الفضلاء

A Persian dictionary.

Author: Muhammad B. Lād, محمد ابن لاد محامد متواتره و مدایج متکاثره مر دادار Beg.

The author states that he had combined in his lexicon the entire matter of the Sharaf Nāmah (see p. 492a), and of the Kunyat ut-Ţālibīn (Blochmann, No. 42), a work of that most learned master of the science, entitled تاليف قدوة الفاضلين امام السالكين استاذ , Kāzīshah علام اين باب قاضيشه خطاب

Besides the above works he enumerates the following sources: for Arabic words the Surāh and Tāj, and for those of Fārs, Samarkand, Māvarā un-Nahr, Turkistān, etc., Lisān ush-Shu'arā (No. 46), Adāt ul-Fuzalā (p. 491 a), Dastūr ul-Afāzil (No. 17), Zufān Gūyā (No. 21), Mavā'id ul-Favā'id (No. 64), Sharh . i Makhzan ul-Asrār, Ţibb i Haķā'iķ ul-Ashyā, Farhang i 'Ilmī 'Alī Begī (Nos. 35 and 37) and Fakhr Kavvās (p. 491 b). A supplement cit treats of the numerals, arithmetical notation, and Persian grammar.

The words are grouped in books (Kitab) according to the initial letters, and, in each kitāb, in Bābs, according to the final letters. Each Bāb is subdivided into three sections (Fasl), containing respectively the Arabic, Persian, and Turkish words.

The Mu'ayyid ul-Fuzalā is described by Blochmann, l. c., p. 9, who calls the author Muhammad B. Shaikh Lād, of Dehli, and assigns to the work the date of A.H. 925, without, however, stating his authority. It is mentioned as a work of great merit in the preface of Madār ul-Afāzil (p. 496a). See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 132.

The present copy wants the supplement.

Add. 23,575.

Foll. 152; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 1020 (A.D. 1611). [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

تحفة الاحباب

A Persian glossary.

Author : Ḥāfiz Aubahī, حافظ اوبہی Beg. فضلای فصیح زبان و فصحای بلیغ بـیان The author, so called from Aubah, a village near Herat (Mu'jam, vol. i. p. 137), was led to compile this work by noticing the neglect into which the ancient poets had fallen in his day, because many of the words used by them had become obsolete. It is dedicated to a Vazīr of Khorasan رزير ملك خراسار., whose proper name does not appear, and the date of its completion, A.H. 936, is stated in a versified chronogram at the end :

شد رقم تاريخ اتمامش به اتمام الكتاب

From a connection alluded to, in the verse immediately preceding the above, between the title of the work and the name of the Vazir before mentioned, it becomes probable that the latter was Habib Ullah, apparently the same to whom the Habib us-Siyar is dedicated.

The words are arranged according to the initial and final letters, and are sometimes illustrated by poetical quotations.

The Tuḥfat ul-Aḥbāb is quoted in the Farhang i Jahāngīrī and in the Majma' ul Furs. See Blochmann, No. 9, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. ii. p. 439.

Add. 8990.

Foll. 97; 7 in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, 2 in. long; written in a small and neat Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century.

The same work.

The latter portion of this copy, foll. 62-97, was written in Ispahan, Rajab, A.H. 1226 (A.D. 1811).

Add. 5611.

Foll. 330; 14 in. by $10\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1106 (A.D. 1695).

كشف اللغات والاصطلاحات

A dictionary of Persian and Arabic words, especially intended to explain the figurative language of the Sufis.

Author: 'Abd ur-Rahim B. Ahmad Sūr, عبد الرحيم بن احمد سور الحمد لله ... اما بعد حمد و صلوة ميكويد .Beg. اضعف العباد وادم الفقرا

The author desired, as he states in the preface, to free himself of the importunate questions which his friends, brothers, and sons, were ever putting to him, as to the meaning of Sufi phrases. While reading with his son, Shaikh Shihāb, the Dīvān of Kāsim i Anvār, he found that many words were wanting, both in the Farhang of Shaikh Ibrahim Kivām (p. 492 a), and in that of Shaikh Muhammad B. Shaikh Lād (p. 494 a), and was obliged to look for them in the Surah, the Tājain, and the Kanz ul-Lughāt, all of which, however, he found also deficient. This induced him to compile the present dictionary, in which he omitted for brevity's sake the words in common use. The contents are arranged in Babs and Fasls, according to the initial and final letters. The words of Persian origin are marked with a

It has been noticed by Blochmann, l. c., pp. 9, 10, that the author had been personally acquainted with the preceding lexicographer, Muhammad B. Lād, and must consequently have lived in the tenth century of the Hijrah. His work is quoted in the Farhang i Jahangiri, written A.H. 1017, under the name of Farhang i Shaikh 'Abd ur-Rahim Bihari. The statement of Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 214, that the Kashf ul-Lughāt was written about A.H. 1060, can therefore be dismissed. Copies are noticed by Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 347, in the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 25, Munich Catalogue, p. 107, and the Ouseley Collection, No. 390. An edition, now very rare, was printed in Calcutta, about 1840.

Add. 5612.

Foll. 577; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

[NATH. BRASSEY HALHED.] The same work.

Add. 9993.

Foll. 567; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

The same work, with marginal additions. The MS. bears a Persian seal with the name of Henry George Keene, dated 1802.

Add. 15,100 and 15,101.

Two uniform volumes; foll. 338 and 343; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, 5 in. long; written in two columns in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

The same work.

Add. 6643.

Foll. 522; 12 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in large Indian Nestalik; dated Bā'idpūr, Hūglī, Jumāda II., A.H. 1185 (A.D. 1771). [J. F. HULL.]

مدار الافاضل

A Persian dietionary.

Author: Ilahdād Faizī B. Asad ul-'Ulamā Alī Shīr Sirhindī, الله داد [sic] فيضى بن اسد العلماى على شير سرهندى مدار افاضل روزکار و مختار اخبار نکته کذار . Beg.

The author, who has been already mentioned, p. 253 a, states in the preface, that he had compiled the Arabic words from the Ṣurāḥ, Muhazzib ul-Asmā, Tājain and its commentaries, Niṣāb uṣ-Ṣibyān (Blochmann, No. 65), and Ķunyat ul-Fityān (No. 43), the Persian words from the Zufān Gūyā (No. 21), Adāt ul-Fuẓalā (p. 491 a), Tabakhturī, Hall i Lughāt ush-Shu'arā (Blochmann, p. 7), Sharaf Nāmah i Ibrāhīmī (p. 492 a), and two modern works, highly praised by the author, viz., Tuḥfat uṣ-Ṣaʿādat i Sikandarī (p. 493 b), and Mu'ayyid ul-Fuẓalā (p. 494 a).

The words are arranged according to the initial and final letters, and are marked with a د, a ف, or a ت, according as they are of Arabie, Persian, or Turkish origin. The author frequently quotes verses, sometimes his own. A Khātimah, foll. 514—522, treats of the meanings of single letters in Persian.

The Madār ul-Afāzil is extensively noticed by Bloehmann, l.c., pp. 10, 11. The ehronogram نيفن or A.H. 1001, which, as stated there, gives the date of composition, is not found in the present copy, which, however, according to the criterion indicated by Bloehmann, should be accounted a good MS. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 131, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 109.

Add. 16,750.

Foll. 497; $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhī; dated Kākūrī, province of Lakhnan, A.H. 143 (for 1043 = A.D. 1633-4). [WM. YULE.]

فرهنك جهاذكيرى

A Persian lexicon, containing all the words of Persian origin, with copious poetical quotations.

Author: Jamāl ud-Dīn Ḥusain Injū B. ابن فخر الدین حسن جمال ,Fakhr ud-Dīn Ḥasan الدین حسین انجو انکه بر لوے زبانها حرف اول نام اوست .Beg.

Mīr Jamāl ud-Dīn Injū belonged to a Sayyid family of Shīrāz. Having left his native eity for India, he repaired, after some stay in the Deecan, to the eourt of Akbar, whose service he entered in the thirtieth year of the reign (A.H. 993—4), and by whom he was sent to the Deccan, A.H. 1013, to negociate the marriage of Prinee Dāniyāl with the daughter of 'Adil Shāh. He rose to high military commands under Jahāngīr, who conferred upon him the government of Bihār, and later on, A.H. 1027, the title of 'Azud ud-Daulah. He was pensioned off A.H. 1030, and died some years later in Agrah. His life, extracted from the Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, is given with a translation by Blochmann, l. c., pp. 65—70, and Ain i Akbari, translation, p. 450.

The author says in his preface that, having from early youth upwards devoted himself to the study of the poets, he had found many words and phrases either wanting, or imperfectly rendered, in existing dictionaries. He therefore began to write down for himself the rare words which he met with, and had been for nearly thirty years engaged on that labour when, having been called in Zulka'dah, A.H. 1005, to the presence of Akbar, who then held his court in Srinagar, Kashmir, and had been told of the author's learning, he had received His Majesty's commands for the compilation of the present work. The task, however, was not completed until Akbar had passed away, and been succeeded by Jahangir, after whom the work was named. The date of its completion, A.H. 1017, is fixed by the chronogram زهى فرهنك نور الدين جهانكير. The author revised it, however, to the end of his life. It is stated in the Tūzuk i Jahāngīrī, p. 359, that he presented a copy to Jahangir in the 18th year of the reign (A.H. 1032).

The preface contains an alphabetical list of forty-four dictionaries or glossaries consulted for the present work. That list has been reproduced, with some additions, by Blochmann, l.c., pp. 4-7.

An introduction (Mukaddimah), divided into twelve sections (Ā'in), foll. 4—18, treats of the extent of ancient Persia, of the Persian language and its dialects, the letters used in Persian, the aflixes, suffixes, inflections, and the mode of expressing numbers with the fingers. The dictionary proper, foll. 19—423, is divided into twentyfour Bābs, corresponding to the letters used in Persian, with this peculiarity, that the leading letters in the arrangement are in vol. 11. the first instance the second of each word, and then the first. The appendix (Khātimah), contains the following five special glossaries, called Dar, and similarly arranged: 1. Metaphors and poetical phrases, fol. 423 b. 2. Compound words, fol. 461 a. 3. Words containing any of the letters peculiar to Arabie, fol. 481 a. 4. Zand and Pāzand words, fol. 482 a. 5. Foreign words, mostly proper names, fol. 489 a.

سعد الله ولد شيخ فاضل : Copyist

The Farhang i Jahāngīrī has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1293. See Blochmann, l.e., pp. 12—15, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 129, Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 24, and Munich Catalogue, p. 105.

Add. 26,128.

Foll. 606; 9³/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 19 lines, 3³/₄ in. long; written in neat Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1033 (A.D. 1624). [WM. ERSKINE.] The same work, without the Khātimah.

Add. 6645.

Foll. 598; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and ruled margins; dated Shāhjahānābād, Ramazān, A.H. 51 (i. e. 1051, A.D. 1641); partly stained and discoloured by damp. [J. F. HULL.]

The same work.

The copyist, Muhammad Fāzil B. Munshī Mūsā, says at the end that the MS. from which this copy was taken had been corrected, for the main part, by the author's own hand.

Add. 5647.

Foll. 618; 10¹/₂ in. by 7; 21 lines, 3³/₄ in. long; written in Naskhi, with gold-ruled margins; dated Kashmīr, Rajab, A.H. 1065 (A.D. 1655). [NATH. BRASSEY HALHED.] The same work.

احمد بن شاة محمد الشيرازى لخسيني : Copyist K

Add. 7682.

Foll. 366; 11 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins; dated Muharram, A.H. 1095 (A.D. 1683). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work, without the Khātimah.

This copy was written for the Vazīr of Kandahār by Hasan B. Muḥammad.

Add. 16,749.

Foll. 292; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 27 lines, $5\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with ruled margins; dated Agrah, Rabī⁶ I., A.H. 1090 (A.D. 1679). [WM. YULE.]

The same work, without the Khātimah.

Add. 25,858.

Foll. 508; $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [ADAM CLARKE.]

The same work.

The same work.

Add. 23,573.

Foll. 464; 12 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 17th century.

[ROBERT TAYLOR.] The same work, wanting the fifth section of the Appendix.

The latter portion of the volume, foll. 292 --464, is written by a later hand, and dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1195 (A.D. 1781).

Add. 25,859.

Foll. 593; $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two columns; dated Calcutta, October, 1815.

[WM. CURETON.]

This copy was written by Shaikh Aşālat 'Alī Bihārī for Captain Thomas Roebuck.

Add. 7681.

Foll. 313; 10 in. by 7; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1057 (A.D. 1647). [Cl. J. RICH.]

مجمع الفرس

٩.

A Persian dictionary.

Author: Muḥammad Kāsim B. Ḥājī Muḥammad Kāshānī, poetically styled Surūrī, محمد قاسم بن حاجی محمد کاشانی المتخلص بسروری Beg. ابتدای کلام هر دانشمند مخنور و انتهای منحن beg. هر خردمند هنرپرور

The author is not to be confounded with another Surūrī (Mustafā B. Sha'bān), a commentator of the Gulistan, who lived in Turkey, and died A.H. 969 (Arabic Catalogue, p. 479). He is mentioned by his townsman and contemporary, Taki ud-Din Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 26, among the poets of Kāshān. "He was," says Takī, "the son of a shoemaker, had so prodigious a memory as to know upwards of thirty thousand verses by heart, and wrote, besides the present work, a glossary to Nizāmī and other poets. Surūrī's habitual residence was Isfahan, where he was seen by Pietro della Valle, A.H. 1032 (see Ouseley's Collection, No. 389). He left it for India, where he stayed some time, in the reign of Shahjahan, and died on his way from thenee to Mecca. See Mirāt ul-'Alam, fol. 484, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 217. It will be seen further on (p. 500b) that he had reached Lahore as early as A.H. 1036.

Surūrī states in the preface that, after a diligent study of the classical poets, and an eager search after Persian glossaries, he had at last succeeded, A.H. 1008, in collecting the following sixteen works : Sharaf Nāmah i Aḥmad Munyarī (p. 492 a), Mi'yār i Jamālī, by Shams Fakhrī (Blochmann, No. 58, Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 640), Tuḥfat ul-Aḥbāb (p. 494 b), Risālah i Ḥusain Vafā'ī (No. 14),

498

Risālah i Abu Manşūr 'Alī B. Ahmad Asadī Tūsī (No. 2), Risālah i Mīrzā Ibrāhīm B. Mīrzā Shāh Husain Isfahānī (No. 56), Risālah i Muhammad Hindūshāh (No. 53), Mu'avyid ul-Fuzalā (p. 494 a), Sharh Sāmī fil-Asāmī i Maidānī (No. 27), Risālah i Abu Hafs Sughdi (No. 1), Adāt ul-Fuzalā (p. 491 a), Jāmi' ul-Lughāt, in verse, by Niyāzī Hijāzī (No. 11), and four other anonymous treatises. Compiling all these, he condensed their substance in the presentwork, eliminating Arabic and common Persian words, and adding examples from the poets. The preface concludes with a dedication to Shah 'Abbas (A.H. 996-1038).

The words are arranged according to their initial and final letters. A short appendix, foll. 310-313, contains metaphorical phrases, in alphabetical order.

A full account of the Majma' ul-Furs, or Farhang i Surūri, more especially of its second edition, which will be noticed further on, is given by Blochmann, l.c., pp. 12 and 16-18. See also Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 325, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 130, Uri, p. 290, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 101, the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 96, the Munich Catalogue, p. 104, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iv. p. 498, vol. v. p. 238.

Add. 26,129.

. Foll. 380; 93 in. by 51; 21 lines, 33 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1078 (A.D. 1667). [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work.

Add. 23,574.

Foll. 236; 11 in. by 7; 18 lines, 42 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1081 (A.D. 1670). [ROBERT TAYLOR.] The same work.

Harleian 111.

Foll. 368; 10 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 25 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shavval, A.H. 103 (for 1030, A.D. 1621).

An enlarged edition of the same work.

In a preface prefixed to that of the first edition, and beginning: بر ضهير اكسير تاثير, the author states that , مطالعه کنندکان که چشمه he had perused in A.H. 1028 (not A.H. 1038, as stated by Blochmann), the Farhang of the noble and illustrious Navvāb Shāh Jamāl ud-Din Husain Injū (p. 496 b), brought from India in that year, and had added some of its words and observations to his own dictionary. He had read also in the same year the Shāmil ul-Lughah, a Persian dictionary explained in Turkish, by Karā-Hisārī (p. 513a), and the Tuhfat us-Sa'ādat (p. 493b). He adds that his work having for some time past been submitted to a thorough revision, the present edition is far more trustworthy, as well as more complete, than the first.

The following is written on the fly-leaf: "Shamel Lagatt; or Persian Dictionary, written 43 yeeres since, to this yeere 1636." The writer had evidently taken the defective date of this copy, 103, to stand for 1003 =A.D. 1593, a date which, being anterior to the time of composition, is obviously wrong. If 103 be meant for 1030, and it does not appear to admit of any other reading, the present MS. must have been written two years after the completion of the second edition.

Or. 263.

Foll. 476; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 25 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about A.H. 1036 (A.D. 1626).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Another copy of the enlarged edition.

On the first page is a Persian note stating that the preface of the second edition, the к 2 marginal notes, and some poetical pieces by Surūrī, written on the last page, are all in the author's handwriting. At the bottom of the last page is actually found the following somewhat mutilated subscription, which, if genuine, would show that Surūrī had written the above verses in Lahore, A.H. 1036: had written the above verses in Lahore, A.H. 1036: had written the above verses in Lahore, A.H. 1036: had witten the above verses in Lahore, A.H. 1036: had witten the above verses in Lahore, A.H. 1036: had writte

Add. 16,751.

Foll. 866; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

برهان قاطع

A dictionary of the Persian language, including words borrowed from the Arabic and other languages.

Author: Muḥammad Ḥusain, poetically styled Burhān, B. Khalaf ut-Tabrīzī, ابن خلف

التبريزي محمد حسين المتخلص ببرهان

اي راهنما بهر زبان در افواه .Beg. یزدان و کرسطوس و تانکری و اله

The author states that he had compiled in the present dictionary the entire substance of the Farhang i Jahāngīrī, Majma' ul-Furs of Surūrī, Surmah i Sulaimānī, and Ṣiḥāḥ ul-Adviyah by Ḥusain ul-Anṣārī (No. 24 and 32), and that he had, for brevity's sake, omitted poetical quotations and superfluous matter. He dedieates his work to Sultan 'Abd Ullah Ķuṭubshāh B.Ķuṭubshāh (who reigned in Golconda from A.H. 1035 to 1083), and fixes the date of its completion, A.H. 1062, by the following chronogram, كتاب نافع برهان. تاطع

Contents: Nine Fā'idahs, or preliminary observations, on the Persian language, its letters, particles, and orthography, fol. 2 b. Twenty-eight Guftārs, comprising the dictionary proper, in which the words are arranged according to the first, second, and third letters, as in European dictionaries, fol. 12 b. Guftār 29, or supplement, containing seventy-one words, mostly foreign words and proper names, fol. 862 b.

The Burhān i Kāți' has been edited by Captain Roebuck, Calcutta, 1818, and reprinted in 1822 and 1834. A Turkish translation has been printed in Constantinople, A.H. 1214, and in Bulak, A.H. 1251. It has been entirely incorporated by Prof. J. A. Vullers into his Lexicon Persico-Latinum. See Blochmann, l. c., pp. 18—20, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 435, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 107.

Add. 26,130.

Foll. 735; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1135 (A.D. 1723). [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work.

Add. 7000.

Foll. 843; 9 in. by 7; about 14 lines, $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written on paper water-marked 1815, and on one side of the leaves only, by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley, and by him inscribed: "Historical vocabulary of proper names of places, countries, and eminent persons, etc. etc., from the Borhan Katea."

Add. 5555.

Foll. 303; $11\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 8; 21 lines, $5\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 1129 (A.D. 1717).

[CHARLES HAMILTON.]

A Persian dictionary. Author : 'Abd ur-Rashīd B. 'Abd ul-Ghafūr ul-Husaini ul-Madani ut-Tatavi, عبد الرشيد بن

عبد الغفور الحسينى المدنى الشتوى ستايشي كه ارايش سرنامه سخن و پيرايش .Beg

Mullā 'Abd ur-Raschīd, who was born in Tattah of a family of Medinah Sayyids, is known as the author of an Arabic dictionary, entitled Muntakhab ul-Lughāt (p. 510 a), which he dedicated to Shāhjahān A.H. 1046. He is mentioned in the Hamīshah Bahār, Oude Catalogue, p. 122, among the poets of that period. A chronogram which he composed on the second Julūs of Aurangzīb shows that he was still alive in A.H. 1069. Sce 'Alī Shīr, Add. 21,589, fol. 488, who quotes several of his poetical pieces, and says that his two works, known as Rashīdī 'Arabī and Rashīdī Pārsī, bear ample testimony to his profound erudition.

The author observes in the preface that the Farhang i Jahängiri and the Farhang i Surūri, although the best existing Persian lexicons, had the following four blemishes: 1. Prolixity and redundance of poetical quotations. 2. Want of accuracy in defining the meanings and pronunciation of words. 3. Insertion of Arabic and Turkish words as Persian. 4. Wrong entries of mis-spelt words; the last especially observable in Surūri. The present work, he adds, had for its object to combine the matter of those two dictionaries, to eliminate superfluous quotations, and non-Persian words, and to supply a more accurate definition of the meaning and spelling of words. The date of its completion, A.H. 1064, is conveyed by باد فرهنك رشيدى مقبول ,the chronogram

An introduction (Mukaddimah), treating of Persian grammar, occupies foll. 4a-13b. The dictionary proper, arranged on the same plan as the Burhān i Ķāţi', fills the rest of the volume. A Khātimah, announced in the preface, is wanting in the present and other known copies.

Blochmann speaks very highly of the Far-hang i Rashīdī, which he terms the first critical dictionary, and gives the most important portion of the preface in the original with a translation, l.c., pp. 20—24. The same scholar promoted and superintended the edition of the work in the Bibliotheea Indica, Calcutta, 1875, to which is appended a notice on the author. The Mukaddimah of the Farhang i Rashīdī has been edited by Dr. Splieth under the title of "Grammaticæ Persicæ præcepta ac regulæ," Halle, 1846. It is also the foundation of the Persian grammar of 'Abd ul-Vāsi' Hānsavī. It is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 130.

Add. 7001.

Foll. 193; 9 in. by 7½; about 20 lines; written on one side only of paper watermarked 1814, by J. Haddon Hindley.

A Persian glossary, containing rare words, proper names, and metaphorical phrases, without preface, title, or author's name.

Beg. ايليا بكسر يكم و سوم قبيله پبيثينان It is found to consist of extracts from the Farhang i Rashīdī.

Or. 264.

Foll. 152; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, about the close of the 18th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A poetical glossary.

Author : Sirāj ud-Dīn 'Alī, poetically surnamed Ārzū, نخلص آ, زو تخلص سراب الدن. على آ

Sirāj ud-Dīn 'Alī Khān, a well-known Persian and Hindustani poet, born in Akbarābād, A.H. 1101, traced his origin to Shaikh Kamāl ud-Dīn, a nephew of the famous saint Naşîr ud-Din Chirāgh i Dihli. He proceeded, A.H. 1132, to Dehli, where he found a powerful patron in Mu'taman ud-Daulah Ishāk Khān, and, after him, in his son Najm ud-Daulah. He made himself conspicuous by his bold criticisms on Shaikh Hazin, published in a pamphlet entitled "Tanbih ul-Ghāfilīn, and wrote, A.H. 1164, a Tazkirah called Majma' un-Nafā'is. In A.H. 1168 he settled in Lucknow, where he received a pension from Shujā' ud-Daulah, and died shortly after, on the 23rd of Rabi II., A.H. 1169. His life is found in the Khizānah 'Amirah, Or. 232. See also Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 132, Garcin de Tassy, Littérature Hindouï, vol. i. p. 69, and Blochmann, l.c., pp. 25-28.

The author states that this work, which forms, as it were, a second part (Daftar) to his Sirāj ul-Lughah, or glossary of the ancient poets, contains those words and phrases used by modern poets, which are not found in the Farhang i Jahāngīrī, Surūrī, Burhān i Ķāți', or other dictionaries. They are of two kinds, viz.: 1. Difficult words, not generally understood in India; 2. Words or phrases, the meaning of which is known, but the correctness of which is questioned. Both are given in one series, alphabetically arranged according to the usual plan.

The Sirāj ul-Lughah was written A.H. 1147. The date is fixed by a chronogram, quoted by Blochmann, l.c., p. 26.

The Chirāgh i Hidāyat is printed in the margins of the lithographed edition of Ghiyāş ul-Lughāt, published by Naval Kishor Kānpūr, 1874.

Or. 259.

Foll. 704; 12 in. ly 8; 17 lines, 4³/₄ in long; written in Nestalik; dated January, A.D. 1836. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

بہار عجم

A dictionary of the words and idioms used by the Persian poets, ancient and modern, with copious examples.

Rāi Tekchand, poetically styled Bahār, was 👡 a Khatrī of Dehli. See Gulzār Ibrāhīm, fol. 29, Garcin de Tassy, Littérature Hindouï, vol. i. p. 100, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 211. Little is known of his life beyond what he tells us in his preface, two draughts of which, partly identical, are found in the present copy, foll. 2-4, 6-7. From his childhood to his fifty-third year, which he had reached at the time of writing, he had devoted himself to the study of Persian poets and their idioms, and was indebted for much of his knowledge to two accomplished scholars, viz. Maulānā Shaikh Abulkhair Khair Ullah, whom he refers to in his work as خير المدتقين, and Sirāj ud-Dīn 'Alī Khān Arzū (see p. 501 b), whom he quotes under the title of سراج المحققين. While engaged on the compilation of his dictionary, in which he had spent fifteen (in the second draught "twenty") years, he had written a treatise on letters جواهر الحروف (lithographed in Kānpūr, A.H. 1267), and another on verbs نوادر المصادر (lithographed in Dehli, A.H. 1272).

The date of completion of the present work is then expressed by the chronogram يادكار يادكار خد مال i.e. 1152 + 10 = A.H.1162. The author explains further on his abridged references to his authorities, namely the two scholars above mentioned, Shaikh 'Alī Ḥazīn, the Sirāj ul-Lughah (p. 502*b*), Mulḥakāt i Burhān i Ķāți', and the commentary of Abul-Ḥasan Farāhānī upon the Ķaṣīdahs of Anvarī. He concludes with an extensive list of the poets and glossaries from which the matter of his lexicon is derived.

Of modern works he had used, as stated in the second draught of the preface, only the Tanbīh ul-Ghāfilīn, (see p. 502*a*), and a Mukhtaşar by Mīr Muḥammad Afẓal Sābit (died A.H. 1150 or 1152; Oude Catalogue, p. 150). But after completing his first edition, he had had access to the Muṣṭalaḥāt ush-Shu'arā of Vārastah, a treatise of Anand Rām Mukhliş (died A.H. 1164; Oude Catalogue, p. 159), and another without author's name.

This mention of Vārastah's work, which was not written before A.H. 1180 (see the next number), gives a date to the second preface. It must have been penned by the author in that very year, and therefore shortly before his death.

Between the two draughts above mentioned is found a preface written by Indarman, who calls himself a pupil of Tekehand, to an abridged edition made by him in A.H. 1180, upon the rough copy left by the author at his death.

The Bahār i 'Ajam is described by Blochmann as "one of the grandest dictionaries ever written by one man." His notice on the author and his works will be found, l. c., pp. 28—30. The work has been used by Thomas Roebuck for his additions to the Burhān, and by Professor Vullers in his Lexicon; see the preface, p. vii. It has been lithographed in Dehli, 1853, under the title of مصطلحات بهار عجم. See the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. 22, p. 404, and Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1537.

Or. 262.

Foll. 232; 11 in. by $6\frac{3}{2}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1245 (A.D. 1829).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 3-203.

A poetical glossary, dealing especially with words and phrases peculiar to the modern poets of Iran, with examples. Author : Vārastah, وارسته, Beg. بسم الله مجريها ميخوانم و سفينه كاغذين Vārastah was a native of Lahore. His original name was, according to the preface of Roebuck's edition of Burhān Ķāți', p. 12, Siyāl Kotī Mal. His anthology entitled جنگ زنمارنگ is noticed by Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 146.

The author states in a short preamble that, finding in existing dictionaries no sufficient explanation of poetical phrases, he had been engaged during fifteen years in collecting the materials of this work from linguists of the land of Iran, زبان دیاری ایران دیار, and had begun to write it in the year for which the above title is a chronogram, i.e. A.H. 1180. He then gives a list of the authorities to which he occasionally refers by abbreviations, among which is found, besides some known glossaries, a work entitled رایران ایران ایران the author of which is not named. Vārastah's work follows the usual alphabetical arrangement.

The Mustalahāt ush-Shu'arā is mentioned by Tekchand as one of the works of which he became possessed after completing the first edition of the Bahār i 'Ajam. See Blochmann, l.c., p. 30.

II. Foll. 203-206.

A versified treatise by $J\bar{a}m\bar{n}$ (see. p. 17 a), containing such Arabic words, as by a slight change in their punctuation assume different meanings.

Beg. بعد توحيد وصفات خالق شام و سحر This tract has been edited by Francis Gladwin in the Persian Moonshee, and by J. H. Hindley, London, 1811. It has been printed in Calcutta, 1818, and 1826.

III. Foll. 206—209. A treatise on Izāfat, by Muḥammad Ṣāḥib Ķādirī, with the heading : نسخه اضافات از تصنيف حضرت حافظ غلام محمد صاحب قادرى IV. Foll. 211-231.

نصاب الصبيان

A versified Arabic Persian vocabulary. Author : Abu Nașr Farāhī, ابو نصر فراهی

همی کوید ابو نصر فراهی ...Beg

Badr ud-Din Abu Nașr Farāhī wrote, according to Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 559, a poetical version of the Jāmi' uṣ-Ṣaghīr of Shaibānī, in A.H. 617. His vocabulary is a popular school-book, which has been published in Calcutta, 1819, and frequently reprinted in India and in Persia. See Blochmann, l. c., p. 7, Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 346, Fleischer, Leipzig Catalogue, p. 333, Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 112, etc.

Or. 260.

Foll. 724; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1258 (A.D. 1842).

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A Persian dictionary.

Author: Muḥammad Ghiyāş ud-Dīn B. Jalāl ud-Dīn B. Sharaf ud-Dīn, محمد غياث

الدین بن جلال الدین بن شرف الدین صراح لالی بیان و صحاح جواهر تبیان Beg.

The author, who describes himself as an inhabitant of Muṣṭafā-ābād, commonly called Rāmpūr, Parganah of Shāhābād, Lucknow, states that he had been engaged fourteen years, in the midst of his avocations as a teacher, and other literary labours, upon the compilation of this work, which was completed A.H. 1242. Its object, he says, is to explain all the necessary words, whether of Arabic, Persian, or Turkish origin, as well as the metaphorical phrases and scientific terms, which occur in the standard works of Persian literature commonly read in India.

This is, according to Blochmann, l. c., p. 30, eminently "the student's dictionary," as the most useful for the reading of classical authors. It has been printed in 1847 by one Mīr Ḥasan from a MS. corrected by the author. A lithographed edition, dated Kānpūr, A.D. 1874, contains the Chirāgh i Hidāyat in the margins.

Add. 26,316.

Foll. 32; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 19th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

A Persian glossary.

Author: Muḥammad Ṣādīķ Kātib Bahbahānī, محمد صادق كاتب ببيهاني

سیاس بیقیاس وستایش ابدیت اساس Beg.

The work takes its name from Jonathan Duncan, امين الملک ممتاز الدوله جان تهين دنکين (Resident at Benares, 1790 —4), for whom it was written. The author remarks in the preface that the people of Bahbahān, and the husbandmen of Isfahan, Shūshtar, and Dahdasht, had preserved much ancient Persian in their vernacular, and he professes to have drawn the contents partly from the storehouse of his memory, partly from Persian dictionaries.

There is, however, nothing original in the work; it is transcribed, with a change in the arrangement, from the Farhang i Jahāngīrī. The present copy breaks off at the word جنك.

Sloane 2743.

Foll. 18; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; about 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

A Persian vocabulary.

در احکام دانستن انشا و املائی که ضرورست Beg.

It was written, as stated in a short preamble, at the request of a young student called Naurūz Beg Baghdādī. It consists of two parts, the first of which contains common Persian words in alphabetical order, without any interpretation; the second, Arabic words explained in Persian.

Arabic-Persian Dictionaries.

Or. 18.

Foll. 112; 7 in. by 5; 10 lines, 23 in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the [J. L. RENOUARD.] 14th century.

مصادر

A dictionary of Arabic verbs, explained in Persian.

Author: Al-Kāzī Abu 'Abd Illāh ul-Husain B. Alimad uz-Zūzanī, القاضي ابو عبد الله الحسين بن احمد الزوزني

The author died A.H. 486 (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 755).

Beg.

الحمد لله على سوابغ آلائد المسابقة

The verbs are arranged in several classes, according to the vowel of the media in the past and future tenses. Each class is again subdivided into regular , سالم, concave , defective زتص, and reduplicate , فضاعف verbs, the arrangement in each section being alphabetical, according to the last radical. The verbs are given under the form of the Maşdar, or verbal noun.

See Fleischer, Leipzig Catalogue, p. 331, where the contents are specified, Dorn, St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 203, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 105, the Upsala Catalogue, p. 9, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 111.

Add. 26,133.

Foll. 84; 10 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. VOL. II.

long; written in Naskhi and Nestalik, apparently in India, early in the 19th century. WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work, without the preface. In spite of some discrepancies, the text agrees in the main with the preceding copy. In the subscription the work is termed -المصادر

Or. 1174.

Foll. 190; 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 7; 5 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Naskhi, with all the vowels, dated Rajab, A.H. 864 (A.D. 1460). [ALEXANDRE JABA.]

مقدمة الادب

Introduction to the study of Arabic.

Author: Mahmūd B. 'Umar uz-Zamakh-محمود بن عمر الزمخشري ,sharī

الحمد لله الذي فضل على جميع الالسنة لسان. Beg. العرب

Zamakhshari, the well-known author of the Kashshāf, was born in Zakhmashar, a village of Khwārazm, A.H. 467, and died A.H. 538. See his life and works in Ibn Khallikan, de Slane's translation, vol. iii. p. 321.

The author states in the preface that he had received the commands of the noble Amir, the Isfahsālār Bahā ud-Din 'Alā ud-Daulah Abul-Muzaffar Atsuz B. Khwārazmshah (who afterwards reigned from A.H. 522 to 551; see pp. 475 a, 467 a) to write for the Amir's library a copy of his work, Mukaddimat ul-Adab, which had already been favourably received, and had circulated far and wide.

The work is divided into five parts (Kism) as follows :-- 1. Nouns. 2. Verbs. 3. Particles. 4. Inflexion of the nouns. 5. Inflexion of the verbs. The Preface and the first two of the above parts have been edited with an Arabic index by J. G. Wetzstein, Leipzig, 1850. See also Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 76, Uri, p. 233, Pusey, p. 186, Fleischer, Leipzig Catalogue, p. 332, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 96, and the Upsala Catalogue, p. 11.

L

The present copy contains only the preface and part 1, which gives the nouns (including adjectives, numerals and pronouns) classed according to subjects. The contents correspond to pp. 1—85 of the lithographed edition. The Arabic is accompanied throughout by a Persian and a Turkish version, written in two separate lines under the text, by the same hand, but in a smaller character, and marked with all the vowels. In some places Greek equivalents have been added.

احمد بن یوسف بن عیدل بن ابرهیم بن : Copyist یعقوب الذگردی

Foll. 184—190, written by the same hand, do not belong to Zamakhshari's work. They contain tables of the Arabic pronouns combined with prepositions, Persian pronouns and adverbs, and some Turkish notes on Persian grammar and on the calendar.

Or. 1175.

Foll. 206; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in large Naskhi with vowels, probably in the 16th century.

[ALEXANDRE JABA.]

كتاب التعليل

An Arabic vocabulary explained in Persian. Author: Ismā'il B. 'Alī B. Ishāk, السماعيل بن أسحاق بن على بن أسحاق Beg. للمد لله الذي زين العالم بالعلماء و اظهر نور العلم Iber author

The author, who is not otherwise known, defines his work, in a short Arabic preamble, as a compendium which will be to students an indispensable introduction to a knowledge of Arabic, and divides it into three parts الـقسم الاول في المصادر الـقسم :kism) as follows) الثاني في الاسماء القسم الثالث في الحروف

Part 1., containing the verbal nouns, fol. 5 a, is subdivided, according to the various forms of the Maşdar, into twentythree chapters (Bāb), in each of which the verbs are alphabetically arranged under the first radical. Part II., fol. 97 a, contains the nouns arranged under the following heads: 1. parts of the body, 2. erafts and tools, 3. food and drink, 4. animals, 5. heaven and earth, and, in each class, in alphabetical order. Part III., fol. 206 a, contains a few particles.

Each word is followed by its Persian equivalent, written with all the vowels, and Turkish glosses are added in a smaller character between the lines. From the archaïc spelling of the Persian, in such words as آنچه داذن , شذن for انجه الخير والد., this copy appears to have been transcribed from an early MS.

In a Turkish note on the fly-leaf the writer ascribes the work to al-Bīrūnī, evidently confounding it with the تعليل باحالة الوهم mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 324.

Add. 26,136.

Foll. 45; 12 in. by 7; 9 lines, 3 in. long; written in fair Nestalik; apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

نصاب الصبيان

A versified Arabic Persian vocabulary (see p. 504 a).

Add. 26,137.

Foll. 34; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work, slightly imperfect at the beginning.

Add. 7435.

Foll. 438; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 23 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in Naskhī; dated Jumādā I., A.H. 1122 (A.D. 1710). [Cl. J. RICH.]

An abridged recension of the Ṣiḥāḥ, or Arabic Lexicon, of al-Jauharī (see the Arabic Catalogue, pp. 227, 467), with the addition of the Persian equivalent to each word.

Author: Abul-Fazl Muhammad B. 'Umar B. Khālid, called Jamāl ul-Ķurashī, ابو الفضل

After duly praising the original work, the author states, in an Arabic preface, that he had succeeded, after a long search, in discovering at last in the Madrasah named after the Ṣāḥib Burhān ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, in Kāshghar, a corrected copy of the same in four thick volumes, from which the present abridgment was made. It was completed, as stated at the end of some copies, A.H. 681.

According to Tārīkh i Rashīdī, Add. 24,090, fol. 248, the author gives in his Additions to the Ṣurāḥ ملحقات صراح an account of the learned men of Balūsāghūn, and states that his father was one of the Ḥāfiẓ, or traditionists, of that eity.

The Ṣurāh has been printed in Calcutta, 1812, and in Lucknow, A.H. 1289. See also Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 101, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 133, Uri, p. 237, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 101.

Add. 5643.

Foll. 452; 14²/₄ in. by 9; 21 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated June 1779.

The same work.

It is stated at the end that this copy had been transcribed from the MS. of Mr. (Sir Charles) Wilkins, and collated with the original.

Add. 26,138.

Foll. 40; 8⁴/₄ in. by 5; 13 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

عقود للجواهر

An Arabic-Persian vocabulary in verse, arranged, like the Nişāb us-Ṣubyān, by order of subjects.

In a short prose preface, the author, who calls himself رشيد الدين القوى عبد للخليل بن عمر (a name bearing a suspicious resemblance to that of the celebrated poet Rashid ud-Din Muḥammad B. 'Abd ul-Jalil Vaṭvāṭ, who died A.H. 578), says that this work consists of fifty sections (Ķiṭ'ah) and 578 Baits, and that it was intended as an offering to the library of Mirzā Ulugh Beg Chalabī, son of the Sultan Muḥammad [B.] Bāyazīd B. Murād B. Ūrkhān B. 'Uṣmān (i.e. Muḥammad I., who reigned from A.H. 816 to 824).

An enlarged recension of the same work, comprising fifty-one Kiţ'ahs and 650 Baits, is mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 239, as ascribed to Rashid Vaţvāţ, and dedicated to Sultan Murād B. Muḥammad Khān (A.H. 825—855).

Add. 7440.

Foll. 317; 10¼ in. by 7¼; 24 lines, 4¾ in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 961 (A.D. 1554). [Cl. J. RICH.]

كنز اللغات

An Arabic dictionary explained in Persian. Author: Muḥammad B. 'Abd ul-Khāliķ B. Ma'rūf, محمد بن عبد للخالق بن معروف

جواهر کنوز لغات حمد و ستایش نثّار بارکاه .Beg. حضرت متکلمی

The author states in the preface that, as a knowledge of Arabic, the language of the L 2 Coran and the tradition, was incumbent on all Muslims, and, as the best dictionary, the Siḥāḥ, was written in Arabic, and therefore available only to Arab readers, he had been induced to write the present work, containing the most important words of the language and all those which occur in the Coran. It was compiled from the Siḥāḥ, Mujmil, Dustūr, Maṣādir, Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī, Lughāt ul-Ķur'ān, and Sharḥ i Niṣāb (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 469 b). The preface concludes with a dedication to Sulṭān Muḥammad, and a eulogy upon his son and heir apparent, Mīrzā 'Alī.

It is stated in the Jahān-Ārā, Or. 141, that the Kanz ul-Lughāt was written for Kār Giyā Sulṭān Muḥammad, who reigned in Gīlān from A.H. 851 to 883. His son, Kār Giyā Mīrzā 'Alī, who succeeded him, was put to death by his brother A.H. 911. The latter is the prince to whom a history of Țabaristān by 'Alī Rūyānī was dedicated. See Sehir-Eddin's Geschichte von Tabaristan, edited by Dr. Dorn, Vorwort, pp. 9—11, Text, p. '4, and Aly Ben Schems-Eddin's Chanisches Geschichtswerk, Vorwort, pp. 6—13.

The words are arranged according to the initial and final letters. The Kanz ul-Lughāt has been lithographed in Persia, A.H. 1283. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 256, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 135, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 202, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 109.

Add. 23,571.

Foll. 258; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8; 23 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1059 (A.D. 1649). [ROBERT TAYLOR.] The same work.

Add. 23,572.

Foll. 303; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $3\frac{7}{5}$ in.

long; written in Nestalik; dated Verāmīn, Rabī' II., A.H. 1111 (A.D. 1699.

[ROBERT TAYLOR.] The same work.

ابن حاجي عبد الصدد محمد قاسم الرازي : Copyist

Add. 7443.

Foll. 132; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in large Naskhi, in the village of Sāvukh Balāgh, قريمه ساوخ بلاغ; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1076, and Sha'bān, A.H. 1083 (A.D. 1664 and 1672). [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-119.

خلاصة اللغات و تفسير المشكلات

A vocabulary of Arabic words used in Persian composition, but not generally understood.

Author: Ismā'īl B. Luțf-Ullah ul-Bākharzī, اسماعيل بن لطف الله الباخرزى

الحمد لله الذي انزل القرآن العربي اوضح للحجيم. و البيانات

The words are arranged, according to the initials, in eight-and-twenty books (Kitāb). Each book is subdivided into three Bābs, according to the vowel which accompanies the initial.

This is probably the work mentioned as Khulāṣah among the sources of the Tuhfat us-Saʿādat; see p. 493 b. A copy is noticed in the Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 493.

II. Foll. 120—123. A short alphabetical vocabulary of difficult Persian words, without author's name.

III. Foll. 124—130. A short vocabulary, giving the Persian equivalents of Arabie words and phrases used in epistolary composition, without alphabetical arrangement.

اما بعد بدانکه این الفاظ اختیار کرده اند که Beg. در ترسلات بکار آید

508

Add. 16,752.

Foll. 263; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 29 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastah, apparently in the 18th century.

[WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—220. Mu'ayyid ul-Fuzalā (see p. 494 a).

An Appendix (Tatimmah), treating of arithmetical notations and some points of Persian grammar, foll. 216 b—220 b, is imperfect at the end.

II. Foll. 222-263. Khulāșat ul-Lughāt, the work described in the preceding MS., art. I.

In this copy a short anonymous preamble has been substituted for the original preface.

Add. 6959.

Foll. 66; 7⁴/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; about twelve lines a page; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley on paper water-marked 1806.

Tajnis i Khatt, by Jāmī, the work described p. 503 b, with an English translation and an alphabetical index.

Add. 5554.

Foll. 358; $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 9; 25 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik in the first half of the 17th century.

[CHARLES HAMILTON.]

چهار عنصر دانش

A large dictionary of the Arabic and Persian languages.

Author: Amān Ullah, entitled Khānah-Zād Khān Fīrūz Jang, son of Mahābat Khān, entitled Khān-Khānān, Sipahsālār, B. Mīr Muḥammad Ghayūr, يخانه زاد بخانه المان الله مخاطب بخانه زاد خان فيروز جذك ولد مهابتخان المخاطب بخامحانان خان فيروز جذك ولد مهابتخان المخاطب بخامحانان سپهسالار بن مير محمد غيور تازنين شاهدى كه از خلوتكده قدس و Amān Ullah Husaini, son of the famous Mahābat Khān Zamānah Beg, served with distinction under Jahängir and Shähjahan. He obtained the title of Khānahzād Khān, by which he designates himself in the present work, together with the post of Deputy-Governor of Kābul, in the seventeenth year of the former's reign (A.H. 1031-2); but he is better known under the title of Khānzamān, which was conferred upon him at the accession of Shāhjahān, A.H. 1037. He played a prominent part in the Deccan wars against Sāhū, and died as Governor of the Balaghat, A.H. 1046. He left a general history, a Majmū'ah called Ganj i Bādāvard (see p. 489 b), and a Dīvān of great merit, in which he takes the poetical surname of Amānī. See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 180, Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 45, and the Onde Catalogue, p. 109. The above notices do not mention either the present dictionary, or Amān Ullah's medical work, Umm ul-Ilāj (Egerton 1008).

After dilating upon the merits of the reigning sovereign, Jahāngīr, the author states that, as the emperor was ever eager to promote learning, and especially the science of language, he had conformed with his desire by compiling from the most esteemed works a dictionary comprising all the important words, either Persian or Arabic, as well as metaphorical phrases and medical terms.

The preface is followed by a statement of the contents of the four parts, termed 'Unşur, of which the work consists, with some preliminary remarks belonging to each of them, foll. 2—17. In the case of the second 'Unşur this introduction is of considerable extent. It comprises a list of sources and an account of the Persian language and grammar, the whole of which is textually copied without any acknowledgment from the Farhang i Jahāngīrī, with the only difference that the word دانش been substituted for آئين in the headings of, the twelve sections which it comprises. The latter work having been dedicated to the same Jahāngīr less than twenty years before, this is a remarkably bold plagiarism.

The contents of the four Unsurs are stated to be as follows: I. An Arabic dictionary, compiled from the Kāmūs, Surāh, Kanz ul-Lughat (p. 507 b), Kashf ul-Lughat (p. 495 a), and some treatises not specified. II. A Persian dictionary. III. Metaphorical phrases, Zend and Pāzend words, with some Turkī and Hindī words. IV. Medical terms.

The first, and only extant, 'Unsur occupies the rest of the volume, foll. 17 b—358. It is a very full Arabic dictionary, in which the spelling of the words is accurately determined and their meanings explained in Persian. It is divided into Bābs and Faşls, in which the words are arranged according to their final and initial letters. The margins are filled with copious additions.

The MS. is endorsed سراج اللغت شاهجهاني. On the first page is a note stating that it had come into the possession of Zuhūr ud-Dīn Muhammad Shīrāzī ul-Ķurashī, A.H. 1068. At the end is a seal with the still earlier date A.H. 1057.

Add. 5556.

Foll. 314; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8; 21 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [CHARLES HAMILTON.]

منتخب اللغات شاهجهانى

A dictionary of Arabic words in common use, explained in Persian.

Author: 'Abd ur-Rashīd ul-Husainī ul-عبد الرشيد للحسينى المدنى اصلا , Madanī ut-Tatavī (see p. 500 ۵) التتوى مولدا ستايش و سپاس مالك الملكى كه تـذكار . آلاى بي احصاى The preface contains a long panegyric on Shāhjahān, to whom the work is dedicated, with versified chronograms composed by the author for the emperor's birth and accession. 'Abd ur-Rashīd states further on that he had compiled the present work from the most esteemed lexicons, such as the Kāmūs, the Ṣiḥāḥ, and the Ṣurāḥ, and he enumerates ' nine blemishes noticeable in earlier dictionaries, from which it was exempt.

The date of composition is expressed, in a versified chronogram found at the end of the next copies, by the words versified = A.H. 1046. The words are arranged according to the initial and final letters.

The Muntakhab ul-Lughāt, also called Rashīdī 'Arabī, has been frequently printed in India, Calcutta, 1808, 1816, 1836, Lucknow, 1835, and A.H. 1286, Bombay, A.H. 1279. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 135, and Ouseley's Collection, No. 386.

Add. 6644.

Foll. 330; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with ruled columns, probably in the 17th century.

[JAMES GRANT.]

The same work.

This copy has a lacune extending from the word وتيعة to ميطان.

Egerton 1022.

Foll. 249; $14\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-Āmīz; dated Faizābad, Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1229 (A.D. 1814). The same work.

Add. 16,753 and 16,754.

Two uniform volumes; foll. 471 and 392; $15\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 9; 29 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the latter half of the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

قابوس

A Persian translation of the Kāmūs, or Arabic Thesaurus, of al-Fīrūzābādī; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 469.

Translator: Muhammad Habib Ullah,

Beg. عليم

و علامی

After dwelling on the importance of a knowledge of Arabie, and on the superiority of the Kāmūs, in point of comprehensiveness, to all other dictionaries, Muhammad Habib Ullah states that in his translation he had followed as much as possible the renderings of the Şurāh, Kanz ul-Lughat, Tāj ul-Maşādir, and Muntakhab ul-Lughat; that, unlike the author of the Surāh, he had left no word of the original untranslated, and, lastly, that he had added in many cases words or meanings omitted by the author. This is followed by a full notice on the life of al-Firūzābādī, extracted from as-Sakhāvī's work, الضور اللامع, and other sources, and by a detailed explanation, in the form of questions and answers, of some difficult points in the method adopted in the Kāmūs.

The translator says that he had completed his work in A.H. 1147, در سنه یکهزار و یکصد ; but in a versified ehronogram, which immediately follows, he gives a somewhat later date, viz. A.H. 1149. He adds, in conclusion, that, as the original work had been submitted to the inspection of Timūr, it was meet that its translation should be honoured by a glance of the best of his descendants, the reigning emperor, Muhammad Shāh Pādishāh Ghāzī.

An carlier Persian translation of the Kāmūs, by 'Abd ur-Raḥmān B. Husain, A.D. 1618 (A.H. 1027), is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 134.

Add. 16,755.

Foll. 687; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 20 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

[WM. YULE.]

The first volume of the preceding work, ending with the letter b.

Turki-Persian Vocabularies.

Add. 6646.

Foll. 52; $8\frac{2}{7}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [JAMES GRANT.]

A Turki (Oriental Turkish) vocabulary, explained in Persian.

Author: Fazl Ullah Khān, فضل الله خان Beg. سبحان الله هركاد افصح عرب و عجم The author designates himself as a cousin of Saif Khān, of the lineage of Chākū, and one whose forefathers had been attached for fourteen generations to the service of the house of Timūr. He states that he had written this work by order of the reigning emperor (Aurangzīb), and for the use of the Shāhzādah.

Saif ud-Dīn Maḥmūd, commonly ealled Faķīr Ullah, was the second son of Tarbiyat. Khān, who came from Tūrān to India, and became Bakhshī of Shāhjahān. He was a descendant of Amīr Chākū, one of the Amīrs of Tīmūr. Having deserted the imperial army under Rājah Jaswant, to pass into the ranks of the rebel Aurangzīb (A.H. 1068), he was rewarded by the latter with the title of Saif Khān, and appointed successively governor of Dehli, of Kashmīr, and Bihār. He died as governor of Ilāhābād, A.H. 1095. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 50, and Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 312.

Contents: Introduction, treating of Turki suffixes, fol. 2 a. Bab 1. Verbs, arranged according to the first letters, fol. 5 b. Bāb 11. Nouns, arranged according to the initial and final letters, fol. 12 b. Bāb 111. Miscellaneous words, viz. numerals, parts of the human body, names of animals, of Turkish tribes, etc.

The work has been printed, at the request of Sir Wm. Ouseley, with an improved arrangement and some additions, by 'Abd ur-Rahīm, Calcutta, A.H. 1240.

Add. 16,759.

Foll. 94; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 9 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

A Turkī vocabulary and grammar, explained in Persian.

Author: Khwājah Ţayyib Bukhārī Naķshabandī, خواجه طيب بخارى نقشبندى

حمدی که اوراق احداق بصایر اولو الابصار از .Beg ملاحظه

A preface, written partly in Persian, partly in Arabic, and partly in Turkī, the last two with interlinear Persian version, contains a panegyrie, in prose and verse, on the reigning emperor, Nāsir ud-Dīn Muḥammad Shāh Pādishāh Ghāzī (A.H. 1131-1161), to whom the work is dedicated.

The treatise is divided into fifty chapters (Fasl) and an appendix (Khātimah). The first twenty-five chapters, fol. 14 b, contain Turkī words classed according to subjects, with the Persian equivalent written under each. The last twenty-five, fol. 35 b, treat of Turkī grammar. The Khātimah, fol. 85 b, contains a hundred moral sentences ascribed to Turkish Shaikhs, with interlinear Persian version.

Egerton 1021.

Foll. 495; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 16 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 17th century.

A vocabulary of Turkī verbs, explained in Persian, imperfect at beginning and end.

The verbs are arranged in alphabetical order. Each verb is completely conjugated in tabular form, and constitutes a Faşl, occupying two pages. The Persian equivalent is written under each inflexion.

The MS. begins in the middle of the verb آلدور ماق, the twelfth Fasl, and breaks off in the first line of the verb

Or. 404.

Foll. 110; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, dated Pūth (Distriet of Mīrath), Rabī' I. A.H. 1253 (A.D. 1837). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 9—27. A Turkī grammar explained in Persian, entitled in the subscription نوايد تركي.

Author: 'Ashūr Beg, son of Niyāz Beg B. Dūst Beg, ابسن ابسن ابن منهاز بیاک دوست بیک دوست بیک

الحمد لله الذي خلق الانسان واعطى له اللسان .Beg

The author says in a short preamble that he had written this short manual at the request of some students desirous of learning the colloquial Turkī.

II. Foll. 28—68. Familiar dialogues in Turkī and Persian, entitled in the subscription كتاب محاورة الاتراك.

فصل در بیان کلام مرکب ترکی یاد دهانیدن . است ماه به المعمد معمد میند :

They were written, as stated at the beginning, for the use of the author's pupil, Navvāb Mīr Muḥsin Khān, who, although acquainted with the vocabulary, was not able to speak the language.

III. Foll. 69—79. Fragment of a Turkī poem in Maşnavī rhyme, the hero of which is Hūmān B. Ķaifūr. IV. Foll. 80-92.

A Turki-Persian vocabulary.

باب في بيان اسماء الاشياء المختلفة في .Beg لسان الاتراك

It is divided into nine Fasls, under the following heads: 1. Heaven and earth. 2. State. 3. Arts and trades. 4. Names of relationship. 5. Parts of the body. 6. War and arms. 7. Names of animals. 8. Miscellancous words. 9. Numerals. In each of the above sections the words are in alphabetieal order.

V. Foll. 93-110.

نصاب قطيبه

A versified Turki-Persian vocabulary.

Author: Kalimat Ullah, commonly called Khwājah Pādishāh, son of Khwājah Rahmat Ullah B. Khwajah Ni'mat Ullah, كلمة الله مشهور بخواجه پادشاة ولد خواجه رحمت الله ابن خواجه نعمت الله Beg.

اوغان و تنکری و ایزی خدا ورق یافراغ

It was written, as stated in a proso preface, by desire of a prince of royal blood, Mirzā Kutb ud-Dīn, and consists of 274 distichs.

The Turki words are marked with a written over them in red ink, their Persian renderings with في.

Persian-Turkish Dictionaries.

Add. 7684.

Foll. 110; 91 in. by 7; 9 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

شامل اللغت

A Persian-Turkish dictionary.

Author : Al-Karā-Hiṣārī, القرا حصارى VOL. II.

The words are arranged in Babs according to the final letters, and in sub-sections called Nau' according to the initials. The latter are again sub-divided according to the vowel of the initial. The Turkish equivalent is written in a smaller character above each word.

In a copy described by Aumer, Munich Catalogue, p. 117, the author is called Hasan B. Husain 'Imād, of Karā-Hisār, and the work dedicated to Sultan Bayazid B. Muhammad B. Murād, who reigned from A.H. 887 to 918. The Lughat i Karā-Hisārī is one of the sources of Ni'mat Ullah (p. 514b), and of the second edition of Surūrī (p. 499 b).

The present copy wants a few lines at the end. On the first page is a note stating that the writer had purchased the MS. A.H. 1134 (A.D. 1722).

Harl. 5494.

Foll. 49; 8 in. by 53; 7 lines about 31 in. long; written in Naskhi, with all vowels, A.H. 1062 (A.D. 1652).

تحفة شاهدى

A Persian-Turkish vocabulary, in Maşnavî verse.

شاهدى ,Author: Shāhidī

The author, who describes himself as a Maulavi, and a native of Maghlah in the province of Mantashā, states in a poetical prologue that he had written this vocabulary in imitation of the Tuhfah i Husāmī, which he had read in his childhood with his father Khudā'i, and by the help of which he had been able to understand the Masnavi without a master.

Shāhidī, whose proper name was Ibrāhīm, M son of Khudā'ī Dadah, lived in Brusa, as Shaikh of the Maulavis. He is the author of several Maşnavis and a Dīvān. He died A.H. 957. See Hammer, Geschichte der Osmanischen Dichtkunst, vol. ii. p. 258.

513

The date of composition is fixed at the end, fol. 48 a, by the following chronogram:

قَلْدى سندن شاهدى نو يادكار

which gives A.H. 920. This disposes of the attempted identification of the author with another Shāhidī, 'Abd ul-'Azīz Chalabī, who died A.H. 1021. See the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 428, the Gotha Catalogue, p. 39, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 39.

The Lughat i Shāhidī, as the work is commonly called, is a popular school-book, on which several commentaries have been written. Sec Haj. Khal., vol. vi. pp. 598—9. It has been described by Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 221, Krafft, No. 22, and Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 135.

In a portion of the present copy, foll. 6-31, English equivalents have been written under the text in a hand-writing of the 17th century. On the first page is written "Brian Braxton his Book, 1652."

Other copies will be described in the Turkish Catalogue.

Add. 7887.

Foll. 79; 7 in. by 4; 23 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-71.

دقائق لحقائق

A treatise on the distinctions existing between Persian synonyms, explained in Turkish, and illustrated by numerous quotations from the standard poets.

The work is dedicated in a short preamble to Ibrāhīm Pāshā, the Vazır of Sulaimān. The author, not named in this copy, is, according to Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 232, Aḥmad B. Sulaimān, called Ibn Kamāl Pāshā.

This celebrated poet, philologer, and historian, son of a Pāshā of the time of Muhammad II., accompanied Sultan Salīm, as Kāzī 'Askar, in the eonquest of Egypt, and was promoted under Sulaimān to the dignity of Muftī. He died in Constantinople, A.H. 940 (not 941, as stated by Hammer). The date is fixed by contemporary ehronograms, as هذا مقام احمد مات التحرير. See Hammer, Geschichte der Osmanischen Dichtkunst, vol. ii. pp. 205-211.

The work has been subsequently arranged in alphabetical order, under the title of ترتيب; see Haj. Khal. vol. iii. p. 232, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 133. An abstract of the contents has been given by Hammer, Mines de l'Orient, vol. iii. p. 47. See also the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 99, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 130, and Upsala Catalogue, p. 19.

II. Foll. 72-79.

رسالة التعريب من التعجيم

An Arabic tract on the alteration of foreign words introduced into Arabic, by the same author.

Add. 7680.

Foll. 236; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, 4 in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A Persian dictionary explained in Turkish. Author: Ni'mat Ullah B. Aḥmad B. Ķāẓī Mubārak ur-Rūmī, نعمت الله بن احمد بن قاضى مبارك الرومى

Beg. حمد بسی قیاس و شکر با اساس آن مالک بسی همتای را The work is called in the subscription لغة نعمة الله. Haj. Khal., who mentions it under نعمة الله, vol. vi. p. 362, states that the author died A.H. 969.

It was compiled, as stated in the preface, from the following works: 1. Uķnūm i 'Ajam (a Persian Turkish Lexicon; see Uri, p. 291, No. 108). 2. Ķāsimah i Luțf Ullah Halīmī (Haj. Khal. reads تَاتَعَة ; see vol. iv. p. 503. The author died A.H. 928; see the Petersburg Catalogue, p. 431). 3. Vasīlah i Maķāșid (written by Maulavī Rustam about A.H. 903; see the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 197). 4. Lughat i Ķarā-Hiṣārī (see p. 513*a*). 5. Ṣiḥāḥ i 'Ajam, in two recensions, one early and short, the other later and enlarged (by Hindūshāh Nakhjavānī; see Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p.91, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 100).

The author adds that he had explained every word, even the most usual, as he was writing for ordinary readers, براي عوام الناس

The work is divided into the three following parts (Kism):—I. Verbs, fol. 3 a. II. Particles and flexion, fol. 17 a. III. Nouns, fol. 22 b. In the first and third of the above parts the words are alphabetically arranged in Babs according to the initials. Each Bab is subdivided into three sections according to the accompanying vowel.

The Lugbat i Ni'mat Ullah has been described by Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 182, and by Dorn, Petersburg Catalogue, p. 427. See also the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. pp. 132, 137, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 101.

Add. 7679.

Foll. 176; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

مجمع اللغات

Another recension of the preceding work, with a somewhat different preface, in which the enumeration of the sources is omitted. In the body of the work, the main difference appears to consist in the absence of numerous poetical quotations, especially from Shams Fakhrī, which are found in the preceding copy.

Add. 7686.

Foll. 197; 8 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 7 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work abridged, and written in tabular form.

This copy wants the preface, the latter part of Kism I., and the whole of Kism II., but the last lines.

Add. 7687.

Foll. 21; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi, about the beginning of the 19th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

تحفه هبي

A versified vocabulary containing the most usual Persian words explained in Turkish.

Author: Vahbi Sunbul-Zādah, هبى سنبل زاده ,

The author, whose proper name was Muhammad B. Rashid, left his native town, Mar'ash, for Constantinople, and was sent by Sultan 'Abd ul-Hamid on an embassy to the Persian court. He has left a Divān which was completed A. H. 1222. See Hammer, Geschichte der Osmanischen Dichtkunst, vol. iv. pp. 554-73.

It appears, from a prologue in Turkish verse, that he wrote the present work, after a long residence in Persia, and especially in Shīrāz, for his son Luțf Ullah, and dedicated it to the Grand Vazīr Ibrāhīm Pāshā.

The date of composition is expressed in a versified chronogram at the end by the line,

بحمد الله بو زیبا تحفه وهبی تمام اولدی

which gives A.H. 1196.

The Tuhfah i Vahbī has been printed in Constantinople, A.H. 1213, and has been often reprinted there and at Bulak. See Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 143.

Miscellaneous Dictionaries.

Add. 18,889.

Foll. 71; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 13 lines, 4 in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Nāgpūr, Rabī' I., A.H. 1215 (A.D. 1800).

شمس البيان في مصطلحات هندوستان

A Hindustani glossary, alphabetically arranged, in which the words and phrases used by the Rekhtah poets of Dehli, and imperfectly understood in other parts of India, are explained in Persian, and illustrated with copious quotations.

Author: Mirzā Jān, poetically surnamed Tapish, مرزا جان متخلص بطیش

بعد تحميد حضرت سخن افرين كه زبان انسان ا

Muḥammad Ismā'īl, familiarly called Mirzā Jān, of Dehli, was the son of a native of Bukhārā, and a descendant of Sayyid Jalāl ud-Dīn Bukhārī. He began life as a soldier, and was attached to the service of prince Jahāndār Shāh. He lived later in Murshidābād and Calcutta, and acquired some fame as a Hindustani poet. In the Dīvān i Jahān, written by Benī Narāyan A.D. 1814 (A.H. 1229), he is mentioned as still alive. See Garcin de Tassy, Histoire de la Littérature Hindouï, vol. i. p. 502, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 297.

The author states in the preface that he had written the present work in Murshidābād, A.H. 1208, at the request of Navvāb Amīr ul-Mulk Shams ud-Daulah Ahmad 'Alī Khān Bahādur Zulfakār Jang.

Royal 16, B. 111.

Foll. 23; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8; a volume of miscellaneous contents. [THOMAS HYDE.]

Foll. 7—9; 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; about 33 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written by a European hand, apparently in the 17th century.

A short rhymed vocabulary, containing familiar Arabic and Persian words and short sentences, explained in Hindustani.

خالق باری هرجنهار واحد ایک برا کرتار .Bcg

It is commonly called, from its beginning, Khāliķ Bārī, and is ascribed by popular tradition to Amīr Khusrau. It has been lithographed in Lucknow. See Sprenger, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. xxi. p. 519, and Biblioth. Sprenger., No. 1003.

Royal 16, B. XIII.

Foll. 41; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 18 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, on English paper, in the 17th century. [THOMAS HYDE.]

I. Foll. 2—32. An alphabetical vocabulary containing Persian verbs conjugated through their main forms, with the Hindustani equivalent written under each.

آمدن آمدة بيايد مى آيد خواهد آمد .Beg

آونا آیا آوی آوتاهمی آویکا

It is called in the subscription کتاب آمدن

II. Foll. 33-41. A list of common Persian words arranged by order of subjects, with interlinear Hindustānī translation.

Add. 5661, A.

Foll. 50; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 13—15 lines; written in two columns, in the 18th century. [N. B. HALHED.]

A Bengali-Persian vocabulary, arranged according to the Sauscrit alphabet.

Or. 399.

Foll. 274; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1234 (A.D. 1819).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A Hindustani Pushtu dictionary, explained in Persian.

Author: Ilahyār, son of Hāfiz ul-Mulk Hāfiz Rahmat Khān Bahādur, الهيار ولد حافظ رحمت خان بهادر

The author, a son of the celebrated Rohilla chief, Häfiz Rahmat (see p. 212 b), states in the preface, that, by constant intercourse with the Afghans who flocked to India during his father's rule, he had acquired a familiar acquaintance with the language. At the death of Häfiz Rahmat in A.H. 1188, the Afghans were scattered far and wide. After being confined with his brother, during eight months, in Ilähäbäd, he was released, upon the death of Shujā' ud-Daulah, and repaired to Lucknow. Three years later he settled with his younger brothers, who knew the language but imperfectly, in Bareli; and, although he frequently visited his elder brother, Navvāb Mahabbat Khān, in Lucknow, he had lost, from want of practice, much of his native tongue. When, however, Mahabbat Khan, who was the head of the family, died in A.H. 1223, the author, seeking some occupation to divert his mind in his bereavement, began collecting all he could remember of the language, and compiled the present work, in order to preserve to his children and other Afghans growing up in India the precious heirloom of the national speech. He adds that the work represents mainly the dialect of the Sarahban tribe, to which he belonged.

Several versified chronograms, by the author's son Muhammad Ibrāhīm Khān and others, give A.H. 1228 as the date of completion.

The work is divided into an introduction treating of Pusht \bar{u} grammar, fol. 4 b, and twenty-eight Babs, which form the dictionary proper, and begin at fol. 11 b.

The Hindustānī and Pushtū words, distinguished by the letters s and \downarrow written over each, are combined into one alphabet, and arranged according to the first and second letters. The Persian and Arabic equivalent is added to each, and all the Pushtū words are spelt at full length.

The present work has been mentioned by Major Raverty in his "Remarks on the Origin of the Afghans," Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. 23, p. 571. Another Afghan grammar and dictionary, entitled Riyāz ul-Maḥabbat, was written A.H. 1221, for Sir Ch. Barlow, by the author's brother, Maḥabbat Khān. See Sprenger, Zeitschrift der D. M. G., vol. xvi. p. 785, and Dr. Dorn's Afghan Grammar. The contents of both works have been incorporated by Major Raverty in his "Dictionary of the Pukhto," London, 1860; see the preface, p. 21.

Add. 12,266.

Foll. 488; 15 in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines in a page; written in Nestalik, on English paper, about the close of the 18th century.

A Persian-Maghī dictionary.

Maghī, Arracan. The Maghs, or inhabitants of Arracan. The Persian words are taken, with their explanations, from the Farhang i Jahāngīrī, the arrangement of which is generally preserved. The Maghī words are written opposite, both in the original (Burmese), and in the Persian character.

An "Ex-Libris" on the cover shows that the MS. belonged to John Murray, afterwards Sir John M'Gregor Murray, Bart., who attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the East-India Company's service in 1787. See above, p. 409, note.

Harleian 342.

Foll. 90; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; about 20 lines; written by a European hand, in the 16th century.

I. Foll. 3—72. An alphabetical English-Persian vocabulary, giving, in three columns, the English words, and the Persian equivalents in both the English and original characters, with some remarks on the Persian verb.

At the end is written: "John Banggam his Booke."

II. Foll. 73—78. Some Persian verbs fully conjugated, with the English equivalents.

III. Foll. 79—86. An English-Persian vocabulary, arranged by order of matters, in three columns. Most of the spaces reserved for Persian equivalents have been left blank.

IV. Foll. 87-89. The Lord's prayer in Persian, in the English and original characters. The same in Hiudustani, in the English character.

Sloane 2924.

Foll. 123. Miscellaneous papers by Engelbert Kämpfer. The following is Persian:— Foll. 1—41; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 18 lines. A Persian vocabulary, written by Kämpfer (probably A.D. 1684—8), containing familiar words and short sentences, arranged by order of subjects, in the original character and Latin transcription, with the German or Latin equivalents.

Sloane 2919.

Foll. 87; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; from 21 to 23 lines; written by Engelbert Kämpfer, about the close of the 17th century.

"Het ontwerp van de Persianse Nomenclatour."

A Dutch-Persian vocabulary, arranged by subjects. It is written in three columns, containing the Dutch, the Persian, and the Dutch transcription of the latter. Some classes have been left unfinished. At the end are some notes on Persian grammar, foll. 79-87.

Or. 443.

Foll. 597; 13 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; from 20 to 23 lines; written in fair Nestalik, by a European hand, about A.D. 1785.

[Bequeathed by Mrs. L. ROBERTS.] "Specimen of a Vocabulary, Persian and English, compiled by [Major] R. E. R[oberts], comprising at least six thousand words, which do not appear in any printed dictionaries, and numerous additional senses," etc.

The character of the work may be judged from the following specimen, taken from the beginning:—

آبا Abhorrence, aversion, ancestors, fathers, broth, refusal, denial, with.

Bodies; fit, proper.

Prefixed is an autograph letter written by Sir Wm. Jones to Major Roberts, Khānpūr, and dated, Hugli, 26 Oct., 1785, informing him that his supplement to the Persian dictionaries had been communicated by the writer to the Asiatic Society at Calcutta, and encouraging him to continue his labours.

Roger E. Roberts, who had entered the East India Company's service in 1767, attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in 1794, and retired in 1797. He held for some time the office of Persian interpreter to the governor of Bengal. See the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. xiii. p. 115.

Add. 6999.

Foll. 518; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; loosely written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1815.

"Historical Vocabulary, from Richardson's Dictionary" (also from Castellus and Meninski), containing proper names of men and places in Persian, with English explanations; to which are added some extracts from Abulfaraj, Pecocke, etc. in Latin and Arabic.

GRAMMAR.

Persian Grammar.

Add. 7691.

Foll. 111; $\$_1^1$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, ornamental headings, and gold-ruled margins, probably about the close of the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A treatise on orthoepy and penmanship, without title.

Author: Abul-Ķāsim B. Muḥammad Rizā, ابو القاسم بن محمد رضا ,Naşīrī مجلس نويس نصيري

الحمد لله الذى استنسمع لالواح قلوبنا نسخة . عرفان وحدانيته

The anthor, who calls himself a born servant of the Shāh, states that his grandfather, his paternal uncle, and his father, having severally written books on surnames, on the rules of letter-writing, and on poetry, ور باب القاب و معر در باب القاب و العاب العاب الماد العام العام العام العام he had chosen for his subject in the present treatise orthography, the rules of correct diction, and penmanship.

It is divided into a Mukaddimah and four Makālahs, as follows:—Mukaddimah. Letters proper to Arabic, Persian, and Turkish, fol. 2 b. Makālah I., in two Bābs, viz. orthography الملا, and rules of correct speech الملا قراعد in Persian, fol. 4 b. Makālah II. Orthography and rules of correct speech in Turkish, fol. 38 b. Although this section deals principally with Oriental Turkish, or, as it is called here, Jaghatāi, the forms of the Kizilbāshī and Rūmī dialects are frequently noticed. Makālah III., in three Babs: 1. Meanings of the single letters, according to the teaching of the Imams, fol. 49 b. 2. Arabic orthography, fol. 62 a. 3. Rules of correct speech in Arabic, fol. 76 a. Makālah IV. On penmanship, in eight Bābs, viz.: 1. Creation of the kalam, fol. 86 b. 2. Invention of the art of writing, fol. 87 b. 3. Writing implements, fol. 90 a. 4. Various writings and characters, fol. 95 α . (The latest of the celebrated penmen here mentioned is Mir 'Imād).^a 5. How to cut the kalam, fol. 99 a. 6. How to teach and practice penmanship, fol. 102 b. 7. Ligature and proportion of the letters تركيب و كرسى, fol. 106 a. 8. How to correct writing, fol. 109 b.

In a Persian note written on the first page, and dated A.H. 1117, the writer calls this work رسالدء درران, and appears to take "Davarān" as meaning scribes (Davar= Dabīr?), for he adds a wish that the work may prove useful to the eminent scribes of the period, درران نهایان عرصد. روزکار,

Egerton 1023.

Foll. 94; 10³/₄ in. by 6³/₄; 19 lines, 4¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the latter half of the 18th century.

J

A treatise on Persian grammar and prosody. Author: Muhammad Kulī, poetically surnamed Muhibb, محمد قلى المتخلص بحب

^a Mir 'Imād of Kazvin, a Nestalik writer of great repute, lived in Ispahan under Shāh Abbās I. (A.H. 996—1038). He was assassinated at the instigation of the Shāh, to whom he was hateful as a Sunni, and had given personal offence. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 312, and Oudo Catalogue, p. S9.

The author states that he had compiled this treatise, at the request of some friends, from the standard works of the masters, adding the results of his own observation, so that it might facilitate the study to beginners, and be also useful to proficient scholars. He completed it, as stated in a rhymed epilogue, at the beginning of the reign of Shāh 'Alam, and in the year expressed by the words i.e. A.H. 1174.

It is divided into six books (Makālah), as follows: I. Letters and parts of speech, fol. 4 b. II. Various forms of the infinitive, and formation of the past and future, fol. 6 b. III. Conjugation, fol. 13 b. IV. Meanings of the detached letters, and their permutation, fol. 19 b. V. Syntax and derivation, fol. 36 a. VI. Containing two Bābs, viz., 1. Prosody, je, fol. 45 a. 2. Rhyme, fol. 84 a.

On the first page is a note written by a former owner, Aḥmad ʿAlī Khān, who states that he had been long searching for that rare and excellent work. He calls the author Muḥammad Ķulī Khān.

Add. 25,863.

Foll. 134; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi[•] I., A.H. 1229 (A.D. 1814). [WM. CURETON.] The same work.

Add. 10,462.

Foll. 77; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 10 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, on English paper; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1243 (A.D. 1828).

قانون نصيري

A treatise on Persian grammar, illustrated with numerous quotations from the poets.

Author: Ṣafdar ʿAlī, صفدر علی Beg. حمد بیجد و شکر بـ یعد حکیبی را سزاست که برای عرایس

The author wrote it, as stated in the preface, for the use of his pupil, Mirzā Muḥammad Naṣīr, son of 'Alī Beg Khān Ṣāḥib, in whose honour he gave it the above title.

It is divided into five Bābs, as follows: I. Construction of Persian nouns, Izāfat, and composition, fol. 2 b. II. Pronouns, detached and attached, fol. 9 b. III. Prefixed particles, fol. 25 a. IV. Affixed particles, fol. 44 b. ∇ . Figures of speech, fol. 55 b.

Add. 8914.

Foll. 77; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1803).

نهر الفصاحت

A treatise on correct and elegant diction in Persian.

Author: Katīl, قتيل

ترانه سنجی عندلیب قلم در بهارستان Beg.

Mīrzā Ķatīl, who has been already mentioned, p. 64 b, wrote this work, as stated in the preface, at the request of Mīr Muḥammad Husain, the eldest son of his friend, Mīr Amān 'Alī, as a complement to his previous work Shajarat ul-Amānī.

In the preface of a later composition, Chār Sharbat, Mīrzā Ķatīl states that the present work was written A.H. 1214, eight years after the Shajarat ul-Amānī.

The Nahr ul-Faṣāhat is divided into ten chapters termed Mauj, or Waves. Its object is chiefly to correct ungrammatical or unidiomatic phrases current in the Persian of India. The last chapter contains some models of epistolary composition.

The work has been printed in Calcutta, 1822, and in Lucknow, 1843. See Bibl. Sprenger., No. 1569, and Blochmann, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. 37, p. 32.

Egerton 1029.

Foll. 62; 9 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1220 (A.D. 1805).

The same work.

Add. 16,756.

Foll. 68; 8¼ in. by 5; 17 lines, about 3 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, late in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 2-21.

آمد نامد بديع

A treatise on Persian grammar.

Author: Sukhrämdäs, son of Nilkanth B. سکہرامداس ولد نیلکنتہ ابن Bhagwatidäs Kāyath, سکہرامداس کا بتہ

The author, who describes himself as a Kānūngo of the Parganah Sīlak, Lakhnau, compiled this work, as he states in the preface, in order to help children of his caste to acquire the necessary knowledge of Persian. The rules are illustrated by copious quotations from the poets.

This copy breaks off in the 11th Fasl, which contains paradigms of the conjugation.

II. Foll. 22-68. A treatise on Persian grammar.

نظام الدين .Author : Nizām ud-Dīn Ahmad

اما بعد فيقول العبد الضعيف النحيف ... Beg. بدان اسعدك الله تعالى في الدارين كه كلمه لفظى است براي معنى مفرد

This work, which follows the method of Arabic grammarians, is divided into three parts (Bahş), treating severally of the verbs, fol. 22, the nouns, fol. 31, and the particles, fol. 49. Some references to the Hindustānī language and to Indian works, as the Farhang i Jahāngirī, Farhang i Rashīdī, etc., show that it was written in India. It was completed, as stated at the end, in A.H. 1188.

VOL. II.

It is endorsed الجرين a title which is not found in the text.

Add. 17,965.

Foll. 59; 5½ in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; about 13 lines in a page; written about A.D. 1700.

[EDWARD GALLEY.]

A sketch of Persian grammar, written on opposite pages in French and Persian, with the double title عنصرهای زبان نارسی, and "Rudiments, ou Grammaire Française Persienne."

On the fly-leaf is the name of "P. Jaque Villotte," probably the author, and at the top of the second page "Mission Julf. Soc. Jes."

Jacques Villotte, a Jesuit missionary, the author of a Dictionarium Latino-Armenium, resided in Persia, principally at the Jesuit establishment of Julfah, Ispahan, from 1689 to 1708. He died in 1743.

Add. 7002.

Foll. 218; 10 in. by 8; written by John Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1802.

Short passages from various poets, illustrating points of Persian grammar or idiom, with English translations and occasional remarks. They are apparently extracted, for the most part, from Lumsden and Gladwin. The volume is inscribed by the compiler : "Selections from Persian Poetry, etc., illustrative of inflexion, syntax and prosody."

Arabic Grammar.

Add. 16,758.

Foll. 78; 8½ in. by 6; 9 lines, 3¼ in. long; written in Naskhī, in Sikrī, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

N

I. Foll. 1-54. A treatise on Arabic inflexion, commonly called, from the author's title, Ṣarf i Mīr, صرف مير

بدان اسعدك الله تعالى في الدارين كه كلمات .Beg. لغة عرب بر سه قسم است

Mīr Sayyid Sharīf Jurjānī, born A.H. 740 in Tāghū, a village belonging to Astrābād, obtained access in A.H. 779 to Shāh Shujā', then encamped in Kasr i Zard, who took him to Shīrāz, and appointed him as teacher in the Dar ush-Shifa. When Timur took Shirāz, A.H. 789, Sayyid Sharif was transferred by him to Samarkand, and stayed there to the end of the conqueror's life, engaged in teaching and in frequent academical disputes with his great rival in learning, Sa'd ud-Din He then returned to Shīrāz, Taftazanī. where he died A.H. 816, at the age of seventy-six. His numerous works, mostly written in Arabic, have become favourite text-books in Muhammadan schools. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 89, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 375, and S. de Sacy, Notices et Extraits, vol. x. pp. 4-12.

The present work, mentioned by Hāj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 304, under the title of تصريف السيد الشريف, is a popular schoolbook in India. It has been printed in a collection of grammatical tracts published in Calcutta, about 1805, pp. 122—164, and lithographed in Lucknow, A.D. 1844, and A.H. 1288.

The first leaves of the present copy are disfigured by holes. The latter portion, foll. 48-54, written by another hand, is dated A.H. 1089 (A.D. 1678).

II. Foll. 55—78. An Arabic treatise on grammar, known as العزى. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 473.

Add. 25,862.

Foll. 56; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 9 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 17th century. [WM. CURETON.] A tract on Arabic inflexion, without title. Beg. الحمد لله ... بدان علمك الله تعالى كه كلمات

عرب سه قسم بود فعل اسم حرف The author's name, Sayyid 'Alī Akbar, and the date of his death, A.H. 1091, are recorded in the following verses, written at the end by the same hand as the text, and ascribed to Navvāb Bāķir Khān:

The margins and the intervals between the lines are crowded with notes written in a minute character.

This tract has been lithographed in the press of Naval Kishor, with the title نصول اکبری. See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1069, where the author is called Akbar 'Alī.

Add. 25,861.

Foll. 72; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi; dated Rabī'I, A.H. 1120 (A.D. 1708). [WM. CURETON.] A treatise on Arabic syntax 2, without title.

Author: Bahā ud-Dīn Muhammad ul-Husainī ul-Mukhtārī un-Nā'īnī, بهاه الدين محمد

الحسيني المختارى الناينى الحمد لله ذى العز والجود والكرم مالك الملك . خالق العالم

The author describes his work as a compendious manual written for some beginners who came to him for instruction. It is divided as follows: Mukaddimah, on the meaning of \neq , fol. 2 a. Makālah I., ib., subdivided into fourteen Fasls. Makālah I., fol. 25 a, treating of grammatical agents, and similarly subdivided. Lastly a Khātimah, which, although mentioned in the preface, is not found in the body of the work.

محمد صالح ابن وليخان محمد ابادى : Copyist

Add. 23,576.

Foll. 129; 61 in. by 4; 19 lines, 31 in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

An extensive Persian commentary on the Kāfiyah, or Arabic grammar of Ibn Hājib; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 230.

The MS. is imperfect at the beginning and at the end. It contains neither title, شرے nor author's name; but it is endorsed شافید بر کافید

The first page begins thus : إيرا كه جزد لفظ; مرکب دلاله کند بر جزء معنی پس لفظ و معنی وي مرکب داشد

Add. 26,134.

Foll. 67; 71 in. by 43; 5 lines, 25 in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 1068 (A.D. 1658). [WM. ERSKINE.]

پنج گنج

"The five treasures," a treatise on Arabic accidence تصريف, without author's name.

الحمد لله على ماخلق الانسان وانطق له اللسان . Beg. The work consists, according to the preface, of five Babs, each of which contains five Fasls. Bab 1., treating of the conjugation of the regular verb, is here omitted, the reader being referred for its contents to the author's i.e., according to a marginal note, the opening chapter of his treatise entitled , which deals with the same subject.

Bab II., which alone is extant in this copy and in two others, Add. 5566, IV., and Add. 16,757, in., comprises the following five Fasls: 1. Classes of verbs, fol. 4 b. 2. Verbs with a Hamzah, fol. 8 a. 3. Verbs with a weak letter, fol. 11 b. 4. Reduplicate verbs, fol. 55 b. 5. Ta'lilāt, or rules relating to the permutation of letters, fol. 61 b.

The margins contain copious notes extracted from various commentaries.

The Panj Ganj occupies pp. 38-112 of a collection of grammatical tracts printed in Calcutta, about 1805, and beginning with the Mīzān i Sarf. It is called in the subscription تصريف. It has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1844; see Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1070.

Add. 26,135.

Foll. 33; 10 in. by 7; 9 lines, 41 in. long; written in Nestalik, in Sūrat, early in the 19th century. WM. ERSKINE.

An elementary treatise on Arabic flexion, by questions and answers.

الحمد لله رب العالمين . . . بدان اسعدك الله في . Beg. الدارين كه چند توانين علم تصريف كه صبيانرا ضبط آن لابد و ناچار است

The author, whose name does not appear, states in a short preamble that he had written this manual for his brother's son, Atā Ullah B. Muhammad Zarif, براى برادر زادة عطاء الله بن محمد ظريف

This is probably the work described as "a grammar in questions and answers by 'Atā Allah, printed in Calcutta, 1244." Sce Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1060.

Add. 5566.

Foll. 81; 9 in. by 6; 15 lines, 3⁴/₄ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Shavval, A.H. 1187 (A.D. 1773).

I. Foll. 1-7. A treatise on the conjugation of the regular verb in Arabic, without author's name.

الحمد لله . . . بدان السعدك الله تعالى في . Beg. الدارين كه جملة افعال متصرفة و اسماء متمكنة بر سه کونه است ماضی و مستقبل و حال

In the subscription the work is called It has been printed with the title ميزان صرف N 2 in a collection of grammatical treatises printed in Calcutta about A.D. 1805, and has been lithographed in the Muḥammadī press, A.H. 1258.

II. Foll. 8—15. A treatise on the various classes of Arabic verbs and on their secondary forms.

This treatise, called in the subscription منشعبه, follows the preceding, with the same title, in the above editions.

III. Foll. 16—17. A short tract on the secondary forms of the Arabic verb, in Maş-navî verse.

ما که میکوییم توحید رحیم Beg. باد مقبول صمد واحد علیم

The author's name is stated to be found in the initial letters of the first five hemistichs, which give Mubārak.

IV. Foll. 18—41. Panj Ganj; see above, p. 523 a.

V. Foll. 42—49. A treatise on the laws of permutation which apply to the Arabic irregular verbs.

Author: Zahīr B. Maḥmūd B. Mas'ūd ul-'Alavī, ظهير بن محمود بن مسعود العلوي

الحمد لله الموصوف بالتصريف المنعوت .Beg. بالتخفيف

This tract occupies pp. 113—122 in the above mentioned Calcutta collection, where it is called, in the subscription, ت::

VI. Foll. 50—81. دستور المبتدى, a treatise on the same subject, by questions and answers.

مفي بن نصير ,Author : Ṣafī B. Naṣīr

Beg. الحمد لله الذى يصرف الاحوال و يخفف الاثقال. The author wrote it, as he states in the preface, for his son, Abul-Makārim Ismā'il, as a sequel to the Panj Ganj (p. 523 α), which the latter had read through.

Add. 16,757.

Foll. 70; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 9 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, early in the 19th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 2—11. The Mīzān; see above, Add. 5566, 1.

II. Foll. 12—31. The Munsha'ib; see ib. 11.

III. Foll. 32—61. The Panj Ganj; see p. 523 a.

IV. Foll. 62-70. On the laws of permutation in irregular verbs; see Add. 5566, v.

On the first page is written: "In the handwriting of my most excellent friend Aiz ud Deen Khan. Wm. Yule, Farrukhabad."

Add. 26,132.

Foll. 77; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; from 6 to 13 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in. Nestalik and Naskhi, apparently in India, in the 19th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2-24. A treatise on the conjugation of the regular Arabic verb, with tabular paradigms.

الحمد لله . . . بدان اسعدك الله تعالى فى .Beg الدارين كه جمله افعال بنىآدم بـر چهار نوع است ماضى و مستـقبل وامر و نهـى

II. Foll. 25-48. A treatise on the conjugation of the regular Arabic verbs in their several classes, and of their secondary forms, with the heading : هذا الاوزان في علم الصرف Beg. الحمد لله . . . بدان اسعدك الله تعالى فى الدارين كه جمله افعال بنى آدم از روى تعدد حروف بر دو نوع است ثلاثى و رباعى

In an English title, written by Erskine on the fly-leaf, the first of the above tracts is called "Destur al Aml," the second "Amal al Serf."

III. Foll. 49-77. Sarf i Mīr; see above, p. 522 a.

Add. 26,131.

Foll. 68; 8½ in. by 6; 11 and 19 lines, about 4 in. long; dated A.H. 1196 and 1204 (A.D. 1782 and 1790). [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2-30. Şarf i Mīr; see above, p. 522 a.

II. Foll. 31-68. A treatise on the conjugation of the regular and irregular Arabic verbs.

الحمد لله . . . بدان اسعدك الله تعالى فى .Beg. الدارين كه اين كتابيست دربيان صرف افعال و علل آن

It is divided into two Bābs treating severally of the triliteral and quadriliteral verbs. Each is subdivided into two Faşls, on the simple and secondary forms. The paradigms are given in tabular form.

The title "Dustoor Moobteda" has been written by Erskine on the first page.

PROSODY.

Add. 16,760.

Foll. 89; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated A.H. 1206 (A.D. 1791-2). [WM. YULE.]

معيار الاشعار

An extensive treatise on prosody and rhyme in Arabic and Persian poetry, without author's name.

الحمد لله حمد الشاکرين والصلوة . . . اين .Beg. مختصريست در علم عروض و توانی شعر تازی ويارسی

It is divided into a Mukaddimah and two Fanns, as follows:—Mukaddimah, in three Faşls. Definition of poetry, fol. 2 b. Variety of metres and rhymes in different languages, fol. 5 a. Arts connected with poetry, fol. 5 b. Fann I. Component parts of the feet and their modifications, fol. 6 b. The metres, fol. 34 a. Fann II. Rhyme, in ten Fașls, fol. 69 a.

Muftī Muḥammad Sa'd Ullah, who edited the above work, with his own commentary entitled معيزان الانكار, A.H. 1264, and again, in a revised edition, in the press of Naval Kishor, A.H. 1282, ascribes it to the celebrated Naṣīr ud-Dīn Ṭūsī (born A.H. 597, died A.H. 672; see p. 441 b, where A.H. 692 is an error of the press), and states in a biographical notice of the presumed author, that the Mi'yar ul-Ash'ār had not received the final revision of Naṣīr ud-Dīn, and had not, therefore, become a popular school-book like his other works.

We are not told, however, on what authority that attribution rests, and it may be noticed that no such work is mentioned in the extensive list of the writings of Naşīr ud-Dīn given by the author of the Majālis ul-Mūminīn.

The last two pages of the present copy do not belong to the original work; they are taken from the corresponding part of the treatise of Jāmī; Blochmann's edition, pp. 6 and 7.

Add. 16,808.

Foll. 68; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

I. Foll. 1-48. A treatise on Persian prosody.

Author: Saifī, سيفي

Beg. الحمد لله الذي جعل علم العروض ميزان الاشعار. Maulānā Saifī, of Bukhārā, also called 'Arūzī, on account of his mastery in prosody, was a poet of note. He left in early life his native place for Herat, where he stayed somo years, in the reign of Sultān Husain, under the patronage of Mīr 'Alī Shīr. Having subsequently returned to his country, he was appointed preceptor to Bāisunghar Mīrzā, with whom he remained three years. After that prince's violent death, he retired to Bukhārā, where he spent the rest of his life. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 593, and Haft Iklim, fol. 593. Mir 'Ali Shir states in his Majālis, Add. 7669, fol. 32, that Saifi was addicted to intemperate habits, which he had however lately renounced.

Bāisunghar Mīrzā, seeond son of Sultān Mahmūd Mīrzā, and grandson of Sultān Abū Sa'id, was placed on the throne of Samarkand after his father's death, in A.H. 900, at the age of eighteen years. Driven from thence by Bābar, A.H. 903, he was put in possession of Hişār by an Amīr of his father, Khusrau Shāh, by whom he was shortly after treacherously murdered, A.H. 905. See Erskine, History of India under Baber, pp. 92, 142, and Memoirs of Baber, pp. 33 and 72. Saifi died, therefore, some time after A.H. 905. The date 99, which is assigned to his death in the Atashkadah, is probably to be read A.H. 909.

The date of composition, A.H. 896, is expressed in a Rubā'i at the end by the fol-بنویس که هست فیضها تاریخش : lowing line

The treatise of Saifi, commonly called جروض سيغي, has been edited with an English translation by H. Blochmann, under the title of "Prosody of the Persians," Calcutta, 1872. It is mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 419, under رسالة في العروض. See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1572, and King's College, Cambridge, No. 207.

II. Foll. 49-52. Mnemonie verses, containing examples of the Persian metres, followed by their scansion.

Beg.

هزجرا کر تمام ارکان همی خواهی ازو مکذر III. Foll. 52 b-55. A short tract on the feet used in Arabic metres and their modifieations.

بدانکه ارباب صناعت عروض بنائی اصول Beg. اوزان شعر را بر سه کونه نهاده اند

IV. Foll. 55 b-57. On various kinds of composition, in prose and verse.

کلام منثورسه قسم است مرجز و^{مس}جع و عاری .Beg

V. Foll. 58-62. On the feet, and their various modifications.

فصل در بیان انکه ارکانی که بحور ازان مرکب .Beg است منحصر در هشت ارکانند

This tract contains frequent references to the work of Saifi.

VI. Foll. 63-68. A treatise on rhyme in Persian poetry, by Jāmī (see p. 17 a).

بعد از تیمن بموزون ترین کلامی که قافیه منجان .Beg.

The work, which has no title, is designated مختصريست وافي in the preface by the words . It has been edited by Blochmann, with an English translation, in the Prosody of the Persians, pp. 75-86. Haj. Khal. mentions the work, without author's name, under the title الرسالة الوافية في علم name, under the title القافيه, vol. iii. p. 425.

Add. 7433.

Foll. 123; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik Shikastah-āmīz; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1129 (A.D. 1717).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 113-116. A short tract on the component parts of the feet, and on the sixteen metres used in Persian, without author's name.

بدانکه بنای شعر براسباب واوتاد وفواصل است .Beg Each metre is illustrated by a distich containing its name, and followed by its scansion.

II. Foll. 117-123. A treatise on rhyme, illustrated by Persian verses.

این رساله ایست در بیان حدود قافیه و .Beg حروف و حرکات آن

For the rest of the contents, see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 242.

INSHA,

OR, THE ART OF COMPOSITION.

Add. 16,841.

Foll. 493; 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6 $\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

رسائل الاعجاز

A treatise on elegant prose-writing, with copious examples, consisting of official documents of the period, and of the author's own letters.

Author: Amīr Khusrau, of Dehli, امير (see p. 240 b). هذا الكتاب بفضل الله ذى الكرم انشأت سحرا لصيد الجن والنسم

After verbose panegyries on Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad (A.H. 696—716), and his son and successor, Kutb ud-Dīn Mubārak Shāh (A.H. 717—721), the author describes at great length nine different styles of Persian prose, to which he adds a tenth, his own, as far superior to all. He states, at the end, that the work was completed A.H. 719. It contains, however, some of the author's earliest compositions, especially in the last section, which includes letters dated A.H. 680 and 682.

The treatise consists of five books (Risālah), divided into chapters termed Khaţ, which are again subdivided into sections called Harf. The Risālahs are as follows: I. تلمزيات وللمركبات وللمركبات fol. 22 b. II. نه المفردات وللمركبات taining nine Khaţs, fol. 85 b. III. في الطائف في اللطائف, containing two Khaţs, fol. 263b. IV. رام المعنويات khaţs, fol. 317 a. v. المعنويات , eontaining six Khaţs, fol. 410 b. Epilogue, fol. 484 a. The latter part of Risālah vi. (Add. 16,842, foll. 471 b—506 a) is wanting. In the first part of the volume are found some marginal notes and corrections.

A note on the first page states that the MS. had been purchased, in A.H. 1184, by Rāi (afterwards Mahārājah) Tiket Rāi, the Oude Minister.

The work is commonly known as I'jāz i Khusravī. A short account of it will be found in Elliot's History of India, vol. iii. p. 566. Some extracts of historial interest are given in Persian by Nayyir Rakhshān (see p. 446 b) in Or. 1940, foll. 15—36. Others, translated for Sir H. Elliot by a Munshi, will be found in Add. 30,772, foll. 217—254. The first Risālah has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1865, and the entire work in the same place, 1876.

Add. 16,842.

Foll. 544; 10 in. by 53; 17 lines, 31 in. long, in a page; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Burhānpūr, from Ramazān, A.H. 1081, to Jumāda I., 1082 (A.D. 1670—1).

[WILLIAM YULE.] The same work. The several sections begin as follows:—Preface, fol. 1 b. Risālah 1., fol. 17 b. 11., fol. 84 b. 111., fol. 272 b. 1v., fol. 327 b. v., fol. 507 b. In the last there is a lacune extending from the first Harf of Khaţ 4 to the end of the book. The epilogue is also wanting. Foll. 1—24 have been supplied by a later hand.

Add. 22,706.

Foll. 86; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 20 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Sir JOHN CAMPBELL.]

مناظر الانشا

A treatise on the art of literary composition. Author: Maḥmūd B. Shaikh Muḥammad Gīlānī, محمود بن شيخ محمد كيلاني

A life of 'Imād ud-Dīn Mahmūd, commonly called Khwājah Mahmūd Gāvān, written by 'Abd ul-Karim Hamadani, is given in substance by Firishtah, Bombay edition, vol. i. p. 694, Briggs' translation, vol. ii. p. 511. Born in Gilan, where his forefathers had held the post of Vazir, he spent his early life in travelling as a merchant through various countries, and having reached the Deccan at the age of forty-three years, was taken into the service of 'Alā ud-Din Bahmani, who sent him, A.H. 860, at the head of an army to Tilinga. Humāyūn Shāh conferred upon him, after his accession, A.H. 862, the office of Vakil, with the title of Malik ut-Tujjär. He discharged the functions of Vazir under the reign of Nizām Shāh (A.H. 865—867), and of his successor Muhammad Shāh, who gave him the title of Khwājah i Jahān. Mahmūd was put to death, on an unjust accusation, by the last king, A.H. 886. His surname is said to be derived from Kāvān ,قاران, his native town in Gīlān; but an anecdote, quoted by Firishtah, proves that in India it was pronounced Gāvān كاران.

Mahmūd Gāvān was celebrated no less for his literary talent than for his boundless liberalities. He left a collection of letters entitled Riyāz ul-Inshā (Or. 1739; called Rauzat ul-Inshā by Firishtah) and a Dīvān. See Firishtah, Bombay edition, vol. i. pp. 653, 655, 663, 672 and 692, Briggs' translation, vol. ii. pp. 448—511.

The author is mentioned as one of the celebrated men of Gīlān by his contemporary, 'Abd ur-Razzāķ, Maţla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 380, who calls him Maḥmūd Ķāvān تاران, of Rasht, son of Khwājah Jalāl ud-Dīn, and who, writing A.H. 875, says that he was known throughout the world as Malik ut-Tujjār, and was then wielding supreme sway in the kingdom of Kulbargah.

The work is divided into an Introduction (Mukaddimah), two books (Makāmah), and a Khātimah, as follows:—Mukaddimah. On the nature and object of the science of Inshā, i. e. the art of literary composition, and on the figures of speech, in eight chapters, (Faşl), fol. 5 α . Makāmah I. On the different kinds of composition, in verse and prose, and on the rules to be observed in the selection of words in writing, fol. 27 b. Ma-kāmah II. On the various styles of epistolary composition, and on its rules, fol. 60 b. Khātimah. On orthography, fol. 82 α .

The contents are more fully described by Hammer, in the Wiener Jahrbücher, vol. 62, Anz. Blatt, p. 16, and by Flügel, in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 237. See also Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 138, and Hammer, Redekünste Persiens, p. 412.

This copy wants the first page. A table of contents by a later hand is found on the fly-leaf, on which is also written, "John N. N. Campbell, Tabreez, 1831."

Add. 25,865.

Foll. 244; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 30 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the town of Banūr, district of Sihrind, منهرند, اعمال dated Muḥarram, A.H. 1020 (A.D. 1611). [Wm. CURETON.]

مخزن الانشا

A treatise on the art of epistolary composition.

Author : Husain B. 'Alī ul-Kāshifī, حسين died A.H. 910; see p. 9 6).

حمد خداوند سرایم نخست . Beg.

The preface, which begins with considerations on the value of the art of writing in general, and especially in its application to correspondence, contains eulogies on the reigning sovereign, Abul-Ghāzī (Sultān Husain), and on the author's noble patron, Mukarrab ul-Haẓrat Mīr 'Alī Shīr, for whom the work was written. It is stated at the end to have been completed on the fourth of Jumãda II., A.H. 907. The date is ingeniously expressed in a rhymed chronogram by the following line:

The work is divided as follows: 'Unvān. What a secretary (Kātib) must know, fol. 4 a. Ṣaḥīfah 1. Forms of address, خطابیات, fol. 4 b. Ṣaḥīfah 11. Forms of-answer, جوابیات, fol. 107 b. Ṣaḥīfah 111. On the various matters which have to be stated, fol. 127 b. Khātimah. Forms of prayer used in letters, fol. 233 b. Each part contains a great variety of forms of expression tabularly arranged.

See Haj. Khal. vol. v. p. 466, and Krafft's Catalogue, p. 23. An Arabic and Persian Inshā entitled Ṣaḥifah i Shāhī, also by Ḥusain Kāshifī, has been lithographed in Lucknow. See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1580.

Add. 6608.

 Foll. 140;
 9¼ in. by 5;
 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

 long;
 written in Nestalik;
 dated Jumāda II.,

 A.H. 1087 (A.D. 1676).
 [J. F. Hull.]

بدائع الانشا

Forms of letters.

Author: Yūsufī, يوسفى

زینت عنوان هر نامه نامی و زیور دیباچه Beg.

In the Khulāşat ul-Inshā, Or. 1750, fol. 158, a work written A.H. 1102, the author of this manual is called Maulānā Hakīm Yusufi, Munshī of Humāyūn. This would make it probable that he was identical with the physician Yūsuf B. Muḥammad, of Herat, who used also the poetical surname Yūsufī, and lived under Bābar and Humāyūn; see p. 475 b.

The author states in a short preamble vol. 11.

that he had compiled this manual for his son Rafi['] ud-Din Husain and other students.

The date of its completion is obtained by doubling the numerical value of its title, $470 \times 2 = A.H.$ 940, as expressed in the following chronogram:

The letters are arranged according to the rank and class of the persons addressed, and, in the latter part, according to subjects. This popular work, commonly known as Inshāi Yūsufī, has been lithographed in the Hindu Press, Dehli, without date. It is described in Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1603, as compiled in 1086.

Add. 18,884.

Foll. 134; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1235 (A.D. 1820).

The same work.

Add. 16,846.

Foll. 94; 8½ in. by 5; 11 lines, 2¾ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Lucknow, Safar, A.H. 1206 (A.D. 1791). [WM. YULE.]

The same work, somewhat abridged. The first page bears the stamp of General Claud Martin (see p. 2a).

Add. 7692.

Foll. 43; 7 in. by 4; 8 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Shafi'ā'i; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1087 (A.D. 1676). [Cl. J. RICH.] A collection of royal letters, headed ب ترسل منصورى Author: Manşūr B. Muḥammad B. 'Alī, منصور بن محمد بن على Beg. منايش بيقياس مالك الملكى الكى الكى الكى الك The author says that he had collected here for the use of students some letters composed by the ministers of the present period, مكتوبى چند از انشاء امناء اين زمان. The letters, written in an extremely involved eharacter, and wholly destitute of diacritical points, appear to have been written in the name of Shāh Țahmāsp and 'Abbās I. A few of them bear dates, viz. A.H. 954, 961, 971, 972, and 1032. This copy appears to contain a portion only of the work described as انشاى فارسى in Krafft's Catalogue, p. 28, where the author is called Manṣūr B. Muḥammad 'Alī, of Shīrāz.

Royal 16, B. XXIII.

Foll. 17; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabī⁶ II., A.H. 1077 (A.D. 1666). [THOMAS HYDE.] Models of familiar letters addressed to relations, friends, and officials of inferior rank.

Author: Ḥadīķī, حدیقی بعد از انشای حمد و ثنای حضرت آفریدکار .Beg که جمله موجودات را

The work was written in India. The date A.H. 1077, which is found at the end of one of the letters, fol. 16 a, as well as in the subscription, probably denotes the time of compilation.

Add. 26,140.

Foll. 53; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 9 lines, 4 in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-Amīz, apparently about the beginning of the 19th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

Forms of letters.

Author: Harkarn, son of Mathurādās هرکزن واد متهرا داس کنبو ملتانی ,Kanbū Multānī Beg. بعد از حمد وثنای حضرت ایزد متعال The author states, in a short preamble, that he had compiled this work at the urgent request of some friends with whom he held converse in Mathurā, and whose plea was that he had been some time Munshī to Navvāb I'tibār Khān, and that he had spenta life in the exercise of that profession.

I'tibār Khān, a eunuch, who had been early attached to the service of Jahāngīr, was appointed Ṣūbahdār of Akbarābād in the 17th year of the reign (A.H. 1031—32), and died about two years later; see Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 32, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 4.

The work is divided into seven Bābs, and comprises models of letters and of various kinds of official documents. It has been edited, in text and translation, by Francis Balfour, Calcutta, 1781, and reprinted in 1831. It has been also lithographed in Lahore, 1869. See Mackenzie Collection, vol. ii. p. 136, the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 175, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 28, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 124.

Add. 8913.

Foll. 46; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 6 lines, 3 in. long; written in large Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

ضوابط الانشا

A short manual on letter-writing.

Author: Sayyid 'Alī Nakī Khān B. Sayyid Hishmat 'Alī, سيد على نـقى خان بن سيد مالي

الخمد لله . . . اما بعد جنين كويد احقر العباد .Beg. سيد على نـقىخان

The author, who describes himself as an inhabitant of Sāndī (a town near Shāhābād, Oude), gives, in seven sections, called Zābitah, various forms of epistolary phraseology, graduated according to the rank of the person addressed. A summary, in tabulated form, occupies foll. 43-45.

Add. 16,857.

Foll. 34; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{2}{4}$; 7 lines, $2\frac{5}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 1213 (A.D. 1799). [Wu. YULE.]

The same work.

CALLIGRAPHY. Add. 26,139.

Foll. 40; 6 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ENSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2-18.

A treatise in verse on the rules of Persian penmanship, in six characters, viz. Şulş, Tauķi', Muḥaķķaķ, Naskh, Raiḥān, and Riķā'.

Author: Majnun, جنون

بسیا ای خامه انشای رقم کن Beg. بذام کاتب اوح و قلم کن

The author, who here designates himself by his poetical surname Majnūn, is better known under his proper name, Maulana Mir 'Ali ul-Kātib, as one of the most accomplished Nestalik writers. Mir 'Ali, son of Mahmüd, poetically surnamed Rafiki, and born of a family of Herat Sayyids, grew up in Mashhad, but spent part of his life in Bukhārā. He lived at the court of 'Abd Ullah Khān Uzbak (a son of Kūchkunjī; he was raised to the Khanship A.H. 946, and died six months later; see p. 103 b), and taught that prince's son, Mūmin Khān. See the Tazkirah i Khat by Rākim, Or. 471, fol. 61, and Or. 235, fol. 11-13, where the present work is called muse , Equal to the present work is called muse when the p and is stated to have been written for Shahzādah Sulțān Muzaffar.

Mir 'Ali Kātib died, according to the Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 460, A.H. 924. That date, however, which is also given by Blochmann (Ain i Akbari, p. 102, notes) is evidently too early. A contemporary writer, Sām Mīrzā states, fol. 45, that Mīr 'Alī repaired from Khorasan to Māvarā un-Nahr in A.H. 945, when his eye-sight had already been impaired by age; and a chronogram composed by Mir 'Ali on the erection of a Madrasah in Bukhārā A.H. 942, and quoted by Rākim, Or. 471, fol. 62, shows that he was then residing in that city. Other authors refer his death to A.H. 951 and 957. See Dorn, Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. ii. p. 43.

It must be noticed, however, that Khwānd Amīr, who mentions Maulānā Majnūn, son of Kamāl ud-Dīn Maḥmūd Rafīķī, as a calligrapher and poet who lived in the reign of Abul-Ghāzī Sulṭān Ḥusain, does not identify him with Mīr 'Alī Kātib, the first of Nestalik writers, to whom he devotes a separate notice under the reign of Shāh Ismā'īl. See Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 350, and Juz 4, p. 118.

The author says in the preamble that he had put here in verse the teachings of his father Maḥmūd ur-Rafīķī, who had been his instructor both in penmanship and poetry. The title and the date of composition, A.H. 909, are given in the following distich:

The work is dedicated to Sultan Muzaffar (probably an Uzbak prince), who is described as a "rose on the rose-bush of Chingīz Khān," کلی از کلبن چنکیز خانی

II. Foll. 18 b-36.

A treatise on the rules of the character called Naskh u Ta'lik, by the same author. Beg. حمد و سپاس استادی را که کاتب لوے و قلم بیچون. The author refers in the preface to the preceding work.

III. Foll. 36—40. A treatise in verse on the same subject, رساله وضع نسخ و تعليق, and apparently by the same author.

The relative proportions of the letters, expressed by various numbers of dots, are shown by figures in the margin.

This is probably the work ascribed to Mīr Alī in Krafft's Catalogue, p. 5, No. xii.

Or. 235.

Foll. 52; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 11 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.D. 1863.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A treatise on calligraphy, with notices on the penmen who have attained eminence in the divers varieties of the Persian character.

Author: Rāķim Ghulām Muḥammad, writer of seven Ķalams, or characters, راقم

غلام محمد هفت قلمى

ای قطعه لطف زیر مشق کرمت . Beg.

The author's name occurs incidentally in his notice on Muḥammad Ḥafīẓ Khān, fol. 41 b. He mentions himself as one of the disciples of that calligrapher, who had served under Muḥammad Shāh as Dāroghah i Yasāvalān, and who died in Dehli, A.H. 1194. That date is fixed by a chronogram of the author's composition in which he uses Rāķim as his Takhallus.

Khalifah Ghulām Muḥammad Rāķim, of Dehli, is mentioned in the Tazkirah of Ķāsim, written A.H. 1221. He had proceeded to Lucknow about A.H. 1209, but had subscquently returned to Dehli, where he was then studying medicine. Sce the Oude Catalogue, p. 280. Several passages of the present work show that the author lived in Lucknow in the time of Asaf ud-Daulah. Of the various dates given in the biographical notices the latest is A.H. 1228.

This treatise, which is called in the subscription رسالهٔ خوشنویسی, contains an account of various characters, and instructions, in prose and verse, as to the choice of a reèd, the preparation of ink, etc. But it is chiefly taken up by notices on eminent calligraphers, which are brought down to the author's time, and include several of his pupils. The arrangement, which was originally chronological, has been much disturbed in the present copy, which appears to have been transcribed from a MS. in which some leaves were missing and others transposed.

Or. 471.

Foll. 92; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 19th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2—21. Syllabaries showing all possible combinations of letters, with some writing models.

II. Foll. 22-27. Rules for the correct writing of every letter of the alphabet, in Maşnavī rhyme.

They are due, according to the following subscription, to the pen of Rāķim (see the preceding number):

تهام ىشد رسالە خوشنويسى فقير راقم ^{بع}جالە بطريق مسودە قلمى نمود

III. Foll. 28—54. Calligraphic specimens in various characters, including figures of animals made up of letters. On fol. 39 a is found the signature of Rāķim under his proper name, Maulavī Ghulām Muḥammad.

IV. Foll. 56—92. Notices on celebrated penmen, from the earliest period to A.H. 1239, with the heading: مسودة تذكرة خط و خوشنويسان از ابتداى تا زمان اخر سنة ۱۳۳۱ Author: Rāķim, راقم

Beg.

The contents are to some extent identical with those of the preceding MS. The present copy is also incomplete and out of order.

King's MS. 445.

Foll. 70; 9 in. by 6½; 7 lines, 4 in. long; fairly written, with gold-ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1209, March, A.D. 1795.

"Seven alphabets with the combinations of all the letters in each. Written at Calcutta, on the 68th year of his age, by Sha Azeez Ullah of Bochara, Moonshy to Sir John Murray, Bart." (See p. 409, note.)

Contents: Nestalik, fol. 3. Shikastah-Amīz, fol. 13. Shikastah Pur, fol. 22. Shafī'ā'ī, fol. 29. Şulş, fol. 38. Ţughrā'ī, fol. 49. Naskh, fol. 60.

POETRY.

Add. 21,103.

Foll 297; 13½ in. by 10½; 29 lines, 8¼ in. long; written in Naskhi, in six columns, ruled with red ink, probably in the 13th century. [H. STEINSCHUSS.]

شاهنامه

Author: Firdūsī, فردوسی Beg. بنام خداوند جان و خرد کزین برتر اندیشه بر نکذرد

Firdūsi's great epic has been edited by Turner Macan, Calcutta, 1829, and, with a French translation, by Jules Mohl, Paris, 1829-1878. A third edition, based on the preceding, was commenced by Professor J. A. Vullers, Leyden, 1876. Eastern editions, lithographed in Bombay, 1849, Cawnpore, 1874, Teheran, A.H. 1267, etc., are reprints of the text edited by Macan.

Firdūsi's original name was Abul-Ķāsim Hasan, or, according to the preface of Bāisunghar, and later writers, Manşūr. He was born in Shādāb, near Tūs, some time after A.H. 320, and spent thirty-five years on the composition of the Shāhnāmah, which he wrote partly in Țūs, partly at the court of Sultan Maḥmūd in Ghaznīn, and completed, as stated at the end, in A.H. 400, when he was nearly eighty years of age. Firdūsī died in his native town, A.H. 411, or, according to others, A.H. 416.

The earliest extant account of Firdūsī is probably that of Aḥmad B. 'Umar un-Niẓāmī ul-'Arūẓī us-Samarķandī, who states that he visited the poet's tomb A.H. 510. It is quoted at length in Ibn Isfandiyār's History of Ṭabaristān (see p. 202a), Add. 7633, foll. 185—188. Other notices will be found in the two Persian prefaces contained in some MSS. of the Shāhnāmah, and in the following works:

Tārīkh Guzīdah, fol. 242; Jāmī's Bahāristān, fol. 59; Tazkirah i Daulatshāh, fol. 25 (translated by S. de Sacy, Notices et Extraits, vol. iv. p. 130, and by Vullers, Fragmente über die Religion des Zoroaster); Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 22; Haft Iķlīm, fol. 290; Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 522; Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 332, and Atashkadah, p. 77. See also the English and Persian prefaces of Macan's edition; the introduction of Mohl's edition; Hammer, Schöne Redekünste Persiens, p. 50; Ouseley, Notices of Persian poets, p. 54; Wallenbourg, Notice sur le Schahnamé, Vienna, 1810; Görres, Heldenbuch von Iran, Berlin, 1820; J. Atkinson, Soohrab, a poem, Calcutta, 1814, and "the Shah Nāmah of Firdausi," London, 1832; Starkenfels, Kej-Kawus in Masenderan, Vienna, 1841; A. F. von Schaek, Heldensagen, 1851; Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 405, and Ethé, Firdusi als Lyriker, Sitzungsberichte der Bayerischen Akademie, 1872, p. 275, and 1873, p. 623.

The archaïc spelling of the present copy, as 5 for 5 and ζ for δ , as well as the antique form of the writing, assigns to it a very early date. The last leaf has been supplied by a hand of the 16th century; but the subscription, which professes to have been copied from the original MS., and states that it had been written A.H. 675 (A.D. 1276-7), is probably correct. The first six leaves, and four in the body of the volume, foll. 49-52, are due to the same later hand.

Foll. 1—3 contain a list of the early kings of Persia and a preface to the Shāhnāmah, which begins thus:

سپاس و آفرین خدایرا که این جهان و آن جهان آفرید

This preface is found in copies anterior to the recension of the Shāhnāmah completed for Mīrzā Bāisunghar (see p. 77 b), A.H. 829, and may therefore, in contradistinction to the preface of the latter, be called the older preface. It is designated by Mohl, p. xv., note, as preface No. 2, and it has been translated by M. de Wallenbourg in his "Notice sur le Schahnamé."

The number of distichs, in the present copy, amounts to little more than 50,000.

On the fly-loaf is the following note, written by the Rev. H. Sternschuss: "Obtained it about 1848 at Shiraz from a Parsee who brought it from Yezd at my request."

Or. 1403.

Foll. 513; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 27 lines, 5 in. long; written in four gold-ruled columns, in small Nestalik, with two Unvāns and gold headings; dated Ramazān, A.H. 841 (A.D. 1438). [JULES MOHL.]

The same poem.

The learned translator of the Shāhnāmah, who frequently refers to this copy as his MS. No. 5, describes it as follows: "Un autre, fort ancien, est remarquable en ce qu'il offre un excellent exemple de l'état où était le texte avant la révision faite par ordre de Baïsangher Khan." See Mohl's Preface, pp. xvi., xxix., xxxvi., notes, and lxxxv.

Contents: The older preface, foll. 2 b. (It has lost two leaves after fol. 3. The text, although agreeing in the main with other copies, shows an addition probably made in India: towards the end of Firdūsi's life, fol. 5 a, it is stated that, when fleeing from the wrath of Maḥmūd, he had taken refuge in India, and that the king of Dehli, after keep-ing him some time as an honoured guest, sent him back with rich presents to Tūs).

An account of the early kings of Persia, . with tables of the dynasties, fol. 5 a, (wanting a leaf after fol. 5).

An alphabetical glossary of the obsolete words occurring in the Shāhnāmah, fol. 7 a.

The Shāhnāmah, consisting of about 51,200 distichs, foll. 10 b—513 a.

The last section differs considerably from the printed texts. It omits the verses in which Firdūsī states that he was nearly cighty years of age, and had spent thirty-five years on the composition of the poem; and it gives a much earlier date for its completion, namely A.H. 384, instead of A.H. 400, as follows: سر امد کنون قصد، یـزدکرد بـمـاد سفنـدار مـه روز ارد زهجرت شده سیصد از روزکار جو هشتاد و جارازبرش بر شمار

A later date is found in an epilogue, consisting of thirty-three Baits, which follows the ordinary conclusion without any break, and is not found in other copies. It begins thus:

The writer relates how, after completing this great history, on the 25th of Muḥarram, A.H. 389, he had been invited by a governor, حاكم, Aḥmad B. Muḥammad Abu Bakr Iṣpāhānī by name, who received him in his residence, in Khān Lanjān, خان لنجان, liberally supplied all his wants, and refused to listen to his slanderers. He concludes by expressing his unbounded gratitude to the governor's youthful son, who had saved his life by dragging him by the hair out of the raging waters of the Zarrīn Rūd رود زرین, into which he had accidentally fallen.

Khānlanjān is mentioned by Sam'ānī and Yākūt as a town of the province of Ispahan. It is, according to the Kāmil, vol. viii. p. 367, nine Farsakhs distant from that city. Ouseley states in his Travels, vol. iii. p. 17, that Linjān is the name of a district watered by the Zindah-rūd, some distance above Ispahan.

The above epilogue is followed by a rhymed colophon in the same metre, transcribed from an earlier MS., which is stated to have been written for a noble personage called Khwājah 'Alī Shāh, and to have been completed on the tenth of Muharram, A.H. 779.

This volume contains ninety-five miniatures in Persian style, each of which occupies about a third of the page.

Add. 18,188.

Foll. 500; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with gold headings, and a rich 'Unvān; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 891 (A.D. 1486).

. The same poem, without preface.

The number of distichs may be roughly estimated at about 45,500.

The volume contains seventy-two miniatures, in fair Persian style, occupying about half a page each.

غیاث الدین بن با یزید صراف : Copyist

Add. 15,531.

Foll. 543; $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with rich 'Unvāns and gold headings; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 942 (A.D. 1536).

The Shāhnāmah, to which is prefixed the following:---

1. An introduction, written in a flowery style, treating of the relative merits of prose and poetry, and concluding with a wordy encomium of the Shāhnāmah, fol. 3 b.

Beg. سپاس بی قیاس و حمد بیحد و شکر بی فکر 2. The older preface, in a recension, which differs materially from the text of other copies, foll. 4b-9b.

The text, which comprises about 52,000 Baits, is divided into two parts. The second, which has an 'Unvān of its own, fol. 265 b, begins with the reign of Luhrāsp (Macan, p. 1030).

This volume contains three whole-page miniatures, enclosed in rich borders, at the beginning, foll. 2 b, 3 α , 10 α , and forty-five smaller, all in good Persian style. On the fly-leaf is written : "To Maria Graham, from her affectionate friends James and Catherine Mackintosh, Tarala Library, Bombay, 27th Jan., 1810. This MS. belonged to Chiragh Ali Khan, said to have been one of the ablest ministers that Persia ever had, who died a few months ago at Tcheraun."

Add. 27,257.

Foll. 540; $18\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $11\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $6\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four columns, profusely ornamented with rich 'Unvāns, ornamental borders, and illuminated headings, probably in the 16th century; bound in embossed and gilt leather.

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.] The Shāhnāmah, with the preface of Bāisunghar, foll. 2b-14a, which begins thus:

افتستاح ^{مس}خن آن به که کنند اهل کمال است مصطور افتار محمد المناطق محموط منا

This preface, which was written for Mīrzā Bāisunghar in A.H. 829, has been printed almost entirely in Macan's Persian introduction to the Shāhnāmah, pp. 11--61.

The number of Baits in the present copy is not much in excess of 48,000.

This fine volume, which contains fifty-five whole-page miniatures, in good Persian style, was probably executed for some princely personage; but it bears now only private scals of modern date, such as those of Muhammad Mahdi, A.H. 1110, and Sayyid Murtazā ul-Ḥusainī, A.H. 1153. It passed into the hands of Edward Galley, A.D. 1783, and was purchased by Sir John Malcolm in 1805.

Add. 27,302.

Foll. 622; 19 in. by 12; 25 lines, $5\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four columns, ornamented and bound precisely in the same manner as the preceding; dated A.II. 994 (A.D. 1586).

The Shāhnāmah, with a preface. The doxology of Bāisunghar's preface occupies two illuminated pages, foll. 2 b and 3 a. But the preface itself, foll. 3 b—7 a, which begins thus:

سپاس و ستایش مر خدایرا عز وجل که خدای هر دو جهانست

is quite distinct from either of those which have been already mentioned. Beginning with an account of Maḥmūd's first attempts to obtain a poetical version of the Book of Kings, it is chiefly taken up with a short and legendary life of Firdūsī, who is called Abul-Ķāsim Ḥasan B. 'Alī, and is said to have had a younger brother, Ḥusain B. 'Alī. It contains the celebrated satire on Maḥmūd (Macan, vol. i. p. 63, Mohl's preface, p. 88), and ends with an account of the deposition of Ḥasan Mīmandī, and of the present which the penitent Maḥmūd sent too late to the slighted poet. A list of the ancient kings of Persia is appended.

The poem consists, in the present copy, of upwards of 56,000 Baits.

زين العابدين الكاتب : Copyist

The volume contains fifty-two whole-page miniatures, in fair Persian style.

On the first page is a Persian note, dated Rabī' II., 1248 (September, 1832), in which the writer states that he was sending this book as a souvenir to the English Prime Minister (Earl Grey). The writer's seal bears the name of Muhammad Husain, i.e. Hājī Muḥammad Husain, Amīn ud-Daulah, the second minister of the Persian court (see p. 392 b, notes).

Add. 5600.

Foll. 585; $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 8; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in a small and neat Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with rich 'Unvāns and ornamental headings, apparently in the 16th century; bound in glazed and painted covers. [N. BRASSEY HALHED.] The Shāhnāmah, with a version of the older preface, foll. 2b-7b, which differs in some parts from the text of Add. 21,103.

The total number of distichs amounts to about 51,000.

The volume contains ninety miniatures, each of which occupies the larger part of a page. They are executed in the best Indian style, and are signed by different artists. The names of Kāsim, Kamāl, Shimāl, Banwārī, and Bhagwatī, recur frequently.

On the first page is a Persian note stating that this Shāhnāmah had been bestowed by His late Majesty Jahāngīr on the least of his servants, Ilāhvirdī Chelah, in the Sth year of the reign (A.H. 1022), and had been presented by the latter to his brother Khwājah Muḥammad Rashīd. On the opposite page are found the seal and signature of Muḥammad 'Arif, son of the last named Muḥammad Rashīd, and those of some later owners.

Hähvirdi, a Turk, who traced his origin to the Saljūks, entered in early life the service of Sultān Parvīz, and afterwards that of Jahāngir, with whom his skill in hunting soon made him a great favourite. He rose in the reign of Shāhjahān to high military commands; but was put to death by Prince Shujā' in the 32nd year of the reign. See his life in Maāşir ul-Umarā, Add. 6567, fol. 50 b, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, Add. 16,703, fol. 14 b.

Add. 7724.

Foll: 471; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{4}{4}$; 27 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvān; dated Rabi' I., A.H. 1021 (A.D. 1612).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The Shähnāmah, with the preface of Bäisunghar, foll. 1 b—11 a, the first two pages of which have been restored by a later hand, as well as foll. 135—6, 192—3, 236—7, 319—342. The number of distichs in this copy is not much over 48,000.

The volume contains ten whole-page miniatures in Persian style, most of which are somewhat rubbed and discoloured.

محمد مومن بن كمال الدين : Copyist

Add. 16,761.

Foll. 525; 11⁴/₄ in. by 7¹/₄; 25 lines, 4¹/₄ in. long; written in small Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with rich 'Unvāns and illuminated headings; dated Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1023 (A.D. 1614). [WM. YULE.]

The Shāhnāmah with the older preface, foll. 1 b - 7 a.

To the ordinary conclusion of the poem are added some verses, partly taken from the satire on Sultan Mahmūd.

The total number of distichts does not exceed 48,000.

This volume contains forty miniatures, in good Persian style, each of which occupies the greater part of a page.

ابن حسين محمد زمان خاتون ابادي : Copvist

Add. 27,258.

Foll. 660; 14¼ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unväns; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1037 (A.D. 1628.)

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

The Shāhnāmah, with the preface of Bāisunghar, foll. 1 b—11 a.

The poem is divided into four parts, each with a separate 'Unvān. The first ends with the fight of Rustam and the Dīv Akvān (Maean's edition, p. 753), fol. 243 a; the second with the reign of Kaikhusrau (ibid. p. 1030), fol. 366 b; the third with the reign of Kubād (ib. p. 1617), fol. 529 b; and the fourth completes the poem.

The text is perhaps the longest, or most interpolated, in existence. The total number of distichs is, according to a calculation entered on the first page, 61,266.

VOL. II.

This copy is mentioned by M. Mohl in his preface, p. 82, as the main source of the text published by Lumsden, Calcutta, 1811.

The MS. contains sixty-three miniatures, in fair Persian style, each occupying half a page or more.

نظام بن مبير على : Copyist

Add. 4943.

Foll. 283; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns, with a 'Unvān; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 1054 (A.D. 1644).

The latter half of the Shāhnāmah, corresponding to pp. 1155—2096 of Macan's edition.

On the first page is written: "Presented by Claud Russell, Esq., Oct. 5, 1781."

Add. 6609.

Foll. 611; 11 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long, in a page; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with several rich 'Unvāns, apparently in the 17th century. It is partially injured by damp and torn.

[J. F. HULL.]

The Shāhnāmah, in about 48,000 distichs.

Prefixed to the poem are:-1. The older preface, in a fuller recension than in Add. 5600, fol. 1 b. 2. An extract from a work on general history, with tabulated lists of the early kings of Persia, fol. 8 a. 3. A short alphabetical glossary of obsolete words, bcginning ..., fol. 10 b.

The poem, which begins on fol. 13 b, is divided into two parts, the first of which closes with Dakīkī's apparition to Firdūsī in a dream (Macan's edition, p. 1065), fol. 338 a.

Single leaves are missing after fol. 30 verses of the satire on Mahmud.

(Maean, pp. 46-48) and after fol. 583 (ib. pp. 1679-1681).

Five miniatures, in Indian style, more or less defaced, which have been inserted, foll. 61, 81, 219, 398, 446, once belonged to other MSS. The same leaves contain portions of older texts.

This copy was written by Haidar Muhammad Tabrīzī for an officer called Mīrzā 'Ivaz Beg Salmānī. Of the date of transcription the last figure only, 8, is legible. An 'Ivaz Beg, afterwards 'Ivaz Khān, held a military command at Kābul in the first year of Shāhjāhan (A.H. 1037—8), and died A.H. 1050; see Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 70 b, and Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 377 b.

At beginning and end is impressed the seal of Sayyid Jalāl 'Ālamgīrshāhī (i.e. an Amīr of Aurangzīb's reign), with the date A.H. 1088.

Add. 6610.

Foll. 311; 13 in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{7}{3}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with a 'Unvān, probably in the 17th century. [J. F. HULL.]

The first half of the poem (Macan's edition, pp. 1-1065), with forty-seven halfpage miniatures, in a second-rate Indian style.

Add. 18,804.

Foll. 358; 14 in. by $9\frac{3}{4}$; 20 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvāns; dated Parganah of Rājūr, Rabī' I., and Rajab, A.H. 1131 (A.D. 1719).

The latter half of the Shāhnāmah, divided into two volumes, corresponding to pp. 1028—1587. and 1588—2096 of Macan's edition.

The concluding section contains some verses of the satirc on Mahmūd.

538

The MS. was written, as stated in the subscriptions, for a man of rank called Ajagat Singh مبتد احکت سنکه جیو, by Khalīl Ullah, surnamed Haft-Ķalamī. It contains ninetyseven miniatures, in fair Indian style, a few of which only are whole-page.

Add 25,797.

Foll. 131; 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns, apparently early in the 18th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

The first quarter of the Shähnämah (Macan's edition, pp. 1-552).

The MS. is dated in the fourth year of the reign, probably that of Bahādur Shāh, A.H. 1121-2.

میان شیع خلیل الله : Copyist

Egerton 682-685.

Four uniform volumes, containing respectively foll. 198, 185, 157, and 142; 16½ in. by 9¾; 23 lines, 6¼ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns; dated Kundapili (Condapilly, district of Masulipatan), Rabi' I., A.H. 1202 (A.D. 1788); bound in embossed leather covers. [ADAM CLARKE.]

The Shāhnāmah, in about 58,500 distichs.

The first two volumes contain the first half of the poem, corresponding to pp. 1—1030 of Macan's edition, the third corresponds to pp. 1030—1595, the fourth to pp. 1595— 2096, and has the satire on Sultan Mahmūd, in a recension which differs considerably from the printed texts.

Prefixed to the first volume is an English notice on Firdūsī, extracted from Jos. Champion's "Poems of Ferdosi," Calcutta, 1785.

على أكبر ولد محمد محسن ذكى الحسيني : Copyist

Add. 26,143.

Foll. 272; 12 in. by 9; 25 lines, 5 in.

long; written in Nestalik, in four columns, apparently in the 18th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The first half of the Shāhnāmah (Macan's edition, pp. 1-982).

Add. 25,798.

Foll. 201; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. CURETON.]

An abridgment of Firdūsī's Shāhnāmah, consisting of copious extracts from the poem, connected by a prose narrative.

Author: Tavakkul Beg, son of Tulak Beg, توكل بيك ولد تولك بيئ

حمد بیغایت و ثنای بی نهایت مر حضرت .Beg کبریای واجب الوجودرا

It appears from the preface that in the 26th year of Shāhjahān's reign, or A.H. 1063, the author was sent by Prince Dārā Shikūh, then Ṣūbahdār of Kābul, to Ghaznīn, as a confidential agent and news-writer, مرقايع نويس), and that he wrote the present compilation at the request of the governor of that place, Shamshīr Khān.

Shamshir Khān Tarīn, whose original name was Muḥammad Ḥayāt, had entered the imperial service in the first year of the reign of Shāhjahān. He was appointed Thānahdār of Ghaznīn in A.H. 1060, and retained that post till A.H. 1069, when he was transferred by Aurangzīb to the command of Kābul. See Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 357, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 59.

The author is called in another copy, Add. 5619, Tavakkul Muḥammad, son of Tūlak Muḥammad ul-Ḥusainī. The work is designated by the above title in three copies; in others it is called Khulāṣah i Shāhnāmah (Add. 6611, 27,269), Tārīkh i Dilkushāi P 2 Shamshīrkhānī (Or. 371, Add. 5619), and Tārīkh i Shamshīrkhānī. The history is brought down to the reign of Ardashīr Bābagān. The work concludes with a dry enumeration of that king's successors, and a notice on the Shāhnāmah and Firdūsī's life, extracted from the older preface.

The Shamshīrkhānī is the original of the work published by J. Atkinson, "The Shahnamah of Firdausi," London, 1832. It is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 20, Mohl's preface, p. 79, Ouseley's Travels, vol. ii. p. 540, and the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 540.

Or. 371.

Foll. 232; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1155 (A.D. 1742).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same work.

By some mistake of the transcriber the first three pages of the notice on Firdūsī, which are found in their proper place, fol. 227 b, have been also written at the beginning of the volume, where they are followed, without any apparent break, by the preface Tavakkul Beg.

This volume contains seventy-six miniatures, in Indian style, each occupying about one third of a page.

It was transcribed by محمد الصافيل, for Miyān Sukhan-Fahm Jīv.

Egerton 1105.

Foll. 263; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{7}{6}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, at Murshidābād, about the beginning of the 18th century.

[ADAM CLARKE.]

The same work.

محمد رضا بیک ولد محمد عارف بیک : Copyist ابن عادل بیک بدخشی

Add. 6939.

Foll. 722; 13 in. by 8; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley, on paper watermarked 1811.

A transcript of the preceding MS., with an English translation.

Add. 7725.

Foll. 157; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 20 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian character; dated Rabi^{*} I., A.H. 1198 (A.D. 1784).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work. Copyist: باسو لعل منشی ولد بارهمل

Add. 6611.

Foll. 270; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, 5 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, with ruled margins; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1212 (A.D. 1798). [J. F. HULL.]

The same work.

This copy does not contain the life of Firdūsī, but ends with an extract from the satire on Maḥmūd, foll. 268 b—270 a.

Add. 27,269.

Foll. 270; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 7; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, in the 18th century.

The same work, ending also with an extract from the satire on Mahmūd.

On the fly-leaf is written: "From His Highness the Nabob of the Carnatic, to John Macdonald Kinneir."

Add. 5619.

Foll. 214; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century. [N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

The same work, without the life of Firdüsī.

Add. 6949.

Foll. 19; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley.

A transcript of the first six folios of the preceding MS.

Add. 24,415.

Foll. 160; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, in a page; written in Indian Nestalik, at Vellore, A.D. 1804. [Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

The same work. At the end, and by another hand, is added a second and different recension of the satire on Mahmūd.

محمد ٿيپو ولد احمد حسين خان مرحوم : Copyist

The above shows that the MS. was written after the death of the transcriber's father, Aḥmad Ḥusain Khān, which, according to a versified chronogram written on the flyleaf, took place in Zulhijjah, A.H. 1218 (April, 1804). A note, in the hand of Dr. John Leyden, states that he perused it in November, 1804.

Royal 16 B. XIV.

Foll. 118; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated in the month of Shahrīvar of the year 1040 of Yazdagird (A.D. 1671). [Tho. Hyde.]

شاهنامه، نثر

An abridgment of the Shahnamah in prose.

سپاس بیقیاس مرایزد بچون بی مثل بی . نمون

It appears from the preface that the author, a Parsee, wrote this abstract by desire of Captain Aungier, کپیتان مستر انجن, who had no mind to read the bulky poem.

It may be noticed that the episode of Barzū, which does not belong to Firdūsi's work, is treated here at some length, foll. 70 a - 79 a.

At the end are some verses in the epic metre, in which the author records the presentation of his book to Mr. Aungier, and the reward he obtained from him.

On the fly-leaf is found the following note: "This is a most excellent booke and not to be gotten here amongst them. I got it from our worthy President, Mr. Aungier. The learned Herbud was very loath I should part with it before he had taken a coppy of it, but it could not be done, our ships being soe near their departure."

From this it would appear that the MS. contains the original draft, and that the scribe, who in the subscription calls himself Khwurshid, son of Isfandiyār, an inhabitant of the town of Nausārī, was the author himself.

This MS. is described by Sir Wm. Ouseley in his Travels, vol. ii. p. 540. See the same scholar's Oriental Collection, vol. i. pp. 218, 359, and vol. ii. p. 45, Hyde, Historia Religionis Persarum, p. 319, and Mohl, Preface to the Shāhnāmah, p. 79.

Add. 6938.

Foll. 171; 13 in. by 8; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley, on paper watermarked 1812.

A transcript of the first portion of the preceding MS., foll. $1 \ b$ —95 b, with an English translation extending to the first three quarters of the text.

Add. 7664.

 Foll. 72; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in.

 long; written in large Nestalik; dated A.H.

 1222 (A.D. 1807).

 [Cl. J. RICH.]

دره چهار پاره

An abridgment, in prose, of Firdūsī's account of the Pishdādis.

[•] Mr. Aungier was President in Surat, where he died in 1677. See Bruce's Annals of the East India Company.

Author; Farīdūn B. Muḥammad Ķāsim Halālkhwur Māzandarānī, فريدون بن محمد قاسم حلالخور مازندراني چون در سنه هزار دویست شانزده هجری Beg.

For this composition we are indebted to the curious taste of Fath 'Alī Shāh, who, as is quaintly stated in the preface, being extremely fond of the Shāhnāmah, gave, in A.H. 1216, the order to turn it into prose. The task was divided, the Kayānis devolving on Mirzā Muḥammad Riẓā Tabrīzī, the Ashkānis on Mirzā 'Īsā Farāhāni, the Sāsānis on Mirzā 'Abd ul-Vahhāb Iṣfahānī, and the Pīshdādis on the present writer.

The above title, written at the top of the first page, apparently applies to the aggregate of the four versions.

The present copy breaks off in the account of Kāvah's rising against Zaḥḥāk (Macan's edition, p. 36).

Add. 24,095.

Foll. 16; 16 in. by $11\frac{1}{2}$; 29 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, apparently in the 17th century.

Fragments of the Shahriyār-Nāmah.

Author: Mukhtārī, مختارى

This is one of several poems written in imitation of Firdūsī, and engrafted as episodes on the Shāhnāmah. Its hero is Shahriyār, son of Barzū, the son of Suhrāb, and consequently great-grandson of Rustam. The scene of his adventures is laid in India.

The title and the author's name are found in the concluding lines, which are as follows:

> بسر شد کنون نامه شهریار بتوفیق یزدان پروردکار شها شهریارا سرا سرورا نکهدار تخت و جهان داورا

It will be seen from the above that Mukhtārī wrote the Shahriyār Nāmah, in the space of three years, by order of Mas'ūd Shāh, not from his own invention, but from a narrative which he had to put into verse. The poet concludes by claiming the reward to which he was entitled, but adds, in evident allusion to Firdūsī's diatribe against Mahmūd, that, even should none be vouchsafed, he will never think of resorting to satire. The last couplet is a transition which leads back to a passage of the Shāhnāmah, in which Isfandiyār is described as going forth to battle.

The king, who is called in the above verses "the rose of the garden of Mahmūd," is apparently Mas'ūd, the son and successor of the great Mahmūd Ghaznavī. Mas'ūd wrested the throne from his brother Muhammad in A.H. 422, and was himself expelled from his realm by the Saljūks, A.H. 432.

 $\mathbf{542}$

There is, however, no record of a poet ealled Mukhtari at that period. The earliest poet known by that surname is Sirāj ud-Dīn 'Usman B. Muhammad, of Ghaznin, who first used 'Usman as his Takhallus, and adopted towards the end of his life that of Mukhtari. He was in great favour with Sultan Ibrāhim B. Mas'ūd, who reigned from A.H. 451 to 481 (see the Kāmil, vol. x. pp. 3, 110), lived afterwards in Kirman, at the court of Arslan Shāh B. Kirmān Shāh (A.H. 494-536; Jahānārā, fol. 97), and died in Ghaznīn, according to Taki, Oude Catalogue, p. 16, A.H. 554, or, as stated in the Atashkadah, Add. 7671, fol. 59, A.H. 514. Mukhtārī is said to have excelled in every kind of poetry. He is mentioned with high praise by Sana'i, who calls him his master. Notices of Mukhtari will be found in Daulatshah's Tazkirah, fol. 48, and Hammer's Redekünste, p. 104, Haft Iklim, fol. 137, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 405.

If the Shahriyār-Nāmah is to be ascribed to this poet, the Mas'ūd Shāh for whom it was written can be no other than Mas'ūd B. Ibrāhīm, who was, not the son, but the greatgrandson, of Maḥmūd, and reigned from A.H. 481 to 508 (see the Kāmil, vol. x. pp. 111, 353).

It must be remarked, however, that no mention of a similar poem is to be found in the notices on Mukhtārī above quoted.

The first and longest of the three fragments included in this volume, foll. 1 a— 11 a, begins with the single combats in which Farāmurz (Rustam's sou) engages, first with Raihān, a black giant, and then with the chief of the Indian army, who turns out to be his grand-nephew Shahriyār. After mutual recognition they part, Farāmurz returning to Irān, and Shahriyār proceeding to the palace of Farānak, Queen of Sarandib, whom he enjoins to release her captive Arzang. She feigns submission, but treacherously causes Shahriyār to fall into a well, in which she keeps him in durance.

In the meanwhile Arjāsp, the king of Turān, who was besieging Luhrāsp in the city of Balkh, dispatches the Dīv Arhang, son of Pūlādvand, with an army to Sīstān. Zāl, in the absence of Rustam, then far away in Khāvar land, sends his second son Zavārah to oppose the Dīv, and, after a first encounter in which the latter is worsted, marches forth himself, and puts him to flight.

The next fragment, foll. 12, 13, which probably belongs to an earlier part of the poem, relates the arrival of Zāl at the court of King Salomon. The latter tests the wit of Zāl by means of a riddle relating to the twelve sons of Jacob, and his strength by a fight with a Demon called Ahriman.

Fol. 14 contains the end of the poem, and concludes with the lines quoted above.

The last two leaves of the volume, foll. 15 and 16, contain two detached fragments of the Shāhnāmah, both relating to Isfandiyār. In the first he enters the brazen fortress, and slays Arjāsp (see Macan's edition, pp. 150-1); in the second he claims the crown from his father Gushtāsp (ib. pp. 1163-5).

Twelve out of the above sixteen folios have on one side whole-page miniatures, in a good Indian style of the 17th century.

Add. 6941.

Foll. 197; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 22 lines, about 3 in. long; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley on paper water-marked 1811.

A poem written in imitation of the Shāhnāmah, and treating of the exploits of Sām, son of Narīmān, and his love adventures with the Chinese princess Parīdukht.

خواجو ,Author: Khwājū

هسیاس ان خدای ایزد رهنهای .Beg که از کاف و نون کرد کیتی بای

The author gives his name towards the end, in the following distich, fol. 197 a:

and describes his poem, in the next-following lines, as a rivulet from the sea of Firdūsī, to whom he is like an atom to the sun, and a drop to the ocean.

The poem begins with a short doxology and an extensive passage of the Shāhnāmah, relating to the court held by Minuchihr after his accession, and his allocution to Sām, the Pahlavān (Macan's edition, pp. 95, 96). The original composition begins, fol. 6 a, with Sām's setting out on a hunting expedition. The concluding sections relate how Sām, after slaying the emperor of China, and scating the Vazīr's son, Kamartāsh, on his throne, procceds with Paridukht to the land of Khāvar, and returns from thence to the court of Minüchihr. The narrative is not drawn from national tradition, but from individual fancy, and has all the features of a Persian fairy tale of the modern type.

Professor Spiegel has given in the Zeitschrift der Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. iii. pp. 245—261, an analysis of the Sām Nāmah, from a MS. belonging to the East India Library, in the subscription of which the author is called Khwājū Kirmānī. This is the name of a well-known poet, who died about A.H. 745, and whose works will be mentioned further on. This identification is confirmed by the substance of the Sām Nāmah, which, as remarked by Spiegel, agrees to some extent with that of the Humāi Humāyūn, a poem undoubtedly due to Khwājū Kirmānī. It must be observed, however, that the biographical notices of the latter poet make no mention of the Sām Nāmah.

Jules Mohl gives a short account of the Sām Nāmah, without naming the author, from a complete copy in his possession, which contained 11,000 distichs. See the preface to the Shāhnāmah, p. 59. Another copy, containing 30,000 distichs, is mentioned by Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 594. See also Aumer, Munich Catalogue, p. 7.

The present copy contains no more than 4200 distichs. It has been transcribed from a MS. dated the tenth of Rajab, A.H. 1084.

In an English notice, prefixed to the volume by J. H. Hindley, the work is described as "the first historical poem of the Shah Namu by the celebrated Abool Kausim Firdoosee of Toos."

Or. 346.

Foll. 275; 8 in. by 5; about 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, probably in the 18th century.

[Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

Another copy of the same poem, wanting both beginning and end.

It begins in the midst of the account of the first meeting of $S\bar{a}m$ with the princess Paridukht (Add. 6941, fol. 8 b.)

The text differs considerably from that of the preceding copy. It is more copious, and contains much additional matter. The latter part deals with Sām's warlike deeds in the Maghrib, and comes abruptly to an end after his victory over 'Auj the 'Adite, king of Țanjah, when the latter sends a message to his mother Khātūrah, imploring the aid of her witcheraft against his foe.

The poet's name occurs in the following verse, fol. 85 a:-

سراینده خواجوی موبد نواد چنین کرد از ماه بیمهر یاد The corresponding verse in the preceding copy, fol. 99 b, is,

The present MS., in its imperfect state, contains upwards of 8000 distichs.

It bears the stamps of the kings of Oude.

Add. 24,093.

Foll. 222; 10½ in. by 6; 15 lines, 24 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvān; dated Muharram, A.H. 1055 (A.D. 1645); bound in neatly painted covers. [WM. H. MORLEY.]

Yūsuf and Zulaikhā, a poem.

فردوسى , Author : Firdūsī

بنام خداوند هر دو سرای Beg. که جاوید باشد بهر دو سرای

It is stated in Bāisunghar's preface to the Shāhnāmah (Macan's Persian preface, p. 55, and Add. 7724, fol. 10), that Firdūsī composed this poem in Baghdād in order to ingratiate himself with the Khalif, who saw with displeasure the praises bestowed in the Shāhnāmah upon heathenish kings. Macan asserts, however, in the English preface, p. 52, and on the authority of a copy of the Yūsuf u Zulaikhā in his possession, that Firdūsī "wrote it at the instigation of the governor of Irak."

The prologue of the present copy makes no mention of the latter personage; but it contains a short panegyrie on a prince, designated in the heading as "Sovereign of Islamism," بادشاه اسلام, by which is meant, no doubt, the reigning Khalif, al-Ķādir Billah (A.H. 381—442). In the next-following section Firdūsī says, in evident allusion to the Shāhnāmah, that he had hitherto sung the fabulous deeds of ancient kings, but that now, that old age held him tight in its elaw, مرا سخت بکرفت پیری بچنگ, he turned to a truer and more holy theme.

The Yūsuf u Zulaikhā is mentioned by 'Alī Kulī Khān in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 332, and by Lutf 'Alī Khān in the Atashkadah, p. 82. Both allow that it is worthy by its style of the great master; but the former takes objection to its metre, as one unsuited to any but heroic subjects, while the latter remarks that it shows a genius enfeebled by ago and grief. See also Mohl, preface to the Shahnamah, pp. 42, 46, Ouseley's Biographical Notices, p. 91, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 55, Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 519, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 407. Two lithographed editions of the poem are mentioned in the Fihrist i Kutub, or list of books issued from the press of Naval Kishor, p. 61. نصر الله كاتب ابن مرحومی مغفوری ملا : Copvist

طاهر بكرى Further down, and in the same handwriting, is a note dated the ninth of Rabi' I., A.H. 1055, stating that the MS. had been collated and corrected in the town of Patnah by Mulla Kasim and Kazī 'Abd ul-Majīd

Sivistānī. The number of Baits in the present copy scarcely exceeds 6500, while the MSS. of T. Macan and Sir Gore Ouseley are said to contain 9000. Peneilled notes in the margins show that the late owner, W. H. Morley, had compared it with the former of those MSS., and had found important differences.

The following notice on the fly-leaf is signed by the last-named scholar, and dated 1840: "This poem was for a long time supposed to be lost. There are but four MSS. of it now known to exist—one in the library of the College of Fort William in Bengal; a second in the collection of N. Bland, Esq., which is probably copied from the last, and was purchased at Major Macan's sale; a third in the library of the Royal Asiatic Society, which is correct, but imperfect at the beginning and the end; and the present MS., which is more correct than Mr. Bland's MS., and more copious than either that or the MS. of the Royal Asiatic Society."

VOL. II.

Prefixed to the volume is a short note signed Kazimirski, from which it appears that the MS. owes its elegant binding to Hasan 'Alī Khān, the Persian ambassador at the French court, to whom it had been lent.

Or. 330.

Foll. 109; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 8 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in large Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

رباعيات عمر خيام

Quatrains of 'Umar Khayyām, arranged in alphabetical order.

آمد سحری نــدا ز میخانده ما .Beg. کای رند خراباتی دیواند^و ما

The author, who calls himself in his Arabic works Abul-Fath 'Umar Ibn Ibrāhīm al-Khayyāmī, is no less celebrated as mathematician and astronomer, than as the writer of the witty, often cynical, epigrams called Rubā'iyāt.

Nizām ul-Mulk, who was born A.H. 408, states in a passage of his Vaṣāyā (see p. 446 a), which has been quoted at length in the Rauzat uṣ-Ṣafā, vol. iv. p. 61, abridged in Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 2, p. 69, and translated by S. de Sacy, Notices et Extraits, vol. ix. p. 143, that Ḥakīm 'Umar Khayyām of Nīshāpūr, was of the same age as himself, and had attended with him the lessons of the Imām Muwaffak in that city. When Nizām ul-Mulk was raised by Alp Arslān to the office of Vazīr, he bestowed upon his former schoolmate a pension of 1200 tūmāns. In the reign of Malak, Shāh 'Umar Khayyām came to Marv, and soon reached the highest station to which a man of science can attain.

'Umar Ibn Ibrāhīm al-Khayyāmī is mentioned in the Kāmil, vol. x. p. 67, as the first of the astronomers who were summoned by Malak Shāh in A.H. 467 to institute astronomical observations, and he was the editor of the Zīj in which they were recorded; see Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 570. According to Daulat Shāh he also enjoyed the favour of Sultan Sanjar, who used to give him a seat by his side on the throne. 'Umar Khayyām is stated to have died in Nīshāpūr, A.H. 517. See Hyde, De Religione Veterum Persarum, Oxon., 1700, p. 498, Oude Catalogue, p. 464, and Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 496.

His treatise on algebra has been published, with a French translation, by F. Woepeke, Paris, 1851. The quatrains have been edited in Teheran by Sanjar Mīrzā, A.H. 1278. The same text has been reproduced with a few additions, and accompanied with a French version, by J. B. Nicolas, Paris, 1867. Some select Rubā'is, 101 in number, have been rendered in English verse by Edward Fitzgerald, London, 1859, 1872 and 1879, others in German, by A. F. von Schack, Stuttgart, 1878.

Notices on 'Umar Khayyām are to be found in Daulatshāh, Or. 469, fol. 110, Haft Iklīm, fol. 312, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 155, and Atashkadah, p. 124. See also the Caleutta Review, No. 59, Reinaud, Géographie d'Aboulféda, préface, p. 101, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 80, and Jahrbücher, vol. 66, Anzeigeblatt, p. 29, Garcin de Tassy, Journal Asiatique, 5° Série, vol. ix. p. 548, and Sédillot, ib., vol. ii. p. 323.

The present copy contains 423 quatrains, and ends with No. 400 of M. Nicolas' edition.

The last three pages contain some verses eomposed by Shāh 'Alam Pādishāh during his captivity. On the fly-leaf is a seal bearing the name of 'Abd ul-Majīd Khān, with the date 1143; also a note stating that the MS. is in the handwriting of Mīr Abul-Hasan.

Or. 331.

Foll. 92; $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $2\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $1\frac{3}{5}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with goldruled margins, dated Kūl , $\overline{20}$, Ramazān, A.H. 1033 (A.D. 1624).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Another copy of the Rubā'iyāt, slightly imperfect in the beginning, and containing 540 quatrains. The first is No. 11 of M. Nicolas' edition, the last, No. 426.

A modern title on the fly-leaf, رباعیات سرمد, wrongly ascribes the work to Sarmad, a later poet, also renowned for his Rubä'is. This Sarmad was a Jew, born at Kāshān, and whose original name was Sa'id. He embraced Islamism and went to India, where he led the life of a Faķir. He incurred the displeasure of Aurangzīb, who put him to death shortly after his accession (A.H. 1068), on the charge of infidelity. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 220 b., Mirāt ul-'Alam, fol. 483 b, Atashkadah, p. 204, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 96, 112.

Add. 27,318.

Foll. 57; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, in two gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvān, apparently in the 16th century. [DUNCAN FORBES.]

ديوان ابو الفرج رونى

The Divan of Abu'l-Faraj Runi.

سپهر دولت ودين آفتاب هفت اتليم . اب و المظفر شاه مظفر ابراهيم

Abul-Faraj B. Mas'ūd Rūnī was, according, to 'Aufī (Oude Catalogue, pp. 5 and 308), born and educated in Lahore. He is also mentioned among the natives of that city in the Haft Iklīm, fol. 14, and his Nisbah is derived, according to Badaoni, Muntakhab ut-Tavārīkh, vol. i. p. 37, from Rūn, an ancient village, now ruined, of the district of Lahore, a statement confirmed by the Farhang i Jahangiri and the Burhan i Kați', which call Rün a town of Hindustan. The Atashkadah, however, p. 122, derives it from Rūnah, in Dasht i Khāvarān, while the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 5, and the Khulāsat ul-Afkar, fol. 5, place the poet's native town Run in Sistan, owing apparently to a confusion with an earlier poet of the same name, Abul-Faraj Sijzī, or Sijistānī, who lived under the Amir Abu 'Ali Simjūr in the fourth century of the Hijrah; see Daulatshah, Or. 469, fol. 28, and Hammer, Redekünste, p. 45.

Abul-Faraj Rūnī lived in the latter part of the fifth century, under Sultan Ibrāhīm Ghaznavī, and his son and successor Mas'ūd B. Ibrāhīm, to both of whom several pieces of his Dīvān are addressed. Sultan Ibrāhīm succeeded to his brother Farrukhzād A.H. 450 or 451, and died, according to the Kāmil, vol. x. p. 110, and the Rauzat uş-Ṣafā, vol. iv. p. 43, A.H. 481, or, as stated in the Țabaķāt i Nāşirī, Nizām ut-Tavārīkh, and Guzīdah, A.H. 492. Mas'ūd, who succeeded immediately to his father, reigned till A.H. 508.

If the latter, and more probable, date for the accession of Mas'ūd be adopted, the statement of the Mir'āt ul-'Alam that Abul-Faraj Rūnī died A.H. 482 is necessarily incorrect, for he addresses Mas'ūd B. Ibrāhīm in several poems as the reigning sovereign.

Abul-Faraj has been highly praised and imitated by Anvarī, and other poets of a subsequent period. A contemporary poet, Mas'ūd i Sa'd i Salmān, prides himself, in a verse quoted in the Haft Iķlīm, on being his pupil.

The Dīvān is not alphabetically arranged. It consists almost entirely of Ķasīdahs, which are in praise of the two sovereigns above-mentioned, of the Vazīr 'Abd ul-Ḥamīd (who held that office, as stated in Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii. Juz 4, p. 32, during the latter part of Ibrāhīm's reign), of the Ṣadr ul-Islām, Manṣūr B. Sa'īd, and other dignitaries of the court of Ghaznīn. At the end, foll. 51—57, are found some Ķit'ahs and Rubā'is; among the former, a piece on a palace in belonging to the above-named poet, Mas'ūd i Sa'd, and the latter's answer in praise of Abul-Faraj.

Egerton 701.

Foll. 201; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 16 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ long; written in a small and neat Nestalik, in two gold-ruled columns, with two 'Unvāns; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1008 (A.D. 1600).

[ADAM CLARKE.]

ددوان مسعود سعد سلمان

The Dīvān of Masʿūd B. Saʿd B. Salmān. شاد باش ای میپہر آینددار کہ کشادی جو آیند اسرار

'Aufī says that Mas'ūd was born in Hamadān, while in the Tazkirah of Daulatshāh and the Atashkadah he is called a native of Jurjān. Both statements are contradicted by the poet himself, who says in the following lines, fol. 162, that the envious can only reproach him with being a youth and a native of "this eity":

The poem contains a eulogy on Mahmūd Saif ud-Dīn, the son of Sultan Ibrāhīm, and was apparently composed in the royal residence, Ghaznīn. After rising to a position of high rank at the Ghaznavi court, Masʿūd incurred the displeasure of Ibrāhīm, who suspected him of plotting with his son, prince Saif ud-Dīn Mahmūd, and sent him a prisoner, A.H. 472, to the hill-fort of Nāi. There Mas'ūd underwent a long period of captivity in the life-time of Ibrāhīm, and again during the reign of his successor, Mas'ūd B. Ibrāhīm. After his final release he adopted a religious life, and died, according to Nizāmī 'Arūzī, quoted in Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, A.H. 515, or, as stated by Taķī Kāshī, A.H. 525.

Daulatshāh gives under the name of Mas'ūd B. Sa'd B. Salmān (Or. 469, fol. 39, and Redekünste, p. 42) the life of a poet who lived at the court of Minuchihr B. Kābūs (A.H. 409—424). He has evidently confounded, with his usual inaccuracy, Mas'ūd with his father, Sa'd B. Salmān. The two lives are curiously blended into one in a notice prefixed to the present copy of the $D\bar{v}an$, foll. 1—6.

Notices on Mas'ūd i Sa'd will be found in the Haft Iklīm, fol. 416, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 407, Badāonī's Muntakhab, vol. i. p. 36, Atashkadah, p. 147, Subḥat ul-Murjān, Or. 1761, fol. 98, Haft Āsmān, p. 19, and Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 282. The story of his chequered life has been told at some length by Dr. Sprenger, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. xxii. pp. 442—4, and by N. Bland, Journal Asiatique, 5° Série, vol. ii. pp. 356—369.

'Aufi's statement regarding three Dīvāns left by Mas'ūd, namely in Arabic, Persian, and Hindī, is confirmed by Amīr Khusrau in his preface to the Ghurrat ul-Kamāl, Add. 21,104, fol. 175 a.

The present Dīvān, which is not alphabetically arranged, consists chiefly of Kasīdahs in praise of three sovereigns of the Ghaznavi dynasty, viz. Ibrāhīm, Mas'ūd B. Ibrāhīm, and Bahrām Shāh, who reigned, according to the Kāmil, vol. x. p. 356, vol. xi. p. 124, from A.H. 512 to 548. Others are addressed to prince Maḥmūd, son of Ibrāhīm, to the poet's master Abul-Faraj Rūnī, and to some dignitaries of the court of Ghaznin. Several pieces contain the author's laments on his protracted captivity.

The latter part of the volume contains a Maşnavî, fol. 149 b, some Marşiyahs, fol. 174 a, Mukațța'āt, fol. 182 b, and Rubā'iyāt, fol. 193 a.

An extract from this Divān is mentioned in the Munich Catalogue, p. 8.

Add. 7793.

Foll. 244; 74 in. by 44. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—164; 14 lines, 2§ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1005 (A.D. 1597).

Another copy of the preceding Divān, containing about two thirds of the poems found in the last, but in a different order.

The first Kasidah, which begins thus:

جداکانه سوزم زهر اختری

is found at fol. 67 of the preceding MS.

II. Foll. 165-244; 12 lines, 2[§] in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Haidarábád, Ramazán, A.H. 1021 (A.D. 1612).

Another copy of the Divān of Abu 'l-Faraj Rūnī (see p. 547 a).

The contents are nearly the same as in the first copy, but the arrangement is somewhat different.

محمد مقيم بن اميري الاسترابادي : Copyist

Add. 16,777.

Foll. 386; 10³/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 15 lines, 3¹/₂ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins; dated A.H. 1076 (A.D. 1665). [WM. YULE.]

The "Garden of Truth," a poem on ethics and religious life.

Author: Sanā'ī, سنائی

ای درون پروری برون آرای .Beg. وی خرد بخش بپخرد بخشای

Abul-Majd Majdūd B. Adam Sanā'ī was, as he states in the present poem, fol. 372, ورچه ورچه, a native of Ghaznīn, and lived in the reign of Bahrām Shāh (A.H. 512-548). A great part of the fourth book is devoted to a panegyric on that prince and a description of his court. The Ḥadīķah was completed; as stated in the concluding lines, A.H. 525:

Some copies however have A.H. 535. The former date is adopted by Jāmī, Nafahāt, p. 693, who adds that Sanā'i died in the same year. See also Habib us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 33, Haft Iklim, fol. 132, Majālis ul-'Ushshāk, fol. 53, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 300, Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 40, Haft Asman, p. 20, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 201. Jāmī's statement is fully confirmed by a preface preserved in Or. 358, and noticed further on. Taki Kāshī, in spite of his usual accuracy, places Sanā'i's death in A.H. 545 (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 558), and Daulatshah, a very unsafe guide, in A.H. 576. The former is followed by the Atashkadah, fol. 53, and the latter by Hammer, Redekünste, p. 102, and by Ouseley, Biographical Notices, p. 184.

Khwānd Amīr points out, l.e., the glaring anachronism committed by Jāmī, who represents Sanā'ī as composing in his youth poems in praise of Sultan Maḥmūd, who died A.H. 421. The author of the Khulāṣat ul-Afkār states, fol. 105, without quoting his authority, that Sanā'ī was born A.H. 437.

Hakim Sanā'ī, as the author is generally called, is the earliest of the great Sufi poets. The greatest of all, Jalāl ud-Dīn Rūmī, refers to him as his master in spiritual knowledge, and his Hadīkah is one of the favourite text books of the sect. It is divided into ten books (Bāb), the contents of which are stated in the Jahrbücher, vol. 65, Anzeigeblatt, pp. 1—5. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 57, the Oude Catalogue, p. 557, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 326, the Munich Catalogue, p. 7, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 498.

At the end of the poem, fol. 384 b, is found an epilogue written in the same metre. It is addressed to the Imām Burhān ud-Dīn Abul-Ḥasan 'Alī B. Nāṣir, surnamed Biryāngar, الملقب ببريان كر, a doctor of Ghaznīn, who was then staying in Baghdād. The author beseeches him, for old friendship's sake, to state fairly his opinion on the preeeding poem, and to shield him from the malignant aspersions of some ignorant pretenders in Ghaznīn.

On the first page of the present copy is found the seal of Sultan-Muhammad, a servant of Padishah 'Alamgir, with the date 1080.

Add. 25,329.

Foll. 298; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with gold headings; dated Ṣafar, A. H. 890 (A.D. 1485). [ADAM CLARKE.]

The same work, wanting the latter part of the epilogue.

On the first page is the Persian seal of Archibald Swinton, dated A.H. 1174.

Or. 358.

Foll. 317; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, 2 in. long; written in small Nestalik, in two gold-ruled columns, with two 'Unvāns, apparently in the 16th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The same poem.

This eopy contains two prefaces in prose. The first, foll. 2 6-12 a, which begins thus : الحمد لله الخبير بخفيات الضمائر البصير بجبيات السراير is due to Muhammad B. 'Alī Raķķām, who calls himself the humblest of Sanā'i's diseiples. He states that the present sovereign, Yamin ud-Daulah Bahrāmshāh B. Mas'ūd, informed of the holy life of Sana'i, had offered him a post at his court, but that the latter, who had led for forty years a life of retirement and poverty, had begged leave to retain his independence. As a token of his gratitude for the Sultan's acquiescence, Sanā'ī began to write for him the present work, to حديقة الحقيقة والشريعة which he gave the title of While he was yet engaged upon its ,الطريقة composition, some portions were abstracted and divulged by certain ill-disposed persons, and the author determined to complete it without further delay. The writer of the prefaee had made, by order of Bahrāmshah, a fair transcript of the few thousand lines of which it consisted, when the poet's soul took its flight to a better world. The preface concludes with a rhymed table of the ten books of the Hadikah.

This preface is mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 40, who calls the writer Muhammad B. 'Alī ur-Raffā. See also the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 498.

The second preface, foll. 12 b—15 a, which is by Sanā'ī himself, and begins: سپاس سپاس مدوعیست که ^{بس}خن پاک ^سخن دان و ستایش مدوعیست is imperfect in the end.

Sanā'ī says that, while he was immersed in sadness at the thought that he should depart from this world without leaving any good work behind, he had been accosted by a loving friend, Ahmad B. Mas'ūd Mustaufī, who endeavoured to comfort him, and, probably, suggested to him the composition of the Hadīkah. But here the preface breaks off after the sixth page.

The last four leaves of the MS. have been supplied by a later hand.

The first page bears the seal of Shāh 'Ināyat Ullah, with the date A.H. 1178.

Add. 16,778.

Foll. 301; 10 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1040 (A.D. 1631). [WM. YULE.]

The same work, with marginal notes and additions. The date of composition in this copy is A.H. 535, which has been corrected in the margin to 525. [WM. YULE.]

Add. 26,150.

Foll. 246; 10 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with ruled margins and a 'Unvān, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same poem, with a few marginal notes and additions in the first pages. The date of composition at the end is A.H. 535.

Add. 27,311.

Foll. 302; 8[‡] in. by 4[‡]; 20 lines, 2[‡] in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [DUNCAN FORBES.]

ديوان سنائي

The Divan of Sana'i.

بس که شنیدی صفت روم وچین . خیز و بیا ملك سنائی به بین

It contains Kasidahs, Ghazals, and Rubā'is, without alphabetical arrangement, or any apparent system, except that the Rubā'is are placed at the end, foll. 277—302. It includes some pieces in praise of Bahrāmshāh.

The Dīvān of Sanā'i comprises, according to Daulatshāh, thirty thousand couplets. The present copy does not exceed eleven thousand.

Or. 269.

Foll. 75; 9½ in. by 5¾; 15 lines, 3¾ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Ahmad of Jam.

ای یاد تو بر دل و زبانها افتاد مجو روم در روانها .Beg

Abu Nasr Ahmad B. Abul-Hasan, surnamed Zhandahpil بزندوييل, was called Namakî from his birth-place, Nāmak, a village of the district of Jām, but his usual designation is Shaikh ul-Islām Ahmad i Jām. His countryman Jāmī devotes to him a long notice in the Nafahāt ul-Uns, pp. 405-417, an abstract of which has been given by Sprenger in the Oude Catalogue, p. 323. He was born A.H. 441, adopted a religious life in his twenty-second year, brought thousands to repentance, and died in great renown of sanctity A.H. 536, a date fixed, as stated in the Javāhir ul-Asrār, fol. 148, -Al. احمد جامی قدس سرة by the chronogram though illiterate, he composed several Sufi tracts, the best known of which is entitled . Other notices will be found . in the Majalis ul-Ushshak, fol. 57, Haft Iklim, fol. 282, Habib us-Siyar, II., Juz 3, p. 71, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 9, Khulāsat ul-Afkar, fol. 4, and Atashkadah, p. 73.

The Divan comprises Ghazals alphabetically arranged, a few Maşnavis, fol. 43 a, and some Rubā'is, foll. 54 a—60 a. The poet calls himself mostly Jāmī, and, in a a few places, Almad i Jām.

The latter part of the volume contains-1. A letter written by Jahāngīr to his son Sultan Khūram (Shāhjahān), when he suspected him of treasonable plots, and Khūram's answer, the latter in Maşnavi rhyme, fol. 60 b. 2. A love-poem, entitled محبت نامه سوز و كداز

The poem appears to have been written in the reign of Akbar, at the request of Prince Dāniyāl. The author designates himself by the name of y_{α} ; see fol. 71 a. On the first page of the volume are the stamps of the kings of Oude.

Or. 327.

Foll. 70; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 17 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Adib Sabir.

ای زمین را در رخت جون آسمان فر و بها Beg.

Adīb Sābir, a native of Tirmiz, was one of the favourite poets of Sanjar, and his great contemporary, Anvari, ranked him, in a verse quoted in Jāmi's Bahāristān, above himself. Historians state that Adīb Sābir was sent by Sanjar with a friendly message to Atsiz, and retained by the latter in Khwārazm. Having frustrated by a timely warning an attempt of that crafty vassal on the life of his sovereign, he thus incurred his anger, and was drowned by his order in the waters of the Jihun. This event is placed in the Guzidah, fol. 137, and the Rauzat us-Safa, vol. iv. p. 107, before A.H. 542, and by Taki Kāshi, Oude Catalogue, p. 16, in A.H. 540. Later dates are given in some Tazkirahs, viz. A.H. 546, in Daulatshah, fol. 47, and the Atashkadah, fol. 152, and A.H. 547 in the Haft Iklim, fol. 248. See also Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 104, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 10, Khulāsat ul-Afkār, fol. 6, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 121, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 313.

The Divān consists chiefly of Kasidahs; it includes also a Tarjī'-band, fol. 55 a, Muķatta'āt, fol. 59 b, and Rubā'iyāt, fol. 68 b.

Some of the laudatory poems are addressed to the Sultans Sanjar and Atsiz (see foll. 23 a, 34 a, 15 a); but most of them are devoted to the praises of the poet's earliest patron, Sayyid Majd ud-Din Abu 'l-Ķāsim 'Alī B. Ja'far, Ra'īs of Khorāsān, whom, as is stated, fol. 55 a, Sultan Sanjar used to eall his brother. The same personage is called in some of the above notices Abu Ja'far 'Alī B. ul-Ḥusain ul-Mūsavī, Ra'īs i Khorāsān.

This copy bears the stamps of the kings of Oude.

Add. 10,588.

Foll. 227; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

The Divan of Mu'izzi.

Amīr Mu'izzi's original name was Muhammad B. 'Abd ul-Malik, His birth-place is not ascertained. Daulatshāh names Nasā, the Haft Iklim, fol. 309, Nishāpūr, Taki Kāshī (Oude Catalogue, p. 16), and the Atashkadah, fol. 157, Samarkand. Nizāmī 'Arūzī, who knew him personally, relates, as quoted in the Haft Iklim, and the Riyaz ush-Shu'ara, fol. 409, the following particulars of his life:-After the death of his father, Burhani Samarkandī, a poet of the court of Alp Arslān, he lived some time in obscurity, until he was introduced to the notice of Malak Shah by the Amīr 'Alī B. Farāmurz (a vassal of the Saljūkis, who ruled Yazd from A.H. 443 to 488, and to whom Alp Arslan had given his sister in marriage; see Jahānārā, fol. 66). The king, charmed with some impromptu verses of the poet, bestowed upon him a princely reward and the surname of Mu'izzī, derived from his own title, Mu'izz ud-Din. Mu'izzī rose still higher under Sanjar, who conferred upon him the title and office of Malik ush-Shu'ara. He was accidentally killed by a stray arrow from the bow of Sanjar, A H. 542. See also Guzīdah, fol. 242, Habīb us Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 103, Khulāşat ul-Afkār, fol. 260, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 77, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 501.

The Divan of Mu'izzi contains, according to the Haft Iklim, 15,000 couplets. The present copy does not exceed 8000. It consists chiefly of Kaşidahs, not alphabetically arranged, a few Ghazals and Kiţ'ahs, fol. 216 a, and Rubā'is, fol. 224 a.

The first and last pages have been supplied by a later hand.

Add. 16,791.

Foll. 176; 9¹/₄ in. by 4³/₄; 19 lines, 2¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold ruled margins and a 'Unvän; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1063 (A.D. 1653). [WM. YULE.]

دیوان رشید وطواط

The Divan of Rashid Vatvat.

Rashid ud-Din Muhammad B. 'Abd ul-Jalih ul-'Umari (i.e. a descendant of the Khalif 'Umar), a native of Balkh, surnamed Vatvät or "swallow," on account of his dwarfish size, held the post of chief secretary advectory under two sovereigns of the ديوان انشاء Khwārazm Shāhī dynasty, viz. Atsiz (A.H. 535-551), and his son Il-Arslan (A.H. 551-568). The author of the Guzidah, fol. 137, quotes verses composed by him on the accession of Atsiz, on his death, and on the accession of Tukush, which took place in A.H. 568. He died in his 97th year, A.H. 578, and left, besides the present Divan, a treatise on poetry حدائق السحر, a work entitled فوائد القلائد, and a metrical translation of the sentences of 'Ali ترجمه صد كلمه. Notices on his life will be found in the Guzidah, fol. VOL. II.

243, Jāmi's Bahāristān, fol. 63, Daulatshāh, fol. 45, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, pp. 169, 174, Haft Iklīm, fol. 243, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 178, Ātashkadah, fol. 138, and Khulāşat ul-Afkār, fol. 100. See also Hammer, Redekiinste, p. 119, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 541.

This Dīvān consists of Ķasīdahs in alphabetical order. At the end are found some Tarjī- and Tarkīb-bands, fol. 136 a, and further on, Muķaṭṭaʿāt and Rubāʿīs, fol. 158 b. Most of the pieces are in praise of Sultau Atsiz, hero called Abu l-Muẓaffar 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad; a few are addressed to Īl Arslān, to the Vazīr 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad, and some other personages of the court of Khwārazm.

Or. 283.

Foll. 130; 10 in. by 5‡; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The poems of Rashid Vațvāț, not alphabetically arranged. The first Ķaşīdah, which is the second of the preceding copy, begins thus:

This volume bears the stamps of the kings of Oude.

Add. 16,826.

Foll. 29; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 6 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Naskhi, with gold and with blue ink, and in neat Nestalik, with a rich 'Unvān and illuminated borders, probably in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

A hundred maxims of 'Alī B. Abu Ṭālib ماية كلمه عليه عاليه مرتضويه, with a paraphrase in Persian quatrains by Rashīd ud-Dīn Vaţvāţ. See tho Arabic Catalogue, p. 511.

This is the work above mentioned as ترجبة, and edited by Fleisher in 1837. It forms the fourth part of a collection including the sayings of the first four Khalifs, which was dedicated A.H. 559 to Sulțān Shāh Abul-Ķāsim Maḥmūd, son of Il Arslān Khwārazm Shāh. See Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 125, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 192.

Four leaves are wanting after fol. 12.

عبد القادر بن عبد الوهاب الحسيني : Copyist

Add. 25,019.

Foll. 360; 9 in. by 5; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ahmadābād, Gujrāt, Shavvāl, A.H. 1083 (A.D. 1672).

ديوان انوري

The Dīvān of Anvarī.

مقدري نه به آلت بقدرت مطلق . کند زشکل بخاری چو کنبذ ازرق

Auhad ud-Dīn Anvarī, the first of Kasīdah writers, was born in Mahanah (Yākūt's Maihanah), in the district called Dasht i Khāvarān, near Abīvard, and took from his native province the poetical surname of Khāvarī, which he afterwards exchanged for Anvarī. In early life he applied himself to the pursuit of science in the Madrasah Manşūriyyah of Tūs, but subsequently embraced the more lucrative profession of courtpoet, and became a great favourite of Sultan Sanjar, to whom most of his Kasīdahs are addressed.

An incident related in the Tārīkh i Guzīdah, and repeated in the Rauzat uş-Safā and Ḥabīb us-Siyar, shows that he lived on to the reign of Sultan Ṭughrul B. Arslān. A conjunction of the seven planets in the third degree of Libra was expected in the month of Rajab, A.H. 581,^{*} and some astronomers, first and foremost of whom was Anvarī, predicted a terrific convulsion of nature, so that people fled in alarm to mountains and caves. When the dreaded day came, there was not enough wind to winnow corn or blow out a lamp. The historian remarks that the prophecy was fulfilled in another sense, for in that year Chingizkhān became the ehief of his people. while the prop of the empire, Atabak Muhammad, was laid low. However, the discomfited astronomer, finding himself the butt of satirists, retired to Nīshāpūr, and afterwards to Balkh, where he spent the rest of his life. Various dates are assigned to Anvari's death. Takī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 16, gives A.H. 587, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 474, A.H. 592, and Daulatshah, A.H. 547. This last date is refuted by the fact recorded in the Guzidah, and by the evidence afforded by several passages of the Divan, that the poet had survived Sanjar (see fol. 108 a).

Notices on Anvarī will be found in Jāmi's Bahāristān, fol. 62, Guzīdah, fol. 238, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 103, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 228, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 536, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 16, and Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 11. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 88, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 331.

The Dīvān is divided as follows: Ķasīdahs, without systematic arrangement, fol. 1 a. Shorter Ķasīdahs, fol. 202 b. Muķatṭa'āt, in alphabetical order, fol. 205 a. Muķaṭṭa'āt, without alphabetical arrangement, fol. 287 a. Ghazals, not in alphabetical order, fol. 295 a. Maṣnavis, fol. 333 a. Rubā'is, fol. 338 a.

The names which recur most frequently in the laudatory poems are those of Sultan Sanjar, and the Vazīr of the latter part of his reign, Nāṣir ud-Dīn Abul-Fath B. Fakhr ul-Mulk, who was a grandson of the great Niẓām ul-Mulk, and died A.H. 548 (see Kāmil, vol. xi. p. 121, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii. Juz 4, p. 103); of Tughrultigīn and 'Imād ud-Dīn Fīrūz Shāh, who both held sway in Balkh, of the Vazīr of Balkh, Ziyā ud-Dīn Maudūd B. Ahmad 'Uşmī, the Khwājah i Jahān Majd ud-

554

^a A conjunction of five planets in Libra took place, according to the Kāmīl, vol. xi. p. 348, on the 29th of Jumāda II., A.H. 582.

Din Abul Hasan'Imrānī, and Ķāzī Hamīd ud-Din Balkhī, the author of the Makāmāt.

The same Dīvān, alphabetically arranged, has been lithographed in Tabrīz, A.H. 1266. Copies are mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 56, Mackenzie Collection, vol. ii. p. 139, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 319, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 502, the Münich Catalogue, p. 10, and the Gotha Catalogue, p. 83.

Add. 7732.

Foll. 329; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, about the beginning of the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICU.]

The same Divān, in alphabetical order; containing—Ķasīdahs, fol. 1 b. Muķaţţa'āt, fol. 174. Masnavis, fol. 235 b. Ghazals (not alphabetically arranged), fol. 240 a. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 273. Rubā'is, fol. 309 a.

باز این چه جوانی و جمالست جهانرا .

This beginning is by a later hand, and only imperfectly supplies the deficiency of the original MS., which has lost all the Kaşīdahs in Alif but the last two.' Foll. 11-31, 64-76, and 329 have been written by the same modern hand, A.H. 1200.

The margins contain some additional pieces of Anvarī, and, on foll. 126—217, the Tuḥfat ul-'Irāķain and some other poems by Khāķānī, written in the same handwriting as the text, and dated Ispahan, Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1011 (A.D. 1603).

Add. 22,381.

Foll. 259; 9½ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 2½ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

Another copy of the Divān of Anvarī, containing Ķasīdahs, fol. 1 a, and Mukatta'āt, fol. 163 a, without alphabetical arrangement. It wants sixteen leaves at the beginning, a few in the body of the volume, and some at the end.

Add. 5617.

Foll. 280; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6: 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins and two 'Unvāns, dated Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1087 (A.D. 1677).

[NATH. BRASSEY HALHED.]

The Dīvān of Anvarī, containing Ķasīdalıs, fol. 1 b, and Mukatta'āt, fol. 195 b, both in alphabetical order, with the exception of the first Kasīdah, which begins:

مقدرى نه بآلت بقدرت مطلق

This copy was written, as stated in the subscription, for Shams ud-Dîn Muḥammad, Vazīr of the Ṣūbah of Tatah, by 'Abd ul-Majīd Kātib Tata'ī.

Add. 16,763.

Foll. 202; 9¼ in. by 5¼; 17 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated the 6th year of Farrukhsiyar, A.H. 1129 (A.D. 1717). [WM. YULE.]

قصائد انوري

The Kasidahs of Anvari, in alphabetical order, beginning like the preceding MS.

A curious feature of this collection is that, while consisting for the most part of authentic poems of Anvarī, it includes some Ķasīdahs which are not found in the preceding copies, and which, according to what is known of the poet's life, cannot be attributed to him; for they bear internal evidence of having been composed in India, and many years after the latest date assigned to Anvarī's death. Thus we find a Ķasīdah addressed to Shams ud-Dīn Iltatmish, who reigned in India from A.H. 607 to 633, fol. 60 b; four poems in praise of his son Rukn ud-Din Firūz Shāh, who succeeded to his father, and was deposed after a reign of six months, A.H. 634, foll. 40 b, 42 a, 62 a, 135 b; one containing the name of another son of Iltatmish, Ghiyāş ud-Din Muḥammad, who at the time of his father's death was in possession of Oude, fol. 43 a; lastly, three Kaṣīdahs addressed to the Vazīr of Iltatmish and his successor, Nizām ul-Mulk MuḥammadJunaidī (see Ṭabaķāt i Nāṣirī, Raverty's translation, pp. 613, 639), foll. 44 a, 46 b, 62 b.

To the first of the above poems a precise date can be assigned; for it records the reception by Shams ud-Din Iltatmish of a robe of honour sent to him by the Abbaside Khalif Mustanşir, an event which is stated by a contemporary historian to have taken place A.H 626; see Țabaķāt i Nāşirī, translation, p. 616.

The poet, whose name does not appear, says in the following lines, fol. 45 a, that he had come to India from Khorasan:

Badāunī mentions in his Muntakhab, vol. i. p. 65, two poets who repaired from Iran to the court of Iltatmish, namely Nāşirī and Amīr Rūḥānī.

Or. 362.

Foll. 153; 9 in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

شرح قصائد انورى

A commentary on the Kaşīdahs of Anvarī. Author : Muhammad B. Dā'ūd 'Alavī Shādiyābādī, محمد بن دارد علری شادی آبادی

The author states in the preface that, having once recited a poem of Anvarī before the exalted throne of Sultan Nāṣir ud-Dīn, who deigned to admit him to his assemblies, he received His Majesty's command to write a commentary upon the difficult verses of that poet. Hence the present work.

The author was apparently a native of Shādī-ābād, commonly called Mandū, the capital of Mālvah, and the above-named sovereign is, no doubt, Nāṣir ud-Dīn Khiljī, who reigned in Mālvah from A.H. 906 to 916. See Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 509.

The commentary does not follow the alphabetical order. The first three Kaṣīdahs commented upon are those which begin as follows : مقدرى نه به آلت بقدرت مطلق, Tabrīz edition, p. 124, مقدرى نه به آلت بقدرت مطلق , ib., p. 26, and المدير الحيانيان نه تضاست خردرا دوش ميكفتم كه اى اكسير ib., p. 197. The last is a Kiţʿah beginning معظم واى ملك شه معظم , ib., p. 222.

Add. 25,820.

Foll. 129; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1232 (A.D. 1817).

[WM. CURETON.]

The same commentary, with some marginal additions.

Or. 361.

Foll. 92; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

A commentary on some Kaşīdahs of Anvarī.

Author: Abul-Hasan, ابو للسن

Tāhir Nasīrābādī, who in his Tazkirah, composed A.H. 1089, mentions Mīr AbulHasan, a Husainī Sayyid of Farāhān, as a contemporary poet and the author of a commentary upon Anvarī, states that after staying some time in Nasīrābād, a suburb of Ispahan, Abul-Hasan settled in Shīrāz, where he entered the service of the governor Imām Kulī Khān, but was eventually put to death. See Add. 7087, fol. 208, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 332, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iv. p. 54.

The author states in a short preamble that he had confined himself to the explanation of the difficult verses and of some rare words. In conclusion he claims the readers' indulgence for what he calls the first literary attempt of his youth, and adds that the work had been circulated before he had intended to make it public.

The commentary follows the alphabetical arrangement, beginning with the first Kaṣīdah of the Tabrīz edition, and ending with the poem beginning اختيار سكندر ثانى, ib. p. 205.

Or. 298.

Foll. 56; 6⁴/₅ in. by 3; 14 lines, 1⁴/₄ in. long; written in small Nestalik, probably in the 16th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

دیوان عمادی

The Divin of Imadi.

The best account of 'Imādī is to be found in the Haft Iklim, foll. 436—439, where he is called 'Imādī Shahriyārī, and placed among the natives of Rai, Shahriyār being the name of one of the richest Bulūks of that eity. Some of the best authorities, we are told, identify him with 'Imādī Ghaznavī, while others hold that there are two distinct poets of that name. 'Aufī knows only one 'Imādī, whom he classes with the poets of Ghaznin, although the verses he quotes under his name are, in some good copies, ascribed to 'Imādī Shahriyārī. The original Dīvān of 'Imādī is lost; but about two thousand Baits have been preserved. Among the numerous pieces inserted in the Haft Iklim, several of which are found also in the present copy, are two in praise of Sultan Tughrul, the second of which contains, according to Ahmad Razi, an allusion to Kizil Arslan. It was evidently written after Tughrul had thrown off the yoke of the Atābaks, as he did after the death of Jahān Pahlavān, A.H. 582; see the Kāmil, vol. ix. p. 437. The date assigned by Taki Kāshi, Oude Catalogue, p. 16, to the death of 'Imādī, namely A.H. 573, is accordingly too early.

Other notices on 'Imādī will be found in the Rīyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 294, the Khulāsat ul-Afkār, fol. 173, and the Atashkadah, p. 102. See also Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 439. In the first of the above works the poet is called Hakīm 'Imādī Ghaznavī, and described as the panegyrist of 'Imād ud-Daulah Dailamī. It is added that he was also called Sultānī and Shahriyārī, and that he was, according to some authors, a son of Mukhtārī Ghaznavī (see p. 543 a),—a very doubtful statement, repeated in the Atashkadah.

The present collection, which contains little more than 1400 Baits, consists principally of Kaşīdahs, arranged without any apparent system, with some Ghazals, Kiţ'ahs and Rubā'is. It affords no evidence of the poet's connexion with Ghaznīn, but much of his residence in Māzandarān and the adjoining countries. Two Kaşīdahs are in praise of Sultan Tughrul, who was the nominal sovereign of Irak from A.H. 573 to 582, and an independent ruler from the latter date to his death in A.H. 590 (Kāmil, vol. xi. pp. 265, 347, vol. xii. p. 70). One is addressed to Jahān Pahlavān (the Atābak Muḥammad B. Ilduguz), who reigned A.H. 568—582 (ib. vol. xi. pp. 255, 582), and another to Țughān (i. e. Țughān Shāh B. Muayyad, who ruled in Nīshāpūr A.H. 568—581 or 582; see Journal Asiatique, 4° Série, vol. vii. p. 446).

But by far the greater number of the laudatory poems are in praise of a prince of Māzandarān called Saif ud-Dīn 'Imād ud-Daulah B. Farāmurz, who appears to have been the poet's special patron, and from whose title he took, no doubt, his Takhalluş 'Imādī. He is thus designated, fol. 19 a.

and fol. 19 b.

شاة سيف الدين عماد الدولة

In a Rubä'i composed after his benefactor's death, fol. 54 b, the poet wonders at his beholding laid low in the dust him who had raised him from it:

In a poem in praise of Farāmurz, apparently the father of 'Imād ud-Daulah, the poet describes himself as a humble follower in the prince's army, fol. 10 a:

Of 'Imād ud-Daulah no record has been found. His father was perhaps the same Farāmurz, who is mentioned by Zahīr ud-Dīn, Geschichte von Tabaristān, p. 223, 'about A.H. 512, as the nephew of the reigning Ispahbad, 'Alā ud-Daulah 'Alī.

Another prince called 'Abd ur-Raḥmān, described as a powerful sovereign in no less than three pieces, foll. 17, 36, 37, has not been identified.

The poet designates himself throughout by the Takhallus of 'Imādī; but he réfers in two passages, foll. 30 a, 34 b, to the change of that surname to Sultānī, as consequent upon his entering the service of Sultan Tughrul.

The first page bears the stamps of Tiket Rāi, the Oude minister, and of the kings of Oude.

Add. 25,808.

Foll. 386; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. CURETON.]

ديوان خاقاني

The Dīvān of Khāķāni.

دل من پير تعليم است ومن طفل زبان دانش . Beg.

Afzal ud-Dīn B. 'Alī Najjār, or son of 'Alī the carpenter, a native of Shirvān, adopted in the first instance the poetical surname of Haķā'iķī, but received subsequently that of Khāķānī from his master Abul-'Alā Ganjavī. His original name was, according to most biographers, Ibrāhīm. But he says himself, in the following verse, quoted in the Haft Iķlīm, fol. 529, that he had been called by his father Badīl, or "Substitute," because he filled the vacant place of Sanā'ī, the great mystic :

and he adds in another place, Add. 16,772, fol. 264, that one magician (Sanā'ī) had just been buried in Ghaznīn when Shirvān gave birth to another (Khākānī):

> چون بغزنین ساحری شد زیر خاک خاک شروان ساحری نو بـر بزاد

Hence it may be inferred that he was born about A.H. 525 (see p. 549 b).

His life was principally spent at the court of two successive sovereigns of Shirvān, namely Khākān Kabīr Minūchihr, from whose title the poet's surname is derived, and his son Akhsatān (in our MSS. Akhtashān (اختشان)," who died after a long reign in, or shortly after, A.H. 584, the year in which Nizāmī dedicated to him his Majnūn u Lailā. (See also Khanykov, Bulletin de la Classe Historique, tome xiv. pp. 353—370). Most of Khāķānī's laudatory poems are addressed to Akhsatān.

Hamd Ullah says in the Guzidah that Khākānī died in Tabriz A.H. 582, and that statement has been repeated by Daulatshāh, fol. 76, by Ahmad Rāzī, Haft Iklīm, fol. 529, and in the Atashkadah, fol. 18. But there is in his Divan ample evidence that he lived on to a later period. He survived his patron Akhsatān (see Khanykov, l.c. p. 356); he composed several poems in praise of the Atābak Nusrat ud-Din Ķizil Arslān, who reigned from A.H. 582 to 587; finally, as has been noticed by Khwand Amir, Habib us-Siyar, vol. ii. Juz 4, p. 176, he addressed a Kasidah to Sultan Tukush Khwarazm Shah after the taking of Isfahan, A.H. 590. The date assigned to his death in Mir'at ul-Khayāl, fol. 23, Khulāşat ul-Afkār, fol. 78, and Natā'ij ul-Afkār (in the margin of Habib us-Siyar, l.c.), viz. A.H. 595, is probably correct.

Other notices on Khākānī will be found in Jāmī's Bahāristān, fol. 65, Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 707, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 534, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 23, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 153. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 125, Ouseley's Notices, p. 157, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 461, and Khanykov, Mémoire sur Khacani, Journal Asiatique, 6' Série, vol. iv. p. 137, vol. v. p. 296, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 114.

The Divān is arranged according to subjeets. The following are the principal divisions:—Poems on religious or moral topics. Laudatory poems addressed to princes, vazīrs, and men of rank, fol. 55 b. 'Tarj⁻-bands, fol. 182 b. Marāşī, or funeral poems, fol. $204 \ a$. Short pieces of ascetic character, epigrams, satires, etc., fol. 246.

Copies are described in the Jahrbücher, vol. lxvi., Anzeigeblatt, p. 26, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 508, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 328, etc.

Add. 16,773.

Foll. 379; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.] The same Dīvān.

Add. 7726.

Foll. 310; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $1\frac{7}{8}$ in. long, with about 30 half-lines written round the margins in continuation of each page, in neat Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Divan.

Add. 7727.

Foll. 329; 10 in. by 5²/₄; 21 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, with goldruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Divan, slightly imperfect at the end.

نثار اشك من هرشب كهر ريزست پنهاني . Beg.

The first Kaşidah of this copy is the second of the preceding MSS.

Add. 25,809.

Foll. 402; 10 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; apparently in the 17th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

The same Divan, slightly imperfect at the end, with many marginal notes, especially in the first half of the volume.

On the fly-leaf at the end, and in a later

In Armenian, "Akhsartan." See Dorn, Caspia, p. 304.

hand, is written a ghazal popularly ascribed to Khāķānī, beginning:

لاله رخا سمن برا سرو روان کیستی

It has been printed at the end of Dr. Forbes' Persian Grammar.

Add. 16,772.

Foll. 283; $12\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

Another copy of the Dīvān of Khākānī, in which the Kasīdahs are alphabetically arranged.

Add. 25,018.

Foll. 358; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, with about 24 half-lines in the margins; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

كليات خاقانى

The complete works of Khāķānī, namely his Dīvān and the Tuḥfat ul-Irāķain. The MS. is divided into the following sections, each of which has a separate 'Unvān: I. Ķaṣīdahs in alphabetical order, with the exception of the first, which begins :

دل من پیر تعلیمست ومن طفل زبان دانش

II. Mukațța'āt in alphabetical order, fo'. 206 b.

ياصفوة الرحمن شافع خلقه . اني اتيتك عبد رزق عانيا

III. Ghazals in alphabetical order, with some Rubā's at the end, fol. 239 b.

جام می تا خط بغداد ده ای یار مرا Beg.

IV. Preface ديباجه of the Tuḥfat ul-Irāķain, fol. 296 b.

خبر ما اعتصم المرم بحباله كلمة العجز لقصور باله . Beg.

The preface concludes with a dedication to the Vazīr Jamāl ud-Dīn. This was the title of Muḥammad B. 'Alī ul-Iṣpahānī, who was at the head of the government of Mauşil from A.H. 541 to 558, when he was deposed by the Atābak Ķuṭb ud-Dīn Maudūd. See the Kāmil, vol. xi. pp. 74 and 202, and Ibh Khallikān's translation, vol. iii. p. 295.

V. Tuhfat ul-'Irākain, تحفة العراقين, fol. 299 b.

Beg. مائيم نظاركان غمناك زين حقة سبز ومهرة خاك The "Present to the two Iraks" is a Maşnavi poem, in which the poet describes his journey from Shirvān to Mecca and his return. Its precise date is not stated; but in his ode to Ispahan (Journal Asiatique, 6° Série, vol. v. p. 329) Khāķānī says that he was in Mauşil, where he stayed some time on his return journey, in A.H. 551.

An abstract of the contents has been given by Khanykov, Journal Asiatique, 6° Série, vol. iv. pp. 173—179. See also the Jahrbücher, vol. 64, Anzeigeblatt, pp. 16—18, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 506. A selection from the Tuhfat ul-Irāķain has been printed in Lahore, 1867.

Add. 7728.

Foll. 124; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with goldruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Tuḥfat ul-'Irākain. See the preceding MS., art. v.

Add. 25,810.

Foll. 118; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Haidarābād, Deccan, Muḥarram, the 20th year of 'Alamgīr, A.H. 1088 (A.D. 1677). [WM. CURETON.]

The same work, with marginal annotations in the hand of the copyist.

560

Add. 23,553.

Foll. 103; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{7}{6}$ in. long, in a page; written in Nestalik; dated Rājpūr, district of Kālpī, Rajab, A.H. 1096 (A.D. 1685). [Rob. TAYLOR.]

The same work, with corrections, various readings, and glosses, in the same handwriting as the text.

Foll. 2-8 a contain extracts from Hafiz and other poets.

Add. 16,776.

Foll. 93; 7⁴/₄ in. by 4; 17 lines, 2⁴/₈ in. long; written in a cursive hand, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

The same poem, imperfect at the beginning and wanting a few lines at the end.

It begins with اى عين حيات و عالم عين (Add. 25,810, fol. 6 a).

Add. 16,775.

Foll. 116; 7½ in. by 4½; 15 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

The same poem, with the prose preface noticed p. 560 a.

This copy belonged to Muhammad Shāhid, son of Rahmat Khān Dā'ūdzai, whose seal and signature are found on the last page.

Add. 16,774.

Foll. 114; 7 in. by 4; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

The same work, with marginal notes.

The prose preface, written by a later hand, occupies foll. 1 b-6 b.

Add. 25,811.

Foll. 235; 8½ in. by 5½; 17 lines, 3½ in. vol. u.

long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1080 (A.D. 1670).

[WM. CURETON.]

A full commentary on forty-four Kaşīdahs from the Dīvān of Khākānī.

Author: Muḥammad B. Dā'ūd B. Muḥammad B. Maḥmūd Shādiyābādī, محمد بن دارد

بن محمد بن محمود شادیابادی

جواهر زواهر سپاس بی قیاس نثار .Beg.

The author, who has been already mentioned, p. 556 a, says that he had acquired considerable skill in unfolding the abstruse meaning of ancient poets, and had been urged by some intimate friends to write the present commentary. The Kaşīdahs selected for explanation do not follow the alphabetical order, nor the usual arrangement of other eopies. The first three are those which begin as follows:

دل من پیر تعلیم است و من طفل زباندانش شب روان از صبح صادق کعبه جان دیدة اند صبح خیزان بین بصدر کعبة مهمان آمدة See Add. 25,808, foll. 1, 21, 29.

Or. 363.

Foll. 357; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Another copy of the same commentary, including about twenty minor poems not found in the preceding.

On the first page are some seals of the reign of Shāhjahān, the earliest of which is dated $\Lambda.H.$ 1045.

Add. 27,315.

Foll. 210; 8⁴/₂ in. by 5; 19 lines, 3¹/₄ in. s long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1107 (A.D. 1696).

[DUNCAN FORBES.] A commentary on some Ķasīdahs of Khākānī.

Author : 'Alavi Lāhiji, , علوى لاهجى .

حمدی که تصاویر مبدعان سراپرده غیبی Beg.

The author, who calls himself in the preface an old servant of Jahāngīr, says that at the time of the Emperor's accession he was staying in Mecca. After a long sojourn there he returned to India by way of Irak and Khorasan, and presented to His Majesty the above commentary, together with some Ķasīdahs in his praise.

This preface is the only part of the work which is 'Alavi's original composition. For the commentary is simply transcribed, with some trifling alterations, and without any acknowledgment, from the preceding work. It contains, however, towards the end, some minor poems and a few verses from the Tuhfat ul 'Irāķain, which are not to be found in Add. 25,811, and which differ from the additional pieces of Or. 363.

A Kaşīdah in praise of Jahāngīr, with which, according to the preface, the work was to conclude, is not found in the present copy.

Add. 8993.

Foll. 44; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, 2 in. long, in a page; written in minute Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1016 (A.D. 1607).

ديوان مجير الدين ڊيلقاني

The Divan of Mujir ud-Din Bailakani.

Mujir ud-Dīn, born in Bailakān, a town of the province of Arrān, was a dependent of the Atābaks of Azarbāijān, namely Ilduguz, and his son Kizil Arslān, who is the principal object of his panegyrics. He left the latter, however, according to the Haft Iklīm, fol. 543, to attach himself to Sultan Tughrul. In the latter part of his life he was employed in the revenue collection in Isfahan, where hc made fierce enemics by his satircs. He was finally assailed in a bath by an infuriated mob, and put to death. 'Aufi, quoted in Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 403, states that Ķizil Arslān, displeased by Mujīr's remissness in his attendance, called two rival poets, Aşīr' Akhsīkatī and Jamāl ud-Dīn Ashharī, to his court, and bestowed his favour upon them.

Mujīr's death is placed by Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 16, in A.H. 594, and by the author of the Riyāz, l. c., in A.H. 568. As his Dīvān contains, fol. 27, an elegy on the death of Ķizil Arslān, which took place A.H. 587, the latter date is evidently wrong.

Other notices on Mujīr will be found in Daulatshāh, fol. 99, Ātashkadah, fol. 14, and Khulāsat ul-Afkār, fol. 267. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 129, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 503. Amīr Khusrau, who mentions Mujīr in the preface of his Ghurrat ul-Kamāl, places him above Khāķānī, who is generally called his master.

The present copy, which is imperfect at the beginning, contains Kaṣīdahs, which are not in alphabetical order, with a few Kit'ahs and two Rubā'is at the end. The first complete Kaṣīdah, probably the second of the Dīvān, begins thus:

مساز حجره^و وحدت درین مضیق خراب که روی صبح سلامت بماند زیر نقاب محمد میرك فراهی :Copyist

Add. 19,498.

Foll. 115; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, on gold-sprinkled paper, with gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century.

ديوان ظہير فاريابى

The Divan of Zahir ud-Din Faryabi.

ستاره سجده بره طالع منیر ترا . زمانه بوسه زند پایه سریر ترا

Zahir ud-Din Abul-Fazl Tāhir B. Muhammad, born at Faryab, in the province of Balkh, applied himself to the sciences, especially to astronomy, as well as to poetry. He composed in early life poems in praise of Tughān Shāh, who ruled in Nīshāpūr from A.H. 569 to 581, and of Husam ud-Daulah Ardashir, who reigned in Māzandarān from A.H. 567 to 602 (see Ibn Isfandiyar, Add. 7633, fol. 69). From the latter country he proceeded to the court of the Atābaks of Azarbäijän, and lived in great honour under Muhammad B. Ilduguz (A.H. 568-582), and under his brother and successor, Kizil Arslan (A.H. 582-587), whom he left to attach himself to the former's son, Nusrat ud-Din Abu Bakr. He ended his life in retirement, and died, according to the Guzidah, fol. 241, in Tabriz, A.H. 598.

He is noticed in Jāmi's Bahāristān, fol. 66, Daulatshāh, fol. 95, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 127, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 245, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 280, and Ātashkadah, fol. 144. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 130, Ouseley's Notices, p. 154, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 16 and 579.

Contents: 1. Kaşidahs in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. 2. Two Tarji'bands, fol. 86 b. 3. Ghazals, not alphabetically arranged, fol. 90 a. 4. Mukațța'āt, fol. 93 b. 5. Rubā'is, fol. 110 a.

Copies of the Divân are mentioned by Krafft, p. 62. in the Upsala Catalogue, p. 102, and in Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1523.

The first page bears the Persian seals of Mr. Henry Vansittart, and of Mr. Charles Boddam.

Add. 7733.

Foll. 140; 6¹/₄ in. by 3³/₄; 14 lines, 2³/₈ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, with goldruled margins; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1035 (A.D. 1626). [Cl. J. RICH.] The same Divan, differently arranged.

سفیده دم که شدم محرم سرای سرور .Beg شنیدم آیت توبوا الی الله از لب حور

This copy comprises the following classes in which the alphabetical order is not observed :----1. Kasidahs, fol. 1 b. 2. Mukatta'āt, fol. 90 b. 3. Ghazals, fol. 127 b 4. Rubā'is, fol. 131 a.

Or. 268.

Foll. 188; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in fine Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 15th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Aşir Akhsikati.

جهانرا هم جهان بانيست بيدا بين بنهان دان . که زير کنبد نيلي بديد اورد جار ارکان

Aşīr ud-Dīn, a native of Akhsīkat, a town of Farghanah, is placed by most Persian critics in the same rank of excellence as his great contemporaries, Anvarī and Khākānī. The fame of the latter attracted him to Irak, and he soon became a favourite court-poet of Sultan Arslan B. Tughrul, who reigned from A.H. 555 to 571. After a time he retired to Khalkhāl, a mountainous canton of Azarbāijan, whither he had been called by the local ruler, and where he spent the remainder of his life in seelusion. See Daulatshah, fol. 101, and Haft Iklim, fol. 602. Taki Kāshī places his death in A.H. 608. He is noticed in the Guzidah, fol. 239, the Riyaz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 8, and the Atashkadah, fol. 147. See also Hammer, Redekünste, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 16 and 345.

The Divan contains Kaşidahs, arranged according to the persons to whom they are addressed, Ghazals, fol. 84 a, Mukațța'āt, and some additional Kaşidahs, fol. 140 b. In the first class are found poems in praise of Arslān B. Ţughrul, (see foll. 9 a, 11 a, 11 b, 71 b, 73 a, etc.), of Ķizil Arslān, son of Atābak Ilduguz (see fol. 63 a), and of 'Alā ud-Daulah Fakhr ud-Dīn Shāh, who is styled king of Ķuhistān, and appears to have been the poet's special patron (see foll. 16 b, 18 a, 19 b, 22 a, etc.). The last is probably the ruler of Khalkhāl mentioned in the above notices.

Add. 7729.

Foll. 316; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 22 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Persian Naskhi, in four columns, with six 'Unvāns; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 802 (A.D. 1400). [Cl. J. RICH.]

خمسه نظامي

The five poems of Nizāmī.

Nizāmī (Nizām ud-Dīn Abū Muhammad Ilyās* B. Yūsuf) is universally acknowledged as the greatest of Masnavi-writers, and his poems have remained to the present day the classical standards of that kind of composition. He is mentioned in the Haft Iklim, fol. 398, among the poets of Kum; and the Atashkadah, fol. 102, names Tafrish, in the province of Kum, as the birth-place of the poet, or of his father. Nizāmī himself refers, in the Iskandar Nāmah, to the hilly district of .ولى از كهستان شهر قمم Kum as his place of origin, ولى از كهستان But he spent nearly the whole of his life in Ganjah, a town of Arrān, the modern Elisabetpol, where he died in great renown for sanctity. It is said of him that he never courted the favour of kings, but that kings vied with each other for the honour of being named in his poems. His writings show, however, that, although he shunned the courts, he lavished praises with no sparing hand on those princes from whom he expected some return.

Most conflicting statements have been made regarding the date of Nizāmi's death. Daulatshāh, fol. 104, gives A.H. 576, the Atashkadah, A.H. 586, the Jahānārā, fol. 111, A.H. 597, Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 176, A.H. 596, the Ṣubḥ i Ṣādiķ (marginal note to Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 112), A.H. 602, and Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 17, A.H. 606.

An ingenious attempt to reconstruct Nizāmi's life from his own writings has been made by Dr. Wilhelm Bacher, in his Memoir on the poet, published in German, Leipzig, 1871, and in an English translation, London, 1873. Although his results, owing to the insufficiency of his materials, are not free from errors of detail, it cannot be denied that he has succeeded in establishing the chronology of the poet's life and writings on a safe basis.

Of several references made by Nizami in various passages to his age the most precise is found in the prologue of Majnu Laila, fol. 90 a, where he says that he counted then seven times seven years:

زان سحر شحرکهی که رانم مجموعهء هفت سبع خوانم

As the whole poem was written in the course of A.H. 584, it follows that the poetwas born in A.H. 535.

We have, on the other hand, a contemporary record of Nizāmi's death in a short rhymed epilogue added to the second part of the Iskandar Nāmah by an unknown person, who evidently stood in a close relation to the poet, and witnessed his last moments. It is there stated that he did not long survive the completion of that poem, and that, at the time of his death, he had reached the age of sixty-three years and six months. See fol. 313 b, Add. 25,900, fol. 317 b, and Sprenger's edition, p. 182:

> نظامی جو ایس داستان شد تمام بعزم شدن ندیز بر داشت کام

^a Nizāmī gives his proper name Ilyās in the prologue of Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 90 b.

نه بس روزکاری بر ایس بر کذشت که تاریخ عمرش ورق در نوشت فزون بود شش مه ز شصت و سه سال که بر عزم ره بر دهل زد دوال

If Nizāmī was born A.H. 535, and lived 63½ years, he must have died A.H. 598 or 599.

Besides the works above referred to Nizāmī is noticed in the Guzīdah, fol. 243, Bahāristān, fol. 66, Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 708, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 112, the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 449, and Haft Asmān, pp. 25—44. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 105, Ouseley's Notices, p. 43, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 519.

The Khamsah of Nizāmī, which is often called Panj Ganj, "The Five Treasures," has been lithographed in Bombay, 1834 and 1838, and in Teheran, A.H. 1261. Copies are described in Fleischer's Dresden Catalogue, p. 1, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 503, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 32, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 34, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 10.

It contains the following poems :---

I. Fol. 1 b.

"The Storehouse of Mysteries," a Sufi poem, in which moral and religious maxims are illustrated by anecdotes.

The poem is divided into twenty sections (Makālat), the subjects of which have been stated by Hammer, l. c., p. 106. It was, as stated by Niẓāmi in the Iskandar Nāmah, the author's first composition. The prologue contains, fol. 5, a dedication to Fakhr ud-Dīn Bahrām Shāh, son of Dā'ūd, who is described as king of Armenia and Rūm.

This Bahrām Shāh, a grandson of a Saljūķi

Amīr, Mangūchak Ghāzī, was the hereditary ruler of the principality of Arzanjān, and a vassal of Ķilīj Arslān (A.H. 558-578), who had given him a daughter in marriage. He died after a long reign A.H. 622. See the Kāmil, vol. xii. pp. 279, 312, Jahānārā, fol. 111, and Haft Iķlīm, fol. 399.

The poet refers in the same passage, fol. 6 b, to two books bearing the name of Bahrām Shāh, namely, his own, and another (the Hadīķah of Sanā'ī; see p. 549 a), dedicated to a sovereign of the same name, who reigned in Ghaznīn. The allusion has not been understood by Dr. Bacher, who translates, l. c., p. 20: "Two letters came to me from two renowned places," etc.

One of the following copies, Or. 1216, fol. 31, contains in the conclusion two couplets stating that the poem was completed on the 24th of Rabi' I., A.H. 559:

The same lines are given in a full notice on the Makhzan ul-Asrār by Aghā Ahmad 'Alī, in the Haft Āsmān, pp. 53—63, and the date has been also recorded by Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 365. Another copy, Add.19,500, has in the last line A.H. 582: بانصد و هشتاد دو انزون ازان. The correct reading is probably پانصد و هشتاد دو انزون ازان. The correct poem is undoubtedly anterior to the Khusrau u Shīrīn, dated A.H. 576. It must be noticed, however, that these verses, which are wanting in the best copies, are of very doubtful anthenticity. The earlier date is, besides, highly improbable; for it ean hardly be supposed that Bahrām Shāh, who died A.H. 622, had begun to reign sixty-three years before. A safer indication of the time of composition is to be found in Nizāmi's allusion to his age in the prologue, fol. 8 a: $c_{1}c_{2}$ $c_{2}c_{3}$. If the poet was then about forty years old, the poem cannot have been written much before A.H. 575.

The Makhzan ul-Asrār has been edited by Nathaniel Bland, London, 1844, and lithographed in Cawnpore, 1869. An English translation by J. Haddon Hindley is preserved in manuscript, Add. 6961.

II. Fol. 29 b.

Khusrau and Shirin.

خداوندا در توفیق بکشای .Beg. نظامهی را ره تحقیق بنمای

In the present copy the prologue occupies only three pages, and has no dedication. But in Add. 25,900, 16,780, in the Teheran edition, and other copies, it contains extensive eulogies on the reigning Sultan Tughrul, Add. 25,900, fol. 33 b, on Shams ud-Din Abu Ja'far Muhammad, in whom, the poet says, fol. 34 b, the departed soul of his mighty father, Atābak Ilduguz, اتابك الدكے, had come to life again, and thirdly, fol. 35 a, on Kizil Shah, قزل شه قزل شه evidently meant for Kizil کاخرش بالای ماهست Arslan, the brother, and afterwards successor, of Atabak Muhammad, whose full name could not be made to fit into the metre. The work is dedicated to the second of the abovementioned personages, to whom the poet offers apologies for not attending his court in person.

The poem must, therefore, have been written between the accession of Sultan Tughrul B. Arslān, in A.H. 573, and the death of the Atābak Muḥammad, surnamed Jahān Pahlavān, who ruled in the Sultan's name, and died A.H. 582. The following lines in the conclusion of the poem, fol. 81 a, contain its precise date, A.H. 576:

The same reading is found in Add. 25,900, fol. 97 b, Add. 27,260, fol. 109 b, and other old copies, as well as in the Teheran edition.

In an epilogue, which must have been subsequently added, foll. 81—83, Nizāmī, after referring to the death of Atābak Muḥammad, relates how he was summoned to the presence of his successor, Kizil Arslān (A.H. 582—587), and describes the gracious reception he met there, and the favours conferred upon him by the new sovereign. He concludes with a eulogy on the heir-apparent, Nuṣrat ud-Dīn Abu Bakr B. Muḥammad.

The Khusrau u Shīrīn has been lithographed in Lahore, A.H. 1288. See for the contents Hammer's "Schirin, ein persisches romantisches Gedicht nach morgenländischen Quellen," Leipzig, 1809.

III. Fol. 83 b.

Lailā and Majnūn.

The author had received, as he states in the prologue, a letter from the Shirvānshāh, requesting him to take for his next theme, after the completion of his Khusrau and Shīrīn, the loves of Lailā and Majnūn. He hastened to comply with the king's desire, and wrote, as he states in the introduction, fol. 88 a, the present poem, consisting of upwards of four thousand couplets, in the space of four months. He adds that it was completed at the end of Rajab, A.H. 584:

Further on is found a panegyric on the above king and his presumptive heir Minüchihr.

566

The king's name is given in full as follows: Jalāl i Daulat u Dīn Abul-Muzaffar Akhtashān اختشان (in Add. 16,780, fol. 109, اختشان), son of Minūehihr. This king of Shirvān, whose real name appears to have been Akhsatān, has been already mentioned, p. 559 a, as the special patron of Khākānī.

The Lailā u Majnūn has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1286, and an English translation has been published by James Atkinson under the title "Laili and Majnun, a poem from the original of Nazami," London, 1836.

IV. Fol. 136 b.

هفت پيكر

"The seven images," a poem comprising seven tales told by the seven favourites of the king Bahrām Gūr.

ای جهان دیده بود خویش از تو .Beg هیچ بودی نبود بیش از تو

It is stated in the concluding lines, fol. 192 b, Add. 16,780, fol. 211 a, Add. 25,900, fol. 205 a, Or. 1363, fol. 224 a, that the poem was completed on the 14th of Ramazān, A.H. 593.

It was composed, as stated in the prologue, fol. 139 a, at the desire of a sovereign called 'Alā ud-Dīn Karb [?] Arslān, the pride of the lineage of Aksunkur:

The name is written as above in some of the earliest copies, as Add. 25,900, fol. 154 a, and Add. 27,260, fol. 174 b, كربد ارسلان, in Add. 23,547, fol. 163 b, and بد ارسلان in Or. 1363, fol. 165 b. In other copies the more familiar names الب ارسلان (as in the present MS.), and الب ارسلان, have been substituted for it. Towards the end of tho chapter devoted to his praise his two sons are also mentioned. The first is called Nusrat ud-Din Muhammad, the second Ahmad.

No record has been found of that king, who is described by Nizāmī as giving prosperity to the fifth climate بجبین کشور از تو آبادان levying tribute on Greeks and Russians, خزیتش داده روم و روس خزاج hāh of Dailam for one of his servants, مناه شاه در محاکر تست . His successful encounters with the Georgians are alluded to in the following verse, Or. 1363, fol. 166 b, and Or. 1578, fol. 6 a :

The main branch of the line of Aksunkur, to which he belonged, was represented at that period by the Atābak of Mauşil, Nūr ud-Dīn Arslān, who succeeded to his father, 'Izz ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, A.H. 589, and died A.H. 607. See the Kāmil, vol. xii. p. 191, and Ibn Khallikān's translation, vol. i. p. 174.

It has been stated by Sir G. Ouseley, Flügel, and others, that the Haft Paikar was dedicated to Kizil Arslān. But a comparison of dates suffices to disprove it; for the poem was written A.H. 593, while the Atābak died A.H. 587. Dr. Bacher's assertion that it was written for the Atābak Nuşrat ud-Dīn is not confirmed by any of our copies.

The Haft Paikar has been lithographed in Bombay, 1849, and in Lucknow, A.H. 1290. One of the seven tales has been published with a German translation by F. von Erdmann, "Behrangur und die Russische Fuerstentochter," Kasan, 1844.

V. Fol. 193 b.

The Book of Alexander.

The poem consists of two distinct parts. The first treats of the career of Alexander as a conqueror. The second describes him in the character of sage and prophet; it relates also his journeys to the end of the world and his adventures at sea. That those two parts form only one and the same poem is shown by a line at the end of the first, in which Nizāmī says that he has now completed ne half of the book, released one relations.

The Iskandar Nāmah is frequently designated by the titles of Sharaf Nāmah and Iķbāl Nāmah i Iskandarī. The first is taken from شرف نامخ خسروای, a name applied by Nizāmī in the prologue to a poem which he once contemplated writing as a complement to the Shāhnāmah, and from another passage in the beginning of the second part (fol. 275 a, Sprenger's edition, p. 8) شرفنامه را (fol. 275 a, Sprenger's edition, p. 8) شرفنامه را شرفنامه را to the Iskandar Nāmah itself. The second is borrowed from this verse of the same prologue, fol. 203 a, in which the poet refers to the present work under the title of Iķbāl i Iskandarī, and from another passage in the epilogue of the second part, fol. 314 b, in which he designates it by the name of Ikbāl.

کنون بر بساط ^سخن کستر*ي* زِنِم کـوس اقبال اسکندري

Much confusion has been created by the arbitrary application of those titles by transcribers to one or the other of the two parts of the poem. The second part has also been called Khirad Nāmah, from the word \neq , with which it begins.

The prologue of the first part contains a glowing eulogy on a king designated by his title, Nuşrat ud-Din, who had desired the poem to be dedicated to him:

براعداء خود جون فلك جيرة دست

The prince's proper name (ابو بكر) is only alluded to as one consisting of six letters :

Nuṣrat ud-Dīn Abu Bakr, son of Jahān Pahlavān Muḥammad, succeeded to his uncle the Atābak Ķizil Arslān, in Tabrīz, A.H. 587, and died A.H. 607.

The date of composition, A.H. 597, is stated in the following verses quoted in the Haft Asmān, p. 29, but which the author thinks to be of doubtful authenticity:

The same date is found in some late copies, as Add. 26,147, fol. 226, Add. 26,146, fol. 143, and Add. 25,799, fol. 176.

There can be no doubt, however, that the Iskandar Nāmah, or at all events the present recension, was written subsequently to the Haft Paikar, viz. after A.H. 593; for that poem is mentioned in the prologue, fol. 203 a, as the last of the previous compositions of Nizāmī:

جو از عشق مجنون ببرداختم سوی هفت بیکر سبک تاختم

There are, however, some copies, as for instance Add. 26,144, fol. 169 b, in which the enumeration of the former poems concludes with Lailā u Majnūn.

568

The second part of the Iskandar Nāmah begins on fol. 273 b, as follows :

It is called in the heading شرف نامه. The prologue contains in the present copy, fol. 276 b, a panegyric addressed to the ruler of Mauşil, Malik Kāhir 'Izz ud-Din Abul-Fath Mas'ūd B. Nūr ud-Din (Arslān):

The same verses are found in Add. 16,780, fol. 214 b, and in Add. 6613, fol. 267 b.

Nūr ud-Dīn Arslān Shāh died on the 28th of Rajab, A.H. 607. His son al-Malik al-Ķāhir 'lzz ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, who was then seventeen years of age, was immediately seated on the throne. He died A.H. 615. See Ibn Khallikān's translation, vol. i. p. 174, vol. iii. p. 361, and the Kāmil, vol. xii. pp. 191, 217.

If the above lines were really written by Nizāmī, it follows that he was still alive at the close of A.H. 607. The death of his former patron, the Atābak Naşr ud-Dīn Abu Bakr, which took place in that very year (Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz. 4, p. 127), would naturally account for his dedicating the poem to the youthful sovereign who had just been seated on the throne of Mauşil; and the recurrence of the same name, 'Izz ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, in the epilogue which will be presently mentioned, would not require any other explanation.

On the other hand, the great weight of evidence in favour of an earlier date for Nizāmi's death must throw some doubt on the authenticity of that dedication. It is VOL. II. wanting in most of the early copies, as well as in the printed texts, and a suspicious circumstance is that it is found on examination to be almost entirely transcribed, with the exception of the proper names, from the eulogy on Nuşrat ud-Dīn prefixed to the first part of the Iskandar Nāmah.

In other copies the second part is dedicated, like the first, to Nuṣrat ud-Dīn. The prologue contains also, fol. 273 b, a mournful reference to the death of Shāh Arslān, i.e. Ķizil Arslān, the uncle and predecessor of Nuṣrat ud-Dīn, who died A.H. 587, and the description of a recent earthquake (Sprenger's edition, p. 16). We learn from the Kāmil, vol. xii. p. 72, that a destructive earthquake took place in Irac and the neighbouring countries in the month of Rabī I., A.H. 590.

At the end of the second part, fol. 314 a, is found an epilogue addressed to a king called 'Izz ud-Din, whose proper name Mas'ūd is given further on, fol. 315 a, جو نام شهش فال مسعود باذ After describing the splendours of 'Izz ud-Din's court, the poet says that he sends to the king "two pearls brought up from his ocean," namely his son and his poem, here designated by the names of Mukbil and Ikbāl, and claims for both a favourable reception.

'Izz ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, son of Kuţb ud-Dīn Maudūd, succeeded to his brother Saif ud-Dīn Ghāzī on the throne of Mauşil A.H. 576, and died in Sha'bān, A.H. 589. See Ibn Khallikān's translation, vol. iii. p. 356, and Kāmil, vol. xii. p. 66.

Dr. Bacher looks on the above epilogue as a fragment of an earlier recension of the Iskandar Nāmah, and finds its date in an incidental reference to the age of Nizāmi's son, who was then seventeen years old مشده شد. As the same son is described in Lailā u Majnūn, A.H. 584, as a youth of fourteen, fol. 90 b, الى جارده ساله بدين اى جارده ساله , 50 b, بناه present epilogue must have been written three years later, viz., in A.H. 587, the very year in which Kizil Arslān was found murdered in his bed. It was apparently the unsettled state of Azarbāijān after the Atābak's death which induced Nizāmī to look for a new patron in the neighbouring state of Mausil.

Т

Passages of later dates, however, have been mixed up with that earlier epilogue. Thus in the following verse, fol. 315 a, and Add. 25,900, fol. 319 a, Nizāmī says that he had reached the age of sixty years: بشست آمد اندازه سال من

The first part of the Iskandar Nāmah has been edited with a commentary in Calcutta, 1812, and reprinted in 1825. The text alone has been printed in Calcutta, A.H. 1269, and lithographed editions with marginal notes have been published in Lucknow, A.H. 1282, and in Bombay, A.H. 1277 and 1292. Extracts will be found in Franz von Erdmann's work, "De Expeditione Russorum Berdaam versus," Casan, 1826, and in Charmoy's "Expédition d'Alexandre contre les Russes," St. Petersburg, 1829. See also Spiegel, "die Alexandersage bei den Orientalen," Leipzig, 1851, pp. 33-50.

The second part has been edited under the title of Sikandarnāmah i Bahri, by Dr. Sprenger, Calcutta, 1852, and 1869. A short statement of the contents will be found in Erdmann's work, vol. i. p. 24, and a fuller abstract in Bacher's Memoir, pp. 101-171. See also Dr. Ethé, Alexander's Zug zum Lebensquell, Sitzungsberichte der Bayerischen Akademie, 1871, pp. 343-405.

Add. 25,900.

Foll. 316; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 25 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in a minute and elegant Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with illuminated borders and headings, dated A.H. 846 (A.D. 1442); bound in painted covers.

The five poems of Nizāmī, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 5 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 31 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 101 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 151 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, called Sharaf-Nāmah i Iskandarī, fol. 206 b; Part 2, fol. 279 b.

The MS. contains twenty whole-page miniatures in Persian style, of the highest degree of finish, on foll. 1, 2, 16, 39, 42, 68, 75, 118, 112, 119, 138, 159, 171, 187, 230, 233, 244, 249, 268, 279. Four pages at the beginning are covered with rich ornamentation.

On the fly-leaf is found the last owner's name, "James R. Ballantyne, Nov. 1837."

Add. 16,780.

Foll. 326; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 7; 23 lines, 4 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with a rich border enclosing the first two pages, five smaller 'Unvāns and ornamental headings; dated Muharram, A.H. 936 (A.D. 1529). [WM. YULE.]

The same poems, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 1 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 27 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 104 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 155 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, fol. 211 b; Part 2, fol. 254 b.

The second part of the Iskandar Nāmah contains, fol. 214 b, the dedication to Malik Kāhir 'Izz ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, which has been noticed p. 569 a.

ابو طاهر الكاتب : Copvist

Sixteen miniatures in Persian style occupy about half a page each.

It appears from a Persian note, dated A.H. 1183, that this MS. came from a library in Kashmir, and was given to the writer in Dehli. It bears the seal of the Oude minister, Mahārājah Tiket Rāi.

Or. 1216.

Foll. 391; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in four gold-ruled columns, in small Nestalik, with five 'Unvāns and ornamented headings; dated Ramazān, A.H. 961 (A.D. 1554). [ALEX. JABA.]

The same poems, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār (wanting the first three pages), fol. 1 a. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 32 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 122 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 186 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, headed شرف نامه اسکندری, fol. 245 b; Part 2, entitled اسکندری, fol. 339 b.

The last lines of the Makhzan, fol. 31 a, written in a different handwriting, apparently in the 15th century, include the date of composition, A.H. 559, mentioned p. 565 b. The Haft Paikar is dated A.H. 598 in the following lines, fol. 245 a:

The volume contains fifteen miniatures in Persian style, occupying about two-thirds of a page, on foll. 11, 17, 49, 57, 80, 135, 149, 160, 201, 220, 231, 279, 301, 323, and 354.

فانى الكاتب : Copyist

Add 26,144.

Foll. 282; 9‡ in. by 7; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{5}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with five 'Unvāns; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 968 (A.D. 1561).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The four following poems of Nizāmī: Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 4 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 32 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 104 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, endorsed Sharaf-Nāmah, fol. 160 b; Part 2, endorsed Khirad Nāmah, fol. 238 a.

In the record of the author's death, fol-280 a, his age is stated to have been sixtytwo years and six months,

Add. 17,329.

Foll. 369; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 7; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with six 'Unvāns, and gold-ruled margins; dated Muharram, A.H. 994 (A.D. 1585).

The five poems of Nizāmī, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 1 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 32 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 107 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 169 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, fol. 234 b; Part 2, entitled Khirad Nāmah, fol. 324 b.

The Iskandar Nāmah is dated at the end, fol. 369 a, A.H. 590:

Add. 27,260.

Foll. 362; 12 in. by 7; 21 lines, 4 in. long, in a page; written in a small and neat Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with six rich 'Unvāns, and ornamental headings, apparently in the 16th century. Bound in gilt and stamped leather.

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

The same poems, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 2 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 32 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 113 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 171 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, with the heading Sharaf-Namah i Iskandarī, fol. 235 b; Part 2, fol. 292 b. Owing apparently to a transposition in the MS. from which this copy was taken, the latter half of the first part of Iskandar Nāmah is followed, without any break, by the latter half of Part 2, foll. 270 b -292 a, and, vice versa, the former half of Part 2 by the latter half of Part 1, foll. 315-362.

There are eighteen miniatures, in good Persian style, occupying about two-thirds of a page each.

Or. 1363.

Foll. 347; $11\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 22 lines, 4 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with six 'Unvāns and goldheadings, apparently in the 16th century.

[Sir CHARLES ALEX. MURRAY.] The same poems, as follows: Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 3 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 30 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 106 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 162 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, fol. 224 b; Part 2, fol. 310 b.

The volume contains twenty-nine wholepage miniatures in Persian style.

Add. 23,547.

Foll. 307; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with five 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

The same poems, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 2 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 31 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 107 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 160 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1 only, fol. 224 b.

Add. 26,145.

Foll. 375; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, 4 in. long, in a page; written in cursive Nestalik, in three columns; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 1042 (A.D. 1632). [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same poems, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 2 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 39 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 121 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 194 b. Iskandar-Nāmah, Part 1, slightly imperfect at the end, fol. 273 b.

Add. 6613.

Foll. 300; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 25 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fine Nestalik, with five double-page 'Unvāns, gold-ruled margins, and gold-headings; dated Rabī'II., A.H. 1076 (A.D. 1665). [J. F. HULL.]

The same poems : Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 1 b. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 28 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 90 b. Haft Paikar, fol. 138 b. Iskandar Nāmah, Part 1, fol. 196 b; Part 2, fol. 264 b.

The MS. contains forty-one miniatures, in fair Persian style, each of which occupies about two-thirds of a page.

It was written for Tājā Mīrzā Abul-Ḥasanā تاجا ميرزا ابو الحسنا, by a copyist who calls himself مابين ابزاهيم محمد موخر المعلم الكاتب الشيرازي.

Add. 25,800.

Foll. 112; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with two 'Unvans and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 15th century. [WM. CURETON.]

This volume, which is endorsed خمسة شيخ , contains only the first two poems of the Khamsah, viz. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 2 b, and Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 31 b.

At the end is impressed the seal of a court librarian, بنده درکاه زرتوم کتابدار, with the date A.H. 934. The first page is covered with 'Arz-Dīdahs of the time of Aurangzīb.

Add. 25,801.

Foll. 36; $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 8; 18 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in four columns, in fine Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gilt headings, and goldruled margins; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 865 (A.D. 1461). The broad margins are covered with designs of flowers and animals in gold and colours. [WM. CURETON.]

The Makbzan ul-Asrār by Nizāmī (see p. 565 a).

Copyist : سلطان على المشهدى

This celebrated calligrapher died in Herat A.H. 919. See Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 344.

There are two miniatures in fair Persian style at the end, and two more in unfinished outline at the beginning.

Add. 16,781.

Foll. 76; 7²/₄ in. by 4²/₄; 13 lines, 2²/₄ in. long; written in plain Indian Nestalik; dated Rabi^{*} I., A.H. 1028 (A.D. 1619). [WM. YULE.]

The same poem.

In the concluding verses A.H. 559 is given as the date of composition (see p. 565 b).

Add. 19,500.

Foll. 168; 8 in. by 5; 7 lines, 22 in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated Muharram, the 29th year of Aurangzib, A.H. 1097 (A.D. 1686).

The Makhzan ul-Asrār, with copious marginal notes.

In the concluding lines the poem is said to have been completed on the 24th of Rabi'I., A.H. 582 (see p. 565 b).

> بود حقیقت بشمار درست بیست و چهارم زربیع نخست از سنه هجرت تبا ایس زمان پانصد وهشتاد دو افنون ازان

Add. 23,548.

Foll. 95; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, about the close of the 18th century.

[Robert TAYLOR.]

Add. 26,149.

Foll. 227; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

شرح مخزن الاسرار

A commentary upon the Makhzan ul-Asrâr.

Author: Muhammad B. Kivām B. Rustam etc., ul-Balkhī, commonly called Karkhī, محمد بن قوام بن رستم بن احمد بن محمود بدر حرائة [خزانه] البلخي المعووف بكرخي حمد و سپاس مر فتاحيرا كه فاتحه كتاب او . Beg

The author, who states that he had previously written glosses to the Sikandar-Nāmah, professes to explain in the present work 1310 difficult dystichs, out of 3263 of which the entire poem consists. He appears to have lived in India, and quotes a poetical extract on Nizāmi's writings from the Badi' ul-Hikāyāt by Mughīş ud-Din Hānsavī, whom he calls the most eminent man of the age. According to the Oude Catalogue, p. 521, the time of composition is expressed in a versified chronogram by the words زهى شرح A.H. 1091. The present MS. must الستان contain an carlier recension; for it bears on the first page a note of purchase dated A.H. 1089.

The text breaks off fol. 216 b, shortly before the end of the thirteenth Makālat.

The next following leaves, foll. 217-229, contain miscellaneous extracts.

Add. 6966.

Foll. 82; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; written by John Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1806.

"Instructive Apologues from Nizāmī."

This volume contains twenty short narratives, all from the Makhzan ul-Asrār, with an English version written under the text. Another MS. by the same hand, Add. 6963, contains the English of the first eleven stories, with the same title, to which is added "by a young student."

Or. 1578.

Foll. 71; $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, 4 in. long; written in minute and elegant Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with gold headings, and gilt designs on the margins; dated A.H. 952 (A.D. 1545).

[SIR HENRY C. RAWLINSON.] Haft Paikar by Nizāmī (see p. 567 a).

This fine copy is the work of a known calligrapher, who signs Shāh Maḥmūd Nishāpūrī, شاه محمود نشابورى.

Shāh Maḥmūd of Nīshāpūr was a pupil of his maternal uncle Mullā 'Abdī, who was himself a pupil of the famous penman Sultān-'Alī Mashhadī, and died about A.H. 955. Shāh Maḥmūd, who took in verse the poetical surname of Mukhliş, was still alive in A.H. 957. Se'e Tuḥfah i Sāmī, fol. 76. Shāh Maḥmūd is also mentioned in the Ā'in i Akbarī, Blochmann's translation, p. 102.

The MS. having lost eleven leaves, viz. foll. 1, 28, 39, 40, 43, 47, 49, 51—54, which apparently contained miniatures, they have been replaced by a clever imitation of the original writing. We learn from a note on the first page, and from the subscription, that this was done A.H. 1264 by Ahmad Khān B. 'Abd ul-Husain Khān, grandson of Muhammad Husain Khān Ṣadr i A'ẓam Iṣfahānī, for the owner of the MS., the deputy-governor Farhād Mīrzā, son of the heir apparent.

Harleian 503.

Foll. 199; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in plain Nestalik about the close of the 16th century.

The first part of the Iskandar-Nāmah (see p. 568 a).

Add. 26,147.

Foll. 226; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian character; apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same part, wanting about three leaves at the beginning.

Foll. 224—226 have been supplied by another hand. They contain the date of composition, بتاريخ پانصد نود هفت سال (see p. 568 b), and, at the end, the date of transcription, 7 Rabī' I., A.H. 1090 (A.D. 1679).

Add. 26,146.

Foll. 143; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 24 oblique lines in the margins; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Kūnjarī, Jumādā I., A.H. 1117 (A.D. 1705).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The first part of the Iskandar Nāmah, with the same date of composition, A.H. 597, as in the preceding copy.

Add. 6614.

Foll. 202; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 17th century. [J. F. HULL.]

The same part.

Some leaves at beginning and end have been supplied by a later hand.

Add. 16,783.

Foll. 162; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

The same part, wanting some leaves at the end.

Add. 26,148.

Foll. 226; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in a cursive Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same part, wanting about five leaves at the beginning.

Add. 25,799.

Foll. 176; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 20 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in plain Nestalik; dated Sūrat, Zulhijjah, A.H. 1227 (A.D. 1816).

[WM. CURETON.]

The same part.

This copy was written for Lieut. Rigby by Munshī Ghulām Muḥammad.

Add. 16,782.

Foll. 117; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in plain Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

The second part of the Iskandar Nämah (see p. 569 a).

Add. 7731.

Foll. 57; 74 in. by 5; 10 lines, 23 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, on goldsprinkled paper, with 'Unvān, gilt headings, and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century; bound in gilt and stamped leather covers. [Cl. J. RICH.]

Select verses from the Khamsah of Nizāmī, with a short preface in prose.

The verses are arranged under thirty-seven heads according to the religious or moral sentiments they express, and under each head in the order of the poems from which they are taken.

محمد توام : Copyist

See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1476.

Add. 7730.

Foll. 48; 81 in. by 51; 12 lines, 31 in.

long, in a page; written in plain Nestalik; dated Baghdād, Ṣafar, A.H. 1231 (A.D. 1816). [Cl. J. Rich.]

The same work, without preface.

This copy was written for Mr. Rich by his Munshī Muḥammad 'Alī ul-Ḥasanī ul-Lārījānī.

Grenville xxxviii.

Foll. 39; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a fine Nestalik, with illuminated borders on every leaf, apparently in the 17th century.

Another recension of the same work.

The table contained in the preface enumerates thirty-five chapters, which, however, are not distinguished in the body of the work.

Copvist : عماد الحسنى

Appended is a letter of Lord Clare, dated April 18th, 1831, from which it appears that the MS. had been sent to him by the Imaum Muscat.

Add. 27,270.

Foll. 158; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, in a page; written in Indian Nestalik, on coarse Indian paper, about A.D. 1815.

[JOHN MACDONALD KINNEIR.]

The story of Khusrau and Shīrīn, after the poem of Nizāmī (see p. 566 a), told in easy Persian prose, interspersed with poetical extracts, by Ghulām Husain Khān Munshī, غلام

حسين خان منشى

The author states in a short preface that he had written the present work at the request of some English officers in the reign of Muḥammad 'Azīz ud-Dīn Pādishāh Ghāzī, A.H. 1230, A.D. 1815.

On the first page is written: "From Gholam Hussein [the author] to John Macdonald Kinneir."

Add. 16,787.

Foll. 413; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with 'Unvāns; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1191 (A.D. 1777). [WM. YULE.]

سته فريد الدين عطار

Six Maşnavî poems by Farîd ud-Dîn 'Ațțār (see p. 344 α), as follows :—

I. Fol. 3 b, منطق الطير, "The language of birds," an allegorical poem.

آفریس جان آفریس پاک را Beg. آنکه جان بخشید و ایمان خاک ا

The contents have been described by Hammer, Redekünste, pp. 141—154, and Jahrbücher, vol. 65, Ang. Bl. p. 5. The text has been edited by Garcin de Tassy, Paris, 1857, and lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1288.

II. Fol. 64 b, آلهمى نامە, Ilāhī Nāmah, a Sūfī poem.

در کچ سعادت باز کردم (In other copies)

See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 357, and Stewart's Catalogue, p. 61.

III. Fol. 144 b, اسرار ذامة, "The book of mysteries."

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 358, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 510, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 332.

IV. Fol. 184 b, مصيبت نامه, "The book of affliction."

حمد پاک از جان پاک آن پاک را Beg. که خلافت داد مشتی خاک زا

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 349, the Gotha Catalogue, p. 85, and the Upsala Catalogue, p. 100, clxii., where the same work is noticed under the title of Nuzhat Nāmah.

V. Fol. 277 b, خسرو وكل, "Khusrau and Gul," an abridgment of 'Attār's previous poem,

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 352.

VI. Fol. 370 b, مختار نامع, "Mukhtār Nāmah" (see p. 577 b).

Three of the above poems, viz. Ilāhī Nāmah, Mukhtār Nāmali, and Manţik uţ-Tair, are to be found in a volume entitled Kulliyāt i Farīd ud-Dīn 'Aṭṭār, lithographed in Lucknow, 1872. They occupy respectively. pp. 771—943, 946—1047, and 1050—1165.

The MS. bears the seal of Mahārājah Tiket Rāi, the Oude minister, with the date 1203.

Or. 353.

Foll. 240; 13 in. by 10; 25 lines, $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, with two transversal lines in the margin; written in fair Naskhi; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 877 (A.D. 1472).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Three poems by 'Attār, viz. :--

I. Fol. 2.

جوهر الذات

A Maşnavi poem, treating of mystic love, and correctly described by Hammer, Redekünste, p. 154, and by Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 351, as a rhapsody full of the most tedious repetitions.

The Jauhar uz-Zāt occupies pp. 2—582 in the Lucknow edition of the Kulliyāt. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 60, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 518, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 351.

The present copy wants five pages at the beginning, corresponding to pp. 2—8 of the printed text, and two pages at the end, corresponding to pp. 686—770. The deficiency at the beginning has been supplied, in appearance only, by foll. 2 and 3, written by a modern hand in imitation of the original character, and containing the beginning of the Ilāhī Nāmah (p. 576 a, ii.).

This poem, the title of which occurs in the following line, fol. 191 a, کنون عطار کفتی جوهر, is also designated more than once by the name of Javāhir Nāmah, as in this line, Lucknow edition, p. 581:

II. Foll. 200-234 a. The latter half of the Hailāj Nāmah, هيلاج نامه, a Maşnavi poem.

The Hailāj Nāmah occupies pp. 583—770 of the Lucknow edition, where it begins thus:

The present fragment corresponds to pp. 686—770. The poem treats of the absorption of the soul into the Divine essence, and is a complement to the Jauhar uz-Zāt, in the conclusion of which it is announced. Hailāj, which is, according to the Būrhān Ķāţi', a Greek word meaning "water of life," is here an arbitrary alteration of the name of the famous mystic, Manşūr Hallāj, whom 'Aţţār introduces in the prologue as the revealer of divine mysteries, and to whose inspiration the poem is by him ascribed. Thus we read, pp. 599 and 600:

See "Hellaj Nameh," Stewart's Catalogue, p. 60.

III. Foll. 4—234, in the margins, and foll. 234 b—240, in the body of the page.

* A collection of Rubā'is (see p. 576 b), with a prose-preface, foll. 2—15.

In the preface, which wants a few lines at the beginning, the author enumerates his previous works, apparently in the order of composition, viz. Khusrau Nāmah, Asrār Nāmah, Manțik uț-Țair, Muṣībat Nāmah, and a Dīvān. They are designated as follows: مون سلطنت خسروانه در عالم ظاهر کشت و اسرار اسرار نامه منتشر شد و بزبان مرغان مقامات طيور ناطقه ارواح را بمحل کشف رسيد و مصيبت مصيبت نامه از حد و غايت در کذشت و ديوان ديوان ساختن نامه از حد و غايت در کذشت و ديوان ديوان ساختن بتمام داشته شد که شرح القلب هر دو منظوم بردند از سر سوداى نا منظوم ماند که جرى و على بدان هر دو راه يافت

He adds that the Dīvān had not yet been properly arranged, and that the six thousand Rubā'is which it comprised had been reduced by him to five thousand, out of which he made, at the request of some friends, the present selection. The preface concludes with a table of the fifty sections (Bāb) into which the work is divided. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 353.

Add. 7735.

Foll. 208; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, 3 in. long; written in fair Nestalik on goldsprinkled paper, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century.

υ

[Cl. J. RICH.]

VOL. II.

Manțik uț-Țair (see p. 576 a, i.).

The volume contains nine whole-page miniatures in Persian style.

According to a note written on the first page, and dated A.H. 1117, this MS. had been the property of Allah Verdī Khān, the late Beglerbegi of Shirvān.

Or. 1227.

Foll. 165; 6 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [ALEXANDRE JABA.] The same poem.

Seven leaves at the beginning and five at the end have been supplied by later hands.

Some additional verses at the end give the date of composition, A.H. 573, as follows:

روز سه شنبه بوقت استوا بیستم روزی بد از ماه خدا پانصد و هفتاد و سه بکذشته سال هم ز تباریخ رسول ذو الجبلال

Add. 16,788.

Foll. 149; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1051 (A.D. 1641). [WM. YULE.]

The same work.

The date of composition at the end is A.H. 570:

پانصد و هفتاد بود این دم ز سال هـم ز تـاریخ رسـول ذالجـلال

Harleian 3285.

Foll. 178; 9 in. by 6; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

The same poem.

Add. 7089.

Foll. 148; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 12 lines, 2 in.

long, in a page, with 26 half-lines round the margins, in continuation of each page; written in Indian Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

Ilāhī Nāmah (see p. 576 a, ii.).

The usual beginning is preceded by four couplets, the first of which is:

بنام آنكه ملكش بي زوالست بوصفش عقل صاحب نطق لالست

At the end are found twenty additional distichs beginning thus:

شبی یحیی معاذ ان مرد مردان

Or. 332.

Foll. 185; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, in four columns, with three 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins; dated Balkh, A.H. 1000—1004 (A.D. 1592—1596).

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Three Maşnavi poems by 'Attār, as follows:—

I. Fol. 2 b. Ilāhī-Nāmah (see p. 576 a, ii.).

II. Fol. 67 b. Mușibat-Nāmah (see p. 576 b, iv.).

III. Fol. 150 b. Asrār-Nāmah (see p. 576 a, iii.)

Add. 7736.

Foll. 172; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, in two columns; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 968 (A.D. 1532).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Two Mașnavi poems by 'Ațțār, as follows:---

اشتر نامه

I. Fol. 2 b.

Ushtur-Nāmah, or the Book of the Camel.

ابتدا بر نام حی لا یزال Beg. صانع اشیا^و ابداع جلال

The poem has in the present copy the heading كتاب خردنامدء شيخ عطار; but its real title occurs in the following line, fol. 21 a:

درکذر از ننك و نـام عـامه را کوش کن تو رمز اشتر نامه را

It treats of mystic love, and its name is derived from a comparison of the yearning soul with the pilgrim's camel represented as longing for the Ka'bah. In the introduction 'Aṭṭār mentions some of his previous works, namely Manṭiķ uṭ-Ṭair, Muṣībat Nāmah, Khusrau u Gul, and Ilāhī-Nāmah, adding that, although these had been circulated, the present work was to be kept secret. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 352, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 114.

II. Fol. 130 a.

"Vaşlat-Nāmah, or the Book of Union," a Sufi poem.

The title of the poem is found in the following line, fol. 132 b:

کوش کن تو رمز وصلت نامة را See the Oude Catalogue, p. 355.

Add. 6621.

Foll. 74; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in four columns in small and fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century. [J. F. HULL.]

"The theatre of marvels," a Sufi poem by Ațțăr.

The title of the work, which is given in the following line of the prologue, fol. 3 a, alludes to 'Alī, the true " theatre of marvels," to whom the poem is dedicated :

In the same passage the author refers the reader to several of his previous works, namely Jauhar uz-Zāt, Ushtur-Nāmah, Manțiķ uț-Țair, Asrār Nāmah, Muşībat-Nāmah, Khusrau u Gul, Ilāhī-Nāmah, Pand-Nāmah, and Tazkirat ul-Auliyā. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 353.

This MS. has been evidently detached from a larger volume. It is folioed with Arabic figures from 77 to 149, and at the end is a separate leaf numbered 558, containing the concluding part of a poem probably due to the same author. It treats of the feelings of a true devotee, and the last section begins thus:

The first page bears the Persian seal of Archibald Swinton, with the date 1174.

Sloane 3588.

Foll. 94; 8 in. by $5\frac{2}{4}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{2}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Turkish character; dater Zulhijjah, A.H. 1083 (A.D. 1673).

يند نامه عطار . I. Foll. 1-24. پند نامه

The "book of advice," or moral precepts in Maşnavi rhyme, by Farid ud-Din 'Ațțār.

حمد بی حد آن خدای پاك را Beg. انکه ایمان داد مشتی خاك را

This is the most popular of the poems of 'Attar. It has been repeatedly printed in Calcutta, Lahore, Bulak, and Constantinople. It has been edited by J. H. Hindley, London, 1809, and translated into French by S. de · Sacy, Paris, 1819, and into German by G. H. F. Nesselmann.

II. Foll. 25-94. A Turkish commentary on the above work by Sham'i. See Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 68.

Sloane 3264.

Foll. 221; 12 in. by 7; 12 lines, 4 in. long; written on one side of the paper, in large Naskhi, about the beginning of the 18th century.

The Pand-Nāmah of 'Attār, with a Latin translation by Salomon Negri. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 335.

Add. 7734.

Foll. 52; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 9 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Turkish Naskhi; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1193 (A.D. 1779).

Cl. J. RICH. The same work, with Turkish glosses.

Harleian 5447.

Foll. 60; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 15 and 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in a Turkish hand, apparently in the 17th century.

I. Foll. 1 b-29 b. The Pand-Nāmah of 'Attār (see p. 579 b).

II. Foll. 31 a-60 b.

A translation of the above in Turkish verse. ابتدا کردم بنام ان کریم مبدع کونین و سلطان قدیم

Beg.

The translator, whose name does not appear, states in the introduction, fol. 32 b, that he had written this version in obedience to the behest of his benefactor, the Padishah Bayazīd B. Sulaimān Khān.

On the fly-leaf is a short notice of the Pand Nāmah written in Latin by Salomon. Negri.

Add. 6960.

Foll. 133; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 8; 15 lines in a page; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley on paper water-marked 1802.

I. Foll. 5-34. The Turkish version of the Pand-Nāmah [transcribed from the preceding MS.]

II. Foll. 35-44. Collation of three copies of the Persian Pand-Nāmah, namely Harleian 5447, Harleian 5464, and Sloane 3264.

III. Foll. 45-109. The Pand-Nāmah, [transcribed from Sloane 3264], with English glosses.

IV. Foll. 110-133. Glossary to the Turkish version, and alphabetical list of words occurring in the Persian text.

Prefixed to the volume, foll. 1-4, are Sylvestre de Sacy's notices on the Pand-Nāmah and the Bulbul-Nāmah, translated into English.

Or. 473.

Foll. 361; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with Unvan and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 1007 (A.D. 1598).

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.

ديوان كمال اصفهاني

The Divan of Kamal Isfahani. ای جلال تو بیانهارا زبان انداخته .Beg غزت ذاتت يقين را در كمان انداخته

580

Kamāl ud-Dīn Ismā'il, surnamed, on account of the fertility of his fancy, Khallak ul-Ma'ānī, or "the great inventor of concetti," was the son of a poet of note, Jamal ud-Din Muhammad B. 'Abd ur-Razzāk Isfahānī, who died, according to Taki Kāshāni, A.H. 588. He was, like his father, a panegyrist of the noble Sāid family, especially of Rukn ud-Din Sā'id B. Mas'ūd, the Sadr of Isfahān. He perished, according to Daulatshah, in a general slaughter of the inhabitants of Isfahān by the Moghul army under Oktāi Kā'ān, A.H. 635. His death is placed, however, by the Mirāt ul-'Alam, fol. 691, in A.H. 639, and by the Khulasat ul-Afkar, fol. 229, in A.H. 628. Other notices will be found in the Guzidah, fol. 242, Bahāristān, fol. 67, Habib us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 190, Haft Iklim, fol. 356, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 356, and Atashkadah, fol. 80. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 156, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 454.

This Divūn, which is not alphabetically arranged, contains Kaşīdahs and Kiţ'ahs, fol. 2 b, Ghazals, fol. 300 a, and Rubā'īs, fol. 344 b.

Some Kaşīdahs in the early part of the Dīvān are addressed to the following sovereigns: Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn Tukush, who reigned in Irak from A.H. 590 to 596, and his grandsons Jalāl ud-Dīn (A.H. 621—628) and Ghiyāş ud-Dīn, the Atābak Sa'd B. Zingī (A.H. 599—623), and his successor Abū Bakr B. Sa'd (A.H. 623—658), lastly the Ispahbad Hasan of Māzandarān. Most of the laudatory poems are in praise of the above mentioned Şadr, Rukn ud-Dīn Ṣā'id.

Add. 18,414.

Foll. 443; 8¼ in. by 4¾; 15 lines, 2⅓ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1029 (A.D. 1620). [WM. YULE.]

The same Divan.

Add. 7092.

Foll. 312; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1036 (A.D. 1627).

The same Divan.

This copy contains only fourteen Rubā'īs. Copyist : نظام الدين قذوجي

Add. 7748.

Foll. 365; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Divān, wanting the first page. This copy contains a more copious text than any of the preceding. It is furnished through the first half with headings.

The last page of the MS. contains records of the birth of the owner's children, the earliest of which is dated A.H. 1043.

Or. 287.

Foll. 174; 9¹/₄ in. by 6; 15 lines, 3³/₈ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Muharrani, A.H. 1007 (A.D. 1598). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان سيف اسفرنكي

Divan of Saif ud-Din Isfarangi.

اشك را زانرا نهم در كفه ميزان خويش . تــا پــديــد آيد بـوقت امتحان معيار من

The poet's native place Isfarang, or Isfarah, is, according to Amīn Rāzī, a hilly tract nine farsangs to the south-west of Marghīnān. As to the period in which he lived there is a wide divergence in the statements of biographers. Daulatshāh says that he flourished in the reign of Ilarslān B. Atsiz Khwārazm Shāh (A.H. 551-567). He is followed by the Haft Iķlīm, fol. 599, and also by the authors of the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 206, and the Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 206, who place Saif ud-Dīn's death in A.H. 573 and 583. On the other hand, Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 17, states that he was born A.H. 581 and died A.H. 666. We read in the Atashkadah, fol. 147, in agreement with the last writer, that Saif ud-Dīn of Isfarang, surnamed al-A'raj, or the lame, grew up in Khwārazm, attended in his youth the court of Sultan Muhammad B. Tukush (A.H. 596—617), and died A.H. 666, at the age of eighty-five years. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 123, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 561.

The evidence of the Divan is altogether in favour of the later date; for it contains poems addressed to 'Alā ud-Dīn Muhammad Khwārazm Shāh, and designating him by the title of Sanjar, a surname which the Sultan assumed in consequence of his victory over the Karā Khitāis, A.H. 606 (D'Obsson, Histoire des Mongols, vol. i. p. 182). There are also Kasidahs in praise of Nizām ul-Mulk Muhammad B. Sālih, who was Vazīr to the same Sultan during the latter part of his reign, A.H. 606-613 (see Habib us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 183), and of Kutb ud-Din Mir 'Amid Habash, who was at the head of the government of Māvarā un-Nahr under Chaghatāi Khān and his successors, Karā Hulāgū and Bīsū-Mungā, A.H. 617-649 (see Jahānkushāi, fol. 81, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 46).

The Dīvān contains Ķaṣīdahs and some Tarjī-bands arranged according to subjects, and a few Rubā'is at the end. Copies are mentioned in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 330, and in the Bibliotheca Sprenger, No. 1514.

Add. 7790.

Foll. 283; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.] Another collection of the poems of Saif Isfarangi, richer than the preceding, endorsed زبدة القصايد سيف الدين اسفرنك

شب جو بردارد حجاب از هودج اسرار من Beg. خفته کیرد صبح را چشم و دل بیدار من

Contents: Kasīdahs, fol. 1 b. Mukatta'āt, fol. 207 a. Ghazals, fol. 247 a. Rubā'is, fol. 269 a.

Add. 7766.

Foll. 109; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in four columns in small Persian Naskhi; dated Zulķa'dah, A.H. 863 (A.D. 1459). [Cl. J. RICH.]

کتاب کلیلہ و دمنہ

A poetical version of the book of Kalīlah and Dimnah, in the epic metre, the author of which is called in the heading and in the subscription, Aḥmad B. Maḥmūd uṭ-Ṭūsī, known as Ķāni'ī, احمد بن محمود الطوسى المشهور

خدایا توئی زنده جاودان ... Beg. فرازنده این سپهر روان

The work was composed for a king called Kā'ūs, to whom a few laudatory verses are addressed at the end of each section. He is designated as the sovereign of Rūm, and the worthy successor of Kaikhusrau and Kaikubād.

'Izz ud-Dīn Kaikā'ūs, who is here meant, suceeeded as the eldest son to his father Kaikhusrau, at the time of the Moghul invasion of Asia Minor, A. H. 642, and carried on for about twenty years a fitful rule under the control of the Moghul sovereigns, and in a state of constant struggle with his brother Rukn ud-Dīn Ķilij Arslān, with whom he had to divide the kingdom. Ousted at last by the latter he repaired to Constantinople, and was shortly after, A.H. 662, confined by the emperor Michael Paleologus in the eastle of Ænos. Ho was subsequently released by the Moghul Berekāi Khān, and obtained from him a principality in the Crimea, where he died Λ .H. 678. See Abulfaraj, Historia Dynastiarum, pp. 319—332, Abulfeda, vol. v. p. 11, D'Ohsson, Histoire des Mongols, vol. iii. pp. 92, 479, and Hammer, Geschichte der Goldenen Horde, pp. 174—181.

The author gives in the prologue, fol. 8 b, a brief account of his career. He lived, he says, in Khorasan in joy and comfort, a matchless poet sought after by all,

> من آن روزها در خراسان بدم زایام شاد و تن آسان بدم سخن کوي مانند من کس نبود نبد کس که جویندوم من نبود

when the Moghuls overran the country, shedding blood by torrents, and drove the Khwārazm Shāh in wild flight to the sea of Māzandarān (A.H. 617). Having escaped to India, he took ship to 'Adan, and, after visiting Medina and the holy shrines of Meeca, and passing through Baghdād, he repaired to Rūm, where "in his distress his heart was rejoiced by the sight of the sovereign of the world, Kaiķubād" (A.H. 616— 634):

> دران بی نوائی دلم کشت شاد بدیدار شاہ جہان کیقباد

He became his panegyrist, lived, thanks to his bounty, in great opulence, and composed a poetical record of the dynasty, entitled Saljūķ Nāmah, the bulk of which was not much less than a camel's load. He enjoyed also the favour of Kaiķubād's glorious successor, Kaikhusrau (A.H. 634—641).

The poet says in two other passages, foll. 95 a, 108 a, that he had, during forty years, celebrated the praises of three sovereigns of the house of Saljūk (Kaikubād, Kaikhusrau, and Kaikā'ūs), that his poems filled thirty volumes, and amounted to about three hundred thousand distichs:

If, therefore, the arrival of Kāni'ī at the court of Kaikubād took place, as appears probable, in A.H. 618, the composition of the present work must be placed about A.H. 658.

The author's name is preceded in the heading by the pompous titles land limit limit heading by the pompous titles ealled وانصح الفصحا , and in the subscription he is ملك الشعرا و افصح الفصحا . He was still living in Küniyah A.H. 672; for he is mentioned by Aflākī, the author of Manākib ul-'Arifin, Add. 25,025, fol. 142, who calls him Amīr Bahā ud-Dīn Kāni'i Malik ush-Shu'arā, as one of those who paid a last tribute to the saint Maulānā Jalāl ud-Dīn Rūmī, deceased in that year. He may be identical with a Kāni'i called like him Bahā ud-Din Ahmad, and also entitled Malik ush-Shu'ara, who is mentioned in the Gotha Catalogue, p. 68, as the author of a Kābūs Nāmah. The latter, however, is designated as Kāzarūnī, or native of Kāzarūn, while our author came from Khorasan.

The prologue of Kāni'ī treats at considerable length of the virtues and accomplishments which befit a king, of each of which the author shows his royal master to be the true paragon. An easy transition to Nushirvan, the traditional pattern of a just and wise ruler, introduces, fol. 9 b, the main subject of the work. At his court appears an Indian envoy bringing the tribute of his country. Questioned by Nüshirvān about a wonderful herb said to grow in India and to give eternal life to those who eat it, he explains its true nature. The herb is but an emblem of the book of wisdom which the kings of India keep as a sacred heirloom in their treasury.^a He entreats the king, however, not to betray to his master that he has disclosed his secret. Here follows, fol. 10 b, a detailed account of Barzūyah's mission to India, and of the means by which he succeeded in obtaining a copy of the precious book.

The work proper begins on fol. 13 α with اغاز کتاب کلیله و داستان برزوبه طبریب the rubric The first section contains the life of Barzūyah, the physician, as told by himself, and drawn up by Buzurjmihr. The nature and arrangement of the remainder of the contents will appear from the following headings: The ox and the lion, fol. 17 a. Damnah and the lion, fol. 20 a. The lion repents killing the ox, fol. 40 a. The merchant's wife, the parrot, the slave, and the men of Balkh, fol. 49 a. The pigeon with a collar, fol. 50 b. the crows) دوستان ابذای زمان, the crows) دوستان and the owls), fol. 61 b. The ape and the tortoise, بلي و سنك پشت, fol. 74 a. The hermit and the weasel, June , Jose , fol. 78 b. The mouse and the cat, fol. 80 a. The king and the bird Kabrah, ملك و قبره, fol. 83 b. The lion and the jackal, fol. 87 a. The lion, the jackal, and the huntsman, fol. 93 a. The hermit and the traveller, fol. 97 a. The dream of the king of India, fol. 97 a. The snake, the apc, the leopard, and the well, fol. 102 a. The king's son and his companions, fol. 103 a.

The arrangement is very similar to that of the Persian version of Naşr Ullah. But the author does not give any information as to the original which he had followed. He merely says that he was turning prose into verse :

Foll. 417; $13\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 9; 17 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with rich 'Unvāns and gilt headings, apparently in the 16th century. Bound in stamped leather.

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

مثنوي مولانا جلال الدين رومي

The Maşnavî of Jalāl ud-Dīn Rūmī.

بشنو از نی جون حکایت میکند . وز جدائیها شکایت میکند

Maulana Jalal ud-Din Muhammad Rumi, the founder of the order of Darvishes called after him Maulavis, is by general consent the greatest of the Sufi poets of Persia. His life forms the main subject of Manākib ul-'Arifin (see p. 344 b), from which the following particulars are extracted. He was born in Balkh on the sixth of Rabi' I., A.H. 604, and died in Kūniyah on the fifth of Jumāda II., A.H. 672. His father, Muhammad B. ul-Husain ul-Khatībī ul-Bakrī (a descendant of the Khalif Abu Bakr), commonly called Bahā ud-Dīn Valad, son of a daughter of Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn B. Khwārazm Shāh, had acquired by his learning and his religious character so much influence in Balkh as to rouse the jealousy of the Sultan, and was obliged in consequence to leave his native city. He proceeded with his son Jalāl ud-Dīn, who was then five years old, by way of Baghdād to Meeca, from thence to Malațiyah, where he stayed four years, and to Lārindah, where he sojourned seven years. Subsequently, yielding to the instances of the Sultan of Rūm, 'Alā ud-Dīn Kaiķubād, he settled in the royal residence, Ķūniyah, where he died on the 18th of Rabī' II., A.H. 628.

^{*} A similar answer is recorded in the preface of Nașr Ullah's Persian version, where it is put in the mouth of a Brahman in India. See Notices et Extraits, vol. x. p. 107.

After Bahā ud-Dīn's death Jalāl ud-Dīn received his spiritual instruction from Sayvid Burhan ud-Din Tirmizi, a disciple of his father, who joined him in Kūniyah in A.H. 629, and, afterwards, from a wandering Sufi, Shams ud-Din Tabrizi, who from A.H. 642 to his death in A.H. 645, was Jalal ud-Din's constant companion, and whose name the poet adopted, as a Takhallus, in his Ghazals. In the latter part of his life Maulana was worshipped as a saint by a crowd of devoted disciples, and was treated with the utmost regard by the Moghul governor, Mu'in ud-Din Parvanah, who was at that time the virtual ruler of the Saljūki empire. The only son who survived him was Baha ud-Din, better known as Sulțān Valad, born A.H. 623, who became, ten years after his father's death, the head of the Maulavis, and died A.H. 712.

Other notices will be found in Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 530 (translated in Mines de l'Orient, vol. vi. p. 429), Daulatshāh, fol. 96, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 66, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 330, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 235, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 400, and Atashkadah, fol. 142. See also Ouseley, Notices, p. 112, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 163, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 489, and George Rosen's Mesnewi, preface, pp. 13-26.

The Maşnavī, or, as it is often called مثنوى معنوى, the "Spiritual Maşnavī," is the favourite text book of the Sufis. It is a vast, and somewhat rambling, collection of moral precepts and religious reflexions, with comments on texts from the Coran, and sayings of the Prophet, illustrated by numerous anecdotes.

Chalabi Husām ud-Din, whom the author addresses by name in several passages of the Maşnavī, was his favourite disciple. His proper name was Hasan B. Muhammad B. Akhī Turk. He had been appointed Khalīfah after the death of Salāh ud-Din Zarkūb in A.H. 657, and remained for ten years, from the decease of Maulana to his own death, which took place A.H. 383, the acknowledged head of the order. Husam ud-Din had no small share in the production of the poem. It was he who, having noticed with how much delight the disciples read the Masnavis of Sanā'ī and Farīd ud-Dīn 'Attār, suggested to his master the composition of a poem similar to the Ilāhī Nāmah of Sanā'ī (sic), but in the measure of the Mantik ut-Tair of 'Attar, and who, when Maulana earried out that idea, wrote down the poem from his master's dictation, reading it aloud to him after each sitting, and correcting the text. The work was interrupted during two years, in consequence of the death of Husam ud-Din's wife; butit was resumed, as stated at the beginning of Daftar II., in A.H. 662, and continued to the end. See Manakib ul-'Arifin, fol. 176.

The poem, which is divided into six books called Daftars, has been the text of many commentaries enumerated by Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 375. It has been repeatedly printed in the East, viz. in Bombay, A.H. 1262, 1266, 1273, 1280, and 1294, in Lucknow, A.H. 1282, in Tabriz, A.H. 1264, in Bulak, with a Turkish translation, A.H. 1268, and in Constantinople, A.H. 1289. The contents have been stated by Hammer. Jahrbücher, vol. 65, Anz. Blatt, pp. 7-26. Portions have been translated into German verse by M. V. Hussard, Mines de l'Orient, vol. ii. p. 162, etc., and by George Rosen, Leipzig, 1849. A version in English verse. by J. W. Redhouse, Esq., is being prepared for publication.

VOL. II.

In the present copy the six Daftars begin respectively on foll. 2 b, 69 b, 131 b, 212 b, 275 b, and 347 b. A rich border enclosing the beginning of the poem contains the following lines in its praise :

> تا قیامت کر پی صورت روی تا قیامت بوی معنی نشنوی جان جاویدان اکر خواهی بخوان مثنوی معنوی مولوی

The volume contains ninetcen whole-page miniatures, in fair Persian style.

Add. 26,151.

Foll. 471; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, and 20 lines in the margin; written in Nestalik, in two gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvāns, apparently in the 16th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The same poem.

This copy contains short prose prefaces to the several Daftars. Those of the first, third, and fourth are in Arabic, the others in Persian. They are to be found on foll. 2 b, 73 b, 138 b, 235 b, 304 b, and 383 b.

At the end of Daftar IV. is a subscription stating that the MS. had been written near the shrine of the holy Shāh of Ghaznī نزديك نزديك, by Sayyid Kabīr B. Sayyid Rājā B. Husainī.

On the first page are the Persian seal and the signature of Edward Galley.

Or. 1211.

Foll. 506; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 27 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in a large and cursive Persian character, in two columns, probably early in the 15th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

The Maşnavî, with the prose prefaces. The six Daftars begin respectively on foll. 1 b, 80 b, 154 a, 248 b, 324 b, and 409 b.

Foll. 1-5, and 502-506, have been supplied by a later hand.

Or. 1364.

Foll. 313; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8; 23 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small and neat Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with six 'Unvāns; dated Rajab, A.H. 982 (A.D. 1574). Bound in stamped leather covers.

[SIR CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.]

The Maşnavī, with the prefaces, beginning respectively on foll. 3 b, 50 b, 94 b, 150 b, 197 b, and 254 b.

Add. 26,153.

Foll. 205; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 32 lines in the margins; written in Nestalik, A.H. 1043 (A.D. 1633).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

Daftars I.—III. of the Masnavi.

The MS. was written, according to the subscription, by Ilahyār for Minuchihr Beg.

Add. 16,767.

Foll. 318; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with six 'Unvāns; dated A.H. 1049 (A.D. 1639); bound in stamped and gilt leather. [WM. YULE.]

The same work, with three prefaces, viz. . those of Daftar II., fol. 52 b, Daftar V., fol. 205 b, and Daftar VI., fol. 258 b.

Egerton 1107.

Foll. 362; $14\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, in four columns; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 1077 (A.D. 1666). [ADAM CLARKE.]

The Maşnavî, with the same prefaces as in the preceding copy.

The copyist, Muhammad Shafī', describes himself as tutor to the son of Farīdūn Beg, Vāķi'ah-Navīs to Amīr Khān, Sūbahdār of Kābul.

Add. 7740.

Foll. 241; $14\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 31 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns; dated Shāhjahānābād, Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1077 (A.D. 1667). [CL. J. RICH.]

The Maşnavī, with all the prefaces but that of Daftar I.

The transcriber, مهادق ولد نعمت الله, states in the subscription that he had written this copy for Mir Muhammad Vāzih, son of Irādat Khān.

At the end of Daftar IV. it is stated that the text had been corrected, A.H. 1083, on the copy of Shāh 'Abd ul-Fattāḥ Gujrātī, who had collated a large number of MSS.

Add. 5605.

Foll. 324; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 22 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 1082, the 13th year of [Aurangzīb's] reign (A.D. 1671).

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.] The Maşnavī. The prefaces of Daftars II.—VI. have been added by another hand.

Add. 5606.

Foll. 434; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, in a page, with 32 half-lines in the margin, in continuation of each page; written in two columns, in common Indian Nestalik; dated Rabi' I., A.H. 1185 (A.D. 1771).

The same poem. [N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

Add. 26,152.

Foll. 583; 10 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns; dated the 24th year of Aurangzīb (A.H. 1091-2, A.D. 1680-1).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The Maşnavī, with the prefaces of Daftars IV. and VI., and copious notes written partly in the margins, partly on inserted slips.

Add. 16,769.

Foll. 229; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long, with 30 lines in the margins; written in small Nestalik, in two columns; dated Ujjain, Mālvah, Rabī' II., A.H. 1093 (A.D. 1682.) [WM. YULE.]

Daftars III—V. of the Maşnavī, with the first five folios of Daftar VI. Daftar III. wants sixteen folios at the beginning.

Add. 25,802.

Foll. 275; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{2}{4}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{5}{5}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvāns, probably in the 17th century. [WM. CURETON.]

The Maşnavī, with all the prefaces but that of Daftar V.

Add. 16,768.

Foll. 255; 13 in. by 7³/₄; 27 lines, 4³/₄ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, in four columns; apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

The Maşnavî, with the prefaces, and marginal additions.

According to a Persian note on fol. 1, this MS. was bought in Jainagar, A.H. 1203.

Or. 1214.

Foll. 24; 9 in. by 7; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written on four columns in small Nestalik, probably in the 18th century.

[ALEXANDRE JABA.] The seventh Daftar of the Maşnavî, with a prose preface.

This seventh Daftar, which has been printed at the end of the Bulak edition, was first brought to light, A.H. 1035, by a commentator of the Maşnavī, Ismā'il Dadah (Rusūkh ud-Dīn Ismā'il B. Aḥmad ul-Anķiravī), who gave out that he had found it in a copy dated A.H. 814, and who stood out for its genuineness, which, however, was generally disbelieved. See Haj. Khal. vol. v. p. 377, Hammer Redekünste, p. 167, and Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 518.

محمد شریف بن داملا محمد سلیم : Copyist مرحوم بخاری

Add. 14,051.

Foll. 508; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1081 (A.D. 1670).

جواهر الاسرار وزواهر الانوار

The first volume of a commentary on the Maşnavī, by Ḥusain B. Ḥasan, حسين بن حسن حمد بیحد و غایت و ثنائی بیعد و نهایت Beg.

The author, whose full name is Kamal ud-Din Husain B. Hasan Khwārazmī, has been already mentioned, p. 144 b. He states in the preface that he had, from his youth upwards, eagerly studied the Masnavi, and that he was constantly consulted by the learned as to its meaning. He had already written on that subject a work entitled كنوز and was at length الحقايـق في رموز الحقائق induced by his friends' prayers, as well as by the desire of the ruler of Khwārazm, to write a fuller commentary, the present work. He frequently mentions, as still living, his spiritual guide Khwājah Abu'l-Vafā (a celebrated Sūfī, who died A.H. 835; see Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 499, and Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 144). The work is mentioned by Haj. Khal. vol. v. pp. 375, 376, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 493.

Contents: Preface, fol. 1 b. Ten preliminary discourses, as follows:—1. On the great \Sufis from 'Alī to Jalāl ud-Dīn, fol. 8 a. 2. On \Sufi terms, fol. 36 b. 3. On the degrees of spiritual knowledge, fol. 41 a. 4. On the essence of the Divinity, fol. 43 b. 5. God's names and qualities, fol. 48 a. 6. On the worlds, fol. 49 b. 7. On creation, fol. 51 a. 8. On the great spirit, fol. 52 b. 9. On the soul's return to the spirit, fol. 55 a. 10. On the essence of love, fol. 64 a. Commentary on Daftar I., fol. 71 b; on Daftar II., fol. 203 b; on Daftar III., including the Arabic preface, fol. 314 b.

On the first page is written, "Geo. Jervis, Ahmudabad, 1814."

Add. 25,804.

Foll. 497; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 22 lines, 6 in. long; written in large Naskhi, with ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

كشف اسرار معذوي در شرح ابيات مثنوي

A full commentary on the first two Daftars of the Maşnavî, with the text.

Author: 'Abd ul-Hamīd B. Mu'in ud-Dīn Muhammad B. Muhammad Hāshim ul-Husainī ul-Kattālī ur-Rifā'ī ut-Tabrīzī, عبد الحميد بن معين الدين محمد بن محمد هاشم الحسيني القتّالي الرفاعي التبريزي

حمد بیجد و ثنای بیعد ذات احدیت سمات .Beg

The commentary is preceded by a short preamble and nine preliminary chapters (Mukaddimah), foll. 5—17, treating of the principles of theosophy and the definition of its technical terms. The entire text is inserted by paragraphs. Each of these is followed by short verbal explanations of rare words iii, and by extensive comments. The most recent authors quoted appear to be Khwājah Abul-Vafā, who died A.H. 835 (see the preceding no.), fol. 139*a*, and 'Abd ulKarīm ul-Jīlı, author of al-Insān ul-Kāmil, who was born A H. 767 (Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 459), fol. 143 b. At the end of Daftar I., fol. 265, is found a transcript of the subscription of the author's original draft.

The first part of the same commentary is described by Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 493.

On the first page is a seal of Muhammad Mahdi dated A.H. 1141, and the Persian seal of Archibald Swinton.

Or. 1213.

Foll. 222; 12 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 31 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a small Turkish hand, probably in the 17th century.

[ALEXANDRE JABA.]

A Turkish commentary upon the fourth Daftar of the Maşnavī, by Sham'i شمعى, with the text.

حمدهای متوافره مدق آمبز و شکرهای متکاثره Beg.

The author states, in the preamble, that he had undertaken the work by order of Sultan Murād Khān B. Salīm, and, at the end, that he had completed the present portion on the 15th of Jumādā II., A.H. 999. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 375.

Or. 1210.

Foll. 464; 11½ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{7}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns, with 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

[ALEXANDRE JABA.]

A revised edition of the Maşnavī, by 'Abd ul-Lațif B. 'Abd Ullah ul-'Abbāsī, عبد اللطيف, with marginal notes.

Mullā 'Abd ul-Laţīf, a native of Gujrāt, was a dependent of Lashkar Khān Mashhadī, Dīvān of Kābul under Jahāngīr, and afterwards Ṣūbahdār of the same province under Shāhjahān. He passed into the imperial service in the fifth year of the latter reign as Dīvān i Tan, with the title of 'Aķīdat Khān, and was some time employed as court-chronieler. He died in old age in the 12th year of the reign (A.H. 1048—9). See 'Amal Sāliḥ, fol. 708, where his commentary on the Maṣnavī is mentioned with praise, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 70.

In a preface entitled ..., and dated by the chronogram ديباجه لطيف انصرام i.e. A.H. 1032, foll. 10-19, the edi. tor gives an account of the labour he had bestowed upon the text. He collated it with an authenticated copy in Kābul, A.H. 1024, and with several MSS. in Yūlam Guzar, near Pashäwar, A.H. 1025, subjected it to a critical examination, with the help of a friend, while on a journey to the Decean in A.H. 1030, and collated it again with four copies in Burhānpūr, A.H. 1031. He also verified the passages of the Coran and the Hadis referred to by the poet, and gave their original text with interpretation in the margin, corrected the Arabic prefaces which he found sadly corrupt, and explained all the rare words and difficult verses. He adds that his comments had been compiled in a detached shape, and formed two separate works, entitled Latä'if ul-Ma'ānī and Latā'if ul-Lughāt.

Tables of contents, drawn up by the editor, are prefixed to the several Daftars. The preface is repeated in a condensed form at the beginning of Daftars II.—VI.

It is stated, at the end of Daftars III. and IV., that the MS. had been collated in Burhānpūr, A.H. 1100.

Add. 25,803.

Foll. 312; 12¹/₄ in. by 8; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns;

dated Katak (Bengal), A.H. 1113 (A.D. 1701). [WM. CURETON.]

The same revised text, with the editor's preface and marginal notes.

Add. 16,766.

Foll. 240; $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{4}$; from 25 to 27 lines, 5 in. long, with as many lines in the margin; written in fair Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvāns, probably in the 17th century; bound in stamped and gilt leather. [WM. YULE.]

The Maşnavī, with copious marginal notes extracted from the Latā'if ul-Ma'navī (see p. 589 b).

This MS. contains the following prefaces: Persian preface to Daftar II., fol. 38 a. Arabic prefaces to Daftar III. and IV. with Persian paraphrase, foll. 70 a, and 112 b.

The preface of 'Abd ul-Lațif to his recension of the Maşnavī is prefixed to Daftar V., fol. 148 b, and again to Daftar VI. fol. 192 b. It is followed in each place by his statement of the contents of the respective Daftars.

Add. 16,770.

Foll. 206; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in plain Nestalik; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 1080 (A.D. 1669).

A Commentary on the Maşnavī, by 'Abd ul-Lațīf B. 'Abd ullah ul-'Abbāsī (see p. 589 b), slightly imperfect at the end.

Beg. شرح بعضی ابیات مشکله فارسی The commentator states that he had brought together in this work, with some additions, the explanations of difficult verses and Arabic texts, written in the first instance on the margins of his revised copy of the Maşnavī. An edition lithographed in Cawnpore, 1876, contains a dedication to Shāhjahān, which is not found in the present copy. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 59.

Royal 16 B. XIX.

Foll. 324; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 14 and 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated Sūrat, Sha'bān, A.H. 1081 (A.D. 1670). [THOMAS HYDE.]

لطائف اللغات

A Glossary to the Maşnavī, by the same 'Abd ul-Laţīf.

این فرهنکیست مشتمل بر حل لغات غریبه .Beg.

The author, who calls himself 'Abd ul-Latif B. 'Abd Ullah Kabiriyyah كبيريه, enumerates in the preface some well known Arabic and Persian dictionaries, and the Sufi glossaries of Ibn 'Attār, and 'Abd ur-Razzāk Kāshī, which he had used, and states that the present work was the result of twelve years of study, and had been compiled in view of his revised edition of the text (see p. 589 b). It comprises all the words found in the Maşnavī, with the exception of those which belong to common speech, and is alphabetically arranged according to the initial and final letters. 'Abd ul-Latif adds that he had been assisted in the compilation by his friend Maulana Ibrāhīm Dihlavī, who had attended his lectures.

This glossary, known as Farhang i Maşnavī, has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1877. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 132, and Ouseley's Collection, No. 384.

Add. 6612.

Foll. 162; 14 in. by $10\frac{1}{2}$; 25 and 23 lines, 6 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabī' I., the first year of Jahāndār Shāh, A.H. 1124 (A.D. 1712). [J. F. HULL.]

I. Foll. 1—94. The first two Daftars of the Maşnavī, with marginal notes.

II. Foll. 95—162. The glossary described under the preceding number.

Or. 369.

Foll. 175; 9 in. by 5¹/₄; 23 lines, 3 in. long; written in small and close Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1100 (A.D. 1689).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

An extensive commentary, entitled Mughnī, سننی, upon the third Daftar of the Maşnavī, by Muḥammad ʿAbid.

-الدفتر الثالث من المثنوى للمولوى أفاض الله . بركاته

The author's name and the title are found دفتر سیوم از مثنوی حضرت this endorsement, مولوی قدس الله درة حامل المتن از شرح محمد عابد رحمة الله عليه مسمی بمغنی

In a Persian note on the same page it is stated that this MS. is the author's first draught began to write the commentary on Daftar I. in A.H. 1100. Many mistakes, however, corrected in the margins, show this copy to be the work of a scribe. Extensive marginal additions in a more cursive character may have been written by the author.

The commentary of Shaikh 'Abd ul-Lațif (p. 590 a), is frequently quoted. Reference is also made to the Muntakhab ul-Lughat, which was written A.H. 1046 (see p. 510 a).

Or. 370.

Foll. 141; 8½ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, the 36th year of the reign (of Aurangzib, i.e. A.H. 1104, A.D. 1692).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A Commentary on the Maşnavî, by Muhammad Na'im, محمد نعيم

This commentary, which is confined to the explanation of some difficult verses, is slightly imperfect at the beginning; the first line quoted is the ninth of the poem:

Daftars II.—VI. begin respectively on fol. 34 a, fol. 56 b, fol. 83 a, fol. 104 b and fol. 133 b. The last line commented upon is دلوهاي دلوهاي (Bulak edition, vol. vi. p. 171).

The author's name appears in the subscription:

تمام شد مسوده چند ابسیات مثنوی مولوی از دست امیدوارکرم کریم فسقیر حقیر محمد نعیم

عبد الله بن شيخ لطف الله لاهورى : Transcriber

A leaf prefixed to the MS. by a later hand contains the beginning of the preface of 'Abd ul-Lațif to his revised text of the Mașnavi (see p. 589 a).

This MS. bears the seals of the kings of Oude.

Or. 367.

Foll. 230; 12 in. by S_4^I ; 23 lines, 6 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ramazān, the 50th year of Aurangzīb (A.H. 1117, A.D. 1705). [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] A full commentary upon the Maşnavī, with the text. On the first page is found the following title: نتوحات المعنوى تصنيف مولانا , and the name of the author, Maulānā 'Abd ul-'Ali Ṣāḥib, has been written by the same hand at the end of Daftar I., fol. 137 b.

It begins with the first verse of the poem, followed by a poetical paraphrase, the first line of which is:—

The commentator quotes frequently Jāmi's Nafahāt ul-Uns, and occasionally the commentary of his predecessor, Shaikh 'Abd ul-Latif (p. 590 a).

The present volume contains the first two Daftars.

Or. 368.

Foll. 125; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 26 and 23 lines, from 5 to 7 in. long; written by two different hands, in cursive Nestalik; dated A.H. 1103 (A.D. 1692). [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The same author's commentary upon مرح میر عبد العلی بر مجلد Daftar VI., endorsed ششم مثنوی معنوی

This volume contains only short portions of the text, preceded by the word $\vec{v_e}$.

Add. 16,771.

Foll. 328; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1143, the 15th year of Muhammad Shāh (A.D. 1731). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. '1—176. A Commentary on the Maşnavī, by Muḥammad Nūr Ullah Aḥrārī, محمد ذور الله احراري

The author, who is called in the subscription Mīr Nūr Ullah Akbarābādī, states in the preface that, having applied himself from his youth upwards to the study of the Maşnavī, he had been in the habit of putting down on the margins of his copy any new meaning that occurred to him, until, yielding to the solicitations of his friends, he wrote out those notes in a connected form.

The commentary deals only with detached passages. The author frequently quotes his predecessor 'Abd ul-Latif (p. 590 a), mostly in order to correct him.

See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 495, where the author, who is called Shāh Mīr Muḥammad Nūr Ullah Aḥrārī, is said to have resided in Arcot.

حل مثنوى . II. Foll. 177-328.

Another commentary on the same poem, by Afzal, of Ilāhābād, افضل الهابادى

A summary of the contents of Daftar I. is `followed by a prologue in verse beginning thus:

The author says that he wrote this work as a supplement to the commentaries of his predecessors, 'Abd ul-Latif 'Abbāsī (p. 590 a), and Mīr Nūr Ullah Aḥrārī.

The present copy contains only the commentary on the first Daftar, including the Arabic Preface.

Or. 1212.

Foll. 144; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in two columns; dated Ramazān, A.H. 923 (A.D. 1517).

[ALEXANDRE JABA.]

Select verses of the Maşnavī, beginning with the first verse of Daftar I., and ending with the last of Daftar VI.

علیخان برهانی : Copyist

Add. 9999.

Foll. 112; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

The "Rose Garden of Unity," a selection from the Maşnavī.

Author : Shāhidī Maulavī, شاهدي مولوى (see p. 513 b).

The author had extracted, as he states in the prologue, some detached lines, six hundred in number, from the Maşnavī. At the request of a friend he connected them by means of additional verses, inserting five distichs of his own between each two of the original. The date of composition, A.H. 937, is conveyed by the following chronogram, fol. 2 b:

See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 232, where A.H. 927 is given as the date of composition, Orientalia, vol. i., p. 319, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 429, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 112.

Add. 7738.

Fol. 365; 13 in. by 7; 19 lines, 3½ in. long, with 36 lines in the margins; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان جلال الدين رومي

The Divān of Jalāl ud-Din Rūmī, often called "Divān i Shams i Tabrīz," because the poet takes in it the name of his spiritual guide, Shams ud-Din Tabrīzī (see p. 585 a), as his takhalluş.

The contents of the present copy, which is slightly imperfect at beginning and end, are—Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1*a*. Tarji'-bands, fol. 346 b. Rubā'is, foll. 352 b— 359 b.

Foll. 360—365 contain a portion of the editor's preface. It is extremely wordy, confused, and, moreover, very incorrectly written. The editor, whose name does not appear, describes himself as a devoted admirer of Jalāl ud-Dīn, whom, however, he had never scen. He says that he had spent a year or two in collecting the scattered poems written by scribes from Maulānā's dictation, revising them, and arranging them in alphabetical order, adding that the collection comprised thirty thousand distichs.

VOL. II.

Copies of the Dīvān are described by Hammer, Redekünste, p. 172, by Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 522, by Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 497, and Bibl. Sprenger., No. 1458. For extracts, see Krafft, p. 65, Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 113, Gotha Catalogue, p. 69, Munich Catalogue, p. 16, and St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 214. Select poems have been edited, with a translation in German verse, by V. von Rosenzweig, Vienna, 1838.

Or. 289.

Foll. 255, leaves 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Persian Naskhi; dated Zulķa'dah, A.H. 824 (A.D. 1421).

[Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان شمس تبريز

The latter part of the same Divan, with the heading, تبريز شمس تبريز

Beg. چشم تو با چشم من هر دم بی قیل وقال It contains the Ghazals from ل to ی, some Tarji'-bands, fol. 246 a, and a few Rubā'īs, fol. 253 a.

غياث الدين بن خواجة شرف الدين : Copyist البرسوى

Add. 7749.

Foll. 193; 5⁴/₄ in. by 3¹/₂; 15 lines, 2 in. long; written in a small and neat Shikastah-Amīz; dated Baghdād, Zulka'dah, A.H. 1208 (A.D. 1794). [Cl. J. RICH.] The following works of Fakhr ud-Din

'Irāķī, نخر الدين عرانى Takhr ud-Dīn Ibrāhīm B. Shahriyār 'Irāķī left at the age of eighteen his native city Hamadan, went in the guise of a wandering kalandar to India, and attached himself in Multan to Shaikh Baha ud-Din Zakariyya, with whom he stayed twenty-five years. After his master's death, which took place A.H. 666 or 661, he performed the pilgrimage, and proceeded from Mecca to Kūniyah, where he found another spiritual guide in the well-known mystic, Sadr ud-Din Kūniyavī, who died A.H. 672 (Arabic Catalogue, p. 779 b). It was there, and while attending Sadr ud-Din's lectures on the Fuşūş ut-Hikam, that he composed his Sufi tract, Lama'āt, which was approved by his Shaikh. He left Rūm after the death of his patron Mu'in ud-Din Parvanah (A.H. 677; see Geschichte der Ilchane, vol. i., p. 299), and spent his latter years in wanderings through Egypt and Syria. He died in Damascus, A.H. 686, according to the Guzīdah, fol. 241, or A.H. 688, as stated in the Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 700, Majālis ul-'Ushshāk, fol. 91, Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 760, Haft Iklim, fol. 413, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 291. Daulatshāh, however, followed by Takī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 17, places his death in A.H. 709. See Hammer, Redekünste, p. 226, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 440.

Y

I. Fol. 1 b. A Dīvān, containing—1. Kasīdahs and some Tarjī'-bands, without alphabetical arrangement. 2. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 46 b. 3. Rubā'is, fol. 125 b.

ای جلالت فرش عزت جاودان انداخته .Beg

کوی در میدان قصدت کامران انداخته

Some of the Kaşīdahs are in praise of the poet's Shaikh, Bahā ud-Dīn Zakariyyā.

II. Fol. 138 b. عشاق نامه, the "Book of Lovers," a poem in Maşnavī verse, varied by Ghazals, treating in ten sections (Faşl) of mystic love.

هرکـه جان دار در روان دارد . . واجبست آنکه درد جان دارد The prologue contains a eulogy on the celebrated Vazīr, Shams ud-Dīn Muḥammad Ṣāḥib Dīvān.

III. Fol. 176 b. لمعات, "Lamaʿāt," a tract in prose and verse on mystic love (see the preceding column, and Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 333.

الحمد لله الذي نور وجه حبيب بتجليمات . الجمال

Add. 16,822.

Foll. 84; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small and neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

اشعة اللمعات

A commentary on the preceding work, "Lama'āt," by Nūr ud-Dīn 'Abd ur-Raḥmān Jāmī (see p. 17 a).

لولا لمعات برق نور القدم .Beg. من محو حبى الجود وحي الكرم

The commentator says in his preface that he had been, like many others, prejudiced against the soundness of the Lama'āt, until, requested by his friend, Amīr 'Alīshīr, to revise the text, he had found in it a rich storehouse of spiritual truths, which he undertook to elucidate in the present work. The date of composition, A.H. 886, is expressed in a versified chronogram at the end by the word signal is a signal signal.

This work is generally called شرح اللمعات. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 335, and Dorn, St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 371.

خسرو : Copyist

Add. 24,944.

Foll. 357; $14\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 9 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 22 lines in the margin; written in clegant Nestalik, with rich 'Unvāns, ornamental headings, and illuminated borders on every page; dated A.H. 974 (A.D. 1566); bound in gilt and stamped leather.

G. LIBRI.

کايات سعدي

The Kulliyāt, or complete works of Sa'dī. Sa'di, the most popular of Persian poets, took his name from the Atābak of Fārs, Sa'd B. Zingi, who died A.H. 623, after a reign of twenty-three years, and to whose service his father was attached. He is generally called Muslih ud-Din; but there is reason to believe that his original name was Musharrif ud-Din, and that Muslih ud-Din was the name of his father. In a copy of the Kulliyat, dated A.H. 905, lately belonging to Col. C. S. Guthrie, there is a subscription to the Būstan, purporting to have been transcribed from the author's autograph, in which he calls himself مشرف بن مصلم السعدى. In an early collection of his works, Add. 18,411, in Or. 5601, and in the present copy, his name is written مشرف الدين بن مصلر and in Bisu-مشرف الملة والحق و الدين مصلم الاسلام tūn's preface . In the Guzidah the names are inverted مصلم بسن مشرف, while in the Nafahāt ul-Uns they are combined, with a شرف الدين مصلى trifling alteration, to Sa'di refers frequently to Shīrāz as his native place. The date of his birth is not accurately known. In the Būstān, which he wrote A.H. 655, he addresses himself as septuagenarian, from which it may be inferred that he was born about A.H. 585. But if the Shaikh Shams ud-Dīn Abul-Faraj B. Jauzī, whom he mentions in the Gulistān, Bāb ii., 20, as the preceptor of his youth, is really identical, as has been asserted, with the celebrated doctor Jamāl ud-Dīn Abul-Faraj Ibn ul-Jauzī, who died in Baghdād A.H. 597, a still earlier date must be adopted.

After completing his studies in Baghdād, Sa'dī entered upon a long course of distant travels, which took him through the length and breadth of the world known to the Muslims, from Tartary to Abyssinia, and from India to Barbary. He visited Kāshghar, as he states in the Gulistān, Bāb v., 15, in the year in which Sultan Muḥammad Khwārazm Shāh had made peace with the Khiṭāis. This must have been shortly after the great victory which the Sultan won over the Karā Khiṭāis A.H. 606 (see the Kāmil, vol. xii. p. 177), and the anecdote shows that even at that early period the fame of the young poet of Shīrāz had spread to that remote region.

Sa'di returned to his native city shortly before A.H. 655, and composed in that year and the next his two most popular works, the Büstän and the Gulistän, in both of which he immortalized the name of the reigning Atābak, Abu Bakr B. Sa'd B. Zingī (A.H. 623-658), whose wise rule had restored peace and prosperity to Fars. There he spent in peace and seclusion the latter part of his long life, treated with respect by the Moghul governors who had superseded the Atābaks and receiving frequent marks of the regard and liberality of the great Vazir, Shams ud-Din Sahib Divan, who from the reign of Hulãgũ to the accession of Arghūn, A.H. 683, was at the head of the civil administration of the Moghul empire.

Ziyā i Baranī states that Muḥammad Sulțān, son of Sultan Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Balaban, who in the seat of his government at Multān (A.H. 670-683) surrounded himself with poets, twice sent messengers to Shīrāz for the purpose of inducing Sa'dī to settle in Multān, but that the poet, excusing himself on the plea of old age, sent to the prince some autograph verses. See Tārīkh Fīrūzshāhī, p. 68.

Sa'dī died on the seventeenth of Zulhijjah, A.H. 690. This is the date given by Hamd Ullah Mustaufī in his Guzīdah written forty years later. Daulatshāh and Jāmī give A.H. 691, and the former adds that the poet had reached at his death the age of one hundred and two lunar years. Amīn Rāzī states that he was then one hundred and ten years old, an estimate which, according to what has been above stated respecting the probable date of his birth, must be nearer the truth.

r 2

The principal notices on Sa'dī are those of Daulatshah (translated into English by J. H. Harington, Works of Sadee, pp. ii.-x., and into German by K. H. Graf, Rosengarten, pp. 229-234), of Jāmī, Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 699, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 130, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 332, Haft Iklīm, fol. 92, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 198. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 204, Ouseley's Notices, p. 5, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 545, Defrémery, Nouvelle Biographic Générale, vol. xlii., p. 1002, and, above all, Dr. W. Bacher, who in his introduction to "Sa'di's Aphorismen und Sinngedichte, Strassburg, 1879," has ingeniously combined all the information which was to be extracted from a careful perusal of the poet's works.

The Kulliyāt have been edited by J. H. Harington, Calcutta, 1791—1795. Many other editions have since appeared in the East, as in Bombay, A.H. 1267 and 1280, Dehli, 1269, Cawnpore, 1280, Lucknow, 1287, Tabrīz, 1257, and Teheran, 1268. The contents have been stated in the Vienna Jahrbücher, vol. 64, Anz. Blatt., p. 5, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 527, Oude Catalogue, p. 546, and, with great fullness and accuracy, by Dr. W. Bacher, in his Sa'di-Studien, Zeitschrift der D. Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxx. pp. 81—106.

Contents: Preface of 'Alī B. Aḥmad B. Abu Naṣr [in other copies Abu Bakr^a] B. Bīsutūn, fol. 3 b.

شکر و سیاس معبودی را جلت قدرته .Beg.

The writer states that in A.H. 726 he had arranged the Ghazals of Sa'dī alphabetically according to the initial letters, and had subsequently, A.H. 734, compiled an alphabetical index to the same, based on the letters of the rhyme. It is added at the end that the Majlis i Hazl, or mock-homily, had been transferred to the section inscribed Khabīşāt. An English translation of the preface will be found in the Introduction of Harington's edition, pp. 24-26.

I. Fol. 8 b, رساله اول در تـقرير ديباجه, Sa'di's preface. See Bacher, Sa'dī-Studien, p. 84.

سیاس بی غایت و ستایش بی نہایت . Beg.

II. Fol. 17 b, رساله ثانی در مجلس جارکانه (read رساله ثانی در مجلس جارکانه), "the five sittings or homilies."

Beg. المحمد لله الذي خلق الوجود من العدم The fifth Majlis has been translated by James Ross, Bombay Transactions, vol. i. pp. 146—158.

III. Fol. 58 b, رسالندو صاحب ديوان, "The questions of the Lord of the Dīvān," i.e. the Vazīr Shams ud-Dīn Muḥammad Juvainī, to Saʿdī, with the answers of the latter.

خواجه صاحب قرآن زمان نيكو سيرت .Beg.

This tract, which was not drawn up by Sa'dī, has been translated by Harington, Introduction, pp. 14—17, and by Graf, Lustgarten, vol. ii. pp. 136—142.

IV. Fol. 62 α , رساله جهارم در عقل و عشق, a Sufi tract on reason and love, in answer to a question of Maulānā Sa'd ud-Dīn.

سالك راه خدا يادشه ملك سخن Beg.

V. Fol. 67 a, در نصیحت مدوك , "Advice to kings."

الحمد لله تعالى وهو اولى من حمدة .Beg.

This tract was written, as Sa'dī states in the beginning, at the request of a friend, یکی, یکی, whom he addresses further on as "son," نز درستان. According to Dr. Bacher, "Sa'dī-Studien," pp. 93—102, and "Aphorismen und Sinngedichte," Vorwort, it was addressed to the Ṣāḥib Dīvān, together with the collection of ethical poems known as Ṣāḥibiyyah (see art. xviii.). It is, however, highly improbable that Sa'dī should have familiarly referred to the all-powerful Vazīr as "one of his friends," or that he should have presented him with a work avowedly composed for another person. In an early recension of the Kulliyāt, Add. 18,411, the Risālah i Ṣāḥib Dīvān (art. iii.) is found to precede immediately the Kitāb i Ṣāḥibiyyah.

^a Shi'ah seribes frequently substitute Abu Nasr for the hateful name of Abu Bakr.

VI. Fol. 88 b. Three short pieces, as follows: 1. رسالی سلطان, Sa'di's interview with Sultan Abākā, drawn up from the poet's oral relation by an anonymous writer. It has been translated by Harington, Introduction, pp. 17-19, and by Graf, Lustgarten, vol. ii. pp. 142-146. 2. رسالم دوم , Sa'di's advice to a ruler, در نصیحت انکیان addressed to Ankiyanu, who was Moghul governor of Fars, A.H. 667-670. See the Shirāz-Nāmah, fol. 75, and Hāfiz Abrū, fol. 98. 3. حكايت ملك شمس الديس. An aneedote relating to Malik Shams ud-Din, and the remonstrances made to him by Sa'di, told by an anonymous writer; translated by Harington, pp. 19-21, and by Graf, Lustgarten, vol. ii. pp. 146-148.

Malik Shams ud-Din B. Mālik was placed, A.H. 676, at the head of the revenue collection ماحب مقاطعه in Fārs. See the Shirāz Nāmah, fol. 76, and Ḥāfiz Abrū, fol. 98.

VII. Foll. 98 b—284 a. \leq , the Gulistān.

منت خدایرا عنر و جل که طاعتش Beg.

This is the most popular Persian work in the East, and the best known in Europe. Two of the latest and most correct of its innumerable editions have been published by Dr. Sprenger, Calcutta, 1851, and by Mr. John Platts, London, 1874. It has been translated into Latin by Gentius, 1651, into English by Fr. Gladwin, 1806, by Dumoulin, 1807, by Eastwick, 1852, and by Platts, 1873, into German by Graf, 1846, into French by A. du Ryer, 1634, D'Alégre, 1704, Gaudin, 1789, and C. Defrémery, 1858.

The following articles, viii.—xvii., are written in the margins.

VIII. Fol. 4 b. بوستان, the Būstān, a moral poem, scarcely less known than the preceding work.

بنام خداوند جان آفرین .Beg.

The Būstān has been printed in Calcutta, 1810 and 1828, in Lahore, 1863, Cawnpore, 1868, and Tabrīz, A.H. 1285. It has been edited, with the Turkish commentary of Surūrī, by Graf, Vienna, 1850, translated into German by the same scholar, Jena, 1850, and by Schlechta Vszerd, Vienna, 1852, and into English by H. W. Clarke, London, 1879.

IX. Fol. 108 a. تصائد عربی, the Arabic Kaşīdahs.

X. Fol. 116 b. تصائد فارسی, the Persian Kasidahs, in alphabetical order.

XI. Fol. 147 a. مراثى, elegies, or funeral poems. Some pieces of this and the preceding section have been translated by Graf, Zeitschrift der D. Morg. Gesellschaft, voll. ix., xii. and xv.

XII. Fol. 151 b. مامعات, Kasīdahs in alternating Persian and Arabic verses.

XIII. Fol. 157 a. ترجيعات, poems with refrains.

XIV. Fol. 164 a. طيبات, Ghazals called Tayyibāt, or "pleasant," in alphabetical order. Some of these have been translated by Graf, Zeitschrift, voll. xiii. and xv.

XV. Fol. 262 b. بدائع, Ghazals composed in the ornate or artificial style, also alphabetically arranged. XVI. Fol. 306 a. خواتيم, Ghazals called Khavātīm, or signets, in alphabetical order.

XVII. Fol. 322 b. غزليات قديم, the early Ghazals, alphabetically arranged.

XVIII. Fol. 284 b. كتاب صاحبيه, short moral and epigrammatic poems, in the form of Mukatta'at, called Ṣāhibiyyah, from their dedication to the Ṣāhib Dīvān (see above, art. v.). They have been edited, with a translation in German verse, by Dr. W. Bacher, under the title of "Sa'di's Aphorismen und Sinngedichte," Strassburg, 1879.

Beg. الحمد لله على نعمة زايدة المستزيدة من كرمه In the present copy, contrary to what is found in most MSS., the Mukaṭṭaʿāt of the Kitāb Ṣāḥibiyyah are arranged in alphabetical order. They are followed by some pieces in Maṣnavī, foll. 322-335.

XIX. مقطعات, Mukaṭṭaʿāt. This section, which in most copies, and in the printed editions, follows the Ṣāḥibbiyah, and comprises a few pieces in alphabetical order, does not appear as a separate section in the present copy; but its contents are found distributed according to their rhymes in the alphabetical series of the preceding book.

XX. Facetious and licentious pieces in verse and in prose, viz. 1. مطائبات, jocular poems, generally called مطائبات, or "wicked," foll. 339 b-340 a, margins. 2. مضحيكات, comic pieces in prose, consisting of three mock homilies, called مجالس هزل, and some facetiæ مطائف, foll. 335 b-355 a.

XXI. Fol. 340 b, margins. رباعیات, Rubā'is, or quatrains.

XXII. Foll. 350 a-355 a, margins. نردیات, detached distichs.

محمد القوام الكاتب الشيرازي : Copyist

This MS. contains two whole-page miniatures at the beginning, two at the end, and sixty-seven of smaller size in the body of the volume. They are in the Persian style and of the highest degree of finish. The first two pages contain a table of contents, disposed in two ornamental circular designs. The last two pages, also richly illuminated, contain versified chronograms giving A.H. 974 as the date of transcription, and A.H. 976 as the year in which the ornamentation was completed.

On the last page is a note of purchase dated Dehli, A.H. 1149.

Add. 7741.

Foll. 337; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 12 lines in the margin; written in neat Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 901 (A.D. 1496).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The Kulliyāt of Sa'dī, with the preface of Ibn Bīsutūn.

This copy contains the Mukatta'āt alphabetically arranged, foll. 320 b, 322 a; but it wants the sixth of the prose works (see above, art. vi.), and has two lacunes, viz. one of about thirty-four leaves after fol. 213, extending from the latter part of the Tarji'band to the Tayyibāt in \mathfrak{s} , Calcutta edition, vol. ii. pp. 259—300, and another of about fifteen leaves after fol. 229, extending from \mathfrak{k} to \mathfrak{s} of the same section. A portion of the Rubā'is and Fardiyyāt is also wanting. The first thirty-one leaves are in a later hand, and want the rubrics.

منعم الدين الاوحدى : Copyist

Or. 1365.

Foll. 459; 15 in. by $9\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long, with 24 lines in the margin; written in fair Nestalik, with rich 'Unvāns, and marginal ornaments on every page, apparently in the 16th century; bound in stamped leather. [Sir CHARLES ALEX. MURRAY.] The Kulliyāt of Sa'dī.

Contents : Preface of Ibn Bisutun, fol. 3 b. The five prose works, fol. 7 b. Gulistan, fol. 82 b. Būstān, fol. 3 b, margins. Arabic and Persian Kasidahs, and Elegies, foll. 238 b-245 a, margins. Mulamma'āt, wrongly headed بفزليات قديم fol. 238 b. Tarji'at, fol. 244 b. Tayyibāt, fol. 251 b. Badā'i', fol. 347 b. Khavātīm, fol. 383 b. Ghazaliyyāt i Kadim, without heading, fol. 399 a. Sāhibiyyah, with the heading تتاب مقطعات, alphabetically arranged as in the first copy, fol. 407 a. Mukatta'āt, fol. 429 b. Muzhikāt, or facetiæ in verse and in prose, fol. 431 b. Rubā'iyyāt, fol. 440 b-455 a, margins. Fardiyyāt, foll. 453 b-458 a.

عنايت الله الكاتب الشيرازى :Copyist

The MS. contains a richly illuminated table of contents, and two whole-page miniatures in Persian style at beginning and end. In a note written on the fly-leaf by Sir C. A. Murray, it is stated to have belonged "to Zulfekar Khan, the commander-in-chief of the army in the reign of Fath Ali Shah." In the margin of fol. 9 is found an entry relating to the birth of a grandson of that officer in A.H. 1236. At the end is found the seal of Bābā Khān (afterwards Fath 'Alī Shāh; see Malcolm, vol. ii. p. 184).

Add. 16,764.

Foll. 377; 9½ in. by 5½; 12 lines, 2½ in. long, with 24 lines in the margins, written in Nestalik, with 'Unvän, illuminated headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated (fol. 99 a) Zulka'dah, A.H. 984 (A.D. 1577).

[WM. YULE.]

The Kulliyāt of Sa'dī, wanting the Arabie Kaşidahs. The Şāhibiyyah, foll. 338 b— 353 a, and the following sections, are not, as in the preceding copies, alphabetically arranged. Fol. 134 has a whole-page miniature in the Persian style.

Add. 5601.

Foll. 349; $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $10\frac{1}{4}$; 9 lines, 3 in. long, with 20 lines in the margins, written in neat Nestalik, with fifteen rich 'Unvāns, and ornamental borders on every page, apparently in the 16th century; bound in stamped and gilt leather.

The Kulliyāt of Sa'dī.

This copy contains the Mukatta'āt, foll. 312 b-316 a, but wants the Ṣāḥibiyyah. It has four whole-page miniatures at beginning and end, and twenty-one of lesser size in the body of the volume. They are finely executed in the Indian style. Foll. 2b and 3a contain the first words of Bisutūn's preface, and a table of contents written within richly illuminated borders with the heading : iy_{iy} iy_{iy}

On the first page is an 'Arzdidah dated Lucknow, the first year of Shāhjahān II. (A.H. 1173).

Add. 17,961.

Foll. 426; $12\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, 3 in. loug, with 24 lines in the margins; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, about the close of the 16th century.

The Kulliyät of Sa'dī, wanting the Fardiyyāt. At the beginning is the first half of a table of contents, richly illuminated. On the first page is a partly obliterated note, in which the name of Ibrāhīm 'Adilshāh (A.H. 988—1037), and lower down the date A.H. 1014, are still legible.

Add. 7742.

Foll. 376; 12 in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, 3 in. long, with 14 lines in the margin; written in fair

Nestalik, with 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

[CL. J. RICH.]

The Kulliyāt of Sa'dī, wanting the Rubā'is-It has a whole-page miniature in Persian style at the beginning.

Add. 7743.

Foll. 399; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 18 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long, with 12 lines in the margin; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvāns, illuminated headings, and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [CL. J. RICH.]

The Kulliyāt of Sa'dī, wanting the Arabic Kasīdahs, the Mukaţţa'āt, and the comical pieces in prose.

Add. 18,412.

Foll. 233; 10 in. by 6; 21 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, with 18 lines in the margin; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1076 (A.D.1666).

[WM. YULE.]

A portion of the Kulliyāt, containing the Būstān, fol. 1 b. The Persian Ķasīdahs, without alphabetical arrangement, fol. 62 b. The Tarjī'-band, fol. 82 b. The Țayyibāt, fol. 87 b. The preface of Ibn Bisūtūn and the six prose tracts, fol. 152 b. The Gulistān, fol. 179 b.

Add. 18,411.

Foll. 197; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 20 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; with 44 lines in the margin, written in minute Nestalik, with illuminated headings and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

An earlier collection of the works of Sa'dī, differing from the preceding in the number and order of the works included, and in the entire absence of alphabetical arrangement in the poetical sections.

The editor, whose name does not appear, states in a short preface beginning حمد بي غايت خالقى را , that, after an unremitting study of the works of the most eminent writers in prose and verse, he had found none brighter or more delightful than the writings of the late (مرحوم) Musharrif ud-Dīn Sa'dī, whom he styles "king of the Imāms and divine sages, Sultan of the poets and philosophers," ملك الاثمة والعارفين ملك الاثمة والعارفين ; and, as they were scattered piecemeal in people's hands, he had deemed it a stringent duty to bring them together, and had spared no trouble till he had collected them in the present volume.

Contents: The five sittings (Majlis; see p. 596 b, art. ii.), fol. 1 b. The Bustan, fol. 8 b. The Gulistan, fol. 54 b. The Tayyibat, beg. اول دفتر بنام ايمزد دانا , fol. 89 b. Badā'i', beg. اکر بتحفه جانان هزار جان آری beg. fol. 138 b. Persian Kasīdahs, beg. شكر و سياس و منت, fol. 142 b. , ای هو النفس يعدل العقال .Mulammaʿāt, beg fol. 156 a. Tarjiʿāt, fol. 158 a. The tract on reason and love (p. 596 b, art. iv.), fol. 160 b. Nașihat ul-Mulūk (art. v.), foll. 161 b-166 a. The tract of Ankiyānū, (art. vi. 2), fol. 178 b. Questions of the late ,(art. iii.) سوال صاحب ديوان ماضي (art. iii.) fol. 179 b. Şāhibiyyah (art. xviii.), beg. . fol. 180 a. سخن بذکر تو آراستن مراد آنست Muțā'ibāt in verse (art. xx. 1), fol. 188 b. Mukatta'āt (art. xix.), fol. 193 a. Rubā'iyāt, fol. 193 b. Mufradāt, fol. 195 b.

Foll. 166 a—178 b contain a work which is not Sa'dī's. It is a wordy contest between Baghdād and Isfahan, مناظرات بغداد و اصفهای, written in ornate prose, alternating with Arabic and Persian verses.

الحمد لله على نعمايه و الصلوة و السلام على .Beg محمد خيرانب_يايه

The author, 'Abd us-Salām B. Abil-Mājid, surnamed Kamāl ul-Isfahānī, بل السلام بن, is not to be confounded with the well-known poet Kamāl Isfahānī (p. 580 b), whose proper name was Ismā'ıl. He belongs to a later period (probably to the eighth century of the Hijrah); for he mentions Auḥad ud-Dīn Kirmānī, who died A.H. 697, as one of the holy men that lay buried in Baghdād.

He had long been, he says in the preamble, wandering from place to place in pursuit of knowledge, and having found Baghdad and Isfahan fairer than all other cities, was at a loss to which he should give the preference, when a friend helped him out of his perplexity by communicating to him the debate which follows. It is a dialogue in which each of the contending cities hoasts in turn, its glories, privileges, and attractions. Eventually Baghdad yields the palm to its rival as being the abode of the illustrious Vazir, Shihāb ul-Hakk vad-Din Mubārakshāh, الصاحب المعظم الدستور المكرم . . . شهاب الحق والدين نظام الاسلام و عـون المسلمين . . . مخـدوم مبارکشاد, who is styled the master of Iran, and described as a wise and powerful ruler, and a munificent patron of letters.

In conclusion the author resolves to return to his native city, hoping to introduce himself by means of that "contest" to the notice of the noble Vazīr, to whom he sent at the same time a laudatory poem rhyming in the letter 4.

تم ديـوان افضل الشعرا والفضلا : Subseription قدوة المحققين مشرف الدين مصلح السعدى قدس الله روحه العزيز على يد العبد الضعيف پـيارة بن شيخ جمال ساكن قنوج

On the first page are two 'Arzdidahs of the reign of 'Alamgir, dated respectively the second and forty-sixth year (A.D. 1069 and 1113).

Add. 25,812.

Foll. 217; 93 in. by 54; 17 lines, 38 in. vol. 11. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gilt headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated Herat, Shavvāl, A.H. 995 (A.D. 1587).

The Divan of Sa'di.

[WM. CURETON.]

Contents: I. Foll. 2 b—12 a. The Persian Kaşīdahs arranged in alphabetical order. The contents correspond with the first portion only of the same section in the Calcutta edition, vol. ii. pp. 214—220, the latter part of the alphabet being only represented by the nos. 31 and 34 of the same edition.

II. Foll. 12 a—152 b. Ghazals alphabetically arranged, not, however, as usual, by the rhyme-letters, but by the first letter of each piece. This is precisely the arrangement which was adopted by Ibn Bīsutūn A.H. 734 (see p. 596 a), but which is not followed in the copies of the Kulliyāt. The contents are principally derived from the Kitāb i Țayyibāt; but the first part of the series includes some Ķaşīdahs, and such strophes of the Tarjī'-band as begin with the letter 1.

III. Foll. 152 b—208 a. Another series of Ghazals, alphabetically arranged by the rhyme-letters, and, under each of these, by the initial letter of each piece. Most of the Ghazals included belong to the Kitāb i Badā'i'.

IV. Foll. 208 a - 217 a. Rubā'is arranged according to the rhyme-letters.

محمد الكاتب زرد : Copvist

The MS. is endorsed ديوان شيخ سعدى. On the same page are several 'Arzdidahs of the reign of Shāhjahān, the earliest of which is dated of the 17th year (A.H. 1053—4).

Add. 17,330.

Foll. 13; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns, gilt headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 871 (A D. 1467). The Būstān, foll. 2–124, and the Gulistān, foll. 127–213; see p. 597.

The following inscription written at the beginning of each work, within illuminated borders, states that the MS. was written for Sultan Muḥammad II. (A.H. 855-886).

برسم خزانه السلطان الاعظم مالك رقاب الامم خليفة الله في العالم السلطان محمد خان بن سلطان مراد خان خلد الله تعالى ملكه وسلطانه

بالى سلطانى الكاتب : Copyist

Add. 16,811.

Foll. 202; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 10 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 24 lines in the margins; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold headings, and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 15th century. [WM. YULE.]

The Gulistān, written in the centre of the page, and the Būstān, written in the margins from fol. 1 b to fol. 185 b.

Sloane 2951.

Foll. 172; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long, with 24 lines in the margins; written in fair Nestalik, with a rich 'Unvān, and with illuminated headings and borders throughout, probably in the 16th century; bound in stamped and painted eovers.

The Gulistān written in the centre of the page, and the Būstān written in the margins from fol. 6b to 172a. There are two whole-page miniatures at the beginning, and six of smaller size in the body of the volume, all in Persian style.

قوام بن محمد شیرازی : Copyist

On the fly-leaf is written: "Daniel Walde his booke. April the 9th, 1704. Bought att Suratt in the East Indies."

Add. 7744.

Foll. 163; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $1\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, with 24 lines in the margins; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān, illuminated headings, and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Gulistān, with the Būstān in the margins.

At the beginning are two whole-page miniatures, with illuminated borders, in Persian style.

Or. 1416.

Foll. 147; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, and 26 lines in the margins; written in Nestalik, as stated, in Kashmīr, apparently about the middle of the 19th century.

The Gulistān, with the Būstān in the margins.

Or. 1219.

Foll. 142; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century. [ALEXANDRE JABA.] The Būstān.

Add. 26,158.

Foll. 129; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Turkish Naskhi; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1038 (A.D. 1629).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The Būstān, with marginal notes, partly Turkish.

Add. 27,262.

Foll. 175; 15 in. by 10¹/₄; 12 lines, 5³/₄ in. long; written in a large and elegant Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold headings, interlinear gilding and gold designs on the margins throughout; dated Agrah, Rabī' I., A.H. 1039 (A.D. 1629); bound in painted and glazed covers. [Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

The Büstän of Sa'di.

This fine copy, ornamented with ten miniatures in Indian style, and of exquisite finish, is due to the penmanship of a wellknown physician and poet, who signs Hakīm Rukn ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, commonly called Hakīm Ruknā, حکيم رکن الدين معود الشهير بحکيم ,کن

Rukn ud. Din Käshi, who adopted the takhallus of Masih, was the son of Hakim Nizām ud-Din 'Ali, of Kāshān, and began his poetical career at the court of 'Abbas I. He repaired to India in the reign of Akbar, and became one of the favourite poets of Shāhjahān, whose court he left, at an advanced age (according to Rivaz ush-Shu'ara, fol. 424, one hundred and five lunar years), to return to his native country, where he died. The Mirat ul-'Alam, fol. 482, gives A.H. 1057 Siraj, Oude Catalogue, p. 151, Atashkadah, fol. 111, and Khulasat ul-Afkar, fol. 283, A.H. 1066, as the date of his death. See also Pādishāh Nāmah, vol. i. p. 349.

On the first page is written: "This book was purchased at Kermanshah in 1810 by Sir John Malcolm from a prince of the Zund family, whose eyes had been put out, and who wandered as a mendicant over the country his ancestors and relations had so long governed."

Fol. 168 b has been reproduced by photography in the Oriental Series of the Palæographical Society, No. 50.

Add. 26,157.

Foll. 158; 9 in. by 5; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Rabi^{*} I., A.H. 1098 (A.D. 1687). [WM. ERSKINE.] The Būstān.

Add. 14,346.

Foll. 120; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 17th century. [J. CRAWFURD.]

The Būstān, imperfect at the end. A leaf appended to the MS. by a later hand, to make it appear complete, is dated A.H. 1185.

Add. 16,765.

Foll. 108; 8½ in. by 5½; about 20 lines, 4 in. long; written in a rude Indian character; dated Mednīpūr, Orissa, Jumāda II., 17th year of Muḥammad Shāh (A.H. 1147, A.D. 1734). [WM. YULE.]

The Büstän.

Add. 9696.

Foll. 169; 83 in. by 61; 13 lines, 33 in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, in the 18th century.

The Būstān.

Add. 5631.

Foll. 193; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1180 (A.D. 1766).

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.] The Büstän.

Add. 25,813.

Foll. 141; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in eursive Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century.

z 2

[WM. CURETON.]

The Būstān.

Add. 6630.

Foll. 202; 9 in. by 6; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik on European paper water-marked 1799. [J. F. HULL.] The Būstān.

Add. 25,814.

Foll. 56; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.] A commentary on the Būstān, by 'Abd ur-Rasūl B. Shihāb ud-Dīn, etc., al-Ķurashī, عبد الرسول ابن شهاب الدين ابن عبد الله بن طاهر بن حسن القرشي

حمد بیحد خالقی را که بقطرات مطرات وانزلنا .Beg

This short commentary, in which the Farhang i Jahāngīrī is frequently quoted, deals chiefly with the explanation of proper names, rare words, and a few detached passages.

The author states in the preface that he wrote it in A.H. 1073, at the request of his elder brother, Shaikh 'Abd Ullah, and that he submitted it to the inspection of his master, Mīr Nūr Ullah.

'Abd ur-Rasūl has also written a commentary upon the Gulistān. See the Oude Catalogue, pp. 550, 552.

Add. 6627.

Foll. 179; $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [J. F. HULL.]

The Gulistan, with some marginal notes in Arabic. Some lacunes of the original MS. have been supplied by later hands.

Sloane 2953.

Foll. 107; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

كلستان

The Gulistān; see p. 597 a.

At the end is a seal bearing the name of Ni'mat Ullah with the date A.H. 1082.

From an endorsement in the handwriting of Humphrey Wanley, dated A.D. 1724-5, this MS. appears to have once belonged to the Harleian Collection.

Add. 26,155.

Foll. 77; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 19 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The Gulistān, with some marginal notes. It wants the Khātimah.

Add. 26,154.

Foll. 116; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, 3 in. long, in a page; written in a coarse Indian character, about the close of the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The Gulistān, with copious marginal notes.

The notes have been written by Ibrāhīm B. Ķāzī Husain, who also transcribed the last six leaves, which supply a defect of the original MS., and are dated Aurangābād, Zulka'dah, A.H. 1160 (A.D. 1747).

Add. 6658.

Foll. 97; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in large Indian Nestalik; dated Sūrat, Jumāda II., A.H. 1193 (A.D. 1779).

The Gulistan.

تلجارام ولد جکمجیونـداس :Copyist

Add. 19,274.

Foll. 122; 10 in. by 7; 11 lines, $3\frac{7}{8}$ in.

ong; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1197 (A.D. 1783).

The Gulistan, wanting the Khatimah.

On the first page is written, "John Dawson, 1798."

Add. 14,345.

Foll. 215; 12½ in. by 8½; 9 lines, 4¾ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Muharram, the 25th year of 'Alam Shāh (probably for Shāh 'Alam, i. e. A.H. 1198, A.D. 1783). [JOHN CRAWFURD.]

The Gulistan.

اغا مرزا : Copyist

Or. 349.

Foll. 144; 9 in. by 5½; 13 lines, 3½ in. long; written in large and fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Gulistan, with seven miniatures in fair Indian style.

The following subscription, purporting to have been transcribed from the author's autograph, states that the MS. was completed in the last decade of Muharram, A.H. 662, on the day in which Shīrāz was taken (by Hulāgū's army), and the kingdom passed from the house of Salghur to other masters:

تم الكتاب بحمد الله عز و جل و هى نسخه الاوله بخط المصنف عفا الله تعالى عنه يوم السبت فى العشر الاخير من محرم سنة اثنين وستين و ستماية يوم فتح شيراز وانتقال الملك من ال سلغر الى غيرهم

Add. 6626.

Foll. 112; 9⁴/₂ in. by 5³/₃; 14 lines, 3¹/₂ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [J. F. HULL.]

The Gulistan.

Add. 16,812.

Foll. S5; 8 in. by 5³/₄; 15 lines, 3³/₄ in. long; written in fair Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

The Gulistān, wanting a few lines at the beginning.

Add. 17,962.

Foll. 110; 8½ in. by 6; 13 lines, 4 in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; apparently in the 18th century.

• The Gulistān, transcribed, as stated in a Persian note at the beginning, for Lieut. O'Shea.

Add. 6967.

Foll. 21; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines in a page; written by John Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1806.

A few extracts from the Gulistān, with English translation.

Add. 5973.

Foll. 82; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{7}{3}$ in. long; written in a small Turkish Naskhī; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 360 (probably for 960, A.D. 1553).

A Turkish commentary upon the preface of the Gulistān, with the text.

Author: Maḥmūd B. 'Uṣmān B. 'Alī ul-Lāmi'ī, محمود بن عثمان بن على اللامعي

يا من تعالى عن ثناء الخلايق جناب قدسك . Beg.

The author, a Turkish poet, who was born in Brusa, and died A.H. 938 (Hammer, Geschichte der Osmanischen Dichtkunst, vol. ii. p. 20), states at the end that he completed this work in A.H. 910. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 231, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 541, and the Gotha Catalogue, p. 94, No. 65.

Or. 1366.

Foll. 159; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi, apparently in the 16th century.

[Sir CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.]

An Arabic Commentary upon the Gulistan, with the text.

يعقوب بن Author : Ya'kūb B. Sayyid 'Alī, يعقوب بن سيد على

الحمد لله على ما اولانا من النعم و رزقنا

It is stated by Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 230, that, according to some, the real author of this commentary was Muniri (Osmanische Dichtkunst, vol. i. p. 304), and that Sayyid-'Alī-Zādah had appropriated it by putting his name in the preface. But a later commentator, Surūrī, frequently refers to the present work as Ibn Sayyid 'Ali's commentary, in order to correct its mistakes.

At the beginning of the present copy is an Arabic note stating that the author, Yakub B. Sayyid 'Alī, died on his return from a pilgrimage to Mecca, A.H. 931. The same date is given by Haj. Khal. l. c., and vol. iv. p. 402, where the same writer is said to have فرائض السجاوندى dedicated a commentary on the to Sultan Sulaiman.

See Uri, p. 96, the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 355, the Upsala Catalogue, p. 60, Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, Nos. 33, 242, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 549.

Harleian 5451.

Foll. 208; 7 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long, in a page; written in small Nestalik; dated A.H. 982 (A.D. 1574).

An Arabic commentary upon the Gulistān, with the text.

سرورى Author: Surūrī, سرورى

الحمد لله الذي جعلني من علماء البيان Beg. Muslih ud-Din Mustafa B. Sha'ban, poetically surnamed Surūrī, was the son of a Gallipoli merchant. After teaching at several Medresehs in Constantinople he was appointed tutor to Prince Mustafa, son of Sultan Sulaiman, over whom he acquired unbounded influence. His royal pupil having been put to death by his father (A.H. 960, see Hammer's Geschichte, vol. iii. p. 315), Surūrī spent the rest of his life in retirement, and died A.H. 969, at the age of seventy-two years. He had made a special study of Persian poetry, and left, besides the present work, commentaries on the Maşnavî, the Būstān, the Dīvān of Hāfiz and the Shabistān i Khayāl. See Zail ush-Shakā'ik, Add. 18,519, fol. 10 a.

The author says in his preface that he wrote the present work for the use of his pupil, Sultan (i.e. prince) Muștafă, son of Sultan Sulaiman, because the Gulistan required a commentary, and he wished to supply the deficiencies of a former one written by some Maulā (in the margin, "known as Ibn Sayyid 'Alī "), who was unacquainted with Persian idioms, and had frequently mistaken the sense. He says in conclusion that he had completed the work in Amasia, at the end of Rabi' II., A.H. 957.

See Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 242, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 539, the Upsala Catalogue, p. 59, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 343, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 549.

Add. 7745.

Foll. 203; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 20 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Turkish Naskhi; dated [Cl. J. RICH.] A.H. 1116 (A.D. 1704).

The same commentary.

Sloane 2651.

Foll. 188; 8 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in small Naskhi, apparently in the 18th century.

Beg.

A Turkish commentary upon the Gulistān, with the text.

Author: Sham ٦, شمعى

Beg.

Maulānā Sham'ī, whose original name was Muştafā Darvīsh, has commented several other Persian poems, as the Maşnavī (p. 589 a), Makhzan ul-Asrār, Manţiķ uţ-ţair, Pand-Nāmah, Būstān, the Dīvān of Ḥāfiz, etc. He died, according to Haj. Khal., some time after A.H. 1000. His commentary on the Subhat of Jāmī is stated, vol. iii. p. 575, to have been written in A.H. 1009. See also Dorn, St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 333.

The author states in the preface that he had written this commentary at the request of his pupil in Persian, the intendant of the Imperial Gardens, Muhammad Chalabi, and had completed it within five months. It was written, as stated in a transcript of the author's autograph, described in Krafft's Catalogue, p. 48, in A.H. 977, or, according to the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 540, A.H. 979. Compare the Gotha Catalogue, p. 93.

Add. 7746.

Foll. 202; 8 in. by 5¹/₂; 21 lines, 3¹/₂ in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Rabi^c I., A.H. 1224 (A.D. 1809). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same commentary.

Add. 19,509.

Foll. 254; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Rabi' I., A.H. 1058 (A.D. 1648).

The same commentary.

Harleian 5485.

Foll. 239; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with ruled margins; dated Constantinople, A.H. 1000 (A.D. 1591). The same commentary.

The margins of foll. 3—23 contain the beginning of the same author's commentary upon the Būstān.

Beg. حمد بي حد وثناء بي عد اول صانع See the Upsala Catalogue, p. 99, the Leyden Catalogue, p. 114, and the Gotha Catalogue, p. 69.

Add. 26,156.

Foll. 120; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{3}$ in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in the 18th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

شكرستان

A commentary on the Gulistan.

The beginning of the preface is wanting, and the author's name does not appear. The remaining portion contains the above title, and the work concludes with some verses, stating that it was written in A.H. 1095.

The margins contain copious notes, in the same handwriting as the text. The fly-leaf has the title "Kilid e Gulistán" in the handwriting of Mr. Erskine.

The marginal notes of a copy of the Gulistān, Add. 26,154 (p. 604 b), include several extracts from the present commentary.

Or. 366.

Foll. 284; 11 in. by 7; 17 lines, 4³/₂ in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in the 18th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A commentary on the Gulistan.

نحجه كاستان كذت كنزاً كه از كلبانك Beg.

It is stated in the preface that the work was written in the town of Palval (Thornton's Pulwul, 41 miles south of Dehli), where the author lived in retirement.

The date of composition, A.H. 1119, is conveyed in a versified chronogram at the end of the words كلستانم بهار عمر. The work concludes, foll. 279—283, with a summary of the moral bearings and logical connection of all the tales of the Gulistān.

The margins contain copious notes in the same handwriting as the text. From those of the last page it appears that the author had previously written commentaries on the Gulistān and the Maşnavī, respectively entitled كلبن اعتدال and كلبن.

Sloane 3587.

Foll. 55; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1118 (A.D. 1706).

زاد المسافريين

"Store of the wayfarers," rules of religious life, illustrated by anecdotes and fables.

ای برتر از انکه خلق کنتند

آنانکه یدید و یا نهفتند

امير حسيني ,Author: Amir Husaini

Beg.

Mīr Husainī Sādāt, a native of Ghūr, became in Multān a disciple of Rukn ud-Dīn Abul-Fath, grandson and successor of the famous Shaikh, Bahā ud-Dīn Zakariyyā (Rukn ud-Dīn died, according to Akhbār ul-Akhyār, fol. 57, shortly after A.H. 725). He afterwards settled in Herat, where he died, as stated by Jāmī, Nafaḥāt, p. 705, on the 16th of Shavvāl, A.H. 718. He left many Ṣufi works in prose and verse; the following are especially mentioned: Kanz ur-Rumūz, Zād ul-Musāfirīn, Nuzhat ul-Arvāḥ, Rūḥ ul-Arvāḥ, Ṣirāṭ Mustaķīm, Sī Nāmah, and Ṭarab ul-Maḥāsin. See above, p. 40 a, Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. iii, Juz 2, p. 74, Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 762, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 116, and Atashkadah, fol. 60.

The work is divided into eight Makālahs, which, however, are not distinguished in the present copy. The date of composition, A.H. 729, which Dr. Sprenger gives from his MS., Oude Catalogue, p. 430, is not found in any of the Museum copies.

See Haj. Khal. vol. iii. p. 528, the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 116, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, pp. 356, 438, and the Gotha Catalogue, p. 10.

Add. 7750.

Foll. 51; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Muḥarram, A.H. 878 (A.D. 1473). [Cl. J. RICH.]

کلشن راز

Maḥmūd B. 'Abd ul-Karīm B. Yaḥyā ash-Shabistarī (or, as in the subscription of the present copy, Chapistarī), from Shabistar, a village at eight farsangs from Tabrīz, wrote, beside the present work, three Sufi tracts entitled Ḥaķķ ul-Yaķīn (Add. 16,832, i., and Mélanges Asiatiqués, vol. v. p. 229), Risālah i Shāhid, and Saʿādat Nāmah (Add. 27,261, xxiv). He died A.H. 720. See Majālis ul-'Ushshāķ, fol. 97, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 508, Riyāz ush-Shuʿarā, fol. 405, and Ātashkadah, fol. 17.

بنام آنکه جانرا فکرت آموخت Beg.

The author states in the prologue that he had written this work in answer to some questions in verse, received by messenger, in A.H. 717, from some eminent personage of Khorasan, whose name is not given. (It was, according to Jāmī, Nafaḥāt, p. 705, Amīr Ḥusainī, mentioned under the preceding No.). Although he had composed numerous works in prose, he had never attempted poetry. Yielding, however, to the instances of his friends, he wrote the answers in the same form as the questions, i.e. in Maşnavî rhyme, and completed them in the space of a few hours. The questions, which relate to the meaning of some Sufi terms, are given in their original form, and each is followed by the answer.

60S

The work has been edited, with a German version, by Hammer, "Rosenflur des Geheimnisses," Pesth, 1838. It is noticed in the Jahrbücher, vol. 66, Anzeige-Blatt, p. 26, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 425, Krafft, p. 66, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, pp. 212, 349.

Add. 8992.

Foll. 4S; 6 in. by 4; 11 lines, 2½ in. long; written in small Shikastah-āmīz; dated A.H. 1220 (A.D. 1805).

The same work.

Add 21,104.

Foll. 892; 9¹/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 19 lines, 3 in. long, with 34 lines in the margins; written in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān, illuminated headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 923 (A.D. 1517).

[H. STEINSCHUSS.]

كليات امير خسرو

The complete poetical works of Amir Khusrau, who died A.H. 725; see p. 240 b.

The works of Amir Khusrau are mentioned by Sir Gore Ouseley, in his Notices, pp. 148 -163, by Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 467-470, and by Dr. Dorn, St. Petersburg Catalogue, pp. 350. In the last work they are stated to have been collected by the poet Saifi, whose preface is preserved in one of the

VOL. II.

MSS. there described. An account of their contents by Raushan 'Alī (Ziyā ud-Dīn Khān) is preserved in Or. 1869, foll. 3—16, and a detailed analysis, with translated extracts, by Sir Henry Elliot, of such of Khusrau's poems as are of historical interest, will be found in the History of India, vol. iii. pp. 524—566.

The contents are as follows:

I. Fol. 5 b. تحفة الصغمر, Poems of adolescence, with a prose preface by the author.

حمدی که از اول زادن زاد وجود بود .

Khusrau speaks in the preface of his precocious taste for poetry, and quotes a Rubā'ī extemporized by him in his childhood in the presence of Khwājah 'Izz ud-Dīn, from whom he received the poetical surname of Sultānī, adopted in his early compositions. Much against his will, he states further on, some poems composed by him from his fifteenth to his nineteenth year had been collected by his brother Tāj ud-Dīn Zāhir, who, moreover, forged a chain ("Silsilah") for the fastening of that ship (or anthology, "Safīnah").

The links of that chain are distichs prefixed to each of the separate poems. All have the same measure and rhyme, so as to form one connected poem, binding together the loose contents of the Divān. A similar Silsilah is found in each of the next-following four collections.

The Tuhfat uş-Sighar consists of Kaşīdahs and Tarjī'-bands. They are in praise of Sultan Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Balban (A.H. 664— 686), of his son Sulţān-Muḥammad Kā'ān, commonly called Khān i Shahīd, of some great personages of Balban's court, and finally of the poet's spiritual guide, Shaikh Nizām ud-Dīn Auliyā.

In this, as well as in the four following Divans, every piece has prefixed to it the name and scansion of its metre.

609

A A

II. Fol. 51 b. وسط "حيوة, Poems of middle life, with a prose preface.

حمدي که از ميان جان برايد و ثنای .Beg

The pieces here collected were composed by Khusrau, as stated in the preface, Add. 25,807, from his twentieth to his thirty-fourth year (in other copies "from his twenty-fourth to his thirty-second year"). They are Kaṣīdahs and Tarjī'-bands, in praise of Nizām Auliyā, of Nuṣrat ud-Dīn Sulṭān Muḥammad, the eldest son of Balban, and the poet's special patron, whose death in battle in the month of Zuhḥijjah, A.H. 683, is here recorded. Others are addressed to Mu'izz ud-Dīn Kaikubād, who reigned A.H. 686—689, to Ikhtiyār ud-Daulah B. Kishlī Khān, and other Amīrs of that period.

III. Fol. 139 b. غرة الكمال, Poems of maturity, with preface.

غرهء كمال انساني از ديباجه حمد Beg.

In the preface the author discourses at great length on the excellence of poetry in general, on the superiority of Persian to Arabic poetry, on the different kinds of poetical talent, and on his own rank among Persian poets. He names, as his great models, Sanāī and Khākānī in contemplative poetry, Razī and Kamāl in invention, Nizāmī and Sa'dī in Maşnavī and Ghazals. He then goes on to state that he had been urged to collect the present Divan by his brother, the eminent penman, 'Alā ud-Dīn 'Alīshāh, and expatiates on the great variety of poetical figures or ornaments originated, originated, concluding with a sketch of his life. The poems included in the present collection, he states, had been written from his thirty-fourth to his forty-third year, or from A.H. 685 to to the end of A.H. 693.

This Dīvān, which exceeds the others in bulk, consists of Kaṣīdahs, fol. 190 b, Tarjībands, fol. 286 b, and Ķiţāhs, fol. 297 b.

The poems are in praise of Nizām ud-Dīn

Auliyā, of the Sultans Mu'izz ud-Dīn Kaiķubād (A.H. 686—689) and Jalāl ud-Dīn Fīrūz Shāh (A.H. 689—695), of the latter's successor, Rukn ud-Dīn Ibrāhīm (A.H. 695), of 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad Shāh (A.H. 695—715), lastly of the Amīrs Ikhtiyār ud-Dīn 'Alī B. Aibak, Saif ud-Daulah Bārbak, Tāj ud-Dīn Alp Khān Ghāzī, Tāj ud-Daulah Malik Chhajū, and some others.

IV. Foll. 317 b. بقيم نقيم, Select remnants, or poems of old age, with preface.

حمدی که بقیدء نقیدء حیات در تخریرآن. Beg.

The author treats in the preface of the different kinds of Ghazals, and illustrates by copious and fanciful images the distinctive characters of each of his four Dīvāns. The date of compilation is not given, but from the fact of an elegy on the death of Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn, A.H. 715, being included, it may be inferred that the Dīvān was completed but a few years before the poet's death.

The collection consists of Kaşīdahs, fol. 331 α , Tarjī^{*}-bands, fol. 377 b, and Mukațța'āt, fol. 386 α . Most of the poems are addressed to Muḥammad Shāḥ ('Alā ud-Dīn), others to his sons, Kuṭb ud-Dīn Mubārak Shāh and Khiẓr Khān, and to various Amīrs of his court.

The preceding four Dīvāns have been printed with the title of Kulliyāt i Amīr Khusrau in the press of Naval Kishor, Lueknow.

V. Fol. 393 b. ديوان امير خسرو, A collection of Ghazals and Rubā'is.

Beg. It is contents originally formed part of the The contents originally formed part of the preceding four Dīvāns. With the exception of the first twelve pieces, which are in praise of God and the prophet, the Ghazals are arranged in alphabetical order according to the rhyme-letters, and, under each letter, those which have the same measure are grouped together, the name and scansion of the metre being prefixed to each class. At the end, foll. 861 b—871 a, are Rubā'is without alphabetical arrangement.

VI. Foll. 871 b. بفتاح الفترم, "The key of victories," a poetical account in Maşnavī rhyme of the campaigns of Jalāl ud-Dīn Fīrūz-Shāh during the first year of his reign, i.e. from his accession, A.H. 689, to his return to Dehli in Jumāda II., A.H. 690, the time at which, as stated in the conclusion, the poem was written.

Beg.

This Maşnavî was originally included in the Ghurrat ul-Kamāl. An abstract of its contents is given by Sir H. Elliot, History of India, vol. iii. pp. 536-544.

The following works are written in the margins:-

VII. Fol. 5 b. مطلع الانوار, A moral and religious poem, written in imitation of the Makhzan ul-Asrār of Nizāmī, and in the same measure.

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم . خطبه قدس است بملك قديم

The poem is dedicated to Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad Shāh. The author states in the concluding lines, fol. 105 b, that it contains 3310 distichs, and was written in two weeks, A.H. 698.

VIII. Foll. 106 b. شيرين و خسرو, Shirin u Khusran, an imitation of Nizāmī's Khusrau u Shīrīn.

خداوندا دلم را جشم بکشای . بهعراج یـقیـنم راه بـنمانی

It is also dedicated to 'Alā ud-Dīn, and contains a chapter of advice to the author's son, Mas'ūd, then in his tenth year. It is stated, towards the end, fol. 232 b, that this was the second poem written in imitation of Nizīmī's Khamsah, and that it was completed at the beginning of Rajab, A.H. 698. It is added that the poem consists of 4124 distichs. IX. Foll. 233 b. مجنون ليدلى, Majnūn Lailā, in imitation of Nizāmī's Lailā u Majnūn.

This poem, which is also dedicated to Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn, is stated to contain 2660 distichs, and was written, like the two preceding, in A.H. 698; see fol. 312 b. The text has been lithographed in Calcutta, A.H. 1244, and in Lucknow, A.H. 1286.

X. Fol. 313 b. آئيند، سكندرى, The mirror of Alexander, a counterpart to the Iskandar Nāmah of Nizāmī.

This poem is also dedicated to 'Alā ud-Dīn. It is stated at the end, fol. 445 a, to have been written in A.H. 699, and to contain 4450 distichs.

In some copies, as Add. 24,983, 22,699, etc., the beginning is

XI. Fol. 447 b. هشت بېشت, The eight paradises, a poem on the loves of Bahrām, written in imitation of Nizāmī's Haft Paikar.

ای کشاینده م خزاین جود ... Beg.

The author states at the end, fol. 540 b, that this poem was completed A.H. 701, and that it contains 3352 distichs. He adds in an appendix, $\dot{c}cd$, that the whole Khamsah (the five preceding poems, artt. vii—xi.) had been completed in the space of three years, and that it had been revised and corrected by Kāzī Shihāb ud-Dīn, whom he describes as the most accomplished scholar of the age.

XII. Fol. 544 b. تران السعدين, The conjunction of the two lucky planets, a poetical account of the meeting of Sultan Mu'izz udDīn Kaiķubād and his father Nāṣir ud-Dīn Bughrā Khān), Sultan of Bengal, which took place in Dehli, A.H. 688.

حمد خداوند سرایـم مخست . تاشود این نامه بنامش درست

It is stated towards the end, fol. 647 b, that the poem was written in three months, and completed in Ramazān, A.H. 688, the author being then in his 36th year.

See the analysis of the poem by Sir H. Elliot, History of India, vol. iii. pp. 524– 534, and the extracts by Prof. Cowell, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. xxix. pp. 225–239.

The Ķirān us-Sa'dain has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1259, and edited, with a commentary, by Maulavī Ķudrat Ahmad, Lucknow, A.H. 1261.

XIII. Fol. 660 b. نع سپہر, The nine spheres, a poetical description of the court of Kutb ud-Dīn Mubārak Shāh, with an account of the principal events of his reign.

خدارا کنم بر سر نمامه یاد . . Beg. که بر بنده درهای معنی کشاد

In the prologue, which contains a dedication to Kuth ud-Dīn, Khusrau says that his age was then over sixty, and he names the three Sultans who had successively been his patrons, and the objects of his panegyrics, namely, Mu'izz ud-Dīn Kaikubād, Fīrūz Shāh, and 'Alā ud-Dīn.

See the analysis of this poem by Sir H. Elliot, History of India, vol. iii. p. 557. The poem is there stated to have been completed on the 30th of Jumāda II., A.H. 718, when the poet was sixty-five years of age. Compare Stewart's Catalogue, p. 63.

XIV. Fol. 790 b. دولرانی خضر خان, "Duvalrānī Khiẓr Khān," a poem on the love adventures of Khiẓr Khān, son of Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn, with Deval Rānī, the daughter of Rāi Karn of Gujrāt.

This poem, which is dedicated to Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn, was written at the request of prince Khiẓr Khan, from a narrative penned by himself. But it was not finished until after the death of 'Alā ud-Dīn and Khiẓr Khān. It is often called خصر خاني, and sometimes خصر خاني; but the above is the title given to it by the author in the introduction, fol. 809 a.

Khusrau states in the same passage that the heroine's name, which was originally ديولدي, had been changed by him, for convenience's sake, to دولراني, pronouncing the first part like the plural of Daulat—

The text breaks off at the end of the section in which is recorded the tragic end of Khizr Khān and Deval Rānī. In the conclusion, as found in other copies (Add. 7776, fol. 119 a, Or. 335, fol. 154 b), the poet states that he wrote this poem in the space of four months and a few days, and that he completed it on the 6th of Zulka'dah, A.H. 715. He adds that it consisted originally of 4200 verses; but that 319 lines added after the death of Khizr Khān, brought up the total to 4519.

An abstract of the poem is given by Sir H. Elliot, History of India, vol. iii. pp. 544-557. See also E. Thomas, Pathan Kings, p. 176, and Aumer, Münich Catalogue, p. 22.

The MS. contains two whole-page miniatures at the beginning, and fifteen of smaller size in the body of the volume, all in Persian style. On the first page is an illuminated shield enclosing a table of contents.

Add. 25,807.

Foll. 521; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 17 lines, 3 in. long, with 24 lines in the margin; written in fair Nestalik, with three Unvans and goldruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. CURETON.]

ديوان امير خسرو

The five Divans of Amir Khusrau in their original shape, that is to say, including the Ghazals and Maşnavis. The MS. has some lacunes and transpositions, and the text is far from correct.

The contents are :--

I. Fol. 2 b. وسط الحيوة, the second Divan (p. 610, art. ii.), first half.

The preface, which agrees with that of the preceding copy, is preceded by two lines in Arabie beginning:

بفضل الله قد سطرت هذ الصفحات

Contents: Kaşidahs, fol. 7 b. Tarji^{*}-band, fol. 42 a.

This second section breaks off in the beginning of the last Tarji'-band (Add. 21,104, fol. 132 b).

II. Fol. 52 b. بقيد نقيد, the fourth Divān (p. 610, art. iv.), wanting the preface, and some lines at beginning and end. It begins with the following verse of the Silsilah:—

بقيد ايست نقيد زنيض طبع من اين

Contents: Kaşīdahs, fol. 52 b. Tarjī's, fol. 77 b. Maşnavīs, fol. 82 a. Ķiţ'ahs (most of which are not found in the preceding copy), fol. 85 a. Ghazals, fol. 99 a. Rubā'īs, fol. 130 a.

The Ghazals, in this and the following Divans, are not in alphabetical order.

III. Fol. 141 a. تحفة الصغر, the first Divān (p. 609, art. i.) wanting the preface and about three pages at the beginning.

Contents Kasidahs, fol. 141 a. Tarji's, fol. 163 a. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 167 b. Ghazals, fol. 169 a. Maşnavīs, fol. 184 a. Rubā'īs, fol. 187 a.

The Kit ahs and Masnavis are not found in the preceding copy.

IV. Fol. 193 a. A series of Ghazals, probably from the Ghurrat ul-Kamāl (p. 610, art. iii.), imperfect at beginning and end.

V. Fol. 223 a. The latter half of the second Dīvān, رسط الحيوة, beginning with the last Tarjī'-band, and containing Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 223 a, Maşnavīs, fol. 227 a, Ghazals, fol. 236 a, and Rubā'īs, fol. 307 b.

VI. Fol. 327 b. غرت الكمال, the third Divan, with the preface, to which is prefixed the following line in Arabie:

الله اطلع اهلة الغرر من هذه غرة الكمال

Contents: Kaşīdahs, fol. 359 a. Tarji's, fol. 417 b. Ghazals, 423 a. Rubā'īs, fol. 425 a.

There is a gap, apparently of considerable extent, after fol. 422; the latter part of the Tarji's, the whole of the Kit'ahs and Maşnavīs, and the greater part of the Ghazals are wanting.

VII. Fol. 442 b. نبایت الکمال, the fifth of the author's Divāns, comprising the poems of the last years of his life, with a preface.

بسم الله الواهب الذي وهب الشعرا ^{المتب}حرة .Beg

The preface, which is confined to the praises of God, the prophet, and the author's spiritual guide, Nizām ud-Dīn, gives no elue to the date of the compilation. But the Dīvān includes an elegy on the death of Sultan Ķuţb ud-Dīn Mubārak Shāh, A.H. 720, fol. 464 b, several poems addressed to Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Tughluķ (A.H. 720—725), and to his son and presumptive heir Fakhr ud-Dīn Ulugh Khān, foll. 465, 466, and even a poem on the festive entrance of the latter into Dehli after his accession as Muhammad Shāh, A.H. 725, fol. 467 a, an event which took place a few months before the death of the poet.

Contents: Preface, fol. 442 b. Kaşīdahs, fol. 444 a. Tarjī's, fol. 464 b. Maşnavīs, fol. 469 a. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 473 b. Ghazals, fol. 475 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 519 a.

The Nihāyat ul-Kamāl is mentioned in the Mir'āt Aftābnumā, fol. 111, as the last of the five Dīvāns of Khusrau.

Add. 23,549.

Foll. 290; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [ROBERT TAYLOR.]

غرة الكمال

The third Dīvān of Amīr Khusrau (p. 610, art. iii.), with some lacunes.

Contents: Preface, fol. 2 b (wanting about seven leaves after fol. 33, corresponding to Add. 21,104, foll. 165 b—171 a). Kaṣīdahs, fol. 59 b. Tarjī's, fol. 150 b. Ghazals, fol. 161 b (Add. 25,807, foll. 205 a—208 b). Kiţ'ahs, fol. 170 a. Maṣnavīs (imperfect at the end), fol. 190 a. Ghazals, foll. 228 a— 253 b (imperfect at beginning and end, corresponding to Add. 25,807, foll. 196 b—205 a, 208 b—218 a). Rubā'īs, foll. 254 a—291 b, (also imperfect at beginning and end, corresponding to Add. 25,807, foll. 427 a—438 a).

The Maşnavīs include Miftāḥ ul-Futūḥ (p. 611, art.vi.), a narrative of the poet's journey to Oude with the Sultan's army (A.H. 687), addressed to his brother Zāhid (see Elliot, vol. iii. p. 535), and a few shorter poems.

Add. 22,700.

Foll. 475; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān, ornamented headings, and gold-ruled margins, dated Ramazān, A. H. 890 (A.D. 1485). [Sir JOHN CAMPBELL.]

دیوان امیر خسرو

A collection of Ghazals from all four Dīvāns of Amīr Khusrau, arranged in one, alphabetical series.

حمد رائم بر زبان لله رب العالمين . اذك جان بخشيد در قرآن هدى للمتقين

The arrangement differs from a similar collection described p. 610, art. v., and the number of poems is much smaller. After the Ghazals are found some Mukațța'āt, fol. 453 a, not in alphabetical order, and some Rubā'īs alphabetically arranged, fol. 465 a.

جلال الدين محمد : Copyist

Or. 1215.

Foll. 326; 10 in. by 6; 12 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in an elegant Nestalik, with a rich 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins, and ornamental headings throughout; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 895 (A.D. 1490); bound in stamped and painted covers.

Another copy of the Dīvān of Amīr Khusrau, substantially agreeing, in both contents and arrangement, with the preceding MS. It contains also some Muķațța'āt, fol. 313 b, and Rubā'īs in alphabetical order, fol. 319 a.

نعيم الدين بن حاجى صدر الدين : Copyist المذهب

Add. 7757.

Foll. 452; 9 in. by 5; 15 lines, 2§ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and goldruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Dīvān of Amīr Khusrau, containing Ghazals in alphabetical order, and, at the end, Mukațta'āt, fol. 434 a, and Rubā'īs, fol. 440 b, both without alphabetical arrangement. The contents differ considerably from those of the two preceding copies.

Add. 7756.

Foll. 174; $S_{\frac{1}{2}}$ in. by $5_{\frac{3}{2}}$; 14 lines, $3_{\frac{1}{2}}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divān of the same poet, containing Ghazals in alphabetical order, a Tarjī', fol. 163 a, some Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 164 a, and Rubā'is, fol. 166 b, the last two sections without alphabetical arrangement. All the Ghazals in 1, but the last seventeen, are wanting, and the MS. is also imperfect at the end. The number of Ghazals is considerably less than in the preceding copies.

Or. 474.

Foll. 267; 7³/₄ in. by 4¹/₄; 13 lines, 2⁷/₅ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

Ghazals selected from the four Divans of Amir Khusrau (p. 609, artt. i.—iv.), and alphabetically arranged.

دیدم بسی زماند مرد ازمای را Beg. سازنده نیست هیچ امیر وکدای را

Each Ghazal has a heading showing from which of the four Divans it was taken.

The collection is much smaller than Add. 21,104, v., and differently arranged.

The first two leaves, and the last two, which contain sixteen Rubā'is in alphabetical order, are by a later hand.

Foll. 260—267 contain Jāmi's preface to his Haft Aurang, fol. 260 b, and the beginning of the Silsilat uz-Zahab.

Add. 24,983.

Foll. 136; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 22 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 48 lines in the margin; written in four gold-ruled columns, in a minute Nestalik, with rich 'Unvāns and marginal ornaments; dated Herat, A.H. 917 (A.D. 1511); bound in stamped and gilt leather.

The Khamsah, or five poems of Amīr Khusrau (p. 611, artt. vii.—xi.), viz. : Maţla' ul-Anvār, fol. 2 b. Shīrīn u Khusrau, fol. 28 b. Majnūn u Lailā, fol. 60 b. A'īnah i Sikandarī, fol. 80 b. Hasht Bihisht, fol. 113 b.

An illuminated shield on the first page كتاب خمسه : contains the following inscription امير خسرو دهلوي عليه الرحمة برسم خزانة السلطان الاعظم الخاقان الاعدل الاكرم ابو الغازي سلطان حسين بهادر خان خلد ملكه

"The five Poems of Amīr Khusrau of Dehli, mercy be upon him; for the library of the great Sultan, the just and noble Khāķān, Abu-l-Ghāzī Sulţān Husain Bahādur Khān, may his reign last for ever."

Abul-Ghāzī Sultān Husain died in A.II. 911. It is strange to find him designated as the reigning sovereign in a MS. written six years after his death, and at a time when Herat and all Khorasan had passed into the possession of Shāh Ismā'il Şafavī.

At the end of the Maţla' ul-Anvār is found تمت الكتاب بيد : conscient subscription يلبدة الهرات تراب اقدام الفقرا محمد على بن درويش على ببلدة الهرات حفظه الله عن الافات و البليات في شهر جمادي الاخر سنه سبع عشر و تسعمايه

Similar colophons, bearing the same date, are appended to the fourth and fifth poems.

On the first page is impressed the seal of Kābil Khān, servant of 'Alamgīr Pādishāh, with the date 1097. Kābil Khān was appointed imperial librarian about the middle of 'Alamgīr's reign. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 82.

Add. 22,699.

Foll. 209; 134 in. by 84; 22 lines, 54 in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns, with five rich 'Unvāns, gold headings and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 978 (A.D. 1571). [Sir JOHN CAMPBELL.]

The same Khamsah.

Two whole-page miniatures, in fair Persian style, are prefixed to each of the five poems.

محسن بن لطف الله معاد الحسيني : Copyist

Add. 7752.

Foll. 188; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, 4 in. long; written in small Nestalik, in four columns, with five 'Unvāns; dated Rabī' II., A.H. 981 (A.D. 1573). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Khamsah.

عبد الحسين بن جمشيد : Copyist

Add. 7751.

Foll. 245; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{5}{4}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with five 'Unvāns; dated A.H. 982, (A.D. 1574); bound in painted covers.

[Cl. J. RICH.] The same Khamsah.

The volume contains eleven whole-page miniatures, in the Persian style of the 18th century. A note on the first page states that it was given by Muḥammad Kāzim B. Jalāl ud-Dīn Muḥammad Māzandarānī to his son Muḥammad Hāshim. The former's seal bears the date 1100.

Add. 26,159.

Foll. 232; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 20 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with five 'Unvāns; apparently early in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.] The same Khamsah.

Add. 21,976.

Foll. 92; 2 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvān; dated Rāndījah, district of Aḥmadābād, Gujrāt, Zulḥijjah A.H. 995 (A.D. 1587).

Mațla' ul-Anvār (see p. 611, art. vii.). Copyist: مظفر قلى ابن شاه قلى ارلات

Add. 24,054.

Foll. 150; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with gold headings; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 885 (A.D. 1480).

A'inah i Sikandari (see p. 611, art. x.).

Add. 16,785.

Foll. 99; $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $1\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, with 8 lines in the margin; written in small Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 15th century. [WM. YULE.]

Hasht Bihisht (see p. 611, art. xi.).

Foll. 83, 84, and 97—99, have been supplied by a later hand.

A note on the first page states that the MS. was purchased for the library of the Kādiriyyah in A.H. 1050.

Add. 16,784.

Foll. 110; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 15 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Fathābād, Rabī' I., the 9th year of Muḥammad Shāh (A.H. 1139, A.D. 1726). [WM. YULE.]

The same poem.

Copyist: محمد نجم الدين حسيني

Add. 7753.

Foll. 145; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, on gold-sprinkled paper, with a rich 'Unvān, and illuminated headings throughout; dated Herat, Rajab, A.H. 921 (A.D. 1515). [Cl. J. RICH.]

Kirān us-Sa'dain; see p. 611, art. xii. The MS. is endorsed زبدة التمثيل خسرو دهلوى

It contains four whole-page miniatures in Persian style.

The transcriber, سلطان محمد خندان, Sultān Muḥammad Khandān, is mentioned in the Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 350, as a skilled penman then (A.H. 930) still living in Herat.

Add. 26,160.

Foll. 119; 8[‡] in. by 5; 17 lines, 2⁷/₈ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Safar, A.H. 1000 (A.D. 1591). [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same poem.

Edpyist : تعمود الحسيني Edpyist : تطب الدين

Add. 18,413.

The same poem.

میر محمد علی سیالکوٹی : Copyist

Add. 16,786.

Foll. 161; 94 in. by 5; 12 lines, 34 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

The same work.

The first page bears the stamp of General Claud Martin.

Egerton 1033.

Foll. 144; 10 in. by 6‡; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in a rude Indian hand, at Rāmnagar, apparently in the 18th century.

The same work.

غلام حسن رضا ولد شیم محمد حیات : Copyist انصاری

Or. 364.

Foll. 65; 9 in. by 54; 20 lines, 33 in. vol. 11. long ; written in small Nestalik; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1136 (A.D. 1723).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A commentary on the Kirān us-Sa'dain. Author: Nūr Muḥammad, called Kāzī Nūr ul-Ḥakṣ Dihlavī, دالمدعو بنورالحق دهلوي

The work is dedicated to Majd ud-Din Maulānā Shaikh 'Abd ul-Haķķ, the author's father and instructor. Both have been already mentioned. See pp. 14 a and 224 b.

The date of composition, A.H. 1014, is ingeniously indicated in the following chronogram:—

It is obtained by deducting from the total produced by the title شرح قران السعدين, namely 1084, the "eye" of the word عيب 'fault," that is to say, the value of the letter e, viz. 70.

See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 471.

Or. 335.

Foll. 158; 9 in. by 5¹/₄; 14 lines, 2³/₄ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 982 (A.D. 1574). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

Duvalrāni Khizr Khān (see p. 612, xiv.), with three whole-page miniatures in the Persian style.

Add. 7754.

Foll. 153; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 12 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik on goldsprinkled paper, with a rich 'Unvān, and illuminated borders, probably early in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same poem, with six whole-page miniatures in fair Persian style.

Harleian 414.

Foll. 120; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, in Sultanpūr, apparently in the 17th century.

The same poem, called in the subscription كتاب عشيقه

محمد لطیف بن محمد شریف ابن : Copyist باباشاه بردی بلخی

Add. 24,952.

Foll. 260; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, 2 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 922 (A.D. 1526).

The Divan of Mir Hasan, of Dehli.

ای حاکم جهان و جهان داور حکیم .Beg محدث همه بدایع و تو مبدع قدیم

Khwājah Hasan, or Amīr Hasan, surnamed Najm ud-Dīn, son of 'Alā'i Sanjari, was a native of Dehli, and an intimate friend of Amīr Khusrau, with whom he stayed five years in Multan, A.H. 678-683, at the court of Muhammad Sultan, the eldest son of Ghiyaş ud-Din Balban. Like Khusrau, he was one of the court-poets of Sultan 'Alā ud-Din Khilji (A.H. 695-715) to whom most of his laudatory poems are addressed. At the age of fifty-three he joined, through Amir Khusrau's influence, the circle of disciples which surrounded Nizām ud-Dīn Auliya, and soon became one of the favourite Murids of the holy Shaikh, whose teaching he attended from A.H. 707 to 722, and whose utterances he wrote down from day to day under the title of Favā'id ul-Fu'ād (Or. 1806, 2001). When Sultan Muhammad B. Tughluk, in A.H. 727 (see Badaoni, vol. i. p. 226), laid Dehli waste, and forcibly removed its inhabitants to his new capital Deogir, or Daulatābād, Amīr Hasan went with them, and died, according to the same author, p. 201, in the same year. Taķī Kāshī, however, gives A. H. 745, and the Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 65, A.H. 738, as the date of Mīr Ḥasan's death.

The historian Ziyā Baranī, who was the constant associate of Mīr Hasan, and of Amīr Khusrau, speaks with enthusiasm of the former's gifts and moral character, and says that he was called the Sa'dī of Hindustān. See Tārīkh i Fīrūzshāhī, pp. 67, 359. Other notices will be found in Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 711, Akhbār ul-Akhyār, fol. 87, Firishtah, vol. i. p. 214, vol. ii. p. 737, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 153, and Daulatshāh, fol. 168. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 232, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 418.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, not alphabetically arranged, fol. 2 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 35 b. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 244 a. A Maşnavī, in praise of Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn, fol. 246 b. Rubā'is, fol. 248 a.

The Ķaşīdahs are nearly all in praise of Sultan 'Alā ud-Dīn Khiljī (A.H. 695—715). Two are addressed respectively to Ulugh Khān (afterwards Sultan Muḥammad), and Khiẓr Khān, the sons of Sultan Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Ṭughluķ (A.H. 720—725).

A note on the first page states that the MS. belonged to Kātib Zādah Muḥammad Rafī', the first court physician, سر اطبای خاصه

Copies of the Dīvān are mentioned in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 356, Ouseley's Collection, No. 178, the Gotha Catalogue, p. 73, and the Münich Catalogue, p. 22.

Add. 7747.

Foll. 304; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 16 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, probably in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Auhadi.

Rukn ud-Din Auhadi, sometimes called Maraghi, from Maraghah, which appears to have been his birthplace, and sometimes Isfahāni, from his habitual residence, Isfahan, took his poetical surname Auhadi from his spiritual guide, Shaikh Auhad ud-Din Hāmid Kirmānī, who died A.H. 697 (see Oude Catalogue, p. 48, and Nafahāt, p. 684). He left, besides his Divan, a poem called Jam i Jam, composed A.H. 733, and another entitled Dah Nāmah, dedicated to a grandson of Nasīr ud-Din Tūsi (Majālis ul-Mūminin, fol. 334, and Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 239). Auhadi died in Maräghah, near Tabriz, and the date of his death, A.H. 738, was engraved upon his tomb. See Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 706, Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, Add. 23,512, fol. 107, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 20.

Daulatshäh, who with his usual inaccuracy confounded Auhadi with his master Auhad ud-Din, makes him die A.H. 697. He has been followed by Taki Käshi, Oude Catalogue, p. 17, and the Haft Iklim, fol. 362. Compare Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 360.

Contents: Kaşīdahs and Tarjī'-bands, fol. 1 a. This section, which contains religious and Şufi poems, without alphabetical arrangement, is imperfect at the beginning. The first complete piece begins thus:—

هوس كعبه وان منزل وانجاست مرا

Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 48 a, also imperfect at the beginning. The first complete Ghazal begins thus :—

ای غم عشق تو یار غارما

Rubā'is, without alphabetical arrrangement, fol. 297 a.

In a poem included in the first section, fol. 16 b, Auhadī addresses Khwājah Salmān (p. 624 b), a contemporary poet, whose pride and ambition he severely reproves.

The Divân of Auhadi is mentioned by Haj. Khal. vol. iii. p. 264, and an extract from it is noticed in the Gotha Catalogue, p. 72.

Add. 7090.

Foll. 156; 9 in. by 5; 15 lines, 2§ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Sirhind, Zulka'dah, A.H. 1038 (A.D. 1629).

"The Cup of Jamshīd," a poem in the style of the Hadīķah of Sanā'ī (p. 549 a), and in the same measure, by Auhadī.

The prologue contains eulogies upon the reigning Sultan Abu Sa'id, (A.H. 716—736), and his Vazīr Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. Rashīd (A.H. 728—736), to the latter of whom the poem is dedicated. It is divided into three sections, called ..., o, or "circles." It was composed, as stated in the conclusion, fol. 155 a, in the space of one year, and completed in A.H. 733 :—

عبد القدوس : Copyist

See Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 498, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 362, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 543.

Or. 333.

Foll. 114; 8 in. by 41; 17 lines, 23 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The same poem, wanting the last four lines.

In this copy the date of composition is A.H. 732, fol. 113 b:

هفصدی رفته بود وسی ودو سال

The last four distichs are wanting.

On the first page are the stamps of the kings of Oude, and some earlier seals, dated A.H. 1111-1117.

Add. 18,113.

Foll. 93; $12\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, 5 in. long; written in a small and elegant Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with three rich 'Unvāns, and gold headings; dated Baghdād, Jumāda I., A.H. 798 (A.D. 1396).

خواجوى ,Three poems by Khwājā Kirmānī

كرمانى

Kamāl ud-Dīn Abul-'Atā Mahmūd B. 'Alī, poetieally surnamed Khwājū, was a native of Kirman. He states in the epilogue of Gul u Naurūz (a passage not found in the Museum copy, but quoted by Erdmann in his "Chudsehu Germani," Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morg. Gesellsehaft, vol. ii. pp. 205-215) that he was born on the fifth of Shavval, A.H. 679. According to the Tārīkh i Ja'farī, quoted in the Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, Add. 23,512, fol. 118, he began his poetieal career as a panegyrist of the Muzaffaris, but having left them, in consequence of some slight, he repaired to the court of Amir Shaikh Abu Ishāk (who ruled in Shīrāz from A.H. 742 to 754), in whose praise he composed many poems, and died there A.H. 753. The date assigned to his death by Taki Kāshi, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, A.H. 745, is too early; for it will be seen further on, p. 621 b, that the poet was still alive in A.H. 746.

It is said that Khwājū had followed for some years the teaching of the great Ṣūfī, 'Alā ud-Daulah of Simnān, who died A.H. 736. He has left a Dīvān, and a Khamsah written in imitation of the five poems of Nizāmī, and beginning with the Rauzat ul-Anvār. The Khamsah was completed A.H. 744, as stated in Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 2, p. 24. See also Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 175. That date is indeed found at the end of Kamāl-Nāmah, which must have been the last poem of the Khamsah. Notwithstanding that undoubted fact, Daulatshāh gives A.H. 742 as the date of the poet's death, an error which has been blindly copied by the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 172, and the Atashkadah, fol. 62. Other notices are to be found in Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 543, and Haft Iklīm, fol. 119. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 248, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 471, and Dorn, St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 357.

I. Fol. 1 b. همای همایون, the love adventures of Shahzādah Humāi, prince of Zamīn Khāvar, and Humāyūn, a daughter of the Faghfūr, or emperor of China; a Maṣnavī in the same metre as the Iskandar Nāmah of Nigāmī.

بنام خداوند بالا و پسست Beg. که از هستیش هست شد هر جه هست

In the prologue, after duly praising the reigning sovereign Abu Sa'id Bahādur Khān, and his Vazīr Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Muḥammad (son of the historian Rashīd ud-Dīn), the author says that he had been induced to compose this poem by the illustrious Ṣadr, Abul-Fatḥ Majd ud-Dīn Maḥmūd, who had supplied him with a genuine Persian theme, and had urged him to "sing to the Muslims a Magian spell," فسون مغان بر مسلمان بخوان

From the epilogue we learn that the poem was composed in Baghdād, where Khwājū was pining for his native Kirmān, and that it was completed in A.H. 732, a date expressed by the chronogram بذل in the following lines:—

> کنم بذل برهر کمه دارد هموس که تاریخ این نامه بذلست وبس

The contents have been stated by Erdmann, l.e., p. 213, and, from a Turkish imitation, by Krafft, Handschriften der Orientalischen Akademie, p. 71. See also Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 504, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 544.

II. Fol. 50 b. كمال نامع, the "Book of Perfection," an ethic and religious poem, in the metre of Haft Paikar. Beg. نسم من لا الم الا هم

The greater part of the prologue is taken up by an invocation to Shaikh Abu Ishāk Ibrāhīm B. Shahriyār Kāzarūnī, the patron saint of Kāzarūn (who died A.H. 426; see above, p. 205 a, Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 286, and B. de Maynard, Dict. Géographique, p. 472). The poet states that he was staying as a devout worshipper at the Shaikh's holy In the epilogue he addresses a shrine. panegyrie to the sovereign of Fars, Amir Shaikh Abu Ishāk (A.H. 742-754), and some advice to his own son, Mujir ud-Din Abu Sa'id 'Ali. He adds that he had read the poem to his spiritual guide (Murshid), then just arrived in the land, who being pleased with it, had conferred upon him the holy investiture (Khirkah), and upon his work the title of Kamal Namah. The date of composition, A.H. 744, is stated in the following lines :---

The same verse is quoted in the Habib ut-Siyar as giving the date of the completion of the Khamsah.

The poem is divided into sections (B.ib), which in another copy, Add. 7758, are numbered from 1 to 12. The present MS. has lost a leaf after fol. 50.

· III. Fol. 71 b. , روضة الاندوار, the "Garden of Lights," a Sufi poem in twenty sections (Makālahs).

زينت الروضة في الاول Beg. يسم اله صمد مفتضل

It is dedicated to Shams ud-Din Mahmud B. Sa'in, to whom the poet had been recommended, as he states in the epilogue, by his patron, Taj ud-Din Ahmad 'Irāki.

Shams ud-Din Mahmud B. Sa'in was first attached to the Chupani princes Amir Pir Husain and Malik Ashraf, by whom he was put in possession of the fortress of Sirjan. He surrendered it, A.H. 744, to Amir Muhammad Muzaffar. Sent by the latter to Shīrāz on a mission to Amīr Shaikh Abu Ishāk, he deserted his patron to enter the service of his rival, by whom he was appointed Vazir. He died in an encounter with the Muzaffaris on the 4th of Safar, A.H. 746, a date recorded by Khwājū in verses quoted by Hafiz Abru; see Or. 1577, and Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 2, p. 18.

Tāj ud-Dīn Irāķī, a wealthy inhabitant of Kirman, was one of the first who came out of that city, then besieged by Amir Muhammad Muzaffar, to submit to the conqueror (A.H. 741). Raised by him to the Vazirate, he incurred his anger some years later, and was put to death. See Dastür ul-Vuzara, fol. 121.

In the prologue the poet introduces his beloved, who suggests to him that, his Gul u Naurūz being finished, he should now turn to his admired Nizāmī, and try to surpass the Makhzan ul-Asrār.

Khwājū says in the epilogue that the poem had been written at the shrine of Shaikh Abu Ishāk Ibrāhīm Kāzarūnī, and completed A.H. 743:-

A leaf is wanting after fol. 79.

The Rauzat ul-Anvār is considered as the first poem of the Khamsah. See Haj. Khal. vol. iii. pp. 175, 498, and Zeitschrift der D. M. G., vol. xvi. p. 234.

This fine MS. is due to the pen of a celebrated calligrapher, Mir 'Ali Tabrizi, who .مير على بن الياس التبرينزي الڊ'ورچي signs

In some lines quoted in the Majalis ul-Muminîn, fol. 486, Sulțân 'Ali Mashhadi, a penman of great repute (see p. 573a), calls Mir 'Ali Tabrīzī the inventor of the Naskh-Ta'līķ, and says that he was a contemporary of Kamāl Khujandī (who died A.H. 803). See also Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 458, and Blochmann, Ain Akbari, p. 101, where he is said to have lived under Tīmūr.

At the beginning of the Rauzat ul-Anvār, which appears to have held originally the first place in the volume, is an illuminated shield with an inscription showing that the MS. had been written for the library of a royal personage called Abul-Fath Bahrām:

كُنَبُ خانه شهريار ايو الفتح بهرام جم اقتدار

The MS. contains nine whole-page miniatures in a highly finished Persian style.

Add. 7758.

Foll. 178; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 21 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with four 'Unvāns; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 934 (A.D. 1527). [CL. J. RICH.]

Five poems by the same author, as follows:—

I. Fol. 1 b. Humāi and Humāyūn; see the preceding MS., Art. I.

This copy contains an epilogue, foll. 54 b---56 a, which is a later addition. The Sultan, we are told, having succumbed to fate, and the Vazīr having soon followed, the poet had lost the expected reward. (Abu Sa'īd died on the 13th of Rabī' II., A.H. 736, and Ghiyāş ud-Dīn was put to death in Ramazān of the same year.) Subsequently, however, his patron, Tāj ud-Dīn Aḥmad 'Irāķī (see p. 621 b), having proceeded from Kirmān to the royal camp to kiss the threshold of the Khūkān, obtained for Khwājū and his work the favourable notice of the Vazīr, Shams ud-Dīn Maḥmūd B. Ṣā'in (see p. 621 a), who recompensed him beyond his hopes.

II. Fo¹. 57 b. کل و نوروز, the love-story of Naurūz, son of the king of Khorasan, and Gul, daughter of the emperor of Rūm, a Maşnavī in the metre of Khusrau u Shīrīn.

It is dedicated to the same Vazīr, Tāj ud-Dīn 'Irāķī, whose generous reward is thankfully recorded in the epilogue. The date of composition, A.H. 742, is stated in the following lines:—

An abstract of the poem has been given by Erdmann, l.c., p. 212. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 234.

III. Fol. 118 b. Kamāl-Nāmah; see the preceding MS., Art. II.

IV. Fol. 142 b. دورنامه, the "Book of Jewels," a Maşnavî in praise of the Vazîr Bahā ud-Dīn Maḥmūd and his ancestors.

بنام نام بخش نامداران Beg. کدای درکه او شهریاران

The prologue contains eulogies on the reigning prince of Kirmān, Amīr Muḥammad Muẓaffar, and on his Vazīr, the abovenamed Bahā ud-Dīn Maḥmūd. The entire poem is devoted to the glorification of the latter, who was a lineal descendant in the sixth generation of the celebrated Vazīr of the Saljūķ empire, Nizām ul-Mulk (see p. 444 a), and of his forefathers. Each of these becomes in turn the theme of hyperbolical laudations of the most tedious sameness, from which little is to be learned as to their real history. Their filiation is, from father to son, as follows:—

The great Nizām ul-Mulk. Hamīd ul-Mulk Mahmūd, who died in Tabrīz, and was buried in Jarandāb. Ķivām ul-Mulk Nūr ud-Dīn Masʿūd, Vazīr of Ķizil Arslān, also buried ,e in Jarandāb. Fakhr ud-Dīn Ahmad, who died in Sīvās. Zakī ud-Dīn Mahmūd, who became Vazīr of the Khākān of Turkistān, and was called Atā Mahmūd. He died in Azarbāijān. 'Izz ud-Dīn Yūsuf, who served Yūsuf Shāh and Amīr Muzaffar, and died in Rūm. Bahā ud-Dīn Mahmūd, for whom the poem was written.

Kaşīdahs in praise of the same personages, and in the same order, are mentioned by Erdmann, l.e., p. 215, as forming part of the Dīvān of Khwājū.

The present copy wants the conclusion, in which occurs, according to Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 473, the following line, giving A.H. 746 as the date of composition:

V. Fol. 155 a. Rauzat ul-Anvār (see the preceding MS., III.), wanting two leaves at the beginning.

على بن حسين بن عماد الدين الحسيني : Copyist

Or. 28.

Foll. 86; 7 in. by 5¹/₄; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Naskhi; dated Rajab, A.H. 881 (A.D. 1476).

[G. C. RENOUARD.]

The poet, no record of whom has been found, uses Haidar as his takhallus, and is called in the heading and subscription Haidar ush-Shīrāzī. The Divān shows that he lived in Shīrāz, his birthplace, and occasionally in Yazd, about the middle of the eighth century of the Hijrah. It contains, fol. 35, an elegy on the death of Sultan Abū Sa'id, which took place A.H. 736, and, fol. 78, two satires against a contemporary poet, Khājū Kirmānī (see p. 620 a), whom the author charges with disparaging Sa'dī, while plundering his Dīvān, and declares unable to compete in poetry with himself:—

The other satire, beginning was composed when Khwājū came from Kirmān to Shīrāz, and is stated, in the heading, to have been recited in the presence of Amīr Shaikh Abū Isḥāķ (A.H. 742—754).

There are also three Kaşīdahs addressed to Nuşrat ud-Dīn Shāh Yaḥyā, of whom the poet says, fol. 27, that he had, in the presence of Sultan Muḥammad, gloriously vanquished Akhī at the gate of Tabrīz, and had received as his reward the sovereignty of Yazd, the seat of his father:—

Shāh Muzaffar, the eldest son of Amīr Muhammad Muzaffar, the founder of the Muzaffari dynasty, had died in his father's life-time, A.H. 754 (see Maţla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 91). His eldest son, Nuşrat ud-Dīn Shāh Yaḥyā, was only fifteen years old when he fought by the side of his grandsire in the battle referred to in the above lines, in which Akhī Jūķ, a Chūpānī Amīr, who had made himself master of Azarbāijān, was completely routed before Tabrīz, A.H. 759 (ib. fol. 101, and Price's Retrospect, vol. ii. p. 690).

Having been confined, A.H. 760, by his uncle Shāh Shujā', in the fortress of Shīrāz, Shāh Yahyā was re-instated by him as viceroy of Yazd A.H. 764. But he took the first opportunity to assert his independence, and, being of a restless and ambitious disposition, carried on for years a constant struggle with his relatives. Placed by Tīmūr, after his conquest of Shīrāz, A.H. 789, at the head of the government of Fārs, he was dispossessed a few months later by his brother Shāh Manşūr, and was eventually involved, A.H. 795, in the general slaughter of the Muzaffari princes by the ruthless conqueror.

Another Kasīdah, composed in Yazd, fol. 43, is in praise of Sharaf ud-Dīn Shāh Husain:—

Shāh Husain was the third son of the above-mentioned Shāh Muzaffar, and apparently succeeded his elder brother, Shāh Yaḥya, in the principality of Yazd, but the exact period is not recorded.

The Dīvān, which begins with seven Ķaṣīdahs in praise of God and the prophet, contains, besides the pieces above mentioned, little else than Ghazals, and is without any systematic arrangement. Its title is found in a short prologue, headed سبب نظم كتاب, in which the following dialogue is carried on with an imaginary interlocutor:—

چه کفت کفت که حیدرکتاب عشق بساز کزان کتاب بود کار بسته را مفتاح بکفتمش که کتاب مرا چه نام نهی بکفت نام کتاب تو مونس الارواح

محدد بن حسن بن عبد الله النكسارى : Transcriber

Add. 27,314.

Foll. 400; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in India, in the 17th century. [D. FORBES.]

The poetical works of Salmān Sāvajī, سلمان ساوجي

Khwājah Jamāl ud-Dīn Salmān, son of Khwājah 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad, was born in Sāvah, where his father held a high financial appointment, and followed in early life the same profession, which he afterwards gave up for poetry. He was, according to Jāmī, Bahāristān, fol. 67, a successful imitator of the great Ķaṣīdah writers, especially of Kamāl Ismā'īl, whom he often surpassed, but did not reach the same eminence in the Ghazal.

In his Firāķ Nāmah, which he composed, as stated in the Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 136, A.H. 761, Salmān says that he had completed his seventy-first year :

> کنون سالم از شست ویک در کذشت بساط نشاطم فلک در نــوشت

He must therefore have been born about A.H. 690.

His earliest poems are apparently those which he addressed to the celebrated Vazir, Ghiyāş ud-Din Muhammad, who died A.H. 736. But his brilliant career as court-poet commenced in the time of the founder of the Ilkani dynasty, Amir Shaikh Hasan Buzurg, who rose to power after the death of Sultan Abu Sa'id, A.H. 736, held his court in Baghdad, and died A.H. 757. He was in high favour with that prince, and afterwards with his son and successor, Shaikh Uvais (A.H. 757-776), who established his residence in Tabrīz, as also with the latter's mother, the accomplished Dilshād Khātūn. Having survived Shaikh Uvais, who died on the 2nd of Jumāda I., A.H. 776 (Matla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 148), Salmān maintained for some time the same influential position under his son and successor, Sultan Husain

(A.H. 776-784), to whom several of his poems are addressed. He composed also, as has been noticed in the Maţla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 152, two Ķaşīdahs in honour of Shāh Shnjā', during that king's temporary occupation of Tabrīz in A.H. 777. It is said that he passed his last years in retirement in his native place.

It will be seen from the above facts that the date A.H. 769, assigned by Daulatshäh to Salmän's death, and adopted by most later writers, is by at least eight years too early. The Țabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 38, places that event in A.H. 778, Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 389, in A.H. 779, and Takī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, in A.H. 799 (an obvious error for 779).

The notices of Daulatshāh and Atashkadah have been edited in text and translation by Erdmann, Zeitschrift der D. M. G., vol. xv. pp. 758—772. Other notices will be found in Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 547, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 408, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 208. See also Hammer, Redekūnste, p. 260, Ouseley's Notices, p. 117, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogne, p. 555.

The contents are as follows :

I. Fol. 1 b. جمشيد و خورشيد, the lovestory of Jamshid and Khwurshid, a Maşnavî poem in the measure of Khusrau u Shirin.

الَّهی پـردة پندار بکشای Beg. در کنجینه اسرار بکشای

After a panegyric addressed to Sultān Uvais, the poet relates in the prologue how he had been summoned to the presence of his royal patron, and told that, Nizāmī's book on Farhād and Khusrau having become old and obsolete, he should compose on the tale of Jamshīd, a new poem dedicated to his sovereign:

VOL. II.

In obeying the king's behest, he says, further on, he found a welcome opportunity of discharging a debt of gratitude for fifty years' favours:

> ادای حق به پنجه سال نعمت اکرداری هوس دریاب فرصت

In the epilogue Salmān regrets his departed youth, and complains of the infirmities of age. His figure is bent like a bow, nothing but skin and bones.

The poem was completed, as stated in the following lines at the end, in the month of Jumāda II., A.H. 763:

The Jamshid of Salmān is not the mythical king of Persian tradition, but an imaginary prince, son of the Faghfūr, or emperor of China. The heroine is a daughter of the Kaişar of Rūm.

II. Fol. 85 a. فراق نامه, the "Book of Separation," a Masnavi.

It was written, like the preceding, for Sulțān Uvais, who had desired Salmān to compose a poem on the pangs of absence.

It is stated in the Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1, p. 136, that Sulțān Uvais was then pining for his minion Bairām Shāh, who, in consequence of some quarrel, had left the court and gone to Baghdād, A.H. 761.

The heroes of the tale are called Malik and Mahbūb. See Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 389. III. Fol. 117 a. Ķasīdahs and Tarjībands.

This section is slightly imperfect at the beginning. The poems are arranged according to the personages to whom they are addressed, as follows: Muhammad and 'Ali, fol. 117 a. Sulțān Uvais, fol. 128 b. Jalāl ud-Din Shaikh Husain (A.H. 776-784), fol. 222 a. Nūyān A'zam Shaikh Hasan Beg (Hasan Buzurg), fol. 228 a. Dilshād Khātun (wife of the preceding), fol. 248 b. Dūndī Sultān (wife of Sultān Uvais), fol. 268 a. Shams ud-Din Zakariyyā (Vazīr of Sultan Husain), fol. 272 b. Shah Mahmud (the Muzaffari, who died A.H. 776), fol. 277 a. Shāh Shujā' (A.H. 759-786), fol. 279 b. Sāhib Ghiyās ud-Dīn Muhammad (who died A.H. 736), fol. 282 a.

IV. Fol. 285 a. Marşiyahs, or funeral poems, including elegies on the death of Sulțān Abu Saʿīd (A. H. 736), Amīr Īlkān, Shaikh Ḥasan, Sulṭān Uvais, and Dūndī Khātūn.

V. Fol. 295 a. Mukatta'āt, without alphabetical arrangement. Several of these relate to contemporary events, fixing their dates, as, for instance, the death of Shaikh Hasan Chūpānī in A.H. 744, and a destructive inundation at Baghdād in A.H. 775. At the end is a Tarjī'-band.

VI. Fol. 329 a. Ghazals, and Rubā'is, also without alphabetical arrangement.

This volume bears the seal of the college of Fort William. On the first page are several 'Arzdīdahs, one of which is dated A.H. 1062.

Add. 7755.

Foll. 134; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvān, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

Jamshīd u Khwurshīd. See above, art. i.

The volume contains three whole-page miniatures in the Persian style.

Add. 6619.

Foll. 186; 8 in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvān and gilt headings; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 876 (A.D. 1472). [J. F. HULL.]

The tale of Mihr and Mushtarī, a Maşnavī poem.

Author: 'Assār, ,

بنام پادشاه عالم عشق . که نامش هست نقش خاتم غشق

Maulānā Muḥammad 'Aṣṣār, of Tabrīz, is mentioned in the Lubb ut-Tavārīkh as one of the panegyrists of the Īlkānī Sultan Shaikh Uvais (A.H. 757—776). He died, as stated in the same work, A.H. 779, or, according to Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, A.H. 784. Very meagre notices of him are found in the Bahāristān, fol. 68, Haft Iklīm, fol. 513, and Atashkadah, fol. 18. See also Hammer, Redekünste, p. 254, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 311.

'Assar refers in several passages to the numerous poems which he had composed in praise of princes, and which often had remained unread. Thus in the epilogue:

> بسبسته از کهرهای قصاید بکردن بادشاهانرا قلاید بمداحی بسی کوهر فشانده قصاید کفته و بر کس تخوانده

Finding poets neglected and scorned, he had retired, as he says in the prologue, to solitude and silent contemplation. From this torpor he is roused by a friend, who urges him to complete his poetical works by adding to them a Maşnavî, the only kind of composition which he had not yet attempted:

After urging two objections, the absence of any patron of poetry, especially in "this town of Tabrīz," and the unapproachable standard of perfection held up by Nizāmī, the author yields, and relates to his friend the tale of Mihr and Mushtarī, "the story of a love free from all weakness, pure of all sensual desire."

The author states in the conclusion that the poem was completed on the tenth of Shavväl, A.H. 778:

بكويش پيچ الفست و صد و بيست

The above date, which had been arbitrarily changed to A.H. 674 by C. R. S. Peiper, Commentatio de libro Persico Mihr o Muschteri, Berlin, 1835, has been vindicated with overwhelming evidence by Prof. Fleischer, Zeitschrift der D. M. G., vol. xv. pp. 389-396. The contents of the poem have been stated by Peiper in the above quoted work, and by Sir Gore Ouseley in the Biographical Notices, pp. 201-226. See also the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 547, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 359, and the Upsala Catalogue, p. 111.

مرشد : Transcriber

and

This copy contains eight whole-page miniatures in the Persian style.

Add. 7759.

Foll. 141; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, on glazed, tinted, and goldsprinkled paper; dated Ramazān, A.H. 855 (A.D. 1451). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Hafiz Shirazi.

Hafiz Shīrāzī, originally called Shams ud-Din Muhammad, who is by common consent the greatest of Persian lyrics, ranks also high as a Sufi; a spiritual symbolism is generally supposed to underlie, in his most Anacreontic strains, the expression of sensuous ideas. Jāmī says in the Bahāristan that he is as great in the Ghazal as Zahīr Fāryābī in the Kasidah. The whole of his long and uneventful life was, with the exception of short absences, spent in his beloved Shirāz. Such of his poems as bear upon contemporary events are frequently quoted by the historians of the period. Their dates range from the reign of Amir Shaikh Abū Ishāk (A.H. 742-754), which he extols as a glorious epoch for his native city, to the short-lived rule of the last of the Muzaffaris, Shah Mansur (A.H. 790-795). The latter took possession of Shirāz towards the end of A.H. 790, about six months after the first invasion of Timur. Two poems in his praise, quoted in the Matla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 198, are probably the latest compositions of Hafiz, who died A.H. 791, or, according to less trustworthy authorities, A.H. 792.

The first is the date recorded by Muhammad Gul-andām, the friend of Hāfiz, and collector of the Dīvān. It is engraved, according to Sir Gore Ouseley, Notices, p. 40, on the poet's tombstone, and is conveyed by the words خاك مصلى in the following chronogram, found in some copies of Gul-andām's preface:—

It has been followed by the Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 117, and by Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19.

The seeond date, A.H. 792, is expressed by another chronogram, which, although contradicting the direct statement of Gulandām, has found its way into most copies of the same preface :

It has been adopted by Jāmī, Nafahāt, p. 715, and, after him, in Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 2, p. 47, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 334, and Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 272.

Daulatshāh, whose account of Hāfiz has been translated by S. de Saey, Notiees et Entraits, vol. iv. p. 238, stands alone in placing his death as late as A.H. 794, and commits a further anachronism in representing a supposed interview of Hāfiz with Tīmūr as having taken place after the death of Shāh Mansūr, who fell in battle A.H. 795.

Firishtah has a circumstantial account of a message sent by the king of Deccan, Mahmūd Shāh Bahmanī (A.H. 780—799), to Hāfiz to induce him to come to his court. The poet, probably anxious to escape from the approaching hosts of Tīmūr, accepted the invitation, as well as the funds provided for the journey, and proceeded as far as Hormuz, where he went on board the king's ship. But, frightened at the sight of a rough sea, he landed again, and made all speed back to Shīrāz. See the Bombay edition, vol. i. p. 577.

Notices on Hāfiz will be found in Hammer's Redekünste, p. 261, Ouseley's Notices, pp. 23-42, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 415, and Defrémery, Journal Asiatique, 5° Serie, pp. 406-425.

The Divān was first edited by Abū Ţālib Khān (see p. 378 b), in Caleutta, 1791, and re-printed in 1826. It has been printed in Bombay, A.H. 1228 and 1277, Dehli, 1269, Cawnpore, 1831, Lucknow, A.H. 1283, Teheran, A.H. 1258, Bulak, A.H. 1250, 1256 and 1281, and Constantinople, 1257. An excellent edition of the text, with the Turkish commentary of Sūdī, has been published by H. Brockhaus, Leipzig, 1854.

A German translation of the Dīvān by J. von Hammer was published in Tübingen, 1812. Select poems have been translated into German by Bodenstedt, Berlin, 1877, and into English by J. Riehardson, 1774, J. Nott, 1787, J. H. Hindley, 1800, H. Bieknell, 1875, S. Robinson, 1875, and W. H. Lowe, 1877.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Maşnavīs, fol. 132 a. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 134 b. Rubā'is, fol. 138 b.

Copyist: سليمان الفوشنجي

Add. 7760.

Foll. 179; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvans, illuminated headings, and gold designs on the margins, dated A.H. 921 (A.D. 1515), bound in painted covers. [Cl. J. RICH.] The Divan of Hafiz, with the preface of Muḥammad Gul-andām, محبد كل اندام, which حمد بیحد و ثنای بیعد و سیاس بی قیاس begins After some remarks on the charm and pregnant sense of Hāfiz's poetry, and on the wonderful speed with which it had spread to the most distant lands, delighting kings and Sufis alike, the writer of the preface, who describes himself as an old friend of Hāfiz, says that during his life the poet was so busy lecturing on the Coran, giving instruction to the Sultan, writing glosses to the Kashshāf and the Miftān, studying the Maṭāli' and the Miṣbāh, etc., that he found no leisure to collect his seattered poems; and although Muḥanımad Gul-andām, who often held converse with him in the college, العربي كاء, of Maulānā Ķivām ud-Dīn 'Abd Ullah, repeatedly pressed the subject on his attention, Hāfiz still put it off with some excuse, until death overtook him in A.H. 791 (see Add. 5625, and 7761), when the task of collecting and arranging the Dīvān devolved on the writer.

The above preface is printed in the Bombay edition of the Dīvān.

Contents: Preface, fol. 3 b. Ķasīdahs, beg. زدلبري نتوان لاف زد بأسانی, fol. 6 b. Maşnavīs, fol. 12 a. Tarjī-bands, fol. 18 a. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 23 b. Muķattaʿāt, fol. 170 a. Rubāʿis, fol. 174 a.

The copyist, Sulțān Muḥammad Khandān, was a pupil of the famous calligrapher Sulțān 'Alī Mashadi, and one of the scribes of Mir 'Alī Shīr (see p. 617 a).

Of four miniatures in Persian style, placed at the beginning and end of the volume, two are of modern date.

The first page is covered with 'Arzdīdahs of the reign of Shāhjahān and Aurangzīb.

Add. 7761.

Foll. 228; 10¹/₂ in. by 6; 14 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvāns, and gold headings; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 983 (A.D. 1575). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Dīvān of Hāfiz, with the same preface. Contents: Ghazals, fol. 5 b. Ķasīdahs, beg. شد عرصه جهان جو بهشت برین جوان, fol. 192 b. Maşnavîs, fol. 199 a. Tarji'-bands, fol. 206 a. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 212 a. Rubā'is, fol. 220 b.

ابراهیم حسین بن محمد امین الکاتب : Copyist

Or. 1220.

Foll. 194; 7 in. by 33; 12 lines, 2 in.

long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, ornamental headings, and six miniatures in the Persian style, apparently in the 16th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

The same Divan, without the Kasidahs.

Grenville xli.

Foll. 258; 5 in. by 3; 10 lines, $1\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century; bound in painted covers.

The same Divān, wanting about forty leaves at the beginning, and not including the Kasīdahs.

It contains nineteen miniatures, in the Indian style, and of a high degree of finish, but partly defaced.

Prefixed is a letter of Wm. Marsden to the Hon. Thomas Grenville, describing the MS.

Add. 8890.

Foll. 147; $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 3; 15 lines, $1\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Jumāda, A.H. 1020 (A.D. 1611).

The same Divan, without the Kaşidahs.

ابو الفتح بن شيخ محمد بني اسراييل : Copyist ساکن کول

On the cover is written : "Given by Sr. R. C. to At'her Ali Khan, and by him bequeathed to Sir W. Jones."

Add. 26,161.

Foll. 154; 8 in. by 42; 15 lines, 22; in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with a rich 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated the fourth year of Shāhjahān (A.H. 1040—41, A.D. 1631). [WM. ERSKINE.] A copy of the same Dīvān, containing, besides the Ghazals, only one Maşnavī, with a few Ķiţ'ahs and Rubā'īs.

عبد الله تبريزي : Copyist

The first page contains several 'Arzdīdahs and seals of the reign of Shāhjahān.

Add. 16,762.

Foll. 200; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvān; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 1053 (A.D. 1643). [WM. YULE.]

The same Divan, without the Kasidahs.

عبد الر شيد بن مولانا عبد اللطيف : Copyist ترکان دهلوی

The volume contains eleven miniatures, partly in Indian, and partly in Persian style, which did not originally belong to it.

On the fly-leaf is written : "Wm. Yule, from his friend Col. D. Ochterlony, Dehli, 10 Sept., 1805."

Add. 5625.

Foll. 213; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvāns and ruled margins; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1082, (A.D. 1672).

The same Dīvān, with the preface of Muhammad Gul-andām, and the Kasīdahs.

محمد مقيم لاهورى : Copyist

Add. 7762.

Foll. 195; $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in a cursive character; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1109 (A.D. 1698).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Divan.

حیدر بن ولی : Copyist

Add. 25,815.

Foll. 270; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Jumāda I., A.H.

1161, the first year of Ahmad Shāh (A.D. 1749). [Wm. CURETON.]

The same Divān, with the preface of Muhammad Gul-andām, and the Kasīdahs.

At the end, foll. 268—270, is an anonymous tract on the spiritual meaning attached by Sufis to the names of sensual objects, substantially agreeing with the treatise of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, mentioned further on.

شيخ فيض الله هاكن قصبد سيالكوت : Copyist

Add. 7763.

Foll. 404; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns, illuminated borders, and 112 miniatures in the Indian style; written apparently in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Dīvān, to which are prefixed— 1. The Preface of Muḥammad Gul-andām, fol. 1 b. 2. Exposition of the spiritual meaning of words in the Dīvān of Hāfiz, by Amīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (see p. 447 b), fol. 7 b—12 a.

ترجمه مرادات دیوان حضرت خواجه حافظ شیرازی علیه الرحمت نـقل است از حضرت امیر کبـیر امیر سید علی همدانی

Add. 27,264.

Foll. 252; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1226 (A.D. 1811).

[Sir John Malcolm.]

The same Dīvān, with the preface of Gulandām, and the Kaṣīdahs. Prefixed are some observations on the spiritual meaning of some words in the Dīvān, partly taken from Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī, fol. 1 α , and a notice on the life of Hāfiz, from the Habīb us-Siyar, and Nafahāt ul-Uns, fol. 4 b.

Add. 4946.

Foll. 153; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [CLAUD RUSSELL.]

Another copy of the same Dīvān, containing only the Ghazals, a few Ķiţ'ahs, and a short Maşnavī.

Add. 23,550.

Foll. 209; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [ROB. TAYLOR.]

The same Divan.

Or. 1367.

Foll. 309; 12½ in. by 8½; 11 lines, 4½ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [SIR CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.]

The same Divan, imperfect at the end.

Add. 6620.

Foll. 200; 7 in. by 3³/₄; 11 lines, 2¹/₈ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [J. F. HULL.]

The same Divan, slightly defective at beginning and end.

Add. 7764.

Foll. 219; 7 in. by 4; 14 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Nestalik, with an 'Unvān, illuminated borders, and sixteen miniatures in the Indian style; dated Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1215 (A.D. 1801); bound in painted covers.

The same Divan.

Or. 1417.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Foll. 170; 12 in. by 63; 15 lines, 33 in. long; written in Nestalik, as stated, in Kashmir; dated A.H. 1264 (A.D. 1848).

The same Divan.

Add. 7765.

Foll. 261; 81 in. by 53; 20 lines, 31 in.

long; written in a cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

A Turkish commentary upon the Dīvān of Hāfiz, by Surūrī, $\omega_{c,0,0}$ (see p. 606 a).

Beg. الحعد لله الذي حفظ الذكر عن تحريف The author states, in a short Turkish preface, that he had written this commentary for some religious friends, with the object of fully disclosing the spiritual sense of the Divān.

This copy breaks off in the middle of the letter ω .

See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 273, and the Münich Catalogue, p. 26.

Or. 29.

Foll. 239; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 23 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in a small Turkish Naskhī, apparently in the 17th century.

[G. C. RENOUARD.]

A commentary upon the Dīvān of Hāfiz by Maulānā Sham'ī Efendī, مولانا شمعى افندي (see p. 607 a).

Beg. حمد بی پایان صانعی را که انتاب منیر In a short Persian preface the author informs us that he had written the present work by desire of his protector, Aḥmad Farīdūn. It contains the text, followed by a Turkish paraphrase and a few verbal explanations.

The subscription, apparently transcribed from the author's own, states that the commentary had been completed at the end of Zulhijjah, A.H. 981. See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 273, and Krafft's Catalogue, p. 67.

Or. 312.

Foll. 113; 9³/₄ in. by 6; 15 lines, 3³/₈ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, on silver-sprinkled paper; dated Patnah, Jumāda II., A.H. 1072 (A.D. 1661).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

نور اليقين

The Divan of Mas'ud of Bak, مسعود دك.

الحمد لله الذي نور فواد العارفين بانوار ذات .Beg. The author, who sometimes uses Mas'ūd i Bak (but still oftener Mas'ūd) as his Takhallus, was so called, according to Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, p. 84, followed by the Riyāz ush-Shu'ara, fol. 410, from Bak, a dependency of Bukhārā. He was, as stated in the Akhbār ul-Akhyār, fol. 137, a relative of Sultan Firūz Shāh (A.H. 752-790), and bore in his early life the title of Shir Khan. When he renounced the world, he took for his spiritual guide Shaikh Rukn ud-Din B. Shaikh Shihāb ud-Dīn, Imām of Nizām ud-Dīn Auliyā, and became a fervent adept of the Chishti order. By his mystic exaltation and reckless utterances he made himself obnoxious to the Ulama, by whom he was sentenced to death, as stated in Tabakāt i Shāhjahānī, A.H. 800. He was buried near the tomb of the famous saint Kuth ud-Din, in old Dehli. He left, besides his Dīvān, a treatise entitled Tamhīdāt on the plan of a work of the same name by 'Ain ul-Kuzāt Hamadānī (p. 411 b), and another called Mir'āt ul-'Ārifīn. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 486.

The author says, in a short preamble, that he had composed this work called Nūr ul-Yakīn at the request of his brother Naṣīr ud-Dīn Muḥammad, that it might give light to the eyes of friends and serenity to the bosom of the godly.

The Dīvān, which is entirely of a religious and mystic character, contains Kaṣīdahs, fol. 3 a, Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 19 b, and Rubā'is similarly arranged, fol. 95 a.

Several of the Kaşīdahs are in praise of the author's spiritual guide Rukn ud-Dīn, whose proper name, 'Uşmān, appears in the following lines, fol. 13 b:

شیخ رکنا دین عثمان ابن قطب الحق شمار کنر جمال اوست بسطی در دل مستور من Other poems are addressed to Shaikh Nasīr ud-Dīn, no doubt the celebrated Chirāgh i Dihlī (see p. 41 b), who was also, according to Ilāhī, a religious instructor of Mas'ūd. His name occurs on fol. 24 b:

Add. 19,496.

Foll. 177; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

The Dīvān of Kamāl Khujandī.

Shaikh Kamāl was born and grew up in Khujand, a town of Māvarā un-Nahr; but, after performing a pilgrimage to Mecca, he settled in Tabriz, where Sultan Husain B. Shaikh Uvais (A.H. 776-784) built for him a monastery (Khānkāh), and where his renown as a devotee and religious teacher drew to him numbers of disciples. Tughtāmish, Khān of Kipchāk, when returning from his raid upon Tabrīz in Zulķa'dah, A.H. 787 (see Matla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 185), took him to his capital Sarāi, where Kamāl remained four years. He afterwards returned to Tabrīz, then the residence of Mīrān Shāh, son of Timur, by whom he was treated with considerate attention. There he died, according to Jāmī, Nafahāt, p. 712, in A.H. 803, a date adopted by Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 90, Haft Iklim, fol. 601, Tabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 35, Mirāt ul-Khayāl, fol. 41, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 383.

Daulatshāh places the same event in A.H. 792. But this is inconsistent with his own account; for, according to him, Kamāl lived many years after his return from Sarāi, which cannot have taken place earlier than A.H. 791 or 792. According to the Majālis ul-Ushshāk (see p. 352 b), Kamāl Khujandī died A.H. 808.

Jāmī says in the Bahāristān that Kamāl imitated the style of Hasan Dihlavī (p. 618 a), but surpassed him in subtlety of thought. He is said to have been much admired by his contemporary Hāfiz.

Notices on his life have been given by Hammer, Redekünste, p. 255, Ouseley, Notices, pp. 192 and 106, Bland, Century of Ghazals, iii., and Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 454.

The present copy contains Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 a, Kiţ'ahs, fol. 169 a, and a few Rubā'is, fol. 176 b. It wants all the Ghazals in the letter 1 but the last seven. Among the Kiţ'ahs is found one in which the poet compares himself with his namesake Kamāl Işfahānī (Oude Catalogue, p. 455), and another relating to the invasion of Tughtamish, fol. 174 a:

Copies are mentioned in Fleischer's Dresden Catalogue, p. 7, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 557, Münich Catalogue, p. 27, and Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1428.

Add. 7739.

Foll. 104; $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan Maghribi.

Maghribī, whose original name was Muhammad Shīrīn, was born, according to Taķī Auḥadī, quoted in Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 413, in the town of Nāin, province of Isfahan, and took his poetical name from a Maghribī

VOL. II.

Shaikh by whom he had been invested with the Khirkah of the Sufi order of Ibn ul-'Arabī. He was a disciple of Shaikh Ismā'il Sīsī, lived in Tabrīz on terms of friendship with Kamāl Khujandī, and was, like him, better known as a Sufi than as a poet. He is said to have been in great favour with Mīrān Shāh, until he was supplanted by his more celebrated contemporary. According to Jāmī, Nafaḥāt, p. 713, followed by the Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 91, and by Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19, Maghribī died in Tabrīz A.H. 809. Taķī Auḥadī and the Majālis ul-Ushshāk (p. 252 b) give a somewhat earlier date, A.H. 807.

See Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 476; compare Ouseley's Notices, p. 106, and Hammer, Redekünste, p. 78, where three poems of Maghribi are wrongly ascribed to Amir Mu'izzi.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Tarji'-bands, fol. 80 b. Rubā'is in alphabetical order, fol. 100 b.

The Divān, which is mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 315, and in the Bibliotheea Sprenger., No. 1444, has been printed in Persia, A.H. 1280. See Dorn, Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 524.

Add. 6623.

Foll. 80; 9½ in. by 5; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Rabi⁶ II., A.H. 1177 (A.D. 1763). [J. F. HULL.] The same Divān, somewhat differently arranged.

چه مهر بود که بسرشت يار در کل ما .Beg چه ڪلچ بود که بنهاد يار در دل ما

Foll. 75-80 contain some poetical extracts and a fragment of an Arabic-Persian vocabulary.

Add. 25,824.

Foll. 35; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 18 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. D D long; written in Nestalik; dated Safar, A.H. 1096 (A.D. 1685). [WM. CURETON.]

كنز الاشتها

"The treasure of appetite," a collection of poems, with a prose preface by the author.

Author: Jamāl ud-Dīn Abu Isḥāķ, surnamed Hallāj, جمال المدين ابسو ^{اس}حاق المعروف بعلاج

سپاس بـی قیاس و حمد بـی حد رازق بـی Beg. سبب

Hakīm Jamāl ud-Dīn Abu Ishāk, commonly called ابو أسحاق الاطعية, or Abu Ishāk the gastronomer, designates himself in his verses by the takhalluş ابو أسحاق, a contraction of ابو أسحاق. He was a native of Shīrāz and a favourite of Sultān Iskandar B. 'Umar Shaikh, grandson of Tīmūr and viceroy of Fārs, A.H. 812—817. He died, according to the Ṭabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 75, A.H. 819, or, as stated in the Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 475, A.H. 827. See also Takī Kāshī and Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, pp. 19, 68, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 99, and Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 44.

He says in the preface that he was in his youth ambitious to achieve renown in poetry, but, coming after so many great poets, as the latest of whom he names Kamāl Khujandī and Hāfiz, he was at a loss what new theme to select, when his beloved came in and suggested one by complaining of the loss of her appetite, for the restoration of which he wrote the present work.

The poems, which are in the form of Ghazals and Rubā'is, describe, in a eurious travesty of the lyric style, various products of the culinary art. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 248, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 415.

Foll. 33—35 contain a fragment of a description of Kashmīr by Faizī.

Add. 7811.

Foll. 319; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written partly in Naskhi, and partly in Nestalik; apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان نعمت الله

The Dīvān of Ni'mat Ullah, commonly called Ni'mat Ullah Valī.

Amīr Nūr ud-Dīn Ni'mat Ullah, who was, according to his own statement in this Divan, fol. 309, a son of Mir 'Abd Ullah, and a descendant of the Imām Bāķir, is revered, especially by Shī'ahs, as a great saint, and worker of miracles, and was the founder of a religious order, called after him Ni'matullāhī. It is stated in a contemporary Manākib, written for 'Ala ud-Din Shah Bahmani (A.H. 838-862), Add. 16,837, foll. 339-355, that he was born in Halab, A.H. 730 or 731, but grew up in Irak, and went in his twenty-fourth year to Mecca, where he stayed seven years, and became a disciple and Khalīfah of Shaikh 'Abd Ullah Yāfi'i (who died A.H. 768; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 427). He lived afterwards successively in Samarkand, Herat, and Yazd, attracting everywhere crowds of disciples, and finally settled in Māhān, eight farsangs from Kirmān, where he spent the last twenty-five years of his life, and died on the 22nd of Rajab, A.H. 834, at the age of 103 or 104 lunar years. In a later, but much more circumstantial account of his life, the Jāmi' i Mufīdī, Or. 210, foll. 2-36, the same day and year are given as the date of his death, which is confirmed by several contemporary chronograms.

'Abd ur-Razzāk, who visited the saint's tomb A.H. 845, says in the Maţla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 167, that Ni'mat Ullah Valī died on the 25th of Rajab, A.H. 834. The same ycar is mentioned in Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 143, Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 177, and Țabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 53.

Daulatshāh, who places his death in A.H. 827, is followed by Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 299, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 451, and Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 110. Compare Hammer, Redekūnste, p. 223, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 517.

Ni'mat Ullah Vali was treated by Shährukh with great consideration, and the king of Deccan, Alimad Shāh Bahmanī (A.H. 825-838), obtained as a singular favour the sending of one of the saint's grandchildren to his court. After the saint's death two others of his grandsons, Shāh Habīb Ullah and Shāh Muhibb Ullah, went to the Deccan, with their father Khalil Ullah, and rose to high rank at the Bahmani court. See Firishtah, vol. i. p. 633. A detailed account of those of his descendants who remained in Persia, and intermarried with the Safavis, is to be found in the above quoted Jāmi' i Mufīdī. The holy Sayyid's tomb in Māhān is a much frequented place of pilgrimage. He left, besides his Divan, a collection of Sufi tracts, the number of which is said to exceed five hundred.

The present copy of the Dīvān, which consists of poems of religious and mystic character, is imperfect at beginning and end. Its contents are as follows :—A miscellaneous series of Maşnavīs, Ķaşīdahs, Ghazals, and Rubā'is, without any apparent system of arrangement, fol. 7 a. (It contains a piece composed A.H. 777, fol. 30, in which a description of the distracted state of the world is followed by a prophecy of the approaching reign of the promised Imām.) Ghazals, alphabetically arranged, fol. 41 a. Maşnavīs, fol. 303 a. Rubā'is, alphabetically arranged, breaking off in the letter s, foll. 310 a—316 b.

The series of Ghazals, which begins

جام کیتی نماست سید ما جام وجانان ماست سيد ما has after fol. 302 a lacune extending from s to r.

Foll. 1—6 contain a prose tract by the same author, imperfect at the end, on the means of attaining spiritual insight, with the heading السلوكية.

Fol. 317 contains the end of a versified tract on ascetic life, called in the subscription الرسالة الفقرية.

- At the end of the volume, foll. $317 \ b$ -319, is a Tarji'-band, ascribed to Khwājah Hāfiz, in praise of Imām 'Ali Rizā, with the burden

السلام اى شاة سلطان خراسان السلام

It is written by another hand ; the transcriber, Muhammad Kāsim of Işfahān, dates Zulķa'dah, A.H. 971.

Add. 7091.

Foll. 220; 9 in. by 5½; 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in fair Nestalik with goldruled margins; dated Muharram, A.H. 962 (A.D. 1554).

The Divan of Kasim i Anvar.

Sayyid Ķāsim, or Ķāsim i Anvār, whose original name was Mu'īn ud-Dīn 'Alī, is, like the preceding, a saint of great renown with the Shī'ahs. He was born in Sarāb (Yāķūt's Sarāv), in the district of Tabrīz, A.H. 757, and had for religious instructors Shaikh Ṣadr ud-Dīn Ardabīlī, an ancestor of the Ṣafavis, and, after him, Shaikh Ṣadr ud-Dīn 'Alī Yamanī, a disciple of Shaikh Auḥad ud-Dīn Kirmānī (see p. 619 α). After staying some time in Gīlān, he went to Khorasan, and settled in Herat, where he lived during the reigns of Timur and Shahrukh. There disciples flocked to him in such numbers, and he acquired so great an influence, as to give umbrage to the sovereign. 'Abd ur-Razzāk relates in the Matla' us-Sa'dain, fol. 155, that in A.H. 830, Shāhrukh having been stabbed in the Masjid of Herat by a certain Ahmad Lur, Sayyid Kāsim was charged by Mirzā Bāisunghar with having harboured the intended assassin, and was obliged to leave Herat and repair to Samarkand, where he found a protector in Mirzā Ulugh Beg. He returned, however, some years later, to Khorasan, and took up his abode in Kharjird, a town of the district of Jām, where he died in A.H. 837. See Nafahāt ul-Uns, p. 689, Lață'if Nāmah, fol. 5, Majālis ul-'Ushshāk (p. 352 b), Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 145, Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 112, and Haft Iklīm, fol. 509.

Daulatshāh alone has an earlier date for the death of Sayyid Kāsim, viz. A.H. 835. See Hammer, Redekünste, p. 285, Bland, Century of Ghazals, vi., and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 533.

The Dīvān, in which the poet uses sometimes قاسبی, sometimes قاسبی, for his Takhalluş, contains—Ghazals alphabetically arranged, fol. 1 b. A Tarjī'-band, fol. 203 b. Ghazals and Ķiţ'ahs, some of which are in Turkish, others partly in the Gīlāni dialect, fol. 208 a. Rubā'is, fol. 215 b.

نعمت الله بن سيد على الحسيني : Copyist

Add. 25,825.

Foll. 167; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.] The same Divan, containing only the Ghazals, and wanting the latter part of the letter σ .

Add. 18,874.

Foll. 242; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 15th century.

I. Fol. 1 b. The same Dīvān, containing: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. A miscellaneous series of Ghazals, Ķiţiahs, and Maşnavīs, fol. 196 b. Rubā'is, fol. 204 a. Marşiyahs on Mīr Ghiyāş, Mīr Makhdūm, and Khwājah Hasan 'Aṭṭār, fol. 208 b. A Maşnavī, containing, according to the heading, a prediction of the death of Tīmūr, fol. 209 b. A Maşnavī treating of the various degrees in ascetic life, في مقامات السالكين, fol. 211 b. See the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 559.

II. Fol. 214 b.

اذيس العارفين

A Maşnavī by the same poet, treating of the meanings attached by the Sufis to the words "soul," نفس "spirit," روح "heart," , "intellect" عقل "intellect", عشق "love," with a short prose preface beginning منت منت منت , in which the author calls himself خدايرا جلت عظمته وعلت كلمته على بن نصير هارون بن ابى التبريزى المشهور بالقاسمى It is stated in the introduction, fol. 220 b, that the poem was written in answer to some questions which were put to the author when he was about twenty years old.

A copy of this work is mentioned, without author's name, in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 506. The last verses are those of the poem described, without title, in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 119. Other copies are noticed in the Gotha Catalogue, p. 101, and in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 389.

III. Fol. 231 b. رساة الامانه, "Tract of the Trust," a Sufi work in prose and verse, by the same.

شکر و سباس و حمد بی قیاس سزارار .Beg حضرتیست

By Jul, "Trust," the author understands spiritual insight, as the true scope of man's creation. He refers incidentally, fol. 237 a, to an interview he had in Herat, A.H. 779, with Maulānā Zahīr ud-Dīn Khalvatī. This traet, which is quoted in the Nafaḥāt, p. 692, is described, without title, in the Gotha Catalogue, p. 101.

Or. 1224.

Foll. 237; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{2}{3}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{7}{6}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

I. Fol. 1 a. The Dīvān of Ķāsim i Anvār, wanting the first page, and containing Ghazals, Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 192 b, a Tarjī'-band, fol. 194 b, and Rubā'is, fol. 199 a.

II. Fol. 203 b. Anīs ul-'Arifīn; seo above, art. ii.

III. Fol. 225 b. Risālat ul-Amānah; see above, art. iii.

Add. 7768.

Foll. 349; 8[‡] in. by 5[‡]; 19 lines, 2[‡] in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unväns, gold-ruled margins, and gilt headings; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 857 (A.D. 1453).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

كليات كاتبى

The Kulliyat, or collected works, of Katibi.

Kātibī, who calls himself Muḥammad B. 'Abd Ullah un-Nīsāpūrī, was born in Tarshīz, but studied in Nīshāpūr, and took his poetical surname from his early application to the art of penmanship under the celebrated poet and calligrapher Sīmī in the latter place. He went thence to Herat, and composed poems in praise of Tīmūr, Shahrukh, and the latter's son Mīrzā Bāisunghar (who died A.H. 837), but, failing to obtain adequate recognition, he left the court in disgust, and, after wandering through Astrābād and Gīlān, he found a generous patron in the ruler of Shirvan, Mirza Shaikh Ibrahim (who died A.H. S20, after a reign of twenty-five years; see Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 153), whose reckless liberalities he squandered with equal lavishness. From Shirvan, after a short stay in Azarbājān, obtaining but scant notice from its sovereign, Amīr Iskandar B. Karā Yūsuf (A.H. 824-838), he repaired to Isfahān, where he was initiated to Sufism by Khwājah Sā'in ud-Dīn Tarikah (who died A.H. 835; see p. 42 a). He finally settled in Astrābād, where he began writing a Khamsah in imitation of Nizāmī, but had scarcely achieved the counterpart of the Makhzan ul-Asrār, when he was carried off by the plague in A.H. 838 or 839. Another poem, however, the Laila Majnun, evidently belonging to the Khamsah, is noticed in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 366.

Notices on Kātibī are to be found in Daulatshāh, vi. 12, Laţā'if Nāmah, fol. 7, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 149, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 549, Tabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 77, Haft Iklīm, fol. 313, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 381. Compare Hammer, Redekünste, p.281, Ouseley, Notices, p. 188, Bland, Century of Ghazals, v., and Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 457.

Copies of the Dīvān of Kātibī are noticed in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 119, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 561, and the Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1429. Other portions of the Kulliyāt are mentioned in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 366, the Upsala Catalogue, p. 104, and the Gotha Catalogue, p. 76.

I. Fol. 16. The Divan, with the heading, ديوان شمس الدين محمد نيسابوري المعروف بكاتبي

[•] A plague, which raged with unexampled violence in Herat, is recorded in the Matla'us-Sa'dain under A.H. 838.

ای کل آدم بخمر جان مخمر ساخته Beg.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, arranged according to the persons to whom they are addressed. The first are in praise of God, Muhammad, 'Alī, and the author's spiritual preceptor Khwājah Ṣāin ud-Dīn. The next following are addressed to Tīmūr, Shāhrukh, Bāisunghar, Shāh Ibrāhīm, king of Shirvān, his son the Shāhzādah Minūchihr, and persons of less note. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 89 b. Mukaṭtaʿāt, fol. 186 b. Rubāʿīs and Fardiyyāt, fol. 193 b.

II. Fol. 200 b. ڪلشن ابرار, "The rosegarden of the godly," a religious poem in imitation of the Makhzan ul-Asrār of Nizāmī.

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم تاج كلامست وكلام قديم .Beg

III. Fol. 224 b. مجمع البحرين, "The confluent of the two seas," or metres (a poem so called because it may be read in two different measures), with a short prose preface, beginning مدام از حضرت مبلغ الهام و متكلم

Beg. of the poem :---

ای شده از قدرت تو ما و طین لوحهء دیرباچهء دنیها و دیس

The poem, which treats of the loves of Nāzir and Manzūr, in the allegorical sense familiar to the Sufis, is often called منظر

IV. Fol. 258 b. دة باب., "The ten Bābs," or chapters, a poem containing moral precepts and anecdotes, in the style of the Bustan.

ای برحمت در دو عالم کارسا: Beg. جمله عالم را برحمت کارساز

In the conclusion Kātibī addresses his son Ināyat, for whom the poem was written. The headings are given in the Upsala Catalogue, p. 104. A poem with the same beginning is described in the Gotha Catalogue, p. 77, under the title of Tajnīsāt. V. Fol. 293 b. سى نامع. "The thirty letters," a poem on the loves of Muhibb and Mahbūb, so called from the thirty love-letters which it contains.

The poem is often referred to by the title of محبب و محبوب

VI. Fol. 385 b. كتاب دلرباى, "Dilrubāi," an allegorical poem, treating of Ķubād, King of Yaman, and his crafty Vazīr.

Kātibī wrote it, as he states in the introduction, on returning after a long absence to Gīlān, and shortly after the death of Sulţān Rizā (who died A.H. 829; see Jahānārā, fol. 69). It is dedicated to the latter's successor, Amīr Kiyā (Mīr Sayyid Muḥammad). In the same passage are mentioned the poet's former works, Dah Bāb, Sī Nāmah, Majma' ul-Baḥrain, and Jān u Dil.

opyist: سلطان على

Add. 24,953.

Foll. 309; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with three Unvāns, and gold-ruled margins; dated Astrābād, Jumāda I., A.H. 883 (A.D. 1478). [LORD ABERDEEN.]

Another copy of the Kulliyāt of Kātibī, containing—the Dīvān, fol. 1 b. Dah Bāb, fol. 212 b. Majma' ul-Baḥrain, fol. 254 b. Gulshan i Abrār, fol. 295 b.

The last poem wants the latter half, corresponding to foll. 212-223 of the preceding copy.

الحسين ين محمد بن جلال الرشيد : Transcriber الكاتب السبزواري

Add. 21,588.

Foll. 119; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1023 (A.D. 1614).

The Dīvān of Kātibī, wanting the Ķasīdahs.

آفاق پر صداست ز کود کناه ما .Beg.

opyist : مسعود کاتب

On the first page is a note signed Sultān Muḥammad Kuṭubshāh, stating that the MS. had been written by Mas'ūd in the royal library at Ḥaidarābād.

Add. 22,702.

Foll. 85; 7²/₄ in. by 4¹/₃; 12 lines, 2¹/₈ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold headings; dated Shirāz, Ramazān, A.H. 889 (A.D. 1484). [Sir Joun CAMPBELL.]

The Divan of Khayali, دبوان خيالي

ای زدد کوس شهنشاهی بر ایوان قدم .Beg

Maulānā Khayālī, of Bukhārā, was a pupil of his townsman Khwājah 'Iṣmat, who died A.H. 829. Khayālī died, according to the Țabaķāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 94, during the reign of Ulugh Beg (A.H. 850—853). See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 161, Laţā'if Nāmah, fol. 9, Daulatshāh, vi. 19, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 465, and Hammer, Redekünste, p. 279.

. Contents: Two Kaşīdahs in praise of God and Muḥammad, fol. 1 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 4 b. Tarjī' in praise of 'Alī, fol. 80 a. Ķaşīdah in praise of the author's master, Khwājah 'Işmat Ullah, fol. 81 b. Ķiţ'ahs, Rubā'īs and Fardiyyāt, fol. 83 a.

Add. 27,266.

Foll. 31; 8 in. by 5; 10 lines, 2½ in. long; written in elegant Nestalik, with 'Unvan, and gilding between the lines throughout, probably in the 16th century.

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

Hal Namah, a Maşnavī by 'Arifī, . عارف.

Maulānā Maḥmūd 'Ārifī, surnamed the second Salmān, سلمان ثاني, lived in Herat, his native city, under Shāhrukh, and died there, according to the Țabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 96, A.H. 853. He left, besides various poems, among which the present is mentioned by Jāmī, Bahāristān, as the best, a versified treatise on law, and a Dah Nāmah dedicated to the Vazīr Khwājah Pīr Aḥmad B. Isḥāk. See Daulatshāh, vii. 4, Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 150, Laṭā'if Nāmah, fol. 42, and Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, p. 80.

Although entitled Hal Namah by the author, fol. 29,

این نامه که ساختم تمامش حالی شده حال نامه نامش the present poem is better known, from its subject, as کوی و چوکان. It is an allegory, in which the ball and the bat are personified as types of mystic love, and all the images are borrowed from the favourite game of Chaugān. The author wrote it, as he states in the epilogue, in the space of two weeks, in the year indicated by the chronogram $\lambda_{e,e}$ A.H. 842, in the following lines, fol. 29:-

ای آنکه معاینه ندانی تریخ بیان این معانی چون کوکبه «محر نماید روشن بتو کوی خور نماید

He says in the same passage that he was then past fifty years of age, and adds, in a second epilogue, that he had been rewarded by the prince to whom he presented the poem with the gift of a horse and a thousand Dinārs.

The Guy u Chaugan was written, according to the Țabakāt i Shāhjahānī, in Shīrāz, for Mīrzā 'Abd Ullah B. Ibrāhīm Sulţān B. Shāhrukh. Mīrzā 'Abd Ullah succeeded his father as viceroy of Fārs in A.H. 838; but he was dispossessed after the death of Shāhrukh by his cousin Mīrzā Sulţān Muhammad B. Mīrzā Bāisunghar, who had been for five years governor of Irak. In the present copy the dedication is addressed to Sulţān Muḥammad, fol. 8:

خورشيد سرير ماه مسند سلطان جهانيان محمد

Copies are mentioned in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 123, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 379, and the Münich Catalogue, p. 36. Compare Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 266.

Add. 23,612.

Foll. 49; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 7 lines, 3 in. long, in a page; written in fair Nestalik, on tinted and gold-sprinkled paper, with Unvān and ornamental designs on every page, probably in the 15th century.

ديوان شاهى, The Divan of Shahi, ديوان شاهى

ای نـقش بسته نام خطت با سرشت ما Beg. وبن حرف شد ز روز اول سر نوشت ما

Amīr Shāhī, originally ealled Ak-Malik, or Akā Malik, son of Amīr Jamāl ud-Dīn Fīrūzkūhī, a scion of the princely family of the Sarbadārs, was born in Sabzavār, and attached himself to Mirzā Bāisunghar, by whose influence some of his paternal estates in Sabzavār were restored to him. There he lived in affluence, and found full leisure to cultivate his artistic and literary tastes. The latter part of his life was spent in Astrābād, whither he had been called by the son of his former patron, Mirzā Abul-Kāsim Bābur, to design some palaces, and where he died A.H. 857, upwards of seventy years old.

Notiees on Amīr Shāhī will be found in Daulatshāh, vii. 1, Latā'if Nāmah, fol. 14, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 150, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 322, Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 551, and Ṭabaķāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 115. Compare Hammer, Redekünste, p. 293, Ouseley, Notices, p. 131, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 563.

The Dīvān consists of Ghazals alphabetically arranged, with some Kiţ'ahs and Rubā'is at the end. The present copy has lost a few pages in the body of the volume, and two or three at the end.

Other copies are noticed in the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 119, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 562, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 366, the Upsala Catalogue, p. 105, and the Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1516.

Add. 7788.

Foll. 38; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 13 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Rauzat un-Nabaviyyah (Medina), end of A.H. 969 (A.D. 1562).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Divan, wanting the first page.

opyist: محمد امين المشهور بميرك الحسيني

On the fly-leaf is a short Turkish notice on the poet, an English translation of which has been prefixed.

Or. 288.

Foll. 36; 8 in. by 5; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, dated Kaurālī, Parganah of Palwal, Sha'bān, A.H. 1185 (A.D. 1771). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان شاهى

The same Divan, wanting the Ghazals in \mathcal{L} .

Add. 7769.

Foll. 217; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 3 in.

long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Samarkand, Jumādā II., A.H. 955 (A.D. 1548).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

المصباح

"The Lamp," a Maşnavî containing thoughts on spiritual life, illustrated by copious anecdotes of prophets, saints, and faķīrs, in the style and measure of the Maşnavī of Jalāl ud-Dīn Rūmī.

Author: Rashīd, شيد,

ای بنامت کارهارا افتستاح .Beg. نیست بی نام تو در امری فلاح

In a heading written in gold on the first page the author is called Rashīd ud-Dīn Muḥammad ul-Asfarā'inī, صدر مشايخ الامم قطب أسبح رشيد الملة والديس محمد الاقطاب في العالم شيخ رشيد الملة والديس محمد الاسفرايني

It is stated in a note written on the flyleaf, and dated A.H. 1097, that he lay buried in Bahrābād, Asfarā'in, with Shaikh Sa'd ud-Dīn Hamavī and Shaikh Azarī.

In the prologue the author states that he had written this work with the permission of his Shaikh, who is called, in a marginal addition, میر عبد الله رئیس الاول , and that it is divided into three books, treating respectively of love, fol. 4b, dissolution, fol. 74 a, and longing, fol. 159 b.

> شد مرتب برسه اصل این کلج راز در محبت در فنا و در نیاز ·

The date of composition, A.H. 852, is given in the following line at the end:

چو کذشت از هجرة خیر الانــــام هشتصد و پنجاه و دو ایـن شـد تمام

See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 71, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 542.

VOL. II.

Or. 355.

Foll. 33; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in four gold-ruled columns, in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān, apparently in the 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The first half of the same work, corresponding to foll. 1—102 of the preceding copy.

Add. 7930.

Foll. 221; 9 in. by 4²/₄; 17 lines, 2³/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-179. The Divans of Na'ili, Vijdi, and Şabri, Turkish.

II. Foll. 181—221. The Divan of Naziri, ديوان نظيرى

Beg. کل روی تو که از سنبل مویت پیداست . The poet, who calls himself in two places, foll. 216 a, 220 b, طرسی, a native of $T\bar{u}s$, or Mashhad, lived in India, and most of his Kaşīdahs are addressed to Sayyid Shāh Khalīl-Ullah, on whose death he has a Marşiyah, fol. 189 b, and to his two sons and successors, Shāh Muḥibb Ullah, and Shāh Ḥabīb Ullah. Both father and sons are described in the twofold character of warlike princes and of holy teachers. It appears from various passages that the poet had grown old in their service, but not rich, as some pitcous appeals for money, food, and raiment, plainly testify.

It has been before stated (p. 635 a) that Shāh Khalīl Ullah, son of Ni'mat Ullah Valī, went, after his father's death, A.H. 834, to the Decean, and was received with the highest marks of regard by Ahmad Shāh Bahmanī. His sons enjoyed high rank and great wealth under that prince and his successor 'Alā ud-Dīn Shāh (A.H. 838—862).

EE

Habīb Ullah met with a violent death in A.H. 864. See Firishtah, Briggs' translation, vol. ii. pp. 419, 462. We learn from the same author, Bombay edition, vol. i. p. 628, that Mullā Nazīrī was employed, with Sāmi'ī and others, in continuing the Bahman Nāmah, or poetical history of the Bahmani dynasty, which the author Azarī (see p. 43*b*) had brought down to the reign of Humāyūn Shāh, A.H. 862—865.

Contents : Kaṣīdahs, fol. 181 b. Ghazals, without alphabetical arrangement, fol. 204 b. Mukaṭṭaʿāt, fol. 212 b. Rubāʿis, fol. 216 b.

Or. 1150.

Foll. 151; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

[ALEX. JABA.]

A more extensive Dīvān of the same poet, slightly imperfect at the beginning, containing Ķasīdahs in alphabetical order, fol. 1 a. Ghazals similarly arranged, fol. 122 b. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 139 a. Rubā'is, fol. 146 a.

Add. 19,766.

Foll. 362; 14 in. by $10\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik, in four columns enclosed by gilt borders, with rich 'Unvāns; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1097 (A.D. 1686). Bound in painted and glazed covers.

خاور نامه

Khāvar Nāmah, a poem in the epic metre on the warlike deeds of 'Alī, and his companions, Mālik and Abu l-Mihjan.

Author : Ibn Husām, ابن حسام

تخستین برین نامهٔ دلکشای Beg. مخن نقش بستم بنام خدای

Maulānā Muḥammad B. Ḥusām ud-Dīn, known as Ibn Ḥusām, was born, according to Daulatshāh, in Khūsaf, خوسف, * or, as written in some copies, جوسف, in the Kuhistān of Khorasan, where he is said to have led the life of a peasant, and to have composed his poems in the fields. He boasts, in the epilogue of the present poem, his proud independence. Having reduced his wants to one barley loaf a day, he scorned the banquets of kings:

بیك قرص جو تا شب از بامكاه قناعت نمایم چو خورشید و ماه شکم چون بیک نان توان کرد شیر مکش منت سفردم اردشیر

He died A.H. 875, leaving, besides his Khāvar Nāmah, numerous poems in praise of the Imāms, which are highly popular with the Shī'ahs. See the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 555, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 336, where A.H. 893 is given as the date of his death, Ṭabaķāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 139, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 23, and the Atashkadah, fol. 40, where he is noticed under Khwāf. Compare Hammer, Redekünste, p. 297, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 19, 68, and 432.

The poem was written, as stated in the prologue, in imitation of the Shāhnāmah of Firdūsī, for whom the author expresses the highest admiration. Its matter, professedly borrowed from an Arabic work, is pure fiction. It relates to the battles and single combats fought by 'Alī and his companions, with the Shāh i Khāvarān, named Ķubād, with other heathen kings called 'Ţahmās Shāh, and Ṣīṣān Shāh, and with hosts of Dīvs and dragons.

The date of composition, A.H. 830, is given in the following verses of the epilogue, in which the title of the poem appears in the form of Khāvarān Nāmah, from the name of 'Ali's principal adversary :

^{*} Khūsaf is, according to Hāfiz Abrū, fol. 180, a district on the edge of the desert which divides Khorasan from Kirman.

The Khāvar Nāmah is mentioned by Mohl, Preface to the Shāhnāmah, p. 77, as the latest of the imitations of the great epos. A copy is mentioned in the Ouseley Collection, No. 27.

The MS. contains one hundred and fiftysix whole-page miniatures in the Indian style.

The name of Kamāl ud-Dīn Khān has been substituted in the subscription for that of the original owner.

Add. 7773.

Foll. 297; 9½ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with two 'Unvâns and gold-ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 962 (A.D. 1497).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Jami, ديوان جامى, with a prose preface beginning with the following line:

Nūr ud-Din 'Abd ur-Rahmān Jāmī, who died A.H. 898 (see p. 17 a), may be called the last of the classical poets of Persia. After dwelling in the preface on the high value of poetry, he states that he had cultivated it from his youth upwards, and had until then, when he was drawing near to his seventieth year, kept his poems in alphabetical order. Having resolved, however, to bring them into a more rational arrangement, he performed that task in A.H. 884. That date is ingeniously conveyed in the following line of a versified chronogram, بر روی صدف نهاد یك دانه كبر. It is obtained by placing a "pearl" on the face of the "shell," in other words, a dot on the first letter of the word صدف.

Contents : Kasidahs, arranged according زان پیش کز مداد دهم to subjects, beginning fol. 5 b. This section, beginning , خامعرا مدد with poems in praise of God, Muhammad, and 'Alī, contains religious and moral pieces, partly in imitation of Khākānī and Amīr Khusrau, several Kasidahs addressed to the reigning sovereign, Abul-Ghāzī Sultān Husain, and various occasional pieces. Tarji'bands, including Marsiyahs on the death of the saint Sa'd ud-Din Kāshgharī, who died A.H. 860, of the poet's brother, and of his son, fol. 36 a. Masnavis addressed to Sultan Abū Sa'īd and his successor Sultān Husain, to the Osmanli Sultan Muhammad II., and the Karā Kuyunlū sovereign, Jahānshāh, fol. 54 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order, بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم اعظم اسماء عليم beginning جکم, fol. 60 b. Kit'ahs, fol. 280 b. Rubā'is in alphabetical order, fol. 285 a.

محمد حسين بن سيف الدين على : Copyist

Copies of the Divān are mentioned in the Catalogues of Leyden, vol. ii. p. 120, Krafft, p. 68, St. Petersburg, p. 379, Upsala, p. 106, Copenhagen, p. 41, Gotha, p. 102, and Miinich, p. 30. Jāmī's minor poems have also been collected in three separate Divāns, containing respectively the compositions of his youth, middle life, and old age, on which see Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 448, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, pp. 371, 372.

German translations of select poems have been given by V. von Rosenzweig, Vienna, 1840, by Rückert in the Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlands, vols. 5, 6, and in the Zeitschrift der D. M. G., vols. 2, 4, 5, 6, 24, 25 and 29, lastly by M. Wickerhauser, Leipzig, 1855, and Vienna, 1858.

Е Е 2

POETRY.—JAMI.

Add. 25,816.

Foll. 311; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns, gilt headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated Balkh, A.H. 976 (A.D. 1568).

[WM. CURETON.]

The same Dīvān, with the preface. The arrangement and contents are substantially the same as in the preceding MS.

Add. 7774.

Foll. 302; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, about $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 949 (A.D. 1542).

[Cl. J. RICH.] An earlier collection of Jāmī's minor poems, with a shorter preface, beginning موزون ترین کلامی که غزل سرایان انجمن. In the preface, which contains a dedication in verse to Sultan Abu Sa'īd, the poet says that he had reached his fiftieth year.

Contents: Two religious poems in imitation of Khāķānī and Khusrau, and a third descriptive of old age, fol. 4 a.

Beg. معلم كيست عشق و كبح خاموش دبستانش . Some Tarjī's, concluding with a Marşiyah on the death of Maulānā Sa'd ud-Dīn Kāshgharī (A.H. 860), fol. 14 α . Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 28 b.

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم اعظم اسما^ع عليم حكيم .Beg

Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 284 a. Rubā'is in alphabetical order, fol. 289 b.

Or. 1218.

Foll. 265; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in a neat Nestalik, in two columns, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Ķazvīn, Ramazān, A.H. 894 (A.D. 1489). [ALEXANDRE JABA.]

Another collection, with the same preface. The contents are nearly the same, but the arrangement somewhat different.

Add. 7770.

Foll. 287; 11 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in four goldruled columns, with nine 'Unvāns, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The seven Maşnavîs of Jāmī, with a prose preface.

حمدا لرب جليل من عبد ذليل و سلاما .Beg.

Jāmī states in the preface that the above title, "Haft Aurang," was taken from the seven-starred constellation so-called (the Great Bear). He then proceeds to set forth the metre of each of the seven poems, which he takes in the following order, differing from their arrangement in the present copy:— 1. Silsilat uz-Zahab. 2. Salāmān u Absāl. 3. Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār. 4. Subḥat ul-Abrār. 5. Yūsuf u Zulaikhā. 6. Lailā u Majnūn. 7. Khirad-Nāmah i Iskandarī.

I. Fol. 2 b. سلسلة الذهب, "The Golden Chain," a religious poem in the metre of the Haft Paikar, dedicated to Sultan Husain.

The poem is divided into three sections (Daftars), beginning respectively on foll. 2 b, 49 b, and 70 b.

See for the contents the Jahrbücher, vol. 66, Anzeige Blatt, pp. 20-26.

II. Fol. 85 b. سبحة الإبرار, "The Rosary of the Righteous," a religious poem in the metre of the Nuh Sipihr of Amīr Khusrau, dedicated to Sultān Husain, with a short prose preface beginning, المنة لله كه بخون كرخفتم

The poem begins thus:

The Subhah has been printed in Calcutta, A.H. 1226, and 1262. III. Fol. 123 b. يوسف و زليخا, "Yūsuf and Zulaikhā," a poem in the metre of Nizāmī's Khusrau u Shīrīn, dedicated to Sulţān Ḥusain.

الهی ^{غن}چه امید بکشای .Beg کلی از روضه جاوید بنمای

It is stated in the following lines of the epilogue, that the poem was completed at the close of A.H. 888:

This is the most popular of Jāmī's poems. It has been repeatedly printed in India, and A.H. 1279 in Persia. The text has been published, with a German translation, by V. von Rosenzweig, Vienna, 1824. See also extracts by the same, Mines de l'Orient, vol. ii. p. 47, and by P. Zingerle, Phönix, 1852.

IV. Fol. 173 b. ليلى و مجنون, " Lailā and Majnūn," in the same measure as the poem of the same name by Nizāmī.

ł

. The author states in the concluding lines that he had written the poem in the space of about four months, in A.H. 889, devoting to it two or three hours each day, and that it contains 3760 distichs. It has been translated into French by A. L. Chézy, Paris, 1805, and into German by Hartmann, Leipzig, 1807.

V. Fol. 220 b. خردنامه اسكندرى, "Alexander's Book of Wisdom," a poem in the metre of the Iskandar Nāmah of Nizāmī, dedicated to Sultān Husain.

It appears, from the epilogue, that this poem originally formed the last portion of the author's Khamsah, mentioned further on.

VI. Fol. 249 b. سلامان و ابسال, "Salāmān u Absāl," an allegorical poem, in the same measure as the Manțik ut-Tair of 'Attār.

It is dedicated to Shāh Ya'kūb, i.e. Ya'kūb Beg B. Hasan Beg, of the Ak Kuyunlu dynasty, who reigned from A.H. 883 to 896. Mr. F. Falconer has published the text, London, 1850, and an English translation, 1856.

VII. Fol. 255 b. بحفة الاحرار, "A Gift to the Free," a religious poem in the metre of the Makhzan ul-Asrār, divided into twelve Makālahs.

The prologue contains a eulogy on the then living chief of the Nakshabandi order, Shaikh Nāşir ud-Dīn 'Ubaid Ullah, better known as Khwājah Aḥrār (see p. 373 b), whose surname is alluded to in the title. The poem was completed, as stated at the end, A.H. 886. It has been edited by F. Falconer, London, 1848.

Prefixed to the last poem is a short prose preface written by Jāmī for his Panj Ganj or Khamsah, a collection consisting of five of the above poems, viz. Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār, Subḥat ul-Abrār, Yūsuf u Zulaikhā, Lailā u Majnūn, and Khirad Nāmah i Iskandarī. It begins thus:

قبلهء همت خدای شناس

The contents of the Haft Aurang are described by Dr. Sprenger in the Oude Catalogue, pp. 442—451. Copies are mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 65, in Ouseley's Collection, No. 132, and in the catalogues of Vienna, vol. i. p. 564, St. Petersburg, p. 368, Upsala, p. 107, and Münich, p. 31.

645

Add. 26,162.

Foll. 416; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 14 lines in the margin; written in fair Nestalik, in two columns, with 'Unvāns, apparently in the 16th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The same poems in their original order, viz.: Silsilat uz-Zahab, fol. 2 b. Salāmān u Absāl, fol. 126 b. Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār, fol. 143 b. Subḥat ul-Abrār, fol. 181 b. Yūsuf u Zulaikhā, fol. 236 b. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 306 b. Khirad-Nāmah i Iskandarī, fol. 375 b.

The MS. bears the name and seal of Edward Galley.

Or. 472.

Foll. 275; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, in four columns, apparently in the 17th century.

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.

Another copy of the Haft Aurang, differently arranged, as follows : Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 5 b. Khirad-Nāmah i Iskandarī, fol. 49 b. Silsilat uz-Zahab, with the preface to the Haft Aurang, fol. 76 b. Salāmān u Absāl, fol. 156 b. Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār, with the preface to the Panj Ganj, fol. 171 b. Subḥat ul-Abrār, with a short prose preface, fol. 193 b. Yūsuf u Zulaikhā, fol. 229 b.

A note on fol. 76 α , relating to a purchase of the MS., is dated A.H. 1053.

Add. 27,265.

Foll. 263; $11\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 16 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long, with 34 lines in the margins; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and illuminated headings; dated Rajab, A. H. 973 (A.D. 1566). Bound in painted covers.

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

The Divan of Jami, with the preface noticed p. 641 α .

Contents: Preface, fol. 1 b. Kasīdahs, fol. 5 a. Tarjī's, fol. 18 a. Maşnavīs, fol. 26 a. Two Ķasīdahs in imitation of Khāķānī and Khusrau, and a third descriptive of old age, fol. 29 b. Marşiyahs and some occasional pieces, fol. 38 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 48 a. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 255 a. Rubā'īs and Fardiyyāt, fol. 257 b.

The margins form a separate series, containing the four following poems: Subhat ul-Abrār, fol. 1 b. Tuhfat ul-Ahrār, with the preface, fol. 92 b. Khirad-Nāmah i Iskandarī, fol. 148 b. Salāmān u Absāl, foll. 220 b - 257 b.

یوسف بن یعقوب دشت بیاضی : Copyist

Add. 16,799.

Foll. 98; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 20 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in minute Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with three 'Unvāns and gilt headings, probably in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Fol. 1 a. Silsilat $u\underline{z}$ -Zahab (see p. 644 b), wanting the first page, two leaves after fol. 2, two leaves after fol. 72, and two more after fol. 78.

II. Fol. 82 b. Salāmān u Absāl (see p. 645 b). On fol. 48 b is found the name of Sir Gore Ouseley.

Add. 7772.

Foll. 192; 8[‡] in. by 5; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 988 (A.D. 1580).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Silsilat uz-Zahab (see p. 644 b), wanting six leaves after fol. 1.

دوست محمد بن سلطان محمد .: Copyist

Add. 23,551.

Foll. 236; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins and four rich 'Unvāns, apparently in the 16th century.

The same poem.

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

Add. 18,416.

Foll. 144; 8½ in. by 5; 15 and 13 lines, 2½ in. long, with 30 lines in the margins in the latter half of the volume; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1057 (A.D. 1647). [WM. YULE.]

The same poem.

Add. 18,415.

Foll. 233; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{6}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Lahore, Zulhijjah, A.H. 1148 (A.D. 1736).

The same poem.

[WM. YULE.]

Or. 336.

Foll. 299; 9½ in. by 6; 9 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WW. HAMILTON.]

The same poem, wanting the latter part of Daftar I., the beginning of Daftar II., and the whole of Daftar III.

Add. 26,163.

Foll. 48; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins; dated Rabi^e I., A.H. 980 (A.D. 1572). [WM. ERSKINE.]

Salāmān u Absāl (see p. 645, vi.), wanting the first page, single leaves after foll. 1, 24, and 26, and four leaves after fol. 44.

The Subhatul-Abrār (see p. 644, ii.), written by a later hand in the margins of foll. 1—44, has corresponding lacunes.

محمد بن علام الدين رزه : Copyist

Add. 6615.

Foll. 182; 9¼ in. by 6; 15 lines, 2¾ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins, and illuminated borders; probably about the close of the 15th century. [J. F. HULL.]

Tuhfat ul-Ahrār (see p. 645, vii.), with a short prose preface, in which Jāmī claims indulgence for his poem, "however unworthy tobe strung on the same thread as the priceless pearls of the Makhzan ul-Asrār of Nizāmī, and the Mațla' ul-Anvār of Amīr Khusrau."

حامدا لمن جعل جنان كل عارف مخزن اسرار .Beg م Foll. 61—182, written by another hand, probably in the 16th century, contain the Subhat nl-Abrar with the preface above noticed (p. 644 b, ii.).

Add. 6616.

Foll. 166; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, dated Jumāda I., A.H. 1025 (A.D. 1616), and Jumāda II., A.H. 1019 (A.D. 1610).

[J. F. HULL.] Subhat ul-Abrār, with Jāmī's preface, fol. 1 0.

Tuhfat ul-Ahrār, with the preface noticed in the preceding MS., fol. 105 b.

Or. 1369.

Foll. 61; 10³/₂ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with Unvän, gilt headings, and ornamental designs in the outer margins, apparently in the 15th century. [Sir CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.]

The Tuhfat ul-Ahrār, with the same prose preface. It wants the latter part of the prologue and the first two Makālahs. At the end is the author's subscription, stating that the poem had been completed in A.H. 886.

Add. 19,004.

Foll. 78; 61 in. by 41; 12 lines, 23 in.

long; written in a fair Nestalik, with goldruled margins, probably in the 16th century.

Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār, with the same preface and subscription.

Add. 16,798.

Foll. 76; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold headings and illuminated borders; dated A.H. 938 (A.D. 1531). [WM. YULE.]

Tuhfat ul-Ahrār, with the preface.

Two leaves are wanting after fol. 8, four after fol. 12, and one after fol. 21. At the beginning are two miniatures in fair Indian style, with rich borders.

محمد قاسم ابن شادیشاه : Copyist

Add. 25,817.

Foll. 62; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century. [WM. CURETON.]

The same poem.

Add. 19,499.

Foll. 150; 8 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century.

The same poem.

عبد الكريم ملتاني : Copyist

Add. 25,818.

Foll. 86; 6½ in. by 4; 11 lines, 2 in. long; written in Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins; dated Agrah, Rajab, A.H. 1006 (A.D. 1598). [WM. CURETON.] The Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār, with the preface. Copyist: تحمد صادق حافظ ناكورى

Or. 1230.

Foll. 65; 7 in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $1\frac{5}{8}$ in.

long, with 12 lines in the margin; written in small and fair Nestalik, probably about the close of the 15th century.

[ALEXANDRE JABA.] Subhat ul-Abrār (see p. 644 b), with the preface, and Turkish glosses written between the lines.

Add. 26,164.

Foll. 130; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, illuminated headings, and gold designs in the margins, apparently in the 16th century. Bound in gilt and stamped leather.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

Subhat ul-Abrār, with the preface.

قوام بن مجمد کاتب شیرازی : Copyist

At the end is a miniature in Persian style, with a rich border.

Or. 1225.

Foll. 113; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, with Unvän and ruled margins, probably in the 16th century. [ALEXANDRE JABA.]

The same poem, with the preface.

Harleian 501.

Foll. 112; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1009 (A.D. 1601).

Subhat ul-Abrār, with the preface.

سید علی بن سید ناصر کیا : Copyist

Add. 24,055.

Foll. 150; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with a rich 'Unvān, gilt headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabī' II., A.H. 947 (A.D. 1540).

Yūsuf and Zulaikhā (see p. 645 b). Copyist: محمد قاسم جامى

Or. 1221.

Foll. 177; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, 2 in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins and illuminated headings, dated Sha'bān, A.H. 989 (A.D. 1581). Bound in gilt and stamped leather.

[ALEXANDRE JABA.] Yūsuf and Zulaikhā, with three whole-page miniatures in Persian style.

Add. 6629.

 Foll. 139 ; 6½ in. by 4; 13 lines, 2½ in.

 long; written in small Nestalik; dated A.H.

 997 (A.D. 1589).

 [J. F. HULL.]

The same poem.

Or. 1368.

Foll. 176; 12 in. by 7; 12 lines, 3³/₃ in. long; written in fine Nestalik, on goldsprinkled paper, with 'Unvān, illuminated borders and headings, apparently in the 16th century. [Sir CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.]

The same poem, with six whole-page miniatures in Persian style.

Foll. 32—37, 138, 139 and 176 have been supplied by Muhammad Rizā i Işfabānī, in Rabī^s II., A.H. 1011 (A.D. 1602).

Add. 19,493.

Foll. 142; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small and neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

The same poem.

A Persian note on the first page is dated Lahore, A.H. 1042.

Add. 25,902.

Foll. 138; 8¼ in. by 4¾; 15 lines, 2¾ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century.

The same poem.

VOL. II.

Add. 5562.

Foll. 167; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Murshidābād, Rajab, the 5th year of Farrukhsiyar, (A.H. 1129, A.D. 1717).

[CHARLES HAMILTON.]

The same poem. Copyist : ملك عاقل

Add. 7771.

Foll. 205; S³/₄ in. by 5¹/₄; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1177 (A.D. 1764). Bound in painted covers. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same poem, with seventy-six miniatures in fair Indian style.

جمال الدين الملقب بحسن : Copyist

Add. 26,165.

Foll. 140; 8½ in. by 5; 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same poem, wanting three leaves at the end.

Add. 19,432.

Foll. 140; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, probably in the 18th century.

The same poem.

Add. 7778.

Foll. 184; 7½ in. by 4½; 17 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi^{*} II., A.H. 967 (A.D. 1560). [Cl. J. RICH.]

رساله مير حسين در معمى

A Turkish commentary by Surūrī (see p. 606 a) on the versified treatise on logogriphs of Mīr Husain B. Muḥammad ul-Husainī, which begins thus:

FF

بنام انکه از تالیف و ترکیب معمای جهان [را] داده ترتیب

Mir Husain, a native of Nīshāpūr, who led the life of a scholar in the Madrasah Ikhlāșiyyah of Herat, attained eminence in the art of versified riddles. He died A.H. 904. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 340, Lubb ut-tavārīkh, fol. 164, Taķī and Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, pp. 20, 75, and Haft Iķlīm, fol. 317.

The treatise was written, as stated in the preface, by desire of Mīr 'Alī Shīr, and submitted for approval to Jāmī, whose classification of Mu'ammās had been adopted. The logogriphs given as examples relate to proper names of men.

Surūrī says in the preface that he had previously written a commentary upon Jāmī's treatise on the same subject, رساله در . He states at the end that the present commentary was completed in A.H. 965.

The Risālah of Mīr Ḥusain is mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 638, by Uri, p. 294, and in the Catalogues of Leyden, vol. i. p. 360, Münich, p. 43, and Gotha, p. 116.

Add. 7767.

Foll. 89; 7 in. by 5; 13 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان اسيري

The Divan of Asiri.

ای عشق تو آتش زده در خرمن جانها .Beg وز سوز غمت سوخته دلمها و روانها

Asīrī, whose proper name was Shaikh Shams ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. Yaḥyā, of Lāhijān, in Gīlān, was the principal Khalīfah of the celebrated founder of the Nūrbakhshī order, Sayyid Muḥammad Nūrbakhsh, who died in Rai, A.H. 869. After his master's death he settled in Shīrāz, where he built a monastery called Khānkāh Nūriyyah. He was a friend of the famous philosopher Davānī (see p. 442 b), and lived on to the time of Shāh Ismā'īl, who went to see him after taking possession of Shīrāz (A.H. 910). He left, besides his Dīvān, a commentary upon the Gulshan i Rāz (see Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 233). A full notice of his life is found in the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 345; see also Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 43. His son, who became celebrated as a poet under the name of Fidā'ī, died A.H. 927. Sce Takī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 20, No. 143, and p. 21, No. 179, and Ilāhī, ib., p. 70.

The above named Sayyid Muhammad Nurbakhsh, whose life is also recorded in the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 343, was the son of Sayyid Muhammad, of Katif, and a descendant of Imām Mūsā Kāzim. He was born in Kā'in, A.H. 795, and was initiated in Sufism by Khwājah Ishāk Khutlānī, a disciple of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (see p. 447 b), from whom he received the surname of Nurbakhsh. Having been incarcerated by Shahrukh in Herat for an attempted rising in Khutlan, where he had proclaimed himself Khalif, A.H. 826, he escaped from confinement, and, after long wanderings through Basrah, Baghdād, and Kurdistān, where he found many followers, he settled in Gilan, where he remained until the death of Shāhrukh. He then repaired to Rai, where he spent the rest of his life. His son, Shah Kasim, who succeeded him as head of the Nürbakhshis, and was treated with great consideration by Shāh Ismā'il Şafavī, died in Rai, A.H. 927. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 4, p. 115.

The Dīvān contains Ghazals alphabetically arranged, in some of which the poet addresses Nūrbakhsh as his spiritual guide, and a Tarjī'-band at the end, foll. 85—89. Another Tarjī'-band is written in the margins of the same folios.

The margins of foll. 4-38 contain the Zād ul-Musāfirin (see p. 608 a), wanting the eighth Makālah.

A copy of the Divan of Asiri is mentioned in the Gotha Catalogue, p. 109.

Or. 1096.

Foll. 408; S¹/₂ in. by 5¹/₄; 12 lines, 2⁷/₃ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 1018 (A.D. 1609). [D. FORBES.]

ديوان فغاني

The Divan of Fighani.

ای سرنامه انام تو عقل کره کشابی را .Beg ذکر تو مطلع غزل طبع سمخن سرای را

Fighāni was the son of a eutler in Shirāz, and originally took, in allusion to his father's trade, the takhallus of Sakkāki. He created, according to Vālih, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 336, a new style of poetry, which most of the subsequent poets, down to the time of Mirzā Sā'ib, strove to imitate. It was not however to the taste of the poets of the court of Sultan Husain, and Fighani left Herat, where he had first tried his fortune, and repaired to Tabriz. There he won the favour of Sultan Ya'küh, the youthful sovereign of the Ak-kuyunlu dynasty (A.H. 883-896), who bestowed upon him the title of Bābā i Shu'arā, or "father of the poets." After the death of his protector, ho settled in Abivard, and subsequently in Mashlad, where his poems in praise of the Imām secured him an honourable reception. He died there, according to the Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 180, A.H. 922, or, as stated by Sam Mirza (Notices et Extraits, vol. iv. p. 305), A.H. 925. See also Majalis ul-Muminin, fol. 560, Haft Iklim, fol. 101, Bland, a Century of Ghazals, ix., and the Oude Catalogue, p. 21, No. 176, and p. 403.

The Divan contains Ghazals in alphabetical order, Rubā'is and Fardiyyāt, fol. 197 a.

Copies are mentioned in the catalogues of Leyden, vol. ii. p. 122, St. Petersburg, p. 384, and Münich, p. 34, and in the Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1396.

The MS. bears the signature and Persian seal of Edward Galley.

Add. 16,794.

Foll. 176; 10 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.];

The same Divan, with an additional section of Kasidahs, mostly in praise of 'Alī and the Imāms, foll. 1—14, beginning:

Add. 25,821.

Foll. 65; 12 in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A. 1201 of the Bengal Era (A.D. 1794).

The Divan of Asafi.

Khwājah Asafī, son of Khwājah Ni'mat Ullah Kuhistāni, who had been Vazīr to Sultan Abu Sa'id, took his poetical surname from his father's office (Aşaf). He was one of the most eminent poets of the court of Herat in the reign of Sultan Husain, and attached himself especially to Mīr 'Alī Shīr, and to the Sultan's son, Mīrzā Badi' uz-Zamān, whom he accompanied to Balkh. He died on the 16th of Sha'bān, A.H. 923, at the age of seventy, as stated in Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 346, in Lubb utTavārīkh, fol. 180, and in Haft Iķlīm, fol. 336. The date is fixed by two chronograms, one of them said to have been composed by Aṣafī himself when he felt death drawing near, "He measured with seventy steps the road to eternity," the other due to a contemporary poet, Amīr Sulțān Ibrāhīm Amīnī:

Sām Mīrzā and Taķī Kāshī give A.H. 920, and Ilāhī A.H. 928 (Oude Catalogue, pp. 20 and 71), as the date of his death. Other notices will be found in Daulatshāh, viii. 6, Laṭāif Nāmah, fol. 33, Khulāṣat ul-Akhbār, fol. 401, Memoirs of Baber, p. 194, Riyāẓ ush-Shu'arā, and Atashkadah, fol. 76. Compare Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 310.

The Dīvān consists of Ghazals in alphabetical order, and some Rubā'is, fol. 62 b. Copies are mentioned in the catalogues of Vienna, vol. i. p. 577, St. Petersburg, p. 385, Copenhagen, p. 41, and Münich, p. 34, and in Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1370.

Cotton. Cleopatra A. 1X.

Foll. 65; 7 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, probably in the 17th century.

The same Divān, wanting three leaves at the beginning and one at the end.

Or. 271.

Foll. 78; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Safar, A.H. 1278 (A.D. 1862).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same work.

دایه قادرمخش ساکن نود محله قریب : Copyist پیر رمضان غازی This copy was made for Col. G. W. Hamilton, then Commissioner Superintendent of the Province of Multan.

Add. 10,586.

Foll. 79; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins, and six miniatures in Persian style; dated Tabrīz, A.H. 938 (A.D. 1532); bound in painted covers.

Lailā and Majnūn, a Maşnavī by Hātifī, هاتفي

Maulānā 'Abd Ullah Hātifī, who was the son of Jāmī's sister, and, like him, a native of Kharjird, in the province of Jām, was unrivalled in his day as a Maşnavī writer. It is said that he did not commence his Khamsah, upon which, although not completed, his fame chiefly rests, until he had given to his celebrated uncle proofs of his competence, and obtained his leave. He devoted no less than forty years to the composition and improvement of the Tīmūr Nāmah, the last poem of the Khamsah.

Sām Mīrzā states in his Tazkirah, fol. 88, that his father Shāh Ismā'il, passing through Kharjird on his return from the conquest of Khorasan, A.H. 917, strolled to the house of Hātifī, who was living there in great seclusion, and, finding the gate closed, effected an entrance by scaling the garden wall. After entertaining his unbidden guest, the poet had to comply with his desire by writing a poetical record of the Shāh's victories. Of this last poem, however, (a copy of which is described in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 383) only a thousand lines were written; it was left unfinished at his death, which took place, as stated in the Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 346, in the month of Muharram, A.H. 927. See also Memoirs of Baber, p. 196, Lubb ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 181, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 285, Riyāz ush-Shuarā, fol. 501, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 355, Ouseley, Notices, p. 143, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 421.

Beg.

The prologue contains an invocation to Sayyid Kāsim i Anvār, the patron Saint of Kharjird (see p. 635 b), in whose shrine, and through whose inspiration, Hātifī formed the first conception of this poem. In the epilogue he describes himself as the successor of Nizāmī and Khusrau, while he ranks Jāmī, who is spoken of as still living, as a fourth by the side of the three monarchs of the realms of poetry, Firdūsī, Anvarī, and Sa'dī. In conclusion he expresses a hope that this, his first poem, would be followed by four others, to complete a Panj Ganj, or Khamsah.

چلبی القاینی : Copyist

The Lailā Majnūn was edited by Sir Wm. Jones, with a notice on the author by 'Alī Ibrāhīm Khān (see p. 328 a), Calcutta, 1788. It has been reprinted by Navalkishor in Lucknow.

Copies are mentioned in the catalogues of Leyden, vol. ii. p. 121, Vienna, vol. i. p. 581, and Gotha, p. 107, in the Ouseley Collection, No. 261, and the Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1410. A manuscript translation by Dr. J. Leyden is preserved in Add. 26,574.

Add. 16,801.

Foll. 71; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Iudian Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1027 (A.D. 1618).

[WM. YULE.]

Add. 26,166.

The same poem.

Foll. 90; 81 in. by 41; 14 lines, 23 in.

long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gilt headings, gold-ruled margins, and seven miniatures in Persian style; dated Rabī' I., A.H. 960 (A.D. 1553). [WM. ERSKINE.]

هفت منظر

Haft Manzar, a Maşnavî by Hātifî, in imitation of the Haft Paikar of Nizāmī.

The poet, who, in the introduction, addresses Jāmī as still living, designates in the epilogue the present poem as his third, naming Lailā Majnūn as the first, and Shīrīn Khusrau as the second.

Copies are noticed in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 67, and in the catalogues of St. Petersburg, p. 383, Copenhagen, p. 42, and Münich, p. 34.

Add. 7780.

Foll. 122; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with goldruled margins, gold-headings, and eight miniatures in Persian style, apparently in the 16th century. [CL. J. RICH.]

Tīmūr Nāmah, the poetical history of Timūr, by Hātifī, a Maşnavī in imitation of Nizāmī's Iskandar Nāmah.

The poem is sometimes called Zafar-Nāmah (see Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 176), but its real title is Tīmūr Nāmah, which, however, from the exigencies of the metre, the text shows only in a contracted form, تمر ذامه

The author addresses, in the prologue, the reigning sovereign, apparently Sultan Husain, without mentioning his name:

and, after boasting of his own matchless excellence, not only in Maşnavī, but also in Kaşīdah and Ghazal, complains that the cares of livelihood prevented him from giving full scope to his genius :

> ز فکمر معاشم بسراسیمه وار سراسیمه دارد مـزا روز کار کر اندیک زمانم فیراغی بود بکام دل خود دماغی بود دهم آیجنان داد را در سخن که حیران بماند سپهر کهن

He mentions in the epilogue his three previous poems, Lailā u Majnūn, Shīrīn u Khusrau, and Haft Manzar, dwells on the contrast existing between the fabulous story of Alexander and the veracious character of his Tīmūr Nāmah, and asserts that he had strietly followed the lead of the eloquent official writers who had recorded Tīmūr's authentic history, as contained in the Zafar Nāmah :

> نگردم ز افسانه بی فروغ ز اسکندر مرده نقل دروغ ^سخن افرینان حسان کلام که بودند سر دفتر خاص و عام شدند آن جریفان فرخنده رای بسوی تمر نامه ام رهنمای که این نامدور نامه حسروی بود درخور نامه مانوی طفر نامه یافتم بی دروغ

He says in conclusion that, although his life had been spent in celebrating the praises of the Timurides, he had not reaped any other benefit than his world-wide renown.

The Timur Namah has been lithographed with the title ظفرنامه هاتفي in Lucknow, 1869.

Copies are described in Uri's Catalogue, p. 116, in the catalogues of St. Petersburg, p. 381, and Münich, p. 34, in the Ouseley Collection, No. 263, and the Bibliothcea Sprenger., No. 1412.

Add. 22,703.

Foll. 87; 11¹/₄ in. by 7; 13 lines, $2\frac{5}{4}$ in: long; written in fair Nestalik, in two columns, with illuminated borders, gilt headings, rich gold designs in the margins, and seven whole-page miniatures, probably in the sixteenth century.

[Sir JOHN CAMPBELL.] A fuller recension of the same poem, imperfect at beginning and end, and wanting single leaves after foll. 16, 37, 54 and 58. It begins with the taking of Isfahan, and ends with Timūr's victory before Halab, corresponding to pp. 38—85 of the Lucknow edition.

Add. 6618.

Foll. 159; 9³/₄ in. by 6; 14 lines, 2³/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvan, goldruled margins, and gold headings, apparently, in the 16th century. [F. HULL.]

The same poem.

Or. 340.

Foll. 117; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, probably in the 16th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The same poem.

Foll. 2, 7—30, 46—53, 61—69 and 78— 116 have been supplied by a later hand, in A.H. 1187 (A.D. 1773).

Add. 25,829.

Foll. 161; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in eursive Indian character; dated Safar, A.H. 1085 (A.D. 1674).

The same poem.

[WM. CURETON.]

Or. 341.

Foll. 159; 11 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and ruled margins; dated Lahore, A.D. 1856 (A.H. 1273). [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The same poem.

Prefixed is a short notice on Timur, with his portrait, foll. $2 \ b - 4 \ a$.

يندت راجه رام كول المعروف طوطه : Copyist

Or. 343.

Foll. 41; 8‡ in. by 6; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and goldruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A poetical description of the holy shrines of Mecca and Medina, and of the rites of pilgrimage, in the metre of the Makhzan ul-Asrår.

ای همه کس را بدرت التجا . کعبه، دل را ز تو نور و صفا

Muhyī Lārī, a native of the island of Lār in the Persian Gulf, lived, according to the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 411, from the time of Sultan Ya'kūb (A.H. 883-896) to the reign of Shāh Țahmāsp, who succeeded A.H. 930. He wrote a commentary upon the Tā'iyyah of Ibn Fāriz, and dedicated the present poem, on his return from Mecca, to Sultan Muzaffar B. Maḥmūd Shāh (who reigned in Gujrāt from A.H. 917 to 932). That dedication is not found in the present copy. Muḥyī died, as stated by Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 21, A.H. 933. He is described by Sām Mīrzā, fol. 117, and the author of Haft Iķlīm, fol. 114, as a disciple of Davānī (see p. 442 b). Compare Atashkadah, fol. 137, and Haft Asmān, p. 89. In a copy of the Futūh ul-Haramain, described in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 122, the date of composition is expressed by the chronogram الضيقA.H. 911.

The Futūh ul-Haramain has been sometimes ascribed, by a very natural oversight, to Jāmī; see Stewart's Catalogue, p. 66, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 451. Jāmī's name occurs indeed in this line of the prologue, fol. 10 a:

but only in connexion with an extract from his Tuhfat ul-Ahrār, viz. the seventh Makālah, which, treating of the same subject and being in the same metre, has been inserted in full, foll. 10 a—11 b. The author gives his name in the introduction, fol. 4 a:

and again in the conclusion, fol. 41 b:

In a lithographed edition published in Lucknow, A.H. 1292, which contains a text substantially agreeing with the present copy, the quotation from Jāmī has been omitted, and the work is boldly ascribed to the famous saint, Muḥyī ud-Dīn 'Abd ul-Kādir Jilānī, who died A.H. 561. The contents of the poem have been stated in the Jahrbücher, vol. 71, Anzeige Blatt, p. 49. Compare Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 385, and Dr. Lee's Oriental MSS., London, 1830, p. 59.

The MS. contains coloured drawings of the holy places.

Add. 7783.

Foll. 111; 6 in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Shafi \overline{a} , with 'Unvan and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 1192 (A.D. 1778). [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان هلالي

The Dīvān of Hilālī.

ای نور خدا در نظر از روی تو مارا . بکذار که در روی تو بینیم خدا را

Badr ud-Din Hilāli, born in Astrābād of a Chaghatāi Turkish family, went as a youth to Herat, where his education was watched over by Mir 'Ali Shir. Sām Mirzā, whom he often visited, states, fol. 85, that he was put to death as a Shi'ah heretic by the Uzbak invader, 'Ubaid Khān, A.H. 939. Hc left a Dīvān and two Masnavīs, entitled Shāh u Darvish and Sifat ul-'Ashikin. A third, Lailą u Majnūn, is ascribed to him by Takī Auhadi, and the author of the Atashkadah; but its existence is contested by Valih, Riyaz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 501. See Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 350, Haft Iklim, fol. 468, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 368, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 426.

The Dīvān consists of Ghazals alphabetically arranged, with a few Kiţ'ahs and Rubā'īs at the end, fol. 106 α . It has been lithographed in Cawnpore, A.H. 1281. See the catalogues of Vienna, vol. i. p. 563, and Münich, p. 35, Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1414, and King's College Library, No. 186.

Add. 7781.

Foll. 55; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $1\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in small and fair Nestalik, in gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvān, and gold-sprinkled margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 927 (A.D. 1521.) [Cl. J. RICH.]

شاه و درویش

"The King and the Darvish," a Maşnavî by Hilāli.

This poem is often called Shāh u Gadā. The objectionable nature of its subject is not redeemed by any pretence of spiritual symbolism.

See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 76, the catalogues of Leyden, vol. ii., p. 122, of St. Petersburg, p. 389, and of Münich, p. 35, and the Ouseley Collection, No. 526.

شاہ محمود النشابوری : Copyist

Add. 26,168.

Foll. 34; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān, ruled columns, and tinted designs in the margins, probably in the 16th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

A defective copy of the same poem, wanting two leaves after fol. 9, twelve after fol. 10, and four at the end. It bears the signature and Persian stamp of Edw. Galley, with the date 1783.

Add. 7782.

Foll. 22; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-Amīz, with ruled margins; dated A.H. 1076 (A.D.1666).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same poem, wanting the epilogue.

Or. 307.

Foll. 141; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; with 30 lines in the margins; written in fair Nestalik, probably in the 17th century.

ديوان لسانى

The Divan of Lisani.

زهی عشقت بباد بی نیازی داده خرمنها .Beg خم فتراك شوقت سركشان را طوق كردنها

Lisānī, whose original name was Vajih ud-Dīn 'Abd Ullah, was born in Shīrāz, but spent the greater part of his life in Baghdād and Tabrīz. Sām Mīrzā, who often enjoyed his society, describes him as a pious man who led the life of a Darvīsh, and states that he died in Tabrīz A.H. 941. According to the Majalis ul-Muminin, fol. 562, he composed, chiefly in praise of the Imams, about one hundred thousand verses, most of which are lost, and breathed his last while engaged in prayer in the mosque of Tabrīz, at the time that Sultan Sulaimān was marching upon that city, i.e. at the beginning of the year above mentioned. See Haft Iklim, fol. 100, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 397, Atashkadah, fol. 133, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 391, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 476, and Erdmann, Zeitschrift der D. M. Gesellschaft, vol. xii. pp. 518-535, where several pieces from Lisānī's Dīvān are given in text and translation.

The Divān comprises, in the present copy, an alphabetical series of Ghazals, with a considerable gap after fol. 69, extending from the end of s to the beginning of c, and a Maşnavī entitled Sāķī Nāmah, fol. 137 b. See the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 584.

On the first page is a short notice on the poet, giving the same date of death as above, and mentioning Vaḥshī, Muḥtashim, and Zamīrī as his principal imitators.

Or. 279.

Foll. 360; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 12 lines in the margin; written in small Nestalik, probably in the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The poetical works of Ahli Shirāzi.

This poet is not to be confounded with his contemporary namesake, Ahli Khurāsānī, a native of Turshīz, who lived in Herat, and died A.H. 934 (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 319). Ahlī of Shīrāz, who excelled in all kinds of poetical composition, is especially famous for the ingenious artifices of versification, in which he emulated and surpassed Salmān and Kātibī. Mīr 'Alī Shīr mentions VOL. II. him in his Majālis, written A.H. 896, as a scholar and accomplished poet, who had twice sent him verses from Shīrāz, and had just composed a skilfully rhymed Kasīdah in imitation of Salman. With the exception of a short stay in Tabriz, Ahlī appears to have spent the whole of his life in his native city, where he died in old age A.H. 942. That date, which is given by Sām Mīrzā, fol. 96, is fixed by the following chronogram due to a contemporary poet Mirak, and quoted in the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 561, and Haft . پادشاہ شعرا بود اہلی : Iklim, fol. 102 See also Habib us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 4, p. 112, Riyäz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 28, Atashdah, fol. 119, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 376, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 320, Bland, a Century of Ghazals, vii., and Erdmann, Zeitschrift der D. M. Gesellschaft, vol. xv. pp. 775-785, where some specimens of Ahli's Divan are given in text and translation.

I. Fol. 4 b. سحر حلال "Lawful Witchcraft," the love-story of Prince Jam and Princess Gul, in Maşnavî rhyme, with a short prose preface beginning :

حمد بیحد و ثنای نا محدود و شکر نا معدود ای همه عالم بر تو بی شکوه Beg. of the poem, رفعت خال در ته پیش کوه

Ahlī wrote it, as he states in the preface, in order to make good his boast that he was able to outdo Kātibī, by combining in one poem the artifices of metre and plays upon words found separately in that poet's two admired works, the Majma' ul-Baḥrain and the Tajnīsāt. The prologue includes a eulogy addressed to the author's patron, Ķāzī Mu'in ud-Din (Ṣā'idī):

657

II. Fol. 16 b. شمع و بروانه, "Candle and Moth," a Maşnavī.

بنام آنکه مارا از عنایت . .Beg. دهد پروانه شمع هدایت

It is dedicated to Sultan Ya'kūb (of the Ak-Kuyūnlū Dynasty, A.H. 883 to 896), and is stated, in the concluding lines, to consist of one thousand and one distichs. The date of composition, A.H. 894, is expressed by the chronogram تم الكتاب, in the following line:

III. Fol. 37 a. Kaşīdahs, arranged according to subjects.

الهمى بسر دفتر حكمت الله Beg. بنى آدم آئينه ً قدرت الله

The Kaşīdahs are in praise of Muḥammad, 'Alī, the Imāms, Shāh Ismā'īl, Khwājah Mu'īn ud-Dīn Ṣā'idī, Amīr Sa'd ud-Dīn As'ad, Amīr 'Alī Shīr, Ya'kūb Khān, and others. This section contains also some Tarjī'- and Tarkīb-bands, and concludes with a Mukhammas.

IV. Fol. 93 b. Mukațța'āt, including a large number of chronograms on contemporary events.

V. Fol. 104 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order.

اي حيرت صفات تو بند زبان ما .Beg. انکشت حيرتست زبان در دهان ما

VI. Fol. 302 b. ساقي نامع, a collection of Rubā'is, addressed to the "cup-bearer," and alphabetically arranged.

ساقی قدحی که کار ساز است خدا .Beg.

VII. Fol. 308 a. رباعيات كنجفه, Rubáʻis describing the various cards of the game, and written for a pack of cards intended for a royal personage.

ای سرو سهمی خاک رهت وقت خرام .Beg

VIII. Fol. 314 b. Rubā'is, followed by some riddles, fol. 354 a, and an invocation (Munājāt) in verse, fol. 358 b.

Copies of the Kulliyāt are described in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 67, and in the catalogues of Vienna, vol. i. p. 585, and St. Petersburg, p. 391.

Add. 27,313.

Foll. 283; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long, with 12 lines in the margin; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1170 (A.D. 1757). [DUNCAN FORBES.]

A similar collection, containing—Sihr i Halāl, wanting the last sixteen lines, fol. 1 b. Sham' u Parvānah, wanting the first twelve lines, fol. 13 a. Kasīdahs, fol. 34 b. Riddles, fol. 86 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, wanting the first page, fol. 90 a. Muķaṭṭa'āt, fol. 217 b. Rubā'īs in alphabetical order, fol. 221 b. Three artificial Kasīdahs, وتصيدة مصنوع beginning respectively on foll. 237 b, 252 b, and 268 b.

The first of these Kaşīdahs has a prose preface, in which the author states that it was composed in imitation of a well known Kaşīdah of Salmān Sāvajī, and in praise of Amīr 'Alī Shīr. The second is addressed to Yūsuf Shāh, the brother of Sultan Ya'kūb Ak-Kuyunlu, who died A.H. 896, and the third to Shāh Ismā'īl Ṣafavī. The lasttwo have short prose preambles stating the number of their distichs, respectively 154 and 160. In all three Kaşīdahs the names of the poetical figures, and of the secondary metres which can be derived from each verse, are given in tabular form between the lines of the poem.

The first page of the MS. has the signature and Persian seal of Edward Galley.

658

Add. 16,796.

Foll. 134; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Muharram, A.H. 962 (A.D. 1554). [WM. YULE.]

ديوان طيب

The author, who calls himself mostly Tayyib, but in some places Shāh Tayyib, is mentioned under the latter name in the Nafā'is ul-Ma'āşir, a work written A.H. 973—979, Oude Catalogue, p. 51. It appears from some passages of the Divān that he was a Sayyid, and a fervid Shī'ah, foll. 5 a, 51 a, 126, leading the life of a Faķir, and residing in Khorasan, foll. 16 b, 87 a; but we learn incidentally, foll. 55 a, 87 a, that he had visited Bukhārā and 'Irāķ.

The Divān, which is entirely of a religious and mystic nature, contains Ghazals in alphabetical order, and some Rubā'is, fol. 129 b.

احمد بن حاجي عبد لله بن لطف الله : Copyist : مرسى

Or. 280.

Foll. 73; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 2 in. long; written in small Nestalik; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 970 (A.D. 1562).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Shah Bahlul.

1

It contains Ghazals of a religious nature, arranged in alphabetical order.

From the formula غفر له, which follows the author's name in the subscription, he appears to have died before A.H. 970. A Dīvān with the same beginning, and a Vaşlat Nāmah ascribed also to Shaikh Bahlūl, are noticed in the Oude Catalogue, p. 370.

Add. 7785.

Foll. 135; S in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1803). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Persian Divan of Fuzuli.

Muḥammad B. Sulaimān, of Baghdād, poetically called Fuẓūlī, and chiefly known as a Turkish poet, wrote also Persian and Arabic poetry with eleganee. He died at Karbalā A.H. 970, or, according to the Riyāẓ ush-Shuʿarā, fol. 341 a, A.H. 976. See Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 22, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 55, Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 300, and Hammer, Geschichte der Osmanischen Dichtkunst, vol. ii. p. 293.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, with a considerable lacune after fol. 48, extending from s to J, fol. 1. Ķiţ'ahs and Maşnavîs, fol. 104 b.

The Divan has been printed in Tabriz.

Add. 7786.

Foll. 62; 7⁴/₂ in. by 5¹/₄; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divân of Sulțân Salim. G G 2 ای ترا برده عزت علم یکت ائے . کسر نه همتای تو در مملکت بی همتائی

Sulțăn Salīm, son and successor of Sulaimān the Great, was born in A.H. 930, ascended the throne A.H. 974, and died A.H. 982. He uses indifferently Salīm and Salīmī as his Takhalluş.

Contents: Four poems in praise of God and Muhammad, fol. 1 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 4 b.

See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 285, Hammer, Geschichte der Osmanischen Dichtkunst, vol. ii. p. 436, the Petersburg Catalogue, p. 400, where a different beginning is given, and the library of King's College, Cambridge, No. 163.

Add. 7784.

Foll. 184; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two goldruled columns, with 'Unvān, gold headings, and thirteen whole-page miniatures in fair Persian style; dated A.H. 948 (A.D. 1541). [Cl. J. RICH.]

شد نامد

A poetical history of Shāh Ismā'il.

Author: Kāsimī, قاسم, قاسم

خداون.د بیچون خدائی تراست Beg. بر اقلیم جان پادشاهی تراست

Mīrzā Kāsim, poetically surnamed Kāsimī, was born in Junābad (Yākūt's Junābiz), or Gūnābād, in Khorasan, of a noble family of Sayyids, in which the chief magistrature, Kalāntarī, of that town was hereditary. Having left that office to his brother Mīr Abul-Fatḥ, he adopted the life of a Fakīr, and devoted his leisure to poetry. Sām Mīrzā states in his Tazkirah, written A.H. 957, fol. 26, that Mīrzā Ķāsim had then written the four following Maşnavīs: 1. A Shāhnāmah, or poetical history of Shāh Ismā'il. 2. Lailā Majnūn, dedicated to the same sovereign. 3. Kār Nāmah, a poem describing a game of Chaughān played by Shāh Ismā'il, and written by the Shāh's desire. 4. Khusrau Shīrīn, dedicated to the writer (Sām Mīrzā).

Mīrzā 'Alā ud-Daulah gives in his Nafā'is ul-Ma'āşir, written A.H. 973-979 (Oude Catalogue, p. 46), a detailed notice on Kāsim, which has been inserted in the Haft Asman, p. 136. He speaks of him as still living, and states that he met him in Kāshān, when on the way to India, and that Kāsim then wrote a letter to Akbar, in which he gave the following account of his poems: 1. Shāhnāmah i Māzī, a poetical record of Shāh Ismā'il, consisting of 4500 lines. 2. Shāh Nāmah i Navvāb A'lā, a history of Shāh Tahmāsp in 4500 lines. 3. Shāhrukh Nāmah, in 5000 lines. 4. Lailā Majnūn, 3000 lines. 5. Khusrau Shīrīn, of the same extent. 6. Zubdat ul-Ash'ār, in the metre of Makhzan ul-Asrār, 4500 lines. 7. Gūy u Chaughān (called also Kār Nāmah), 2500 lines. To these the author of the Haft Asman adds an eighth poem, entitled 'Ashik u Ma'shūk.

The date of Mīrzā Ķāsim's death is not accurately known. It is stated in Haft Iķlīm, fol. 331, that in extreme old age he made over his fortune to the shrine of Imām 'Alī Rizā in Mashhad. See also Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 367, Ātashkadah, fol. 138, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 534, and Hammer, Redekünste, p. 385.

The poem was commenced in the time of Shāh Ismā'īl, who is addressed in the prologue as the reigning sovereign; but it was not finished till after his death, which forms the subject of the last section. The prologue contains also a section in praise of the classical Maşnavī writers, Nizāmī and Khusrau, and of their worthy successor Hātifī, and a eulogy upon the Vazīr Shams ud-Dīn Muhanmad Nūrī. The historical portion of the poem extends from the time of Sultan Haidar to the conquest of Khorasan by Shāh Ismā'il and the peace granted by him to the Uzbaks (A.H. 917).

660

1

ابرهيم المنشى الرضوية : Transcriber

See Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 13, Mohl, preface to the Shāhnāmah, p. 77, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 638, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 388, Asiatisches Museum, p. 375, and King's College Library, Cambridge, No. 238.

On the first page is written: "This book ... is a relick of the great Sefiviyan library. It was presented to me as a token of friendship by Fethullah Khan, son of the heroic and unfortunate Lutf Ali Khan, who spent some days at my house on his way to Mecca, etc. Baghdad, December 29, 1819, Claudius James Rich." Lower down is a Persian entry written on that occasion by Fath Ullah Khān.

Or. 339.

Foll. 386; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{5}{6}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik; dated Lucknow, A.H. 1180 (A.D. 1767).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The following three poems of Kasimi :--

I. Fol. 2 b. The poem above described.

This copy contains towards the end, fol. 132 b, the following line, which gives A.H. 940 as the date of the completion of the poem:

It is expressed by the chronogram, ide, the first letter of which has to be left out.

II. Fol. 133 a. شاهرخ نامه, a poetical history of Shährukh.

The title is contained in the following couplet, fol. 153 a:

The prologue contains a dedication to Shāh Țahmāsp, and a mention of the author's previous poems, viz., Shahnāmah, Lailā u Majnūn, and Shīrīn u Khusrau. The date of composition, A.H. 950, is conveyed in the following line, fol. 260 a:

III. Fol. 260 a. شهنامه, the second part (Daftar) of the Shahnāmah, containing a poetical history of Shāh Ţahmāsp, and dedicated to him.

The narrative is brought down, in the present copy, to the account of the arrest of Prince Bāyazīd (A.H. 967) and of the correspondence which took place on that occasion between Sultan Sulaimān and Shāh Țahmāsp. The text breaks off at the beginning of the next-following section, relating to the punishment of some refractory Sunnīs in Kazvīn.

See the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 387.

Add. 25,023.

Foll. 415; 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

ديوان غزالي

The collected poems of Ghazālī.

Maulānā Ghazālī informs us in his preface to the Dīvān, fol. 59 a, that he was born in Mashhad. As he states further on, fol. 60 b, that he had completed his 30th year in A.H. 966, he must have been born about A.H. 936. Persecutions to which he was exposed, as a freethinker, in his native country, drove him to India, where he attached himself to Khān Zamān ('Alī Ķulī Khān), one of Akbar's generals, then Governor of Jaunpür (see Blochmann, Ain Akbari, p. 319). When his patron, who had risen in rebellion, was crushed by Akbar (A.H. 974), he passed into the Imperial service, and Akbar conferred upon him the title of Malik ush-Shu'arā. He died, according to Badāonī, vol. iii. p. 170, on the 27th of Rajab, A.H. 980, in Ahmadābād, Gujrāt. The date is fixed by a chronogram of Faizi. See Blochmann, Ain Akbari, p. 568, note 1, Haft Iklīm, fol. 295 a, Tabakāt i Akbarī, fol. 285, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 488 b, Tabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 234, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 319 b, Haft Asman, p. 100, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 61 and 411.

His name is Ghazālī, not Ghazzālī as sometimes written; for the metre shows that the first syllable is short, and the poet himself says, fol. 59 b, that his takhalluş was derived from ghazāl, a gazelle.

The present MS. has lost some leaves, and the upper half of others, which apparently contained illuminated headings. The contents are :—

I. Fol. 1. Ghazālī's preface to his imitation of twenty Ghazals of Mīr Hasan of Dehli, composed at the request of Rukn us-Salṭanat Muḥammad, of Nīshāpūr. The preface, which wants the first two or three lines, is followed by the beginning of the first of Mir Hasan's Ghazals.

II. Fol. 3 a. كنج أكبرى, poems addressed to Akbar, and composed by Ghazālī on various occasions, when he was admitted to the royal presence.

The collection comprises—1. Kaṣīdahs in alphabetical order, with a lacune at the beginning, and another extending from to s. 2. A long Maṣnavī containing moral and religious advice. In the conclusion the poet excuses his remissness in attending Court by the state of destitution to which he had been reduced by the loss of his Jāgīr, and ends with a humourous description of a sorry jade, the sole remnant of his property. 3. Some short pieces, among which is a chronogram on the birth of Akbar's first child (Jahāngīr), A.H. 977. 'The firsţ Ķaşīdah was written when Akbar had completed his 25th year, i.e. A.H. 975.

III. Fol. 53 a. آثار الشباب, "Vestiges of Youth," the Divān of Ghazālī, with a prose preface, the beginning of which is wanting. (See the Oude Catalogue, p. 412).

ای عقل بخوان خطبه محمد و ثنائسي .Beg برذات خداي که جز او نيست خدائي

We learn from the preface that the author had completed his 30th year when he arranged his poems in alphabetical order, and dedicated them to Akbar, in A.H. 966.

Contents: Preface, fol. 53 a. Kaṣīdahs, Tarkīb and Tarjī-bands, fol. 60 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 91 b. Maṣnavīs, fol. 260 b. Ķiţiahs, fol. 270 a, Rūbāis, imperfect at the end, fol. 276 b.

IV. Fol. 295 a. اسرار مكتوم, a Sufi tract on mystic love.

V. Fol. 309 b. سنت الشعراء, "Sunnat ush-Shu'arā," a collection of Ķaṣīdalıs in alphabetical order, with a prose preface. Most of them are addressed to Shāh Ṭahmāsp, some to Khān Zamān, and a few to Mun'im Khān, and other Indian Amīrs.

ما بحريصان كذاشتيم جهان را Beg. دور فكنديم نيم خورد سكان را

VI. Fol. 347 b. نقش بديم a Maşnavī poem on mystic love, in imitation of Nizāmī's Makhzan ul-Asrār, with a short prose preface.

Be

The prologue contains a panegyric addressed to Shāh Țahmāsp, followed by an eulogy upon the poet's Indian patron, Khān Zamān, for whom, according to the Haft Iķlīm, the work was written. See Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 379, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 439.

An imitation of the Makhzan ul-Asrār by Ghazālī is mentioned in the Haft Āsmān. p. 100, under the title of Mashhad i Anvār, and some of the lines there quoted are found in the present poem.

VII. Fol. 377 b. A Maşnavî, wanting the first lines. It contains a violent diatribe against one of the 'Ulamā who had attacked Ghazālī.

VII. Fol. 383 b. Another Maşnavî wanting the first lines. It is a fierce satire against Kilîch Khân, an Amîr of Akbar's court (see Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, pp. 34, 354), who is designated by his proper name Kilîch and by his poetical surname Ulfatî, and most recklessly abused, both as man and as pretended poet. This ruthless attack appears from the introduction to have been instigated and countenanced by Akbar himself.

IX. Fol. 391 a. آيبينه خيال, a short collection of Ghazals in alphabetical order, with a preface, the beginning of which is wanting.

These Ghazals were extracted, as stated in the preface, from the author's first Dīvān, ثار الشباب T, as specimens of the artificial manner to which he inclined in his youthful compositions. They are not found, however, in the present copy of the Dīvān.

The Ghazals are followed by some Kit'ahs, fol. 410 b, and Rubā'is, fol. 412 a.

Or. 326.

Foll. 254; 7¹/₄ in. by 3¹/₄; 18 lines, 2¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The collected works of Vahshi.

Vahshi, born in Bäfik, Kirman, spent nearly the whole of his life in Yazd, where he died, as stated by his contemporary Taki Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 35, in A.H. 991 or 992. The first of these dates is expressed بلبل کلزار معنی بستہ اب by the chronogram quoted in Mir'at ul-'Alam, fol. 494. He was, according to the 'Alamārāi, fol. 48, unequalled in his time either in Ghazal or Masnavī. It is stated in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 480, that he imitated the manner of Bābā Fighani, but with a more decided leaning to the colloquial style. He is noticed in the Haft Iklim, fol. 76, the Atashkadah, fol. 63, and Haft Asman, p. 109. Compare Hammer, Redekünste, p. 388, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 586.

The contents are as follows :---

I. Fol. 2 b. Kaşīdahs in praise of the Imāms, of Shāh Țahmāsp, Mīr Mīrān Ghiyāş ud-Dīn (a descendant of Ni'mat Ullah Valī, who lived in Yazd; see Riyāz, fol. 435), Shāh Khalīl Ullah (see p. 635 a), etc., with some Marşiyahs at the end.

II. Fol. 73 b. خلد برين, "The supreme abode of bliss," a Maşnavî in imitation of the Makhzan ul-Asrār.

It has been edited by W. Nassan Lees, Calcutta, 1861.

III. Fol. 90 b. برداد و شيرين, "The lovestory of Farhād and Shīrīn," a Maşnavī in the metre of Khusrau u Shīrīn.

This poem was left unfinished by the author. It has been lithographed in Calcutta, A.H. 1249, and in Bombay, with a poem on the same theme by Viṣāl, A.H. 1265. See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1525, Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 138, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 72, and Ouseley's Collection, No. 36.

663

IV. Fol. 121 a. ذاظر و منظور, "The loves of Nāzir and Manzūr, a Maşnavī in the same metre as the preceding, imperfect at the beginning.

The first line, as quoted by Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 291, and in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 577, is

The date of composition, A.H. 966, is stated in the following lines at the end :

> کسی کین نظم دور اندیشه خواند اکر تماریخ تمصنیفش نداند شمارد پنج نوبت سی بتضعیف که با شش باشدش تاریخ تصنیف نداند کر بدین قانون که شد ذکر بجوید از همه ابیات پر فکر

It is obtained either by doubling 30 five times, and adding 6, or by summing up the letters of همه ابیات پر فکر

V. Fol. 162 b. Maşnavîs in praise of Mîr Mîrân and others, including also some satires, one of which is against a contemporary poet, Mullā Fahmī.

ای ظفر در رکاب دولت تو Beg.

VI. Fol. 181 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order.

خیز و بناز جلوه ده قامت دل نواز را Beg.

At the end are some Mukațța'āt, fol. 244 a, including chronograms on the death of Shāh Țahmāsp and other contemporary events; lastly a few Rubā'is, fol. 251 a.

A copy of the Kulliyāt is described in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 576.

Add. 23,552.

Foll. 253; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1034 (A D. 1625).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

Another collection of the poems of Vahshi, containing:---

I. Fol. 2 b. Laudatory poems, in the form of Kaşīdah, Tarkīb-band, and Maşnavī.

ای تماشائیان جاء و جلال بشتابید بهر استقیال .Beg

II. Fol. 116 b. Ghazals, without alphabetical order.

چرا خود را کسی در دام هر بی نسبت اندازد .Beg.

III. Fol. 178 a. Khuld i Barīn; see above, art. ii.

IV. Fol. 204 b. Farhād u Shīrīn; see above, art. iii.

Or. 318.

Foll. 82; 11 in. by 7; 14 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvān, apparently in the 17th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. The Dīvān of Vaḥshī, containing—Ķasīdahs, fol. 2 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 18 b. Tarjī's, fol. 57 a. Rubā'is, fol. 60 b.

یك جهان جان خواهم و چندان امان از روزگار .Beg

II. Farhâd u Shīrīn, fol. 61 b. See p. 663, art. iii.

Foll. 81 and 82 contain some Ghazals of Hājī Muḥammad Jān Kudsı.

On the first page is the seal of Ghairat Khān, an Amīr of the court of Farrukhsiyar.

Add. 24,344.

Foll. 49; 6 in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 10 oblique lines in each page; written in minute Shafi'āī character on one side only of the paper, and folding up in the manner of Oriental albums; dated Muharram, A.H. 1174 (A.D. 1760).

Farhād u Shirin; see p. 663, art. iii.

Add. 7787.

Foll. 26; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, with two 'Unvāns and ruled margins; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 994 (A.D. 1586). [Cl. J. RICH.]

A poetical account of the taking of Tabrīz by 'Uşmān Pāshā (A.H. 993; see Malcolm, History of Persia, vol. i. p. 520, and Hammer, Geschichte des Osmanischen Reiches, vol. iv. p. 170), with a dedication in prose to Sultan Murād B. Salīm.

Author: Jamālī B. Hasan Shūshtarī,

بنام خداوند لیل و نهار . که باشد نهان پیش او آشکار

The author relates in the prologue how, having set sail from Baghdād on a trading expedition, he was shipwrecked and left destitute on a foreign shore, and how he was advised by Firdūsī in a dream to address this Shāhnāmah to the Sultan. The time of composition, A.H. 994, is expressed by the chronogram نبودند بر کوی نتج عجم. The poem, which is evidently written by a man of inferior literary attainments, concludes with praises of the Sultan and Vazīrs, and with an urgent appeal to their liberality.

An ornamental inscription, foll. 3 and 4, shows that the present copy was intended for presentation to the Sultan.

Add. 7789.

Foll. 250; 9 in. by 5[‡]; 13 lines, 2[‡] in. long, with 22 lines in the margin; written in fair Shikastah-āmīz; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1207 (A.D. 1793). [Cl. J. RICH.]

VOL. II.

The Divān of Muhtasham, with a preface by Taķī ud-Dīn Muhammad ul-Husainī.

Beg. of the Preface:

Beg. of the Divin:

Maulānā Muḥtasham lived in his native place, Kāshān, in the reigns of Shāh Ismā'il and Shāh Tahmāsp, and was looked upon, during the latter period, as the most eminent poet of Persia. His Marşiyah on the death of Imām Ḥusain is much admired and has remained extremely popular. He died A.H. 996, a date fixed in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 415, by the chronogram درد محتش, See 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 47, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 388, Taķi Kāshī (who was a pupil of Muḥtasham), Oude Catalogue, p. 23, and Sprenger, ib. p. 500.

The writer of the Preface, who is better known as Taki ud-Din Kūshi (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 13), states that Muhtasham had, during the illness to which he succumbed, A.H. 996, sent for him, and requested him to collect and arrange his poetical works. He then dwells on the unsurpassed merit of Muhtasham, whom he ranks first after Khāķānī, aud gives a number of poems in his praise, and chronograms on his death, written by several contemporaries. In conclusion the editor states that, according to the poet's directions, the collected poems, كليات, had been arranged in the following seven Divans :--- 1. Shaibiyyah , containing Kasidahs in praise of God, Muhammad, the Imāms, contemporary kings, vazīrs, amīrs, and men of letters. 2. Shabābiyyah, شبابيه, and 3. Sibā'iyyah, o, containing Ghazals descriptive of beauty. 4. Jalāliyyah, جلاليه, and 5. Nakli

'Ushshāk, نقل عشاق, containing Ghazals descriptive of love and of the poet's beloved. 6. Zurūriyyāt, ضروريات, comprising versified chronograms, written at the request of his friends. 7. Mu'ammayāt, معيات, or riddles.

Kasīdahs and Tarkīb bands, ninety-seven in number, to which is prefixed a table of their beginnings, fol. 6 b. Mukatta'āt, and short Maşnavīs, fol. 106 a. Ghazals, not alphabetically arranged, fol. 122 b.

Rubā'īs, fol. 142 a.

Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 148 b.

ای کوہر نام تو تاج سر دیوانہا Beg.

This is the usual beginning of the Dīvān, probably the Shabābiyyah. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 500, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 591.

Another series of Ghazals alphabetically arranged, fol. 203 b.

Beg. فرمود مرا تسجدة خوبش آن بت رعنا These are, no doubt, the Ṣibā'iyyah or youthful poems, as may be inferred from the last line :

نبودی بی نظام این نظم صبیان تا باین غایت اکر که کاه بودي محتشم را نکته آموزی

Or. 314.

Foll. 61; 9 in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah ; dated Zulka'dah, the 11th year of Muhammad Shāh, i.e. A.H. 1141 (A.D. 1729). [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Dīvān of Mailī.

. .

دلا رسيد بجاي كممند نـالـــه مـا . Beg. كه خو كرفته بمجنون وشان غزاله ما

Mailī Haravī, or of Herat, whose original name was Mirzā Kuli, belonged to the Turkish tribe of Jalair. He found a protector in Sultan Ibrāhīm Mīrzā, son of Bahrām Mirzā, who held a high office at the Court of his uncle Shāh Țahmāsp. After the death of his patron he went to India. This took place, according to the Nafā'is ul-Ma'āşir, Oude Catalogue, p. 54, in A.H. 979. Taki Kāshī, ib., p. 43, gives a later date, A.H. 983, and adds the erroneous statement that Maili died on the road. In India he attached himself to Naurang Khān, with whom he stayed many years, and by whose order he was eventually poisoned in Malvah. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 436, Tabakāt i Akbarī, fol. 287, Badãonī, vol. iii. p. 329, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 571. According to the Atashkadah, fol. 11, Mailī was born and had grown up in Mashhad.

The above mentioned Sayyid Naurang Khān was the son of Kuţb ud-Dīn Khān, an Amīr of Akbar's reign. He served with distinction in the war against Muzaffar Shāh of Gujrāt, A.H. 991, and received as a reward a Jāgīr in Mālvah, and subsequently in Gujrāt, where he died in the 39th year of Akbar (A.H. 1002—3). See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 201, and Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 411. The death of Mailī, the date of which is not recorded, happened probably some time before A.H. 1000.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 2 b. Rubā'is, fol. 59 b. Ķasīdahs, foll. 2 b—36 a, in the margins. One of these is addressed to Akbar, and two others to Naurang Khān.

Copies are mentioned in the Oude Catalogue, p. 497, and in Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1461.

The MS. was written, according to the subscription, for Mīr Sharaf ud-Dīn 'Alī, poetically surnamed Payām, a poet of the reign of Muḥammad Shāh (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 276).

666

Add. 16,793.

Foll. 278; 7¹/₄ in. by 4; 17 lines, 2¹/₃ in. long; written in Nestalik, with Unvāns and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 1060 (A.D. 1649). [WM. YULE.]

The collected works of 'Urfi Shirazi.

Urfi, of Shirāz, one of the most popular poets of his time, went in early life from his native city to the Deccan, from whence he proceeded to Fathpur Sikri, then the residence of Akbar. There he won the favour and protection of Hakim Masih ud-Din Abul-Fath Gilani (see Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 424), and, after his death in A.H. 997, attached himself to the Khānkhānān Mirzā 'Abd ur-Rahim Khān (ib., p. 334). He followed the latter in his expedition against Jani Beg of Tattah in A.H. 999, but was carried off by dysentery, some say by poison, in Lahore in the same year, at the early age of thirty-six years. His contemporary Badaoni, vol. ii. p. 285, and vol. iii. p. 285, gives the chronogram عرفي جواند مرك for his death. The same date is given شدى in the Mir'at ul-'Alam, fol. 487, Mir'at ul-Khayāl, fol. 60, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 302. See also Haft Iklim, fol. 107, Atashkadah, fol. 131, Haft Asman, p. 111, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 304, Osmanische Dichtkunst, vol. iv. p. 501, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 528, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 569.

Contents.

I. Fol. 1 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order.

اي نه فلك زخوشه، صنع تو دانده . وز تصر كبرياى تو عرش آشيانه

II. Fol. 99 b. Kaşīdahs, not alphabetically arranged.

Beg. اي متاع درد در بازار جان انداخته The Kaşidahs of Urfi have been edited, with a commentary, Calcutta, A.H. 1254. III. Fol. 174 b. بجمع الابكار, a Maşnavī in imitation of the Makhzan ul-Asrār. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 389, Haft Asmān, p. 111, and Krafft's Catalogue, p. 69.

IV. Fol. 206 a. نرهاد و شيرين, the lovestory of Farhād and Shīrīn, in the metre of Nīzāmī's Khusrau u Shīrīn.

V. Fol. 217 b. A Tarji^{} in praise of Masih ^{}ud-Din Abulfath.

VI. Fol. 221 b. Mukatta'āt.

VII. Fol. 232 b. Rubă'is.

VIII. Fol. 252 b. A collection of prose pieces.

The first of these is a letter written by 'Urfī during an illness, in which he describes his state of mind in presence of death. Further on are some discourses on moral and religious subjects, a preface to a Fāl-Nāmah compiled for Akbar, a letter to a physician(Masīh ud-Dīn) on his recovery, etc.

On the first page is found the stamp of Tiket Rāe, the Oude Minister, with an 'Arzdīdah dated A.H. 1206.

Copies of the Kulliyāt, or of portions of them, are noticed in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 72, the Oude Catalogue, p. 528, the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 592, and the Münich Catalogue, p. 36.

Add. 7791.

Foll. 206; 9³/₄ in. by 4³/₄; 21 lines, 2³/₄ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.] A similar collection, containing—Majma' ul-Abkār, fol. 1 b. Farhād u Shīrīn, fol.

н н 2

35 b. Kaşīdahs, fol. 45 b. Muķatta'āt, fol. 98 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 105 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 194 b. The last two sections are slightly imperfect at the end.

Add. 7792.

Foll. 140; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1048 (A.D. 1639). [Cl. J. RICH.]

A similar collection, containing—

I. Fol. 1 b. Kaşīdahs in alphabetical order.

II. Fol. 33 a. Mukatta'āt, imperfect at the end.

III. Fol. 37 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order. The first two letters and a portion of the third are wanting.

IV. Fol. 113 b. The first portion of Majma' ul-Abkār, about a third of the whole.

V. Fol. 127 a. A long Tarji', in which the poet addresses his beloved.

ای حسن تو برتر از جه و جون Beg. سجـان الله ز صـنـع بیچون

The burthen is:

جون دست نمیدهد وصالت دست من و دامن خیالت

VI. Foll. 131 b-140 a. Rubā'is.

Egerton 1035.

Foll. 82; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India in the 18th century.

The Kasidahs of 'Urfi, followed by Mukatta'āt, fol. 75 a.

Egerton 1034.

Foll. 104; 9¼ in. by 6; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in a eursive Indian character; dated Zulhijjah, the 22nd year of Muhammad Shāh, A.H. 1152 (A.D. 1740).

The Kaşīdahs of 'Urfī, not alphabetically arranged.

Foll. 2—9, 100—104, contain miscellaneous poetical extracts, the largest of which is a Sufi Maşnavī by Shāh Abū 'Alī Ķalandar (died A.H. 724, Oude Catalogue, p. 565), headed الله سرة headed برساله مشرف شاه بو على قلندر قدس الله سرة foll. 3—9, beginning:

It has been printed in Cawnpore, 1872.

Or. 365.

Foll. 172; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century; from the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

A commentary on some Ķasīdahs of 'Urfī, by Mīrzā Jān, ميرزا جان

کاید کنجینه نطق و زبان دندانه سین Beg.

It contains, as stated in the preface, a full explanation of difficult verses and rare words in thirty select Kaṣīdahs of 'Urfī's Dīvān. The date of composition, A.H. 1073, is expressed by the chronogram شرح قصايد عرف. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 530.

Harleian 343.

Foll. 107; 7 in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, 2 in. long; written in eursive Indian Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1013 (A.D. 1604); much worm-eaten.

A Mașnavi poem, containing precepts on spiritual life.

ای خدا از فضل تو حاجت روا . Beg. بـا تـو يـاد هيچکس نبود روا

The poem is preceded by the following short prose preamble, in which some words are obliterated :

الحمد لله رب العالمين . . فيقول العبد الضعيف على درويش بن عثمان زادة الله ذوقا وشوقا استخرجت هذة الد وي المولوى بعون الله وتوفيقه وجمعتها على ثمانية و سبعين بابا وسميتها بمفتاح التوحيد

It would seem from the above that the matter of the poem was derived from the Maşnavî of Jalāl ud-Dîn Rūmī, written in the same metre. It is divided into seventyeight chapters (Bāb), treating chiefly of those dispositions and practices which are to be either sought or shunned by the devotees; the precepts are frequently illustrated by narratives. Haj. Khal. gives the title of the work, without any author's name.

Add. 10,585.

Foll. 48; 6‡ in. by 3½; 12 lines, 2 in. long; written in neat Nestalik; dated Isfahan, Jumāda I., A.H. 1031 (A.D. 1622).

The Divan of Nuri.

Ķāzī Nūr ud-Dīn Muḥammad, of Isfahan, and his brother Ķāzī Mu'izz, were, according to the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 467, pupils of Khwājah Afzal ud-Dīn Tarikah, of the same eity. The former died A.H. 1000. Taķī Kāshī states, Oude Catalogue, p. 27, that Nūrī was born in Isfahan and brought up in Ķazvīn.

His master, Afzal ud-Dīn, who settled in Ķazvīn A.H. 967, and was much in favour with Shāh Țahmāsp and Shāh Ismā'ıl II., was appointed, after the latter's death, Ķāzī of Isfahan. He died in Rai in the reign of Shāh 'Abbās 1. See 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 40, and Taķī Kāshī, ib.

Some verses of the present Dīvān are quoted in the Haft Iķlīm, fol. 370, and the Atashkadah, fol. 86. See also Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 525, where a line is quoted which belongs to the second Ķaṣīdah of this copy.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, two of which are in praise of Shāh Ismā'īl (A.H. 984—985), while most of the others are addressed to the Vazīr Muḥammad, fol. 1 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 22 b.

Rubā'is, fol. 46 b.

A copy of Nūrī's Dīvān with a different beginning is noticed in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 402.

Or. 1222.

Foll. 193; 7 in. by 5¹/₄; 14 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

The Shī'ah legend of 'Alī's life, a poem by Fārigh, نارغ.

هو باقی و غیرہ ہالک

The author, who calls himself Husain B. Hasan, begins with an eulogy on Shāh 'Abbās I., and states that the poem was written A.H. 1000, the year in which Gīlān, apparently his native country, had been conquered by that sovereign. He followed a prose narrative composed by a Muhammad B. Ibrāhīm, whom he calls his loving friend and brother :

The poem has the heading كتاب فارغ. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 397. The present copy is imperfect at the end. The last section relates to 'Ali's expedition in succour of the king Saif B. Arkuvān, threatened by an army of lions.

Add. 7794.

Foll. 381; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with three 'Unvans and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabi I., A.H. 1050 (A.D. 1640). [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان فيضى

The Divan of Faizi, with a preface by the author.

Faizī died A.H. 1004. See above, p. 450 a, Hammer, Redekünste, p. 400, Ouseley, Notices, p. 174, and Haft Asmān, pp. 115—126.

The author relates in his preface how he was called by Akbar to Court, appointed tutor to the prince, and subsequently received the rank of Amīr and the title of Malik ush-Shu'arā. He adds that the present Dīvān, containing about nine thousand distichs, was but a sample of his poetical compositions.

As the Dīvān contains a chronogram on the death of Shaikh Mubārak, the author's father, in A.H. 1001, it cannot have been collected much before the poet's own death, which took place three years later.

Contents: The author's preface, fol. 1 b, beginning:

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم كنج ازل راست طلسم قديم Kaşīdahs, Marşiyahs, and Tarkībs, fol. 4 0, beginning:

يا ازلى الظهوريا ابدى الخفا

Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 112 b, beg.: مستانه سخن میرسد از دل به لب ما

Kiţ'ahs, fol. 274 b. This section includes a Ghazal which can be read in four different measures, and some pieces consisting entirely of words without diacritical points. Chronograms, fol. 289 b. Unfinished Ghazals, fol. 293 a. Initial verses, fol. 296 b. Riddles, fol. 302 a. Rubā'is, fol. 313 a. A short Maşnavī, fol. 380 b.

محمد جعفر بن عنابت الله الشيرازي : Copyist

Add. 23,981.

Foll. 346; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 4; 17 lines, $1\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in a cursive hand, with four 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century.

The poetical works of Faizi, viz .:-

I. Fol. 2 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order.

II. Fol. 106 b. نل دمى, "Nal-Daman," a Maşnavî, founded on the episode of Nala and Damayantî in the Mahābhārata:

ای در تک و پوی تو زآغاز Beg. عنقای نظر بلنـد پــرواز

The poem, which is dedicated to Akbar, is stated in the conclusion to consist of four thousand distichs, and to have been written in the 39th year of the reign, or A.H. 1003:

The author mentions in the same passage the change of his Takhallus from Faizī to Fayyāzī:

The Nal Daman is, according to the Akbar Nāmah, the third poem of the Khamsah, which Faizī had planned A.H. 993, but did not live to carry out. It was to consist of the following poems: Markaz i Advār, Sulaimān u Balķīs, Nal Daman, Haft Kishvar, and Akbar Nāmah. The Nal Daman was completed, by Akbar's desire, in the space of four months, A.H. 1003. See also Badāonī, vol. ii. p. 396. It has been printed in Calcutta, 1831, and Lucknow, 1846. Copies are mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 75, Oude Catalogue, p. 402, Münich Catalogue, p. 38, and Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 42.

III. Fol. 230 b. مركز ادوار, "The centre of circles," a Maşnavî, in imitation of Nizāmi's Makhzan ul-Asrār.

Beg.

This poem, the title of which is found in the following line, fol. 248 a, was the first of the above-mentioned Khamsah, and was composed by Faizi in his fortieth year, as appears from the following passage, fol. 272 a:

See the Leyden Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 122, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 401.

IV. Mukațța'āt, fol. 273 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 285 a.

V. Fol. 305 b. Kasidahs. This section is imperfect in the beginning and differs in its arrangement from the corresponding portion of Add. 7794. It begins in the middle of a long Kaşīdah, the first line of which is:

(see Add. 7794, fol. 35 a), and ends with the Kaşīdah beginning:

(see Add. 7794, fol. 23 b).

سيد منور : Copyist

Add. 7795.

Foll. 64; 8½ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled columns, in the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Markaz i Advār ; see the preceding MS., art. iii.

Add.6625.

Foll. 95; 9¼ in. by 5½; 26 lines, so disposed as to form the design of a star in each page; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins, and 29 miniatures in the Indian style; dated Agrah, Sha'bān, A.H. 1028 (A.D. 1619). [J. F. HULL.]

Nal Daman (see p. 670, art. ii.).

Add. 16,804.

Foll. 140; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Jumādā II., A.H. 1176 (A.D. 1762).

[WM. YULE.]

The same poem. Copyist : حسينى فقير الله

Add. 7797.

Foll. 51; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in.

Be

long; written in small Nestalik; dated A.H. 1040 (A.D. 1630-1). [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان وحشتى

The Divan of Vahshati.

چنان زانس و ملك برده زلفت ایمانرا .Beg كه در دو كون نیابند بك مسلمانرا

The author of the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, who quotes several verses of this Divan, fol. 493, calls the author Maulānā Vahshatī Jūshghānī (from Jūshghān, a plaee between Isfahan and Käshän, see Ouseley's Travels, vol. iii. p. 79), and states that he visited Shīrāz in A.H. 999, and was an intimate friend of Abu Turab Beg Furkati (who died A. H. 1026; see Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 151). The author of the Divan, who in a contemporary note, at the end of this copy, is called Vahshatī Kāshī, is, no doubt, the "Wahshy Khwájah Hosayn" mentioned by Taki, Oude Catalogue, p. 26, as a poet of Kāshān. His Dīvān contains a satire on a contemporary poet 'Arshī (Talımāsp Kulī Beg, of Yazd), who is also mentioned by Taki, Oude Catalogue, p. 35, as a living poet.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. This section breaks off before the end of the letter ω . Rubā'īs and Fardiyyāt, fol. 49 a.

At the end is a Kit'ah addressed to a king not named, in which the poet says that, in order to kiss his threshold, he had crossed the sea and entered the land of the infidels.

Or. 329.

Foll. 235; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 10 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, early in the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

منتخب رباعيات سحابي

Select Rubā'īs of Sahābī, in alphabetical order.

از خلق رمیدم و شدم رام خدا it described by bis conterms

Sahābī is described by his contemporaries, Amīn Rāzī, Haft Iklīm, fol. 468, Takī Kāshī, and 'Alā ud-Daulah Kazvīnī, Oude Catalogue, pp. 42, 50, as a native of Astrābād. But Takī Auhadī, quoted in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 213, says that, although his family came from Jurjan, he was born in Shushtar. However, he settled at an early period in Najaf, where he devoted himself to the self-imposed task of sweeping the holy shrine of 'Alī. There he spent the last forty years of his life in seelusion and voluntary poverty. He is said to have destroyed the greater part of his Rubā'is, his favourite composition, of which, however, six thousand are still extant. He died, according to the Khulasat ul-Afkar, A.H. 1010. See also Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 483, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 62, Atashkadah, p. 141.

Several collections of Ruba'is, including also Ghazals, are mentioned in the Oude Catalogue, p. 552, and in Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1511.

The present copy bears a seal of the reign of Muhammad Shāh, dated A.H. 1133.

Add. 5599.

Foll. 395; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 7; 20 lines, 5 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1012 (A.D. 1604).

ديوان رفيعي

The Divan of Rafi'i.

This poet, who calls himself indifferently Rafi', Rafi' ud-Dīn, or Rafi'ī, is not to be confounded with a contemporary and better known namesake, Mīr Haidar Rafī'ī of Kāshān, who died A.H. 1032 (see Blochmann, A'in i Akbari, p. 593, and Badāonī, vol. iii. p. 232). Writing in an easy, colloquial, and unpolished style, he has not been deemed worthy of being recorded in the Tazkirahs. But the following particulars of his life may be gleaned from his Dīvān. He was born in Khorasan A.H. 942 (fol. 370 a), travelled through Irak to India (fol. 361 a), and obtained in Dehli, A.H. 982, a financial appointment as Shikdar, and a Jāgīr (fol. 32S b). Having been arrested on some question of accounts, he was released by Akbar's order, after seven years of confinement, and served with distinction in the Deccan wars, A.H. 1007—9. He appears to have settled in the Decean, where he held a Jāgīr, in a place called Dāmarnī \mathfrak{S} , \mathfrak{S} , district of Burhānpūr.

672

A notice on Rafi'i in Ouseley's Notices, pp. 376—382, contains his poetical description of the valley of Kashmir, which he visited in the suite of Akbar. See also Ouseley's Oriental Collections, vol. i. pp. 171— 176.

The Divān was collected A.H. 1010, as stated in the following Rubā'i at the end :

It includes, however, some pieces written as late as A.H. 1011 (fol. 370 a).

Contents: 1. Fol. 1 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, beginning:

2. Fol. 313 a. Kaşīdahs, beginning:

ای شهنشاد کامل عادل شاهد دل شاهد از فضای عالم دل

This section contains poems addressed to Akbar, to the princes Dāniyāl and Murād, to Abulfazl, the Khānkhānān, and other dignitaries; also many personal narratives, descriptions of various places, and poems on contemporary events. 3. Mașnavīs, fol. 338 a. Mukațța'āt, fol. 345 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 372 b.

The Mukațța'āt include ehronograms on the taking of the fortress of Gāvīl (Gawilgurh), A.H. 1007, and of Asīr, A.H. 1009.

Or. 342.

Foll. 133; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Lucknow, Jumāda II., A.H. 1250 (A.D. 1834).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

"Farhād and Shīrīn," a Maşnavī. Author: Kauşarī, كرثرى

خداوندا دلی خواهم وناکیش . محبت از همه دلها درو بسیش

Mīr 'Aķīl, poetically surnamed Kauşarī, born of a family of Sayyids in Hamadān, was known for his devotion to the Imāms, which won him the favour of Shāh 'Abbās I. He probably did not long survive the composition of the present poem, completed A.H. 1015; for he says in the conclusion, that he was then bent down by age, and saw his end draw near. He did not leave any other poem. 'Tāhir Naşīrābādī states in his 'Tazkirah dated A.H. 1083, fol. 120, that he had once met Kauşari's son in Isfahan, but had not been able to procure from him a single line of his father. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 394, and Atashkadah, fol. 116.

After a panegyric addressed to the reigning Shāh, 'Abbās I., the poet complains bitterly of the slackness of the poetical market in Irān, and declares his intention of sending his poem to that accomplished and munificent patron of letters in India, the Khānkhānān (Mīrzā 'Abd ur-Rahīm Khān, who died A.H. 1036; see p. 244 a), whose praises had been celebrated by 'Urfī (see p. 667 a). The date of composition, A.H. 1015, is given at the end, in the following chronogram:

پی تـاریخ ایـن ابـیـات دلجو بهـر سو بـود طبـعم در تکاپـو که این اشعارم از کلك بـیان زاد خرد شیریـن حکایتها نشان داد غلام نبی ولد ابی الفتخ : Copyist

Or. 325.

Foll. 31; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Haidarābād, Zulka'dah, A.H. 1064 (A.D. 1654). From the Lucknow library.

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Noetical works of Nau'i, کلیات نوعی

کر بلای عشقم و لب تشنه سر تا پاي من .Beg

Muḥammad Riẓā Nau'ī, of Khabūshān, near Mashhad, went to India in the time of Akbar, and found a patron in Mīrzā Yūsuf Khān Mashhadī, but soon after entered the service of the Khānkhānān Mīrzā 'Abd ur-Raḥīm, and stayed with him and Prince Dāniyāl at Burhānpūr, where he died A.H. 1019. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 468, Badāonī, vol. iii. p. 361, Mir'āt ul-'Ālam, fol. 494, and Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 294. A full account of Nau'ī's life will be found in Ouseley's Notices, pp. 161—166; see also Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 516, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 606.

Contents: Ķaşīdahs, fol. 2 b. Tarjī' and Tarkīb-bands, fol. 20 a. Muķaţţa'āt, fol. 36 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 37 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 92 b. Sāķī Nāmah, a Maşnavī in praise of the Khānkhānān, fol. 99 b, beginning:

توی اولین پیر میخانهما بیاد تو شبکیر پیهانها

Sūz u Gudāz, سوز و کدار, the story of a Hindu princess who burned herself on her husband's pile, in the reign of Akbar, a

Maşnavī dedicated to Prince Dāniyāl, fol. 111 b, beginning:

الہی خندہ ام را نالکی دہ

It has been printed at the end of the first volume of the Akbar Nāmah, Lucknow, 1284.

Add. 7816.

Foll. 96; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, apparently in the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Shapur.

زخط زایل نکردد جان فزای لعل جانانرا .Beg.

زخاصیت نه اندازد غباری آب حیوانرا

Khwājah Shāpūr, son of Khwājagī Khwājah, of a distinguished family of Teheran, was, according to Tāhir Naşīrābādī, fol. 178, a sister's son of the poet Ummīdī (died A.H. 925; see Tuhfah i Sāmī), and a first cousin of Amin Rāzi (see above, p. 335 b, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 508). He first used the Takhallus of Faribi or Karibi, which he afterwards exchanged for Shapur. He twice went to India, where he enjoyed the protection of his relative Mīrzā Ja'far Aşaf Khān (who was raised to the Khanship A.H. 993, and died A.H. 1021; Tazkirat ul-Umara, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 411), and of Sultan Salim (Jahāngīr). Taķī Kāshī states, Oude Catalogue, p. 42, that Shapur was engaged in A.H. 966 in imitating the Dīvān See Haft Iklīm, fol. 454, Riyāz of Fighānī. ush-Shu'arā, fol. 235, Atashkadah, fol. 94, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 564.

Or. 286.

Foll. 136; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان سنجر

The Divan of Sanjar.

الهمي كنم معنى دة دل كوهر فروشم را .Beg.

Mīr Muḥammad Hāshim, poetically surnamed Sanjar, was the son of Mīr Rafī' ud-Dīn Ḥaidar, of Kāshān, a poet who has been mentioned p. 672 b, to whom he was, in the opinion of Amīn Rāzī, fol. 390, far superior in poetical talent. He went to India, according to Maāşir i Raḥīmī, Blochmann's Ain i Akbari, p. 595, in A.H. 1000, was imprisoned by Akbar for some offence, to which he alludes in the present Dīvān, fol. 101, and, after his release, repaired to Ibrāhīm 'Ādil Shāh in Bījāpūr, where he died A.H. 1021. See also the Oude Catalogue, pp. 150, 571, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 218, and Ātashkadah, fol. 109.

Contents: Ghazals alphabetically arranged, fol. 2 b. Ķasīdahs, fol. 76 b. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 105 a. Masnavīs, fol. 117 b.

Of the Kasidahs several addressed to Akbar, to Ibrāhīm 'Adil Shāh, and to Mīrzā Jānī Beg, ruler of Tattah, with whom the poet appears to have stayed some time.

Add. 24,088.

Foll. 190; 9 in. by 5¹/₄; 14 lines, 2³/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [WILLIAM H. MORLEY.]

ليلى مجنون

Lailā and Majnūn, a Maşnavī, with a prose preface.

This poet, no record of whom has been found, appears from passages of his works to have been a Sayyid born in Isfahan, who held a high office at the court of the Kuţubshāhs in the Deccan. The present poem is dedicated to Sultan Muhammad Kuli Kutubshah, who reigned from A.H. 988 to 1020. The author refers in the prologue, fol. 20, to two previous compositions, one treating of the loves of Parviz, the other entitled Matmah, as the first two poems of his Khamsah, the present being the third. He bestows upon himself, both in that passage and in the epilogue, the most extravagant praises, which he puts in the mouth of his great master Nizāmī, while he speaks in very slighting terms of earlier Maşnavî writers, as the latest of whom he names Jāmī, Hātifī, and Maktabī. The last, a contemporary of Ahli Shirāzi, lived in the first half of the tenth century of the Hijrah; see the Oudo Catalogue, p. 38.

In the prologue of the Asmān Hashtum (see below, Add. 25,903) the author states that he had written the Lailā Majnūu in the space of seven months.

Rūh ul-Amīn was, according to Amal Sālih, fol. 697, the takhalluş of Mīr Jumlah, i. e. Mīr Muḥammad Amīn, a Sayyid of Isfahan, who went A.H. 1010 to the Decean, and was, during the reign of Muḥammad Kulī Kuṭubshāh, the virtual head of the state of Goleonda. He entered, A.H. 1027, the service of Jahāngīr, and held high offices at the Delhi court until his death, A.H. 1047. See Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 483, and Ḥadīķat ul-ʿAlam, vol. i. p. 243. His poetical works amounted, according to Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 52, to 20,000 lines.

Add. 6617.

Foll. 164; 7¹/₄ in. by 4; 12 lines, 2¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; apparently in the 17th century. [J. F. HULL.]

Another, somewhat shorter, recension of the same poem.

Add. 25,903.

Foll. 148; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 1024 (A.D. 1615).

A poem in imitation of Nizāmī's Haft Paikar and on the same subject, by the above poet.

This poem, the fourth of the author's intended Khamsah, was written for Muḥammad Kulī Kuṭubshāh, whose panegyric occupies a great part of the prologue, foll. 22 b—28 a; but we learn from the conclusion, fol. 144 b, that, the king having died during its composition (A.H. 1020), it was dedicated to his successor, Sulṭān-Muḥammad Kuṭubshāh. The date of completion, A.H. 1021, is conveyed in the following line, fol. 147 b:

The above title is found in the epilogue, fol. 139:

Another title, with the same meaning, نلك البروج, is found in the illuminated heading at the beginning.

Or. 284.

Foll. 185; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

كلستان ناز

The Dīvān of Rūh ul-Amīn.

In a prose preface, of which only a fragment is extant, fol. 18, the author states that this Dīvān, entitled Gulistān i Nāz, contains five thousand distichs, and consists of Ghazals written in early life.

Add. 7799.

Foll. 290; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 1044 (A.D. 1634). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divān of Shāni.

ای زسودا سایه بر زلف ایاز انداخته Beg.

کردن محمود را در دام ناز انداخته

Maulānā Shānī, whose original name was Nasaf Akā, belonged to the Turkish tribe of Taklū, and was born in Teheran. He was the favourite poet of Shāh 'Abbās I. It is stated in the 'Alam-ārāi, quoted in the Zīnat ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 651, and the Favā'id Safaviyyah, fol. 26, that the Shāh was so delighted with a Kaşīdah in praise of 'Alī, which Shānī recited before him, that he ordered the poet to be weighed and to receive his weight in gold for his reward. This ineident took place in the ninth year of the reign (A.H. 1004-5). Shānī spent the last years of his life in Mashhad, where he died, according to Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 150, the Khulāșat ul-Afkar, fol. 147, and Haft Asman, p. 132, A.H. 1023, a date fixed by the chronogram پادشاه سخن. See also Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 234, Atashkadah, fol. 8, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 42, 112, 564.

Contents: Kaṣīdalıs in praise of the Imāms, of Shāh 'Abbās, and some personages of his Court, fol. 1 b. A Maşnavī in praise of the Imāms, fol. 112 a, beginning:

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم ماهچه رایت امید و بسیم

Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 129 b, beginning:

اي باداي حمد تو زمزمه عقل و راي را Kitʿahs and Rubāʿīs, fol. 288 a.

نادر محمد بن عبد الرحيم نوقاني : Copvist

Or. 1301.

Foll. 251; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in two gold-ruled columns, apparently in the 17th century.

The same Divan, imperfect at the beginning.

Or. 350.

Foll. 239; 8¹/₄ in. by 4¹/₃; 15 lines, 2¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

محمود و ایاز

The story of Sultan Mahmūd and his favourite Ayāz, a Maşnavî.

Author: Zulāli, زلالي. Beg. بنام انكه محمودش اياز است غمش بتخانةُ ناز و نياز است

Maulānā Zulālī, of Khwānsār, 'Irāķ, lived in the reign of 'Abbās I., and was one of the panegyrists of the influential Sayyid, Mir Muḥammad Bāķir Dāmād. He is chiefly known by seven Maşnavīs, the most popular of which is the present pocm.

It was commenced, as stated by the author in the epilogue, in A.H. 1001, and finished A.H. 1024. The latter date is fixed by the following chronogram:

مجبو تاریخ نظمش از نظامی

Zulāli appears to have died shortly after; for we are told by Ţāhir Naṣīrābādī in his Tazkirah, fol. 173, that he left the poem unarranged, and that it was put into order by Shaikh 'Abd ul-Husain B. Shaikh 'Alī Naķī Kamra'i in India. Mīrzā Ţughrā, of Mashhad, wrote a preface to it.

Notices on Zulālī will be found in Haft Iķlīm, fol. 395, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 53, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 197, Atashkadah, fol. 91, and Haft Asmān, p. 140. See also the Oude Catalogue, pp. 41, 90.

The prologue contains eulogies on Shāh 'Abbās, the Vazīr Mīrzū Habīb Ullah, and the author's patron, Mīr Bāķir Dāmād, at whose request, we are told, the poem was written.

Foll. 1—18 have been supplied by a modern hand.

The Mahmūd u Ayāz has been lithographed in the press of Navalkishor. The seven Maşnavîs of Zulālī are mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 57, and more fully described by Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 593.

Add. 16,797.

Foll. 282; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi[•] I., the third year of Farrukhsiyar=A.H. 1126 (A.D. 1714). [WM. YULE.]

The same poem, with a preface by the author.

In the preface Zulālī compares his seven Maşnavīs with the seven planets, Sab' Sayyārah, and enumerates them in the following order: 1. مصيخا نه . 3. مشعله ديدار . 2. حسن كلوسوز . 3. مصيخا نه . 3. متعلم ديدار . 2. حسن كلوسوز . 4. مسليمان نامه . 6. آذر و سمندر . 5. ذرة و خورشيد . 7. محمود و اياز .

Another short prose preamble, also by Zulālī, is prefixed to the poem.

Add. 18,678.

Foll. 38; 6 in. by 4¹/₄; 14 lines, 2 in. long, with 16 lines in the margin; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1222 (A.D. 1807).

The first half of the same poem, corresponding to foll. 1-125 of Or. 350.

Add. 18,807.

Foll. 291; 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1075 (A.D. 1664).

Three Maşnavīs by the same.

I. Fol. 1 b. Mahmūd u Ayāz; see above.

II. Fol. 241 b. بیخانه, the "Tavern," with a short prose preamble by the author.

III. Fol. 275 b. ذرة و خورشيد, "The Moth and the Sun," with a prose preface by Zulālī.

Add. 16,792.

Foll. 179; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 23 lines, 3 in. long; with 18 lines in the margin; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1194 (A.D. 1780). [WM. YULE.]

ديوان ظهوري

The Divan of Zuhuri.

انکه خواهد داشت فردا رحمتش دیوان ما .Beg. کشته وصفش آفتاب مطلع دیـوان مـا

Zuhūrī, whose proper name was Nūr ud-Dīn Muḥammad, was a native of Turshīz, Khorasan. His contemporary Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 44, states that he went at an early age to Yazd, from whence he proceeded, A.H. 988, to India, and settled in Bījāpūr. There he became the intimate friend of another poet, Malik Ķummī (see Oude Catalogue, pp.30,151), whose daughter he married. Both stood in high favour with Ibrāhīm 'Ādilshāh (A.H. 988-1037), who rewarded them, according to the Futūḥāt 'Ādilshāhī, fol. 301, for the Gulistān i Khalīl, their joint production, with a present of 9000 gold pieces. Both were killed in an affray A.H. 1024 or 1025. See Badāonī, vol. iii. p. 281, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 486, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 57, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 281, Atashkadah, fol. 36, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 112, 125, 151.

Zuhūrī's compositions in prose and verse, which are much admired in India, are little known in Persia. A notice on the author and some of his works, written by 'Abd ur-Razzāķ Sūratī, A.H. 1212, and entitled Muķaddimāt Zuhūrī, has been lithographed in Cawnpore, 1873.

The Kulliyāt, or poetical works of Zuhūrī, consist of a Sāķī Nāmah, dedicated to Burhān Nizāmshāh, another Maṣnavī, and the Dīvān. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 68, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 580.

Contents of the Dīvān: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Rubā'is, fol. 143 b.

میر محمدی : Copyist

On the first page is the stamp of the Oude Minister, Tiket Rāi, with an 'Arz Dīdah dated A.H. 1203.

Or. 294.

Foll. 183; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 16 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Rajab, A.H. 1241 (A.D. 1826).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same Dīvān, containing — Ghazals, fol. 2 a; Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 178 a; Rubā'īs, fol. 178 b.

Add. 26,167.

Foll. 140; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1092 (A.D. 1681). [WM. ERSKINE.]

Sāķī-Nāmah, a poem in praise of Burhān Nizām Shāh, and the Court of Aḥmadnagar, by Zuhūrī. Beg.

This poem, which is stated at the end to consist of 4500 distichs, was written shortly after the accession of Burhān, who reigned from A.H. 999 to 1003.

The Sāķī Nāmah is mentioned by Firishtah, vol. ii. p. 307. It has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1849.

Or. 338.

Foll. 201; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with goldruled margins, and eleven miniatures in Indian style; dated A.H. 1096 (A.D. 1685). From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The same poem, with a different beginning:

Five leaves at the beginning, and a few in the body of the volume, have been supplied by a later hand.

Add. 18,419.

Foll. 17; 74 in. by 41; 12 lines, 31 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character; dated Lucknow, Ramazān, A.H. 1205 (A.D. 1791. [WM. YULE.]

"Bread and Sweets," a Maşnavî on ascetie life, by Bahā'î, i.e. Shaikh Bahā ud-Dīn 'Amilī, who died A.H. 1030 (see p. 25 b).

ايها الساهى عن العهد القديم · . Beg. ايها اللاهى عن النهم القويم .

The author states, in a short preamble, that he had written this poem during a journey to Mecca and his stay there. It has been printed in Constantinople, A.H. 1268.

سيد انضل على الرضوى : Copyist

Add. 7821.

Foll. 35; 74 in. by 5; 5 lines, 3 in. long; written in Turkish Naskhi; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 1214 (A.D. 1799). [Cl. J. RICH.] The same poem.

درویش ملّد سلیمان : Copyist

Add. 5630.

Foll. 130; 9¹/₄ in. by 5¹/₂; foll. 1—62, 10 lines in three columns, about 20 lines in four columns; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1044 (A.D. 1634).

[NATH. BRASSEY HALHED.]

The Divan of Talib Amuli.

جون کیچ نہم بفرق خرد افسر بیان . از مدح شه اطاقه زنم بر سر زبان

Tālib, born in Amul, Māzandarān, wascousin (خاله زاده) to Hakīm Ruknā (p. 603 a),who composed an elegy on his death. Havingbeen induced by his relative to go to India,he attached himself to Mirzā Ghāzī, ruler ofSind (A.H. 1015—20; see Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 125), and afterwards passed intothe service of Jahāngīr, who conferred uponhim the title of Malik ush-Shu'arā. Hismind, however, became deranged, and hedied still young, A.H. 1035. The date isexpressed in the Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 486, bythe chronogram, حشرش بعلى ابن ابن طالب باد, صاحبات

In the Țabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 321, A.H. 1040 is given as the date of his death. See also Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 274, Atashkadah, fol. 92, Khulāşat ul-Afkār, fol. 158, Oude Catalogue, pp. 90, 125, 151, and Ouseley, Notices, pp. 176—9.

Contents: Ķasīdahs in praise of 'Alī, of Mīrzā Ghāzī, Jahāngīr, Nūr Maḥall, Shāh 'Abbās, Mir Abul-Ķāsim, Chīn Ķilīj Khān, and others, fol. 1 b. Tarjī's, fol. 67 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 69 a. Rubā'īs, fol. 127 b. Copies are mentioned in the Oude Catalogue, p. 575, the Münich Catalogue, p. 38, de Jong's Catalogue of the Academy's library, p. 224, and in the Catalogue of the library of King's College, Cambridge, No. 172.

Add. 17,489.

Foll. 41; 10 in. by 6; 16 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān, goldruled margins, and eleven miniatures in the Indian style; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1211 (A.D. 1797.

كوك شاستر

A poetieal version of the Koka-Ṣāstra, a Sanscrit or Hindi work, treating of the various temperaments of men and women, and of sexual intercourse.

Author: Muḥammad Kulī, poetically surnamed Jāmī, محمد قلى متخلص بجامى

کنم ابتدا من بنام خدای Beg. که پیداست زقدرتش دو سرای

The translation is dedicated to 'Abd ullah Kuṭubshāh, who reigned from A.H. 1035 to 1083. It was written, as stated at the end of the prologue, fol. 13 a, in A.H. 1036. The original work, ascribed to the Vazīr Kokā, Σ_{2} , consisted of 34 Bābs; the translator has added two more.

Muḥammad Kulī was born, according to his own account, at Ḥaidarābād, one of the "sixty" sons of a Vazīr called like himself Muhammad Kulī.

In the subscription the work is called لذت النسا, a title which does not appear in the text, and which belongs to an earlier version of the same work by Ziyā Nakhshabī; see the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 15, Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, p. 80, and Pertsch, Zeitsehrift der D. Morg. Gesellschaft, vol. xxi. p. 511.

Hindustani versions of the Kokā Sāstra are mentioned by Garcin de Tassy, Hist. de la Litt. Hind., 2nd edition, vol. i. p. 187. See also Aufrecht, Bodleian Catalogue, p. 404.

Add. 6622.

Foll. 294; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long, in a page; written in fair Nestalik in four gold-ruled columns, with five 'Unvāns; dated Rajab, A.H. 1039 (A.D. 1630).

The Khamsah of Hasan B. Sayyid Fath Ullah.

This Khamsah consists of five long rhapsodies in glorification of Muḥammad, of the first four Khalifs, and of the author's spiritual guide, Shaikh ul-Islām Shaikh Muḥammad B. Faẓl Ullah ul-Bakrī, who had come from Medina to India (fol. 234 a), and who is spoken of in the fifth poem as dead (fol. 232 b).

The author boasts of his descent from Amīr Khusrau: his mother was a daughter of Hasan B. Piyārah, whose genealogy is traced up to the celebrated poet (fol. 235 a).

The poems, which follow the metres of Nizāmi's Khamsah, and are designated as the first, second, third, fourth, and fifth Tuhfah z = 3, begin respectively on foll. 1 b, 57 b, 119 b, 160 b, and 228 b, as follows:

The date of each, and the number of its verses, are recorded in its epilogue, and repeated in the subscription. The first was written in two months, and completed in Safar, A.H. 1038; it contains 5314 distichs. The second was completed in Jumāda, A.H. 1038, and contains 8000 distichs. The third was completed in Zulka'dah, A.H. 1038, and consists of 4225 distichs. The fourth was finished in Muharram, A.H. 1039. The fifth was finished in Rabi' I., A.H. 1039; it consists of 8500 distichs.

The author mentions in his conclusion another Khamsah previously written by him in praise of Muhammad, his wives, his grandchildren, Hasan and Husain, and their descendants A Maşnavî entitled Jes Ser شريغه, and attributed in the Oude Catalogue, p. 419, to Muhammad Hasan, of Dehli, A.H. 1013, is probably a part of that work.

Copyist : عبد القادر بروجي

Add. 7801.

Foll. 76; 111 in. by 72; 17 lines, 51 in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvān and ten miniatures in the Persian style; dated A.H. 1109 (A.D. 1697). [Cl. J. RICH.]

جرون نامه

Jarún-Nāmah, a Maşnavī on the taking of Jarun (Hormuz) from the Portuguese by Imām Kulī Khān.

مدرى Author : Kadri, قدرى

ا; اول بنام بزرك خدا Beg.

Imām Kulī Khān, son and successor of Allah Virdi Khān, Beglerbegi of the Province of Fars, captured Hormuz, after a siege of two months, in the 36th year of the reign of Shah 'Abbas I., A.H. 1032 ; see 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 382, and Malcolm, vol. i. p. 546.

The poem was written in Imām Kuli's lifetime and dedicated to him. But a subsequent addition, foll. 59-65, contains a record of the cruel execution of that general and his children by Shāh Safī, which took place, as stated, fol. 63 a, in A.H. 1043. See Malcolm, vol. i. p. 571.

Foll. 65, 71, 72 contain some versified chronograms of births, etc., by the same Kadri. This poet is not to be confounded with his namesake Kadrī Shīrāzī, who died in India, A.H. 989. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 370.

Appended is a fragment of a poem on Shirin and Khusrau, foll. 66-70.

Add. 19,662.

Foll. 445; 9 in. by 61; 17 lines, 33 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with ruled margins; dated Jumāda I., the fifth year of the reign (of Shah Husain) = A.H. 1111 (A.D. 1699).

ديوان اسير

The Divan of Asir.

Mīrzā Jalāl Asīr, son of Mīrzā Mūmin, one of the Sayvids of Shahristan, and a native of Isfahan, stood high in the favour of Shah 'Abbas I., who gave him one of his daughters in marriage. He died young from excess of drink, leaving a Divan, which consists, according to Tahir Naşîrabadî, fol. 80, of 8000 lines. The date A.H. 1049 given for his death by Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 149, and by Abu Tālib, Khulāsat ul-Afkār, fol. 15, is An earlier date, A.H. probably correct. 1040, given in Mirät ul-'Alam, fol. 476, and Hamishah Bahar, Oude Catalogue, p. 117, is not consistent with the evidence of his Dīvān, which contains chronograms on events of A.H. 1044 and 1045. See also Ķiṣaṣ ul-Khāķāni, fol. 163, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 52, Riyāẓ ush-Shu'arā, fol. 49, and Oude Catalogue, p. 342.

Contents: Kaşīdahs in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Ķiţ'ahs, including chronograms, fol. 57 a. Maşnavīs, fol. 60 a. Tarjī's, fol. 73 a. Ghazals alphabetically arranged, fol. 79 a, beginning:

Rubā'is in the same order, fol. 438 a. Sec Ouseley's Collection, No. 15.

Or. 278.

Foll. 148; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 11 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently late in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان اوجي

The Dīvān of Aujī.

Aujī Națanzī, a native of Națanz, near Isfahan, lived in Herat. He and two other poets, Malik Mashriķī, and Faṣīḥī of Herat (who died A.H. 1046; Oude Catalogue, p. 151), were the favourite companions of Hasan Beg Shāmlū, the Beglerbegī of Khorasan. This Amīr, who succeeded to the post of his father Husain Khān A.H. 1027, and died about the close of the reign of Shāh Ṣafī (A.H. 1038—1052), was a passionate lover of poetry, and has left a Dīvān of three thousand lines. See 'Alam Ārāi, fol. 368, and Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 28 b.

Aujī died, according to Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 149, A.H. 1050. His Dīvān is stated to contain about ten thousand lines. See Ṭāhir, fol. 188, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 47, and Atashkadah, fol. 94.

Contents : Kaşīdahs, fol. 2 b. Tarkībs, fol. 33 b. Ķit ahs, fol. 47 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 57 b, beginning :

مکن شرمنده یا رب در قیامت میپرستان را Rubā'īs, fol. 136 b.

The laudatory poems are mostly in praise of the Imām 'Alī Rizā and of the author's patron, Hasan Khān. A Kasīdah is addressed to Shāh Ṣafī at the time of his accession, and a Tarkīb to the Vazīr Mīr Abul-Ma'ālī.

Or. 299.

Foll. 109; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik on goldsprinkled paper, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, in the 17th century.

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Ghiyaş.

Ghiyāşā i Halvā'ī, or "the confectioner," was a native of Shīrāz, and a contemporary of Mulhimī and of Nizām, of Dast i Ghaib (who died A.H. 1039). In middle life he settled in Isfahan, where he was much appreciated by men of taste. Having lost his sight, he died, in consequence of a fall from the roof of his house, in the reign of Shāh Ṣafī (A.H. 1038—1052). See Țāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 179, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 321, Atashkadah, fol. 133, and Oude Catalogue, p. 412.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, fol. 3 b. Sāķī Nāmah, a Maşnavī addressed to the Shāh, fol. 31 a. Ghazals without alphabetical arrangement, fol. 37 a, beginning : ای کرم جوش از تو درون پیالها شوتمت فتیله سوخته در مغز لالها

Rubā'is and Fardiyyāt, fol. 104 a.

The laudatory poems are addressed to the Imāms, and to a princely personage, only designated by the title of Khān. Many Ķaşīdahs treat of moral and religious subjects in the style of Khāķūnī. One of them, imitated from a well known Ķaṣīdah of that poet, and entitled معراج العرفان, was composed in A.H. 1035, as shown by the chronogram .

Add. 7800.

Foll. 180; 9½ in. by 4¾; 15 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Mashriki.

Mīrzā Malik Mashriķī, who has been mentioned, p. 682 b, as one of the favourite poets of Hasan Khūn, governor of Herat, was born in Işfahan of a family which came from Mashhad, and was one of the secretaries of the Dār ul-Inshā, or chancelry, of Shāh 'Abbās I. He appears to have been staying in Işfahan during the reign of Shāh Şafī (A.H. 1038—1052) to whom several of his Kaşīdahs are addressed. His Dīvān includes a chronogram on some royal building erected A.H. 1050.

Notices on Mashrikī are to be found in the Tazkirah of Ţāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 185, the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 429, and the Atashkadah, fol. 49.

Contents : Kasidahs, fol. 1 b. Ghazals and detached verses, in one alphabetical series, fol. 53 a, beginning :

A Maşnavî on Khusrau and Shîrîn, written, as stated in the prologue, by desire of Shāh Ṣafī, and left unfinished, fol. 166 a, beginning:

خدايا دل ز من بستان بزاري

Another Mașnavi, fol. 175 a. Rubā'is, fol. 177 b.

Or. 305.

Foll. 338; 10 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{5}{4}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

Poetical works of Mir Muhammad Kāzim Ilusainī, poetically surnamed Karīm.

The author, no record of whom has been found, was, as appears from some passages of his works, a native of Irak, in the service of 'Abd ullah Kuţubshāh, who reigned in Haidarābād from A.H. 1035 to 1083, and his father's poetical surname was Fikr. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 456.

The contents are as follows:

I. Foll. 56 A collection of Rubā'is, mostly of religious nature, in alphabetical order, with a prose preface.

The collection comprises, as stated at the end, four thousand and eighty Rubā'is.

II. Foll. 300 b. كي ذامه "The Treasure," a Ķaşīdah addressed to Sulţān 'Abd ullah Ķuţubshāh, with a prose preface, beginning:

In a letter to the Sultan, which is prefixed, the author alludes to his poem as a buried treasure which he had discovered in the estate bestowed upon him by the sovereign. The Kaşidah, which begins thus, fol. 308 b, consists of upwards of a thousand lines. The text is frequently interrupted by long extracts from Nīzāmī, Sa'dī, Jāmī, and the author's own poems. The poet offers to the king very bold advice for the reformation of abuses and the better government of the kingdom. He adds bitter complaints of the neglect and niggardly treatment he had met with during seven years service, and of the exactions which reduced his scanty allowance, and threatens to leave Haidarābād to return to his native Irak, and to the holy shrines of Najaf.

Foll. 3 and 4 contain a notice on ten religious Masnavis of the author, with remarks on the efficacy of their recitation.

Or. 337.

Foll. 143; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in long; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz; dated 'Alamgīrpūr, vulgo Bhīlsah, Zulḥijjah, the 28th year of Aurangzīb, A.H. 1095 (A.D. 1684). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

زيبا نگار

A story of two Sindian lovers. Author: Riẓāʿī, مَادَّ, الهى هم دل و هم بى دلى ده .

هم آن حاصل همان بيحاصلي ده

The author, who appears to have been a native of Sind, states in the introduction, fol. 30 b, that the original name of the lover was Panun ξ_i , and that of his beloved, Sīsī ξ_i , but that, from fear of offending Persian ears by outlandish names, he had substituted for them Nigār and Zībā.

The poem is founded, as stated at the end, upon a prose narrative, due to Sayyid 'Alī of Thathah, a holy personage, who was a contemporary of the heroes of the tale. The date of composition, A.H. 1053, is expressed by the words $\forall d and \forall d and \forall d and \forall d and d and in the following lines, fol. 140 b:$

Appended is a eulogy on the work by the transcriber Jaikarn, in which the author is named Maulānā Hājī Muḥammad Riẓāʿī.

See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 544, and Stewart's Catalogue, p. 73.

Or. 323.

Foll. 482; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century; much damaged by worms.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The poetical works of Kudsi, كليات قدسى.

Hājī Muhammad Jān, who took the surname of Kudsi from the holy shrine of Mashhad, his native place, had performed in his youth a pilgrimage to Mecca. He went to India in A.H. 1041, and was patronized by 'Abd Ullah Khān. Firūz Jang, who introduced him to the notice of Shahjahan. He soon became one of that sovereign's favourite poets, but did not obtain the appointment of Malik ush-Shu'ara, to which he was, according to the 'Amal Salih, fol. 696, entitled above all others, because he had been forestalled by Tālib Kalīm. He spent the last years of his life in Kashmir, where he died A.H. 1056, according to Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 151, the Sarv i Azad, and Haft Asmān, p. 143, or A.H. 1055, as stated by Shir Khān, fol. 64, and in the Khulāşat ul-Afkār, fol. 225. The first of the above dates is confirmed by a Tarkib composed by a contemporary poet on Kudsi's death, Or. 351, fol. 7, in which it is expressed by the ehronogram:

دور ازان بلبل قدسی چمنم زندان شد Other notices on Kudsī will be found in the Tazkirah of Țāhir, fol. 169, the Țabaķāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 324, Pādishāh Nāmah of Amīn, fol. 430, Pādishāh Nāmah of 'Abd ul-Hamīd, vol. i., part 2, p. 351, Vāķi'āt i Kashmīr, fol. 119, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 370, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 113, 128, and 536.

The contents are as follows:

I. Fol. 2 b. A description of the gardens of Kashmīr, a Maşnavī dedicated to Shāhjahān, imperfect at the beginning.

II. Fol. 19 b. Tarkīb-bands, mostly in praise of Imām Rizā, beginning :

سنك زير سر ز سركردانيم سنك اسياست

The first of these was written, according to the heading, when the poet was setting out for Irak; another at the time of his departure for India.

III. Fol. 47 b. Kaşīdahs, only partially arranged in alphabetical order. They are mostly in praise of the Imāms. One is addressed to Minūchihr, governor of Mashhad, another to Hasan Khān, governor of Herat.

IV. Fol. 136 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, beginning:

زود به کردم من بیصبر داغ خویش را

V. Fol. 215 b. Preface to the Divān of Kudsī, written in Agra, A.H. 1048, by Jalāl ud-Din Muhammad Țabāțabā'i (see p. 258 a).

VI. Fol. 222 b. Rubā'is.

VII. Fol. 274 b. Marşiyahs on the death of the poet's son, and other persons, in the form of Tarkib-bands.

VIII. Fol. 294 a. ظفرنامه شاهجهانی, a poetical history of Shāhjahān in Maşnavī rhyme.

بنام خدائی که داد از شهان . جهان بادشاهی بشاهی جهان The poem was left unfinished. The present copy contains a confused series of detached fragments, treating of Shāhjahān's accession, his early life, and some events of the beginning of his reign. The latest of these is the erection by Shāhjahān, on his return from the Deccan, of several edifices, and especially of the famous Dehli mosque, the building of which is dated by a chronogram A.H. 1047. Some of the fragments are written twice and even thrice over with some variations.

IX. Fol. 477 a. Two fragments, probably belonging to the Maşnavî mentioned under Art. I. The first is part of a description of Kashmir; the second is in praise of Shāhjahān, and begins:

بنام پادشاه پادشاهان سرافرازی ده صاحب کلاهان

Or. 351.

Foll. 68; 8½ in. by 5; 17 lines, 25 in. long; written in eursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

Some poems by Kudsi, as follows:

Fol. 2*b*. A Kit'ah of religious character, ending with an invocation to 'Alī.

Fol. 4 b. Kaşīdahs addressed to Shāhjahān, mostly on Naurūz festivals.

Foll. 7 and 9 contain the Tarkib-band, composed by some poet not named, on the death of Kudsi, which has been noticed p. 684 b.

Fol. 21 a. Maşnavîs, beginning :

وداع دولت و مال و وطن کرد ز راه چنکل آهنك دکن کرد

This section contains poems on various palaces erected by Shāhjahān, with chronograms ranging from A.H. 1040 to 1048 a long description of Agrah, fol. 44 a, and other pieces relating to events of that period. The longest, however, foll. 48 b—51 b and 21 a—26 b, relating to the flight and death of Rājah Jajhār Singh (A.H. 1044), is not by Kudsī, but by Kalīm, and is found in the Dīvān of the latter, Add. 24,002, foll. 86 a—94 b.

Fol. 61 a. Kit ahs, most of which contain chronograms on contemporary events.

Add. 24,002.

Foll. 166; 9 in. by 6; about 20 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns, and gold-ruled margins; probably in the 18th century.

ديوان كليم

The Divān of Kalim.

. .

Abu Tālib, poetically surnamed Kalīm, was born in Hamadan and grew up in Kāshān. After completing his studies in Shīrāz, he went to India, where, according to the 'Amal i Salih, fol. 697, he stayed some time with Mir Jumlah, poetically styled Rūlı ul-Amīn (p. 675 b). Having been attached to the court of Shāhjahān shortly after that sovereign's accession, he became his favourite poet, and received from him the post of Malik ush-Shu'arā. Amīn states, in his Pādishāh Nāmah, fol. 431, that Tālib and Kudsī were then (A.H. 1047) simultaneously engaged upon the composition of two poetical records of Shāhjahān's reign, both of which he terms Pādishāh Nāmah. Tālib was sent to Kashmīr, to devote himself to the completion of his task, and he died there, as stated by his contemporary Vāriş, in the third volume of the Pādishāh Nāmah, fol. 530, on the 15th of Zulḥijjah, in the 26th year of the reign (A.H. 1062). The same year is given as the date of his death by Shīr Khān, fol. 67, while Mir'āt i 'Alam, and other later works, give A.H. 1061. See Tazkirah i Ṭāhir, fol. 165, Atashkadah, fol. 110, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 385, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 113, 128, 151, and 453.

The contents of the Divan are as follows:

Fol. 2 b. Kaşīdahs, mostly addressed to Shāhjahān, with a Tarkīb-band of the kind called Bahāriyyah, or vernal poem, at the end.

Fol. 41 a. Muķaṭṭaʿāt, including chronograms, the dates of which range from A.H. 1024, Dārā Shikūh's birth, to A.H. 1054.

Fol. 52 b. Maşnavīs, mostly descriptive of buildings erected by Shāhjahān, and recording their dates. The longest, foll. 86 a—94 b, contains an account of the flight and pursuit of Jajhār Singh. The last is a Ṣāķī Nāmah composed for Zafar Khān, governor of Kashmīr.

Fol. 97 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, beginning:

The margins contain additional Ghazals. Foll. 160 a. Rubā'is.

Add. 7798.

Foll. 183; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A collection of Kalīm's Ghazals, slightly imperfect at beginning and end. It is far richer than the corresponding section of the preceding MS., and contains a few Rubā'is at the end.

]

Add. 22,701.

Foll. 162; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1098 (A.D. 1687). [Sir JOHN CAMPBELL]

Another collection of Kalim's minor poems, containing Ghazals, fol. 1 b, Rubā'īs, fol. 153 b, and two Mașnavis, fol. 159 b.

Or. 306.

Foll. 193; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Jumāda I., A.D. 1814.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] Ghazals of Kalim.

Or. 357.

Foll. 210; $7\frac{2}{7}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; about 20 lines written diagonally, in Nestalik, partly in three and partly in four columns, probably in the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

یادشاد نامه

Five fragments of a poetical record of the life of Shāhjahān, by Kalim, as follows:

1. Early life of Shāhjahān, concluding with the death of Jahāngīr, fol. 1.

2. Part of the prologue, and account of the emperor's forefathers from Timur to Humāyūn, fol. 48 a.

3. Early part of Shāhjahān's reign, from his accession to Zafar Khān's expedition to Tibet (A.H. 1046-7), fol. 72 a.

4. Another part of the introduction, beginning with the Mi'rāj, and ending with the birth of Shāhjahān, fol. 198.

5. Description of Kashmir, fol. 205.

The same work is mentioned in the Oude Catalogue, p. 454, under the title of شاهنشاه نامه کلیم. See also the Münich Catalogue, p. 96, and King's College Library, No. 253.

Add. 25,330.

Foll. 196; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, on gold-sprinkled paper, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 1042 (A.D. 1632).

The Divan of Ilahi.

Mir Ilāhi is the author of a Tazkirah, in which he calls himself 'Imād ud-Din Mahmūd Ilähi Husaini, the contents of which have been fully stated by Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 66-87. He belonged, according to Tahir Nasirabadi, fol. 192, to the family of the Sayyids of Asadābād, Hamadān, and lived some years in Isfahan under Shāh 'Abbās I., in frequent intercourse with the poet Hakim Shifa'i. He then went to India, and appears to have stayed some time in Kābul with the governor Zafar Khān, to whom several of his pieces, one of them dated A.H. 1033, are addressed. After some years spent at Court, under Jahängir and Shahjahan, he acccompanied Zafar Khan to Kashmir, A.H. 1041-2, and resided there till his death, the date of which, A.H. 1063, is expressed in some verses engraved on his tomb, and quoted in the Vāki'āt i Kashmīr. fol. 122 a, by the chronogram بود مسخن افرين.

See 'Amal i Ṣāliḥ, fol. 701, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 84, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 40, Atashkadah, fol. 115, and Onde Catalogue, pp. 150 and 435.

Zafar Khān, son of Khwājah Abul-Hasan, was a munificent patron of letters, and no mean poet himself. He was appointed governor of Kābul, as lieutenant of his father, in the 19th year of Jahāngīr (A.H. 1033). Having been sent in the same capacity to Kashmīr in the 5th year of Shāhjahān (A.H. 1041—2), he held that post down to the 26th year of the reign, when he was transferred to Tattah. He died A.H. 1073. See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 374.

Contents: Kaşīdahs in praise of the Imāms, of Shāhjahān, Mahābat Khān, and other Amīrs, fol. 1 b. Tarkīb and Tarjībands, fol. 57 b. Ķitahs, including a Marşiyah on Husain, fol. 69 b. Maşnavis, fol. 95 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 102 b., beginning:

Rubā'īs, fol. 157 b.

Foll. 78-87, 173-195 have been supplied by a later hand.

Add. 7815.

Foll. 136; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1049 (A.D. 1639).

[Cl. J. Rich.]

The Dīvān of Masīh.

Hakīm Rukn ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, of Kāshān, poetically surnamed Masīh, who has been already mentioned, p. 603 a, left the court of Shāh 'Abbās I., in consequence of a supposed slight, at the time of the Shāh's setting out for Māzandarān (A.H. 1006). He arrived at the court of Akbar with his famous contemporary, Hakīm Ṣadrā of Shīrāz, afterwards Masīh uz-Zamān, A.H. 1011, and stayed there in a position of great honour and emolument during the whole reign of Jahāngīr and the first years of Shāhjahān. Amīn states in his Pādishāh-Nāmah, written A.H. 1047, fol. 429, that the Hakīm had sometime previously obtained, on account of his advanced age, leave to retire and to go to Mecca, and that he was then staying at home engaged upon the composition of his eighth Dīvān. His contemporary, Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, who had seen no less than ten Dīvāns of his composition, states, fol. 161, that he died in Kāshān A.H. 1066, and adds, in order to fix the date, the chronogram

رفت بسوی فلك بازمسيم دوم

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order. Kiț'ahs, with some short Mașnavīs, fol. 101 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 120 b.

In the subscription the work is designated as the sixth Dīvān of the Ḥakīm.

Or. 475.

Foll. 65; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, probably in the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Three Maşnavīs of the same poet, viz.: I. Fol. 1 b. جبرعه, Anecdotes of lovers.

The title occurs in the following line, fol. 7 a:

اکر توفیق حق سازد تمامش زمجموعی شود مجموعه نامش

The poem is dedicated to Shāh 'Abbās, and appears, from some passages, to have been written shortly before the author's flight. In one of these, fol. 47, he begs to be allowed to leave the Court, then at Raï, and to go home to Kāshān, in order to get healed of the scab. Further on he refers to the end of his brother poet, Akdasī Mashhadī, whose deathbed he had attended in A.H. 1003, and to the death of his own father in A.H. 1001. In another passage, fol. 55 b, he states that he had, at the time of writing, completed his 35th year.

II. Fol. 56 b. A Maşnavî, entitled Sāķī Nāmah, in praise of Shāh 'Abbās.

دلا چند از این دست برد خمار . بتاراج میخانم دستی بر آر

III. Fol. 63 b. A Maşnavî, without title, relating to the adventure of a caravan at the tomb of Hātim.

تیره شبی چون شب هجران یار . بخت سیه پوش مرا پرده دار

On the first page is a Persian note stating that this "very rare work of Hakīm Masīh Ruknā'i Kāshī, the master of Ṣā'ib," had been presented by Ziyā ud-Dīn Ahmad Khān to Col. Wm. Hamilton, at Dehli, on the 17th of January, A.D. 1867.

Or. 1250.

Foll. 195; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably about the beginning of the 19th century.

The story of Râm and Sitā, in Maşnavī rhyme, by Masih.

The prologue contains a long panegyric on Jahāngīr, and the author's apology for having taken his theme from a heathenish tale.

Or. 293.

Foll. 70; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in the 18th century; from the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Dīvān of Ṣaidī, consisting of Ghazals alphabetically arranged.

Mīr Ṣaidī, whose original name was Sayyid 'Alī, belonged to a family of Sayyids in Teheran, and made his studies in Isfahan. Having gone to India, he found access, A.H. 1064, to the court of Shāhjahān, and secured a protectrice in that emperor's accomplished daughter Jahān-ārā Begam, who was then in her 42nd year (see p. 357 b). He was scarcely more than thirty years of age when he died, in Dehli, A.H. 1069, as stated in Ķiṣaṣ ul-Khākānī, fol. 167 a. See also Ṭāhir, fol. 267, Vāriş, fol. 530, Sarkhush, fol. 78, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 485, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 259, Ātashkadah, fol. 94, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 112, 125, and 383.

Add. 7813.

Foll. 75; 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{3}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same Divan.

Add. 26,235.

Foll. 60; 10 in. by 5½; 18 lines, 3½ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

"The troubles of India," a poetical account of the struggle of Shāhjahān's sons for the empire, from the rising of Murādbakhsh in Aḥmadābād to the death of Dārā Shikūh, A.H. 1067—1069.

Author : Bihishtī, بېشتى L L کلام سخن سنج را ابتدا Beg. بنام خدایست نام خدا

The author, who calls himself the panegyrist of Sultan Murādbakhsh, writes in the interest of his master, and in a spirit of bitter animosity against the successful competitor Aurangzīb. He asserts that he had witnessed all the battles he describes :

The poem was evidently written shortly after the events related, and before the death of Murādbakhsh, which took place in A.H. 1071. The title is contained in the last line:

> شد این نامه ازهمت دوستان مسمی بآشوب هندوستان

Or. 302.

Foll. 170; 10 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 16 lines, $3\frac{3}{3}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, about the close of the 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان فوجى

The Divan of Fauji.

Mullā Muķīm, or Muķīmā, poetically surnamed Faujī, belonged to a family of poets. His father, Mullā Ķaidī, of Nīshāpūr, a poet of some note, and a nephew of the better known Nazīrī, went to India in the reign of Shāhjahān, and died at sea on his return voyage to Persia, A.H. 1064, as stated in the Fauz i 'Azīm, fol. 92, by Faujī's brother, Mullā 'Azīmā. See the Mir'āt uş-Ṣafā, fol. 223, and Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 236.

Faujī, who went also to India, attached himself to Mīrzā Jān Beg, who commanded in Orissa, under Shāh Shujā', took Hijlī in the 24th year of Shāhjahān (A.H. 1060-61), and fought by the side of Shāh Shujā' in that prince's last war (see Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 116). Faujī went from India to Mecca, and, after performing the pilgrimage, returned to his native place, Nīshāpūr, where he died, according to the Mir'āt us-Ṣafā, A.H. 1075, and, as stated in the Ķiṣaṣ ul-Khāķānī, fol. 177, at the age of forty-two years. See Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 106, where Faujī is wrongly described as a native of Shīrāz, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 346, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 113 and 398.

Contents: Kasidahs in praise of the Imāms, of Shāh Shujā', and of the poet's special patron, Mīrzā Jān Beg, fol. 2 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 47 α , beginning:

Ķiţ'ahs, including some chronograms, which relate to contemporary events in India, and range from A.H. 1052 to 1059, fol. 151 α . Rubā'īs, fol. 153 b. A Sāķī-Nāmah, written in Orissa, for Mirzā Jān Beg, and two shorter Maşnavīs, fol. 157 b.

Or. 360.

Foll. 223; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with three 'Unvāns, and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Dīvān of Shāh.

Mullā Shāh, originally called Muḥammad Shāh, and surnamed Lisān Ullah, was one of the greatest Sufis of India, and the spiritual preceptor of Dārā Shikūh, who has given a full account of his life, with many of his letters and poems, in the Safinat ul-Auliya, fol. 86-118 (see p. 358 a). He was the son of Mulla 'Idi, the Kāzī of Ark, in the canton of Rüstäk, Badakhshän, and, having early adopted a religious life, wandered, A.H. 1023, to India, in quest of a spiritual guide. He found one in Miyan Mir, the celebrated saint of Lahore (see ib.), by whom he was initiated in Sufism and affiliated to the Kādirī order. After his master's death, A.H. 1045, he settled in Kashmir, where a vast monastery was built for him and his disciples, at the expense of Dara Shikuh and his sister Jahānārā Begam, both devoted adherents, and where he was frequently visited by Shāhjahān. He died in Lahore, A.H. 1072, and left, besides a large number of religious Ghazals and Masnavis, an unfinished Sufi commentary upon the Coran. See Mir'at ul-Khayal, foll. 87-91, 'Amal i Sälih, fol. 686, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 447, Vāki'āt i Kashmīr, fol. 126, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, foll. 247-250, and the Dabistan, vol. iii. p. 281.

Contents: Rubā'is of a religious nature, with paraphrases in Maşnavī rhyme, and comments in prose, fol. 2 b. Another series of Rubā'is in alphabetical order, with paraphrases in Maşnavī, fol. 17 b. The same series, without paraphrase, fol. 130 b. Ghazals and Ķaşīdahs, forming one alphabetical series, fol. 187 b, beginning:

> حمد آنرا که مرا دیدن رویش دادا در توفیق بر این بسته ٔ خود بکشادا

The second series of Rubā'is includes chronograms relating to incidents of the author's life, with dates ranging from A.H. 1023 to 1060. From these we learn that he wrote a Shash Ganj A.H. 1055, and a commentary on the Sūrat Yūsuf A.H. 1057, and that he was joined by his relatives, after forty years' separation, in Kashmīr A.H. 1060.

Or. 277.

Foll. 177; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 16 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Insan.

انسان بیا بمدرسه عشق بی ریا . اولزبان بحمد وثنای خدا کشا

The author states in his first poem that he was a Sayyid, originally called Abu l-'Alā, that he was born in A.H. 1037, and that he had given up the world and adopted a life of religious poverty in A.H. 1060:

In the concluding lines he says that he had given up the writing of poetry in A.H. 1077. From his frequent references to Kūsī, or Benares, he appears to have been dwelling in that city. His principal theme is the mystic love of the Sufis, and he often refers to his complete enfranchisement from all positive creed or religious law.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, or longer poems, in alphabetical order, fol. 2 b.

Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 42 b.

Tarjī'-bands, fol. 132 a. A. Sāķī-Nāmah, fol. 145 a. Rubā'is, fol. 150 b.

Or. 300.

Foll. 70; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, in the first half of the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Dīvān of Ghanī, with a preface by Māhir.

Beg. of Pref. اي ذات تو سر دفتر افراد وجود Beginning of the Dīvān :

Muḥammad Ṭāhir, surnamed Ghanī, was a Kashmirian by birth, and a disciple of another Kashmirian poet, Muḥsin Fānī, whom he is said to have surpassed in poetical genius. (Fānī died A.H. 1082). He adopted the takhalluş غنی as a chronogram for A.H. 1060, the date of his first poetical compositions, and died at an early age, A.H. 1079, three years before his master. His Dīvān was collected by his friend, Muhammed 'Alī Māhir, who composed the following chronogram on his death :

See 'Amal i Ṣālih, fol. 705, Sarkhush, fol. 95, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 101, Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 328, Vāķi'āt i Kashmīr, fol. 322, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 322, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 113, 151, and 410.

The editor describes Ghanī, whom he calls his master, as a man who by holiness of life had almost become a disembodied spirit. The date of his death, A.H. 1079, is expressed by the chronogram حي غنيا

Contents : Ghazals, and longer poems, in one alphabetical series, fol. 6 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 57 b. Maṣnavīs, fol. 66 a.

Fol. 68 contains a short piece in prose, in which Ghanī clears himself of a false accusation of plagiarism.

On the first page is a 'Arz-Dīdah, dated A.H. 1169.

The Dīvān of Ghanī has been printed in Lucknow, 1845.

Add. 25,819.

Foll. 202; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Cawnpore, Muḥarram, A.H. 1223 (A.D. 1808).

[WM. CURETON.]

يوسف و زليخا

Yūsuf and Zulaīkhā, a Maşnavī. Author: Nāzim, ناظر

خدایا چون سپہرم سینہ بکشا . Beg.

دلم طوطی کن و آیینه بنما

Mullā Nāzim, son of Shāh Rizā Sabzavārī, was born in Herat, where he spent his whole life as court poet of the Beglerbegis of that province. The author of the Ķiṣaṣ ul-Khāķānī states, fol. 178, that Nāzim was then (A.H. 1076) upwards of sixty years of age, and that his Dīvān contained twenty-five thousand lines. He died, according to Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 151, A.H. 1081. See Ţāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 246, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 470, Atashkadah, fol. 85, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 129, 515.

After eulogies upon Herat, upon the reigning sovereign, Shāh 'Abbās II., and his protector, 'Abbās Kulī Khān Shāmlū, governor of Herat, the poet relates in the prologue how he had been urged by his patron to try his skill in Maṣnavī, and how the theme of the present poem had been suggested to him by the same exalted personage. He concludes with an encomium on his predecessor Jāmī. In the epilogue Nāzim states that he had devoted fourteen years to the composition of the poem, having commenced it A.H. 1058, and completed it A.H. 1072. The Yūsuf u Zulaikhā of Nāzim has been printed in the press of the Oude Akhbār, Lucknow, A.H. 1286.

Or. 292.

Foll. 392; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $2\frac{5}{2}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the latter part of the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Sa'ib.

زهي بغمزة ^م جانسوز برق مذهبها . بحندة ^م شكرين نو بهار مشربها

Mirza Muhammad 'Ali, poetically surnamed Sā'ib, is by common consent the creator of a new style of poetry, and the greatest of modern Persian poets. He was born in Isfahan, where his father, a native of Tabriz, was Kadkhudā, or provost, of the merchants of 'Abbāsābād. As he was, according to the Kişaş ul-Khākānī, fol. 163, upwards of sixty years of age in A.H. 1076, his birth must have taken place about A.H. 1010. Having started in early life for India, he made a long stay at Kābul, where the Governor, Zafar Khān, treated bim with great kindness. He was afterwards favourably received by Shahjahan, who conferred upon him a command of one thousand and the title of Musta'idd Khan. He left the Court, however, to accompany his munificent patron, Zafar Khan, to his government of Kashmir (A.H. 1041-2), and, after staying there some time, returned to Persia, where Shah 'Abbas II. bestowed upon him the title of Malik ush-Shu'arā. The latter part of his life was spent in Isfahan, where he died at an advanced age, A.H. 1088, leaving upwards of a hundred and twenty thousand lines of poetry, chiefly Ghazals. The date of his death is fixed by the following chronogram of a contemporary poet, Vā'iz, Add. 7812, fol. 245:

Other dates, however, are given, viz., A.H. 1080 by Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 151, 1081 by Sarkhush, fol. 74, 1087 by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 290, and 1089 in Mir'āt ul-'Ālam, fol. 485.

Notices on Ṣā'ib will be found in the Tazkirah of Ṭāhir, fol. 163, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 65, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 260, Atashkadah, fol. 16, Ouseley's Notices, p. 227, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 385.

The Dīvān of Ṣā'ib has been lithographed in the press of Navalkishor, Lucknow, A.H. 1292, with the title حائب مائب. A small collection of select verses has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1264, under the title of انقناب دیران صائب, and reprinted with the title مائب مائب. Lucknow, 1871.

Contents: Ghazals, about 1800 in number, alphabetically arranged, fol. 3 b. Mațāli', or opening lines, in the same order, fol. 313 b. Mutafarriķāt, or detached lines, similarly arranged, fol. 323 b.

Copies of Sā'ib's Dīvān are mentioned in the catalogues of Vienna, vol. i. p. 597, Upsala, p. 110, St. Petersburg, p. 398, and Münich, p. 38, and in the Ouseley Collection, No. 19.

Add. 7806.

Foll. 281; 8 in. by 4½; 17 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled columns; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1166 (A.D. 1753). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Sa'ib, containing :-

Fol. 1 b. Kasidahs in praise of the Imams, and of the Shāhs Ṣafī, 'Abbās II., and Sulaimān, beginning:

> ای سواد عنبریس فرامت سویدای زمین مغز خاك از نكهت مشكین لباست نافه چین

Fol. 20 b. واجب الحفظ, "What should be learnt by heart," a selection from the Ghazals, Maṭāli', or opening couplets, and Mutafarriķāt, or detached lines, of Ṣā'ib, in two alphabetical series.

ز ارباب تجرد نیست بر دل بار عالم را ...

Fol. 141 a. A Maşnavî in praise of Shāh 'Abbās II., beginning:

Fol. 146. مرآت الجمال, "The Mirror of Beauty," another selection from the Dīvān of Ṣā'ib, containing Ghazals, or detached lines, descriptive of feminine charms, arranged in alphabetical order, under each of the following headings: Mirror, Eyebrow, Frown, Eye and Eye-lashes, etc.

In the preface of the Lucknow edition both the above titles, Mir'āt ul-Jamāl and Vājib ul-Ḥifẓ, are said to belong to a selection made in Ṣā'ib's lifetime, and under his roof, by 'Amilā of Balkh. The Mir'āt ul-Jamāl is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 70.

Add. 7804.

Foll. 308; 10 in. by 6; 16 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a large Nestalik, about the close of the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Dīvān of Ṣā'ib, imperfect at the beginning, and containing only Ghazals in alphabetical order.

Add. 7803.

Foll. 489; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in fair Shikastah-āmīz, probably early in the 18th century.

[Cl. J. Rich.]

The Dīvān of Ṣā'ib, containing Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Ķiţ'ahs and Rubā'īs, in one alphabetical series, fol. 433 b.

خدایا در پذیر این نعره مستانه ما را .Beg. مکن نومید از حسن قبول افسانه ما را

Or. 1223.

Foll. 208; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, probably early in the 18th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

Ghazals of Sā'ib, in alphabetical order.

At the end are some lines by a contemporary poet, Naḥīfī, who states that he had collected and arranged these poems in the author's lifetime, and had completed that task in A.H. 1066, a date expressed by this chronogram, نوشتم نامع ديوان صايب.

Add. 24,001.

Foll. 171; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1166 (A.D. 1753).

Ghazals of Sā'ib, in alphabetical order.

Be

Add. 25,828.

Foll. 289; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins; dated Thānesar, Ṣafar, A.H. 1119 (A.D. 1707). [WM. CURETON.]

Ghazals of Sā'ib, in alphabetical order, beginning like the preceding MS.

Add. 7805.

Foll. 76; $14\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{3}{4}$; 27 lines, $2\frac{5}{5}$ in. long, with a large number of additional lines in the margin; written in Nestalik, probably early in the 18th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

A portion of the Divān of Sā'ib, comprising Ghazals from letter 1 to letter 5, the last incomplete.

یا رب از عرفان مرا پیمانه سر شار ده .Beg.

This collection is richer, as far as it goes, than any of the preceding. It contains marginal additions, and some Turkish glosses.

Add. 7807.

Foll. 176; 7¹/₂ in. by 4²/₄; 15 lines, 2³/₂ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The "Mirror of Beauty," a selection from the Dîvân of Şā'ib; see p. 694 a.

Egerton 705.

Foll. 310; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century.

كليات بينش

The poetical works of Binish.

Binish, a Kashmirian poet, whose proper name was Ismā'il (see fol. 177 a), went, according to the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 86, and the Atashkadah, fol. 165, from his native country to Hindustān, and stayed in Dehli. Some of his poems are addressed to Safshikan Khān (Muḥammad Ṭāhir), an Amīr who was raised to the Khānship in A.H. 1068, accompanied Aurangzīb to Kashmīr in the sixth year of the reign (A.H. 1073-4), and died A.H. 1085. See Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 371. Sarkhush, who wrote his Tazkirah about A.H. 1100, speaks of Bīnish as dead. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 110.

Contents: Fol. 1 b. بسينش الابصار, a Maşnavī, in the measure of Nīzāmī's Makhzan ul-Asrār, treating of the virtues of the true Faķīr, dedicated to Aurangzīb.

Fol. 46 b. كغ روان, "The Treasure of the Soul," a Masnavi.

بنامی که عالم کلستان اوست Beg. بکنچ روان فلك شان اوست

It contains eulogies on Aurangzib, on Mirzā Muḥammad Ķāsim Kirmānī, Dīvān of Kashmīr, and on Mīr Jamshīd Kāshānī, the poet's patron, descriptions of the four seasons, and a Sāķī-Nāmah.

Fol. 86 b. كلدسته, "The Bouquet," a Maşnavī treating of creation, and including descriptions of Kashmīr and Lahore.

کلدسته بوستان تــوحيد .Beg

حمدست بچشم صاحب دید

Fol. 124 b. شور خيال, "Stirring of Faney," a Maşnavî, dedieated to Aurangzîb, containing a story of two lovers, natives of Benares, with anecdotes and a eulogy on Isfahan.

Fol. 180 b. رشته کوهر, "The String of Jewels," a Maşnavî dedicated to Aurangzîb, containing the story of Amīr and Gauhar, two lovers of Sārī in Māzandarān.

نتوان یافت در خزینده شاه Beg. رشته ماله

This poem is stated at the end, fol. 217 a, to be the last of the author's Khamsah.

Fol. 220 a. Ghazals in alphabetical order.

Fol. 292 b. Kaşīdahs in praise of the Imāms, of Mīrzā Muḥammad Ķāsim, the Dīvan before mentioned, and of Ṣafshikan Khān.

زلف تو زد بطالع ناساز ما کره Beg. در کار آشنا فکند آشنا کره

On the last page is written: "George Curttenden, Moorshedabad, Oet. 4th, 1785."

Or. 310.

Foll. 137; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 16 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jainagar, Sha'bān, the 20th year of 'Alamgīr (A.H. 1088, A.D. 1677). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان محيى

The Dīvān of Muḥyī, containing Ghazals of a religious character, alphabetically arranged, and a few Tarjī's at the end.

The Dīvān is ascribed in the subscription to Pīrān Pīr Mīr Muḥyi ud-Dīn Ghauş ul-A'zam, i.e. the famous saint Muḥyi ud-Dīn 'Abd-ul-Ķādir Jīlānī, who died A.H. 561, and to whom the best authorities do not attribute any poetical composition. It is distinct from a Dīvān containing the same takhalluş, and ascribed to the same holy personage, which is noticed in the Oude Catalogue, p. 501, and has been lately lithographed in the press of Navalkishor, without date. A Dīvān attributed to Ghauş ul-A'zam is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 58.

Add. 23,613.

Foll. 79; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century.

The Divan of Sharif.

It contains Ghazals of a religious and mystic character, in alphabetical order, with a few Rubā'is similarly arranged, fol. 76 b.

A Dīvān with the same beginning is described in the Oude Catalogue, p. 567, as containing chronograms ranging from A.H. 1089—1091. Its author is stated to have been a Vāķi'ah-Navīs, or news-writer, attached to Zabardast Khān.

Or. 309.

Foll. 102; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 21 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, about the close of the 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Majzub.

کو دل خصم تو منکر باش خیبر شاهد است

Mīr Muḥammad, poetically called Majzūb, is described by Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, writing about A.H. 1083, fol. 145, as a young scholar devoted to Sufism, whose teaching was daily attended by the students of Tabrīz. He iš also mentioned in the Ķiṣas ul-Khāķānī, written A.H. 1073, fol. 164, as a living poet, born in Tabrīz, who had written poems in praise of the Imāms, a Maṣnavī of 3000 lines entitled Shāh Rāh i Najāt, and Ghazals in which he followed Hāfiz.

The present Dīvān contains some chronograms relating to pilgrimages to Meeea and Najaf performed by the author and his father in A.H. 1060 and 1065, and to the death of the latter in A.H. 1066. At the end is found the following Rubä'ī, which gives A.H. 1093 as the date of Majzūb's death :

There must therefore be some error in the following chronogram quoted by Tāhir, and in Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 439, according to which the Shāhrāh i Najāt would have been completed A.H. 1006, a date which can hardly be reconciled with those above stated :

> بہر تاریخش انکہ درہا سفت شاہراہ مجات دلہا کفت

Contents: Kaşīdahs in praise of the Imāms, fol. 2 b. Ghazals alphabetically arranged, fol. 10 a. Mukhammas, Tarjī'-bands, Maşnavīs, and Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 91 b. Rubā'is, fol. 98 b.

See the Oude Catalogue, pp. 131, 479.

Add. 19,624.

Foll. 115; 9³/₄ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 18 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Benares, Muharram, A.H. 1182 (A.D. 1768).

[SAMUEL LEE.]

دستبر همت

The love-story of Kāmrūp and Kāmlatā, a Maşnavī.

Author : Muhammad Murad, J.

Beginning with a panegyric on his patron, Himmat Khān, to whose literary assemblies he was admitted, the poet relates how in one of these Himmat Khān had read the touching tale of Kāmrūp, written by himself in prose, and had desired him to put it into verse. Himmat Khān, we are further told, died shortly after, and the author found some solace in composing the present poem as a monument to his memory. The date of its completion, A.H. 1096, is expressed by this chronogram at the end:

Mir 'Isā, son of Islām Khān 'Badakhshī, received the title of Himmat Khān in the first year of Aurangzīb, with whom he was a great favourite, and was raised in the 24th year to the post of Mīr Bakhshī. He died in Ajmīr, A.H. 1092. Himmat Khān was passionately fond of Persian and Hindī poetry, and used the poetical surname of Mīran. See Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 577 a, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 106.

The Dastūr i Himmat is ascribed to Himmat Khān himself by Garcin de Tassy, Littérature Hind., 2nd edition, vol. i. p. 213.

Add. 7812.

Foll. 255; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Mīrzā Rafī' ud-Dīn Muhammad B. Fath Ullah Kazvīnī, poetically surnamed Vā'iz, lived in Isfahan during the reigns of Abbās II. and Shāh Sulaimān, and is chiefly known as the author of Abvāb ul-Jinān, a vast collection of the traditional sayings of the Imams, the first volume of which has been printed in Teheran, A.H. 1374. Sarkhush, writing in A.H. 1093, speaks of him (fol. 137, and Oude Catalogue, p. 114) as still living; and it is stated in the Riyaz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 500, that he died in the early part of the reign of Sultan Husain, i.e. shortly after A.H. 1105. The date A.H. 1082 assigned to his death by Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 151, is not consistent with the fact that his Dīvān contains chronograms as late as A.H. 1088. See also Atashkadah, fol. 107, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 587.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Detached lines, fol. 166 b. Kaşīdahs, fol. 172 b, beginning:

> باد نوروزی دکر بیغام عشرت آور است یا جهان پیر را باه جوانی در سر است

This last section contains pieces in praise of Muhammad and each of the twelve Imāms, of 'Abbās II. and Shāh Sulaimān, and a Ta'ziyah on the martyrdom of Husain. In one of these, fol. 215 a, the author begs the Shāh to be excused from accepting an office conferred upon him at Court, and says that, after spending nearly fifty years in anxious cares, he wished to pass the rest of his life in retirement.

Rubā'is on moral and religious subjects, fol. 217 b. Chronograms relating to private or public events, with dates ranging from A.H. 1030 to 1088, fol. 229 b. Three short Masnavis, fol. 248 b.

See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1517.

Add. 7810.

long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Rabi' I., A.H. 1132 (A.D. 1720). [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of Shaukat.

Khwājah Shaukat, of Bukhārā, went to Herat in A.H. 1088, and entered the service of the Beglerbegi of the province, Safi Kuli Khān Shāmlū. He afterwards repaired to Mashhad, where he was well received by Mīrzā Sa'd ul-Dīn Muhammad, Vazīr of Khorāsān, and ultimately settled in Isfahan, where he spent his latter years as a religious mendicant, and died, according to Hazin, fol. 28, A.H. 1107. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 250, Sarkhush, fol. 73, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 568.

Contents: Ghazals and Mukatta'at, arranged in alphabetical order, according to the rhyme and to the initial letter of each piece, fol. 1 b. Rubā'īs, the last of which gives a chronogram for A.H. 1093, the date of the collection of the Divan, fol. 153 b. Kaşīdahs, mostly in praise of Imām Rizā, and of the above-named Sa'd ud-Din, fol. 156 b.

See Krafft's Catalogue, p. 69, and Ouseley's Collection, No. 85.

مراد خان : Copyist

Or. 290.

Foll. 209; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 19th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON:] The same Divan.

Or. 347.

Foll. 79; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. Foll. 176; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Zulhijjah, the fourth year of Ahmad Shāh (A.D. 1751), A.H. 1164. From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The story of two Indian lovers, Manohar and Madhumālat, a Maşnavī.

Author: Rāzī, رازي

Beg.

Mir 'Askari, who came of a family of Sayyids settled in Khwaf, Khorasan, but was born in India, took the poetical surname of Rāzī from his spiritual instructor Shaikh Burhan ud-Din Raz i Hahi. Ho was an early follower and favourite companion of Prince Aurangzib, who on his accession bestowed upon him the title of 'Akil Khān. In the 24th year of the reign (A.H. 1091-2)he was appointed governor of the province of Dehli, and discharged that office till his death. He died at the age of eighty-two, in the month of Rabi' II., A.H. 1108. 'Akil Khān left a Divān, and several Masnavis composed in his youth, which are mentioned in the Hamishah Bahār, Oude Catalogue, p. 123. He is also the author of the Zafarnāmah i 'Alamgīrī, a copy of which, wrongly ascribed to Amir Khan, has been described above, p. 265 a.

See Tārīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 235, Sarkhush, fol. 48, Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, fol. 135, Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 387, Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 69, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 192, Ouseley's Notices, p. 167, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 543.

The present poem was composed, as stated in the conclusion, A.H. 1065. In the prologue the author sings the praises of his spiritual guide, Shāh Burhān ud-Dīn, and states that he had substituted in his version Mihr and Māh for the original names of the lovers. The Mihr u Māh has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1846.

Or. 315.

Foll. 143; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, early in the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان ناصر على

The Divan of Nasir 'Ali.

الهی ذرهٔ دردم بجان ریز . شرر در پنبهزار ^{است}خوان ریز

This poet, who uses sometimes Nāsir 'Alī, but mostly 'Ali, as his takhallus, was born, and spent a great part of his life, in Sirhind. Two Amirs of the reign of Aurangzib, Saif Khān Badakhshi, governor of Sirhind, and the Amir ul-Umara Zulfakar Khan, are mentioned as his patrons. He led the life of a devotee, and was as eminent in Sufism as in poetry. After travelling through many parts of Hindustan and the Decean, he took his abode in Dehli, where he stayed until his death. Sarkhush, who lived in his intimacy, and collected his Divan, states, fol. 88, that he died on the 6th of Ramazān, A.H. 1108, a date adopted by all later writers, but adds a chronogram of his own composition Is a بعالم معنى رفت, which gives A.H. 1109. See Mir'at ul-Khayāl, fol. 160, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 313, Tarikh i Muhammadi, fol. 235, Khulāsat ul-Afkār, fol. 197, Naghmah i 'Andalib, fol. 126, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 126, 151, and 329.

Contents: A religious poem called Maşnavî, divided into two Daftars, fol. 2 b. It contains in the prologue a eulogy on Aurangzīb, and, further on, fol. 48, a reference to the author's age, which was then fiftytwo. It breaks off on fol. 53, and is followed by a few short Maşnavîs. See the catalogues of Leyden, vol. ii. p. 107, and of Gotha, p. 80. Kasīdahs in praise of Muḥammad, of the м м 2

Indian saint Abu 'Alī Ķalandar, and of the author's patron, Saif Khān (Badakhshī), fol. 59 α .

Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 67 a.

Rubā'īs with a few Ķiţ'ahs, also in alphabetical order, fol. 118 b.

The Dīvān of Nāṣir 'Alī has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1844, and A.H. 1281.

Or. 352.

Foll. 61; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Benares, the 44th year of Aurangzīb, i.e. A.H. 1111—1112 (A.D. 1700).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Maşnavīs by Nāşir 'Alī.

The first contains a description of Kashmīr. The longest, fol. 17—61, is a portion of the Maşnavî above described, corresponding to Or. 315, foll. 3 b—32 a.

The margins of foll. 2—10 contain the first part of a Maşnavī on the love-story of Prince Manohar كنور مذوهر and Princess Madhūmālat مدهومالت.

The tale is stated to have been taken from a Hindu poem written by Shaikh Jamman.

Add. 25,827.

Foll. 112; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in plain Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.]

The Dīvān of Nāṣir 'Alī, containing Ghazals, Ķiţ'ahs and Fardiyyāt in one alphabetical series.

Or. 301.

Foll. 64; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 19th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Ghanimat.

ای سایه^و سحاب عطائی تو کشت ها .Beg.

کردی ز کوچه تو هوای بهشت ها

Muhammad Akram, poctically styled Ghanīmat, a native of Ganjāh, or, according to others, of Kusūr, Panjāb, was a Sufi of the Kādirī order, and a pupil of the poet Muhammad Zamān Rāsikh, of Lahore, who died A.H. 1107. He was some time attached to Mukarram Khān (Mīr Muhammad Ishāk), who filled the post of Nāzim of Lahore from the 39th to the 41st year of Aurangzib (A.H. 1106-8; see Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 94). Ghanīmat left, besides his Dīvān, a Masnavi eomposed A.H. 1096, and entitled Nairang i 'Ishk, or Shāhid u 'Azīz, which is very popular in India, and has been lithographed in Lueknow about A.H. 1263. See Sarkhush, fol. 97, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 322, Tazkirah i Husaini, fol. 95, Mir'āt Aftābnumā, fol. 146, Naghmah i 'Andalīb, fol. 133, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 127, 410.

The Divān consists only of Ghazals, in alphabetical order.

Add. 7779.

Foll. 192; 7½ in. by 4½; 17 lines, 2§ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, about the close of the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of 'Azim.

'Azīm or 'Azīmā, of Nīshāpūr, who has been mentioned, p. 690 a, as the brother of Faujī, lived in Khorasan, and died, according to the Mir'āt us-Ṣafā, fol. 223, A.H. 1110, or, as stated in Naghmah i 'Andalīb, fol. 124, A.H. 1111. The statement of the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, that 'Azīm was appointed Divān of Lahore by Shāhjahān rests on a confusion. Sarkhush, the poet's contemporary, asserts distinctly that he never came to India (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 113), nor is there in his Dīvān any trace of a residence in that country.

The laudatory poems are addressed to Shāh Sulaimān (A.H. 1077—1105), and to two Amīrs who resided at Nīshāpūr, viz. Bairām 'Alī Khān, who died in A.H. 1071 (see fol. 140 a), and his son Muḥammad Ibrāhīm. The dates of various chronograms contained in the Dīvān range from A.H. 1055 (fol. 140 a) to A.H. 1082 (fol. 190 b). Compare the Oude Catalogue, p. 358.

The contents are as follows :

Fol. 1 b. نوز عظيم, a Maşnavî treating of the creation of the world and the nature of man.

> دارم سر حمد حق تعالى . ام للانسان ما تمنّى

'Azīm wrote it in Ķandahār (see fol. 82 b), some time after the death of his father Ķaidī, in A.H. 1064 (see fol. 91 a). The prologue contains eulogies on the Shāh ('Abbās II.), on Mīrzā Sa'd ud-Dīn Muḥammad, Vazīr of Khorasan, and on Ṣafī Ķulī Khān (son of Zulfaķār Khān, governor of Ķandahār), Beglerbeg of that province (see foll. 54 a, 55 b).

Fol. 99 b. Kaşīdahs and Tarkīb-bands, mostly in praise of the Imāms.

Fol. 142 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order.

ای عشق تن ما زتو شد جان تو از ما Beg.

Fol. 190 b. Marşiyah on Mîr Abul-Hasan, and a few Rubā'is.

Or. 334.

Foll. 242; 10 in. by 6; 21 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Naskhi in two columns, about the close of the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

جهان نامه

A versified sketch of general and Indian history, in the metre of the Shahnāmah.

Author: Fanā'i, فذگی Beg. بنام جهاندار جان بخش و هوش نوازندد^و جسم با چشم و کوش

This is the first volume جلد ارل only of an extensive work, which, according to the prologue, was intended to comprise the history of the prophets and of the ancient kings of Kashmīr, Kābul, Sind, Bengal, the Deecan, Ujjain, and Hindustan. The author, who is not otherwise known, begins with eulogies on his spiritual guide, Shaikh Luķmān B. Shaikh 'Uşmān Khalīl Sulaimāni, and on the reigning sovereign, Aurangzīb. As he refers incidentally to the conquest of Bijāpūr and Golconda by the latter, he must have written after A.H. 1099. The present volume contains an account of the creation of the world, of the prophets from Adam to Lukmān, and of the early kings of Persia.

Or. 1217.

Foll. 434; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated A.H. 1532 (for 1132, A.D. 1720).

[ALEX. JABA]

مسلك المتقين

A versified treatise comprising an introduction on the creed, and four books treating of the laws of purification, prayer, legal alms and fasting, according to the Hanafi school.

The author, whose name does not appear, was originally, according to his own statement, an illiterate Uzbak in the king's service, but had been enlightened, and affiliated to the Nakshabandī order, by Shaikh Naurūz. He completed the first book in A.H. 1111, and the second A.H. 1112. In his conclusion he adds that he was postponing the composition of a fifth book on pilgrimage until he had himself performed that sacred rite, but that he was yet. prevented by the prevailing state of impiety and lawlessness from carrying that design into execution.

In a lithographed edition of this work, printed in Lucknow A.H. 1290, the author is called in the subscription Ṣūfī Ilahyār Khān, صوفى الديار خان.

Or. 311.

Foll. 192; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, in the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Makhfi.

Makhfī is the poetical surname of Zīb un-Nisā Begam, the eldest child of Aurangzīb, a princess celebrated for her high literary attainments and her liberal patronage of mcn of learning. She was born A.H. 1048, and died in Dehli on the 10th of Muḥarram, A.H. 1114. See Tārīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 237, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 444, Maāşir 'Alamgīrī, pp. 462, 539, Gul i Ra'nā, fol. 79, Naghmah 'Andalīb, fol. 89, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 480.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Tarjī'- and Tarkīb-bands, fol. 149 b. Ķasīdahs, fol. 174 b. Mukhammasāt, fol. 189 a.

The Dīvān of Makhfī has been lithographed in Cawnpore, A.H. 1268, and in Lucknow, A.H. 1284.

Add. 25,826.

Foll. 136; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, in the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.]

The same Divân.

The first page bears the name of Turner Macan.

Add. 16,790.

Foll. 102; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India; dated Jumādā I., A.H. 1219 (A.D. 1804). [WM. YULE.]

The Divan of Ni'mat Khan 'Ali.

تمامی یابد از مصراع بسم الله دیوانها .Beg. ببین کنرمد این ابروست زیب روی عنوانها Ni'mat Khān 'Alī, who has been already mentioned, pp. 268 b and 272 a, was the son of Hakīm Fath ud-Dīn Shīrāzī. He is stated in the Tārīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 245, to have died in Dehli, on the first of Rabī' I., A.H. 1122. Notices on his life are to be found in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 316, the Tazkirah i Husainī, fol. 92, and Naghmah i 'Andalīb, fol. 128.

This copy contains only Ghazals, in alphabetical order.

A Dīvān, including also Ķiţ'ahs, chronograms, and riddles, is described under the title of خوان نمست in the Oude Catalogue, p. 328. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 74, the Ouseley Collection, No. 257, and Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1374.

Or. 317.

Foll. 203; 7½ in. by 3¾; 9 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Shāhjahānābād, Sha'bān, A.H. 1247 (A.D. 1832). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Ni'mat Khan 'Ali, containing Ghazals in alphabetical order, but differing from the preceding copy in contents and arrangement.

Beg. بیا ای خامه بسم الله سرکن راه مطاب را برار از دامن حرف افتاب از نقطه کوکب را دوازش حسن : Copyist

Add. 16,789.

Foll. 121; 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

Two compositions of the same Ni'mat Khān 'Alī, viz.:

I. Fol. 1 b. A Mașnavī, containing moral tales and apologues.

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 329.

The author's Kulliyāt are described in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 74.

II. Fol. 108 b. حسن و عشق, "Beauty and Love," a tale in mixed prose and verse.

It has been published in Lueknow, 1842, and 1873, and printed, with a commentary by Imāmbakhsh, in Dehli, 1844. See Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1621-2, and Zeuker, vol. ii. p. 51.

Egerton 698.

Foll. 72; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines; written in Indian Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1218 (A.D. 1804). [ADAM CLARKE.] The Maşnavî mentioned in the preceding MS., art. I.

احمد ولد محمد صادق : Copyist

Or. 344.

Foll. 24; 10 in. by 6; 11 lines, 3¹/₂ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 1200 (A.D. 1706). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

فيل نامه

Fil-Nāmah, also called مثنوى فيل.

The author, who appears to have been a dependent of Jahāndār Shāh, describes a chase in the forest of Nānpārah, Oude, in which that prince, then heir presumptive, had a victorious encounter with a formidable wild elephant. He designates himself in the following verse, fol. 20 b,

رهی هم بانداز^{ور} قدر خویش لاکی منظوم خود برد پـیش

by the name of Rahī, which may have been his takhallus, and, complaining of his evil star which had banished him from Court, begs to be taken into the royal service.

Jahāndār Shāh ascended the throne in Muḥarram A.H. 1124.

Egerton 686.

Foll. 376; $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; 22 lines, $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in four columns in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

حمله حيدري

A poetical account of the life of Muhammad and the first Khalifs, principally founded on the Ma'ārij un-Nubuvvat (see p. 149 a).

Author : Bāzil, باذل

بنام خداوند بسیار بخش . ·خرد بخش و دین بخش و دینار بخش

Mīrzā Muhammad Rafi', poetically surnamed Bāzil, and entitled Rafi' Khān, was the son of Mīrzā Mahmūd, who with his brother Muhammad Tāhir, afterwards Vazīr Khān, went from his native city, Mashhad, to India in the reign of Shāhjahān. Rafī', who was born in Dehli, was attached as Divan to the staff of Prince Mu'izz ud-Din, whose mother was a sister of his own, and subsequently obtained the post of governor of Gualiyar. Having lost the latter office after the death of Aurangzib, he retired to Dehli, where he died A.H. 1123 or 1124. The first date is given by Sirāj, Onde Catalogue, p. 150, and fixed by the chronogram جا مہر علی بجنتش داد, quoted in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā; the second is found in Mir'at uş-Şafa, fol. 222, and Tarikh i Muhammadī, fol. 246. See also Mir'āt Jahānnumā, fol. 324, Mir'āt Aftābnumā, fol.

137, Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 575, Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 30, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 368.

Bazil did not live to complete his work, which is here finished by another hand. The original poem comes to an abrupt termination, fol. 315, shortly after the account of 'Uşmān's assassination. The continuator, who calls himself Najaf, states in the next-following lines that at that point the poet's hand was stayed by death. He adds that he had long entertained the thought of completing the work, when he became, A.H. 1135, the fortunate possessor of a poem written, long before Bāzil's time, by a Sayyid Abu Tālib in Isfahan, which contained the history of 'Alī from the point at which Bāzil had left off, and found that it tallied so well with the Hamlah, that, by adding it to the unfinished poem, he was able to produce a complete and uniform whole.

This continuation, which begins with 'Ali's accession to the Khilāfat, was apparently brought down to his death; but it breaks off in the present copy, a little before the end.

The present poem is quite distinct from a poetical history of 'Alī, which bears the same title, and has been twice lithographed in Persia, A.H. 1264 and 1270. This last was written in A.H. 1220 by Mullā Bamūn 'Alī written in A.H. 1220 by Mullā Bamūn 'Alī (Mūmin 'Alī ?) Kirmānī, poetically called Rājī, by order of the Shāhzādah Ibrāhīm Khān. See the Journal of the As. Soc. of Bengal, vol. 21, p. 535.

The Hamlah i Haidarī of Bāzil has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1267.

The first page of the MS. bears the name and the Persian seal of General Carnac.

Egerton 1037.

Foll. 312; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 18 lines, 5 in. long; written in two columns, in a cursive Indian character, apparently in the 18th century. The first half of the same work, corresponding to foll. 1—187 of the preceding copy.

Egerton 1038.

Foll. 134; 15 in. by $8\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, 6 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, in four columns; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1207 (A.D. 1792).

The second half of the same poem, corresponding to foll. 187-315 of Egerton 686.

محمد بي لطف على رضوى : Copyist

Add. 25,806.

Foll. 360; 11¹/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 23 lines, 4³/₄ in. long; written in cursive Indian Shikastahāmīz, in four columns; dated Lucknow, Zulhijjah, A.H. 1206 (A.D. 1791).

[WM. CURETON.]

The same work, with a continuation by Azād, foll. 316—360, which contains the history of 'Alī from his accession to his death, and begins thus:

Azād, who has been mentioned p. 373 a, states in the prologue that, after completing his Dilkushā-Nāmah (see p. 719 b), he had been desired by Muḥammad Fakhr ud-Dīn Khān, a cousin of Bāzil, to complete the unfinished work of the latter.

Add. 7809.

Foll. 99; 9 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and goldruled margins, in the 18th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

"The Model of the Chaste," a tale in Maşnavî rhyme.

VOL. II.

بنام او ز هر ذاتی نشانست

The author, who praises in the prologue the reigning sovereign, Shāh Sulțān-Ḥusain, states that his purpose had been to write a strictly moral tale, fit to be read by old and young. The story, which is borrowed from the Kāfī of Kullīnī, records the trials, and eventual triumph, of a virtuous woman, exposed to the obsessions of a wicked Ķāzī, her husband's brother.

The title and date of composition, A.H. 1126, are stated in the following lines, fol. 98 b:

دبیر خامه اش چون کرد منظوم
بدستور العفافش ساخت موسوم
قلم چون کوهر تاریخ را سفت
زبہر سال آن منظوم من کفت

انضل التمشيات The fly-leaf bears the title

Add. 16,795.

Foll. 168; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, in the 18th century.

[WM. YULE.]

The Divan of 'Ali.

Mīrzā Abul-Ma'ālī, poetically surnamed 'Alī, came of a noble family of Nīshāpūr, which traced its origin to Farīd ud-Dīn 'Aṭṭār. He was a Sufi and an eminent scholar, and lived at the court of Farrukhsiyar, from whom he received the title of Vizārat Khān. See Muṣḥafī, fol. 67, Hamīshah Bahār, Oude Catalogue, p. 126, and Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind., vol. i. p. 191. Contents: Kasīdahs, and Ķiţ'ahs, including chronograms, fol. 1 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 23 α . Rubā'is and Fardiyyāt, fol. 164 b.

The Dīvān contains some pieces addressed to Farrukhsiyar, and chronograms ranging from A.H. 1124 to 1127, and relating for the most part to births and marriages in the imperial family.

Or. 313.

Foll. 149; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, for Uzbak Khān, son of Ķipchāķ Khān; dated Multān, Zulķa'dāh, A.H. 1142, (A.D. 1730). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان منصف

The Divan of Munsif.

کشت ز بـار کنه قامتم ازبس دوتا .Beg شد خط پیشانیم ^{هم}چو نکین نقش پا

The poet gives his proper name, Fāzil Khān, in the following chronogram, fol. 146, relating to the building of his house in Lahore, A.H. 1117:

He appears to have been attached to the service of 'Abd uṣ-Ṣamad Khān Dilīr Jang, to whom several of his Kasīdahs are addressed, and to whose victory over the Sikhs, in A.H. 1127, he refers fol. 9 a. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 507.

'Abd uṣ-Ṣamad Khān distinguished himself under Farrukhsiyar by the capture of the Sikh chief Bandū, and was rewarded for his success with the Ṣūbahdārī of Lahore and Multān. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 72.

Contents: Kasīdahs, fol. 2 b. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 14 b. Rubā'is similarly arranged, fol. 132 b.

Add. 25,822.

Foll. 166; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $2\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated from the camp of Nizām ul-Mulk Aṣafjāh, near the fort of Ausā (Owsa), Deccan Shaʿbān, A.H. 1145 (A.D. 1733).

[WM. CURETON.]

Selection from the Divan of Bidil.

بهر جبین که بود سطری از کتاب حیا .Beg ز نـقـطـه عـرقـم دارد انتخاب حیا

Mīrzā 'Abd ul-Ķādir, poetically surnamed Bidil, is by common consent the greatest Indian poet of the last century; but Persian critics find fault with him for his unidiomatic phraseology. He was of Turkish extraction, belonging to the Chaghatāi tribe of Arlāt, but was born in 'Azīmābād (Patna). He is described as a man of herculean strength and proud spirit. Having been attached in his youth to the service of Prince Muhammad A'zam Shāh, he chose to leave it rather than to prostitute his talent by lauding his patron, as he was required to do, and led henceforth a free and independent life, dwelling mostly in Dehli, where his house was the common resort of all lovers of poetry, and where he died in A.H. 1133 at the age of seventy-ninc. His collected works are said to amount to more than a hundred thousand lines.

Notices on Bīdil are found in Mir'āt ul-Khayāl, foll. 257—268, Sarkhush, fol. 19, Muṣhafī, fol. 25, Ḥusainī, fol. 29, Tārīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 253, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 83, Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 35, Naghmah i 'Andalīb, fol. 50. Compare Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 378, and Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind., vol. i. p. 314.

A volume entitled كليات بيدل, lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1287, comprises the Nikāt, Ruķa'āt, Dīvān, and Chahār 'Unşur. The present MS. contains Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 3 b, Rubä'is, similarly arranged, fol. 134 a, and Mukhammasät, fol. 146 b.

Add. 7093.

Foll. 332: $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rajab, the 4th year of the reign (of Farrukhsiyar=A.H. 1128, A.D. 1716).

عرفان

A poem treating of Sufi doctrines, by Mirzā Bīdil.

عشق از هشت خاك آدم ریخت . آنقدر خون كه رنك عالم ریخت

It is divided into numerous sections, each of which has a Masnavī distich for its rubric.

The author states at the end that the poem consists of eleven thousand lines, and gives the date of its completion, A.H. 1124, in the following chronogram:

الله بخش : Copvist

On the first page is a note stating that the MS. had been bought in A.H. 1159 by Mīrzā Muḥammad, son of Mu'tamad Khān; also the Persian seal of Archibald Swinton, with the date 1174.

Add. 7094.

Foll. 167; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated A.H. 1135, the fourth year of Muhammad Shāh (A.D. 1719).

رياض المعارف

The "Gardens of Insight," a Maşnavî containing precepts on spiritual life, illustrated by anecdotes of the patriarchs and some celebrated saints.

Author: Maulaví 'Ali Aşghar B. 'Abd uş-Şamad, مولوى على اصغر بن عبد الصمد

The above title and author's name are found in the subscription. From the following words, which are appended to the latter, ing words, which are appended to the latter, is a set of the latter, is a set of the latter, who calls himself words, which are appended to the latter, is a set of the latter, is a

Add. 5635.

Foll. 109; 8 in. by 4³; 15 lines, 2⁷/₅ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, in the 18th century. [NATH. B. HALHED.]

The Divan of Kasim Divanah.

Mullä Kāsim, a native of Mashhad, studied in Isfahan, and became a pupil of Mīrzā Ṣā'ib. He subsequently went to India, where he was apparently still living in A.H. 1136. See the Hamīshah Bahār, Oude Catalogue, p. 128, Sarkhush, fol. 107, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 372, Mir'āt Āftābnumā, fol. 152, Husainī, fol. 108, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 533.

His nickname Dīvānah, or madman, was probably due to the use he made of that word in the first line of one of his Ghazals:

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. A Maşnavî, fol. 105 b. Rubā'is, fol. 108 a.

Add. 25,805.

Foll. 172; 12 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive Indian hand in four columns, in the 18th century; much damaged by fire in 1865. [WM. CURETON.]

صولت صفدري

A poem on the life and warlike deeds of 'Ali.

Author: Hikmat, حکمت

بنام خدا خالـق مرتضى .Beg ستـاينده موجد ما سوى

The author, whose proper name was Muhibb 'Alī Khān, wrote this poem, as he states in the prologue, in order to complete the unfinished Hamlah i Haidarī (see p. 704 a). He was evidently a Shī'ah of the most rabid stamp, and never mentions Abu Bakr or 'Umar without calling them hog, dog, or similar names.

A passage of the conclusion, in which A.H. 1143 was given as the date of composition, is now lost.

Add. 7808.

Foll. 201; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A poem on the history of Fātimah, according to Shī'ah tradition, by the same Hikmat, with a continuation.

Beg.

Hikmat, who commenced this poem, as stated in the prologue, after completing the Saulat i Safdarī, left it unfinished.

The continuation, entitled فرح نامة، فاطمى, foll. 38 b-201 a, is by Hāzik حاذق, who in the prose preface prefixed to the first part calls himself محمد بن المدعو بكاظم الطبيب المخاطب من جناب السلطان بحاذق الملك خدا را چه نام است نام خدا كه مرآت دل يافته زو جلا Hāzik states that he was a native of Shūshtar, fol. 194, that he had previously written a history of prophets and saints, fol. 188 a, and that he was upwards of seventy years of age when he composed the present poem, fol. 194, which he completed in the space of four months, while performing a toilsome and a dangerous journey.

On the first page is written, by a later hand, the following title, which does not appear in the text:

Add. 25,831.

Foll. 48; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 6 lines in a page; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

A collection of detached distichs describing the charms of the female breast.

Author: Allah Virdī Khān Fayyāz, الله ورديخان فياض

The author states in a short preface that he wrote these verses in the space of a week, at the request of a Darvish called Shaukmast, who had accosted him while he was fishing on the river's bank. The date of composition, A.H. 1144, is expressed in a versified chronogram by the words نشرت

Add. 19,620.

Foll. 100; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century. [SAMUEL LEE.]

ديوان مخلص

The Divan of Mukhlis.

المبی پرتو از نور یقین ده شمع جانم را Beg. بشوی از حرف باطل یکقلم لوے بیانم را

Mīrzā Muḥammad, poetically styled Mukhliş, was called from his native place, Mashhad, to Isfahan in the reign of Shāh Sulțān Husain by I'timād ud-Daulah Mūmin Khān. Hazīn, who was acquainted with him, states, fol. 33, that he died in that city, about sixty years of age.

Several pieces of the present Divān are quoted in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 444. See also Mir'āt Āftābnumā, fol. 154, Naghmah 'Andalīb, fol. 167, and Oude Catalogue, pp. 128, 138.

Contents : Ghazals, in alphabetical order. Kit'ahs, similarly arranged, fol. S1 b.

Add. 22,704.

Foll. 96; 84 in. by 5; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1234 (A.D. 1819).

[SIR JOHN CAMPBELL.]

The second part, جنت ثانی, of a religious poem, entitled "Gardens of Union," treating of ascetic life.

باز کردم کوهر افشان خامه را Beg. تا نمایم درج کوهر نامه را

The author, whose name does not appear, was a wandering Darvish of the Ni'matullähi order. He refers incidentally, fol. 32 a, to a journey he took from Isfahan to Kirmän to visit the tomb of the holy founder of the order in Mähän (see p. 634 b), and to a disturbance in which his fellow traveller Mushtäk lost his life. The prologue contains a long panegyric on Ahmad Päshä, who wielded an almost independent power in Baghdäd from A.H. 1135 to 1159. See the Arabie Catalogue, p. 433.

Or. 281.

Foll. 149; 8³/₄ in. by 5; 12 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Skikastah-āmīz, about A.H. 1151 (A.D. 1738). From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Sabit.

ای که وابسته ٔ حرف تو بود نظم بیان . حجت ناطق دعوی کلام تو زبان

Mīr Muḥammad Afẓal, poetically styled Şābit, was the nephew of Himmat Khān (Mīr 'Isā), of Badakhshān, who was Mīr Bakhshī under Aurangzīb, and died A.H. 1092 (see p. 697 b). Şābit, who was a Sayyid of great learning and piety, died in Dehli, his native place, on the 13th of Rabī' I., A.H. 1151. See Tārīkh Muḥammadī, fol. 289, Mir'āt Āftābnumā, fol. 187, Riyāẓ ush-Shu'arā, fol. 95, Ātashkadah, fol. 173, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 578.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, mostly in praise of the Imāms, fol. 2 b. Maşnavīs, including Marşiyahs on the martyrs of Karbalā, fol. 57 b. A second series of Kasīdahs, addressed for the most part to contemporaries, fol. 88 a. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 96 b. Rubā'is, fol. 141 b. Ķit'ahs, fol. 143 a. Mukhammasāt, fol. 145 a.

The first of the above sections includes a long Kaşīdah entitled شهاب ثاقب, foll. 21-39, in which the poet retorts on his critics. The Dīvān was collected, after Şābit's death, by his pupil, Band i 'Alī who writes at the end : أنجه مسودات حضرت مير و مرشد بر تخيه مسودات حضرت مير و مرشد بر تخيه مير افضل الدين "محمد ثابت قدس الله سرة العزيز بدست آمدند غلام ازلى بند على فراهم آوردة استكتاب كنانيدة واين نسخه متبركه را تواضع فضيلت و كمالات دستكاة مخدوم مهربان مولوي محمد پناة سلمه الله نمود

Or. 274.

Foll. 279; 9 in. by 51; 15 lines, 31 in.

long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled columns; dated Rabī' I., the 19th year of Muḥammad Shāh, A.H. 1147 (A.D. 1734). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديون آفرين

The Divan of Afarin.

خداوندا نکین کن دور برزم قدس نامم را .Beg چو سطر آه عاشق سوز مضمون ده کلامم را

Shāh Faķīr Ullah Āfarīn, a Sufi and poet, was born in Lahore, and died there, A.H. 1154. Vālih, who met him in his native city, A.H. 1147, was much struck with his genius, and says that, had he only been born in Persia, he would have been the greatest poet of the age. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 61, Muṣhafī, fol. 11, Tārīkh Muḥammadī, fol. 294, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 150, 154, and 317.

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 3 b. Mukhammasāt, fol. 256 a. Rubā'īs, fol. 266 a. Ķasīdahs in praise of Muhammad, and a Tarjī-band on the martyrdom of Hasan and Husain, fol. 267 b.

Or. 348.

Foll. 103; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik for Col. Geo. Wm. Hamilton, then Commissioner of Multan; dated Kalāchūr, Rabī' I., A.H. 1277 (A.D. 1860).

هير و رانجهن

"Hīr and Rānjhan," the tale of two Panjābī lovers, a Maşnavī by the same poet.

بنام چمن سار ناز و نیاز . که خار نیازش بود سرو ناز

شرق محمد ساکن قصبه جلالپور هندال : Copyist

In the subscription the title is written , تصمّ هير و رابحها از تصنيف آفرين مسمى بناز و نياز but in the text the heroine's name is invariably written رانجهن. Azād found Afarīn engaged in composing this poem in A.H. 1143. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 317. A prose version of the same tale is found in Or. 1244. A Hindustani version, Ķissah Rānjhā Hīr, by Maķbūl, has been translated by Garcin de Tassy, Revue de l'Orient, 1857.

Add. 18,545.

Foll. 235; 9 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, in a page; written in fair Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Jumādā I., A.H. 1162 (A.D. 1749).

[H. STEINSCHUSS.]

A Maşnavî on love and anecdotes of lovers, with a prose preface.

Author: Muḥammad, known as Kāsim, poetically surnamed Zarāfat, محمد الشهير بقاسم المتخلص بطرانت

Beg. of the Preface:

بنام آنکه نامش الفت آموخت رخ عصیان زجام رحمت افروخت

The author, who lived at Lahore, says repeatedly that he had never made a study of prosody, nor written any verses before.

The poem, which is said to consist of 6268 lines, and in which are inserted extracts from various works, Persian and Arabic, is divided into two Daftars, the first of which was completed A.H. 1146, and the second, fol. 203 b, A.H. 1149. An appendix, in which the poet describes a happy meeting with his beloved, is dated A.H. 1156.

This copy contains numerous marginal additions.

Egerton 1036.

Foll. 207; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, in two columns, dated Zulķa'dah, the 7th year of 'Alamgīr II. (A.H. 1173, A.D. 1760).

The love-story of Kāmrūp and Kāmlatā, a Maşnavī.

Author: Anjab, الجب

ای زلال هوس تشنه لبان . آرزومند تو صاحب طلبان

Badī' ul-'Asr, commonly called Hājī Rabī', poetically styled Anjab, gave himself out for a native of Andalus (Spain). He came in his childhood to Isfahan, where he spent thirty years, and became a pupil of Murtazä Kuli Beg Zanknah, surnamed Valai Isfahani. After long travels he settled in Dehli, where he died, it is said, upwards of a hundred years old. He was a most prolific poet; Mushafi, who saw him some months before his death, mentions, among his works, an imitation of the Khamsah of Nizāmī, a Dīvān of sixty thousand verses, an extensive work on Imāmī tenets, a tale of the four Darvishes in prese, and a metrical translation of the eighteen Parvas of the Mahābhārat ; see Ikd Surayyā, Add. 16,727, fol. 4 a. Compare Hamishah Bahār, Oude Catalogue, p. 118.

Murtazā Ķulī Beg, surnamed Vālā, a native of Persia, was attached to the service of Sarbuland Khān, and went, after the death of that Amīr, to Bengal, where he died. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 500.

The prologue contains a eulogy on Muhammad Shāh, and upon a Khān, called Mahmūd, who had sent for the author, then living in seclusion, and requested him to put the above story into verse. The poem was completed, as stated at the end, in A.H. 1157.

Or. 304.

Foll. 249; 9³/₄ in. by 5¹/₄; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Shikastah, dated Rajab, A.H. 1159 (A.D. 1746). From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

Mīrzā Muḥammad Riẓā, afterwards Ķizilbāsh Khān, poetically surnamed Ummīd, was a native of Hamadān and a skilled musician. Mīrzā Ṭāhir Vaḥīd, and afterwards Mīr Najāt, were his instructors in poetry. Having gone to India in the reign of Bahādur Shāh, he attached himself to the service of Niẓām ul-Mulk Āṣafjāh. He died in Dehli on the 9th of Jumāda I., A.H. 1159. See Tārīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 305, Muṣḥafī, fol. 8, Naghmah 'Andalīb, fol. 43, the Oude Catalogue, pp. 153, 300, 581, and G. de Tassy, Litt. Hind., vol. iii., p. 250.

Contents: Ķasīdahs in praise of Muḥammad and 'Alī, of Muḥammad Shāh, Zulfaķār Khān, and others, fol. 2 b. Muķaṭṭa'ūt, the first of which is addressed to Farrukhsiyar, fol. 11 b. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 16 b. Mukhammasāt, fol. 239 a. Mufradūt, alphabetically arranged, fol. 241 a. Rubā'is, fol. 246 a.

oryist : مير محمد سميع المشهدى

Or. 345.

Foll. 91; 61 in. by 33; 12 lines, 23 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The love-tale of Prince Niyãz and Princess Nāz, a Sufi allegory in Maşnavî rhyme.

Author : Azād, si;ī

دو عالم شوق تحويل دلم كن

The prologue contains a eulogy on a holy Sayyid, Mir Abu 'l-Vafā, by whose desire the poem was written. The author's name occurs in the first line of the epilogue, fol. 91 a: بیا آزاد ترك این و آن كن سر آمد قصه ختم داستان كن as well as in some other passages; see foll. 22 b, 50 a, 85 a.

The title, which is found in the epilogue, fol. 91 b, is often repeated in the same form, "Niyāz u Nāz," apparently intended to distinguish it from the well-known poem "Nāz u Niyāz" of Zamīrī, a poet of the reign of Shāh Ṭahmāsp.

نیاز و ناز نامش ساز کردم

A poet called Āzād, whose proper name was Mīrzā Arjumand, is mentioned by Sirāj, and the author of Hamīshah Bahār, Oude Catalogue, pp. 154, 117. He was the son of 'Abd ul-Ghanī Beg Kabūl, of Kashmīr, who died A.H. 1139, ib. p. 151. But there is nothing to show whether the present poem should be ascribed to him, to an earlier Āzād, a native of Yazd, who died, according to Mir'āt Jahānnumā, fol. 296, A.H. 950, or to some other poet of the same name.

Or. 272.

Foll. 125; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, probably about the close of the 18th century.

GEO. WM. HAMILTON.

The Dīvān of Iţmīnān.

نام خسرو گشت تا بسم الله عنوان ما .Beg نور معنی جلوه کرد از مطلع دیوان ما

This Dīvān, which consists entirely of Ghazals, contains several imitations of earlier poets, especially of Amīr Khusrau. The latest of these appears to be Hilālī, who died A.H. 939 (p. 656 a). No record has been found of the author.

Or. 270.

Foll. 69; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Hasrat.

The proper name of the author, who designates himself alternately by the poetical surnames Hasrat and Ashraf, has not been ascertained. It appears from various chronograms contained in his Dīvān that he lived in India in the time of Muhammad Shāh, and was a dependent of 'Azamat Ullah Khān. He records victories gained by that Amīr over the Rohillas and the Jāts in A.H. 1134, and his death in A.H. 1146. Later chronograms, which extend to A.H. 1158, relate to the rout of the army of Barhah by Mu'in ud-Din Muhammad Khan, A.H. 1150, and to some incidents in the life of Farid ud-Din Khān, who was apparently the author's last patron.

Contents: A Kasīdah in praise of Muhammad, fol. 3 b. A Masnavī containing anecdotes of celebrated Sufis, imperfect, fol. 5 a. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 10 a, beginning:

ای مایل در تو زهر سو نیازها دیر و حرم ز شوق تو لبریز رازها Kit'ahs, fol. 59 a. Rubā'is, fol. 62 a.

Or. 247.

Foll. 367; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, dated Shāhjahānābād, A.H. 1166 (A.D. 1753).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A Sufi poem, in Maşnavî rhyme. Author: Shaikh Sa'd ud-Dîn Ahmad, surnamed Dīvānah, poetically styled Kuddūsī, شيخ سعد الدين احمد المعروف بديوانه المتخلص بقدوسي

It treats of mystic love and contemplation, in the form of comments on Arabic texts taken from the Kur'ān and the Ḥadīş, which are inserted as headings.

The author, who uses Kuddūsī, and sometimes Kudsī, as his takhalluş, appears from the appended letters mentioned below to have been consulted by the 'Ulamā of Balkh as a great authority on Sufi doctrines. He is designated there as the author of عين الايمان and other religious works. It is stated in the Arabic subscription, fol. 320 a, that he gave out the present work as one of the writings of Shaikh Kuddūsī ul-Munavvarī, مصنفات شيخ قدوسي المنوري

The following short pieces are subjoined :--

Letter of Kāzī Fuzail to the author, dated Balkh, A.H. 1166, with four questions on points of Sufi doctrine, and the answer, in two drafts, foll. 322 b, and 351 b. A letter in verse to Miyān Muḥammad 'Umar Pashāvarī, and other poetical pieces on Sufi subjects, by the author, fol. 328 b. A letter of the Kāzīs and Muftīs of Balkh to the author, relating to some unguarded utterances of great Sufis, with the answer, fol. 335 b. Some Ghazals by Kuddūsī, in alphabetical order, fol. 342 b.

طبیب عشق دوای جمال داد مرا . بعین تشنه لبانی زلال داد مرا

Maşnavîs by the same, fol. 359 a.

Or. 276.

Foll. 308; 11¹/₄ in. by 6; 17 lines, 3⁷/₅ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with goldruled margins; dated Dehli, A.H. 1157 (A.D. 1744). From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Iksir, in the author's handwriting.

The poet, whose proper name is written in the subscription Muhammad 'Azīm B. Muhammad Ja'far, and who was better known as Mirzā 'Azīmāi Iksīr, has been already mentioned p. 376 a. See also Mushafī, fol. 14, Anīs, fol. 9, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 435.

Contents: Ghazals, fol. 2 b, and Rubā'is, fol. 291 a, both alphabetically arranged.

Add. 18,583.

Foll. 197; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins, and five miniatures in Indian style; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1161 (A.D. 1748). [ADAM CLARKE.]

شاهد و مشهود

"Shāhid and Mashhūd," a love-story, by Iksīr, in the same handwriting.

The author says in the prologue that he had learnt the story, which is here put into verse, from his younger brother Abul-Hasan, a learned and travelled man, who told him that it was a popular tale in Egypt.

Or. 296.

Foll. 171; 10 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{5}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 19th century. From the royal library of Lucknow.

> [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] 0 0

ديوان عشرت

The Divan of 'Ishrat.

The author, whose proper name is not stated, appears to have been a dependent of Shujā^s ud-Daulah (the Nāzim of Oude, A.H. 1167—88). In a long Ķasīdah addressed to the Navvāb and appealing to his liberality, he describes himself as a Hindu:

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 2 b. Kasīdah, fol. 165 b, beginning:

كر بكويم عارض آنماه مهر انور است

The same Dīvān is described in the Oude Catalogue, p. 442, where it is attributed to Mīrzā 'Alī Rizā 'Ishrat.

Or. 324.

Foll. 319; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with three 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, in the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان موبد

The Divan of Mubad.

ای نه فلك از دست طلسمات تو بریا .Beg

From a preface written A.H. 1180 by the poet's son, Tīkā Rām Zafar, we learn that Mūbad, originally called Zindah Rām Pandit, was a native of Kashmīr, and a pupil of Mīrzā Girāmī, son of 'Abd ul-Ghanī Beg Kabūl (see p. 712 α); that he had settled in Lucknow, where his two sons took service in the reign of Shāh 'Alam; that one of these, Sītā-Rām 'Umdah, died in A.H. 1173, and that his father did not long survive him.

Contents: Kaşīdahs in praise of 'Alī, of Shāh 'Alam, Navvāb Madār ud-Daulah, and others, fol. 15 b. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 31 b, beginning:

کرد تا تعلیم بسم الله پـیر دل مرا

Mukhammasāt, fol. 218 a. Chronograms relating to contemporary events in the reigns of 'Alamgīr II. and Shāh 'Alam, to the birthş and deaths of Amīrs, etc., with dates ranging from A.H. 1159 to 1174. Maşnavīs, fol. 258 b. Rubā'īs and Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 278 a. Thirty Ghazals from Mūbad's first Dīvān, collected in Dehli, fol. 303 b. Appendix by the editor, fol. 315 b.

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 504.

Add. 7814.

Foll. 210; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان املا

The Divan of Imla.

Beg.

الهی صبح ^محشر کن دلم را مقام عرش اکبر کن دلم را

The Dīvān consists entirely of Sufi poems. The author, who is only designated by his takhallus, appears to have been a holy personage and spiritual teacher. Afghān, apparently the author of the next following Dīvān, is described in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor: ... author, in the subscription as his adopted son and successor in the subscription as his Contents: Two Maşnavis, fol. 2 b. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 3 b, beginning:

بیادت عقل کل طفل ذو آموز مکتبها باوصافت زبان کنك عبث کوی مشربها Rubā'īs, similarly arranged, fol. 194 a.

The last two leaves contain invocations to Shaikh Muḥyi ud-Dīn 'Abd ul-Ķādir Jīlānī.

Or. 275.

Foll. 124; 8 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{7}{6}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, probably in the 19th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Afghan.

صد کونه مباهات ز حمد تو بیان را

The author, probably the Afghān above mentioned, was originally called Imām 'Alī Khān. He was a Darvīsh living in Lucknow, and left, besides this Dīvān, a Maşnavī composed A.H. 1174. See the Oude Catalogue, pp. 197, 318, and Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind. vol. i. 117.

The Divan contains Ghazals, Kiţ'ahs, and detached verses, in one alphabetical series, and a few Rubā'īs at the end, fol. 121 a.

Add. 16,805.

Foll. 81; 6‡ in. by 4; 18 diagonal lines in a page, written in cursive Nestalik, in the latter half of the 18th century.

[WM. YULE.]

A record of the author's life, in Maşnavî rhyme.

Author: Gulshan, کلشری

The author, whose proper name does not appear, tells us that he was born in Jaunpur. He went as a young man to Dehli and entered as secretary the service of a youthful Amīr who had a taste for poetry, Band i 'Alī Khān, afterwards Shīr-afkan Khān, a son of Ghairat Khān. There he witnessed, some time later, the invasion of Nādir Shāh, and the sack of the capital. He speaks at some length of the poets with whom he became acquainted at Dehli, especially of Shaikh Hazīn (p. 372 b), and 'Alī Ķulī Khān Vālih (p. 371 a). Having attached himself to the latter, he stayed with him until the Khān's death, in A.H. 1169. After that event he returned home, but, finding no employment there, he repaired to Shamsābād, where he found a patron in Sayyid Basālat Jahān.

The above poem, which was written shortly after the author's arrival at Shamsābād, is followed by four shorter Maşnavīs, foll. 63 a, 67 a, 70 a, and 73 a, the first in Hindustani, the other three in Persian, all relating to the author's new master, whose death in A.H. 1176 is recorded in the last. In the last but one, fol. 70 a, the author says that he was then past sixty.

Or. 322.

Foll. 446; 9¹/₄ in. by 5¹/₄; 14 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with five 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, about A.H. 1155 (A.D. 1742). [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Muhammad, known as 'Ali ul-Jilani Hazin, حمد المشتهر بعلى الجيلاني حزين Beg. افتتاح نامه نام آوران كيهان خديو سخن

Shaikh Muḥammad 'Alī Ḥazīn, who has been already mentioned, p. 372 b, died, according to the Tūrīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 317, in Benares, on the 13th of Jumāda I., A.H. J.180. He is considered in India as the greatest poet of his time, although his pungent satires had roused against him bitter animosities. Full notices on his life, with extracts from his poems, will be found in Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, foll. 138—150, Muṣḥafī, foll. 32—37, Haft Asmān, foll. 161—4, Naghmah i 'Andalīb, foll. 65—70, and Atashkadah, fol. 174. His collected works, including his memoirs and the Tazkirat ul-Mu'āṣirīn, have been lithographed, under the title of كليات حزين, in Lucknow, A.H. 1293.

See also the Oude Catalogue, p. 424, Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1413, the Münich Catalogue, p. 39, and the catalogue of King's College Library, No. 124.

The author states in a prose preface, fol. 3 b, that, after having previously published three Dīvāns, he had collected in a fourth, A.H. 1155, the remainder of his detached pieces. He adds that he was then past fifty years of age, and residing in India. The four Dīvāns contain, according to his account, about thirty thousand lines, and thousand one hundred and seventy pieces.

Contents: Kasīdahs, mostly in praise of Muḥammad, and the Imāms, fol. 6 b, beginning : غير نفى غيرت يكتاي بسى همتاستى Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 62 b, beginning :

Fragments of Ghazals, متفرقات غزليات, also in alphabetical order, fol. 340 b. Rubā'īs, similarly arranged, fol. 363 b. Muķaṭṭā'at (Lucknow edition, p. 903), fol. 389 b. A Maṣnavī called جس و انجهن (Lucknow edition, p. 823), fol. 406 b, beginning :

Abridgment of a Maşnavī called Kharābāt (ib. p. 839), fol. 417 b, beginning:

The prologue of Matmah ul-Anzār, another Maşnavī (ib. p. 863), fol. 432 b, beginning:

اي دل افسرده خروشت كجاست

Prologue and epilogue of a Maşnavî called Tazkirat ul-'Ashikîn ?(ib. p. 889), fol. 437 b, beginning:

Epilogue of the fourth Divān (ib. p. 1026), transcribed from the author's autograph, fol. 444 b, این خاتمه را بقلم خود در آخر این دیوان نوشته beginning: : بود از خط مبارك ایشان نقل شد هان اى دانش شكرفان ديدةور و ثررف نكاهان معنى پرور

Foll. 2 and 3 contain some lines of poetry in the handwriting of Hazīn, signed as follows:

Additional pieces, written here and there in the margins of the Dīvān, are due to the same hand.

Or. 356.

Foll. 222; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 9 lines, 4 in. long; written in large Nestalik, with 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, in the 18th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The Dīvān of the same 'Alī Hazīn.

غیر نفی غیرت یکتای بیهمتاستی Beg.

Contents: Kasīdahs in praise of the Imāms and on various subjects, including Mukaţța'āt and a Marşiyah on the death of Husain, fol. 26. Chaman u Anjuman, fol. 161 b. Mukhtaşar i Kharābāt, fol. 178 a. Dībājah i Tazkirat ul-'Ashiķīn, fol. 201 a. Dībājah i Matmah ul-Anzār, fol. 216 a.

In a prose preface prefixed to the above four Maşnavis, fol. 160, the author states that the original drafts had been scattered in various countries, and that he had now written what he describes as a sample of each, in order to comply with the desire of a noble friend in India.

Add. 18,890.

Foll. 300; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 18 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, probably early in the 19th century.

The Dīvān of Hazīn, containing Kasīdahs and Ghazals, fol. 61 b.

The alphabetical series, although breaking off in the letter r, is richer than the corresponding section in the preceding copies.

Add. 5608.

Foll. 39; 12 in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 23 lines; written in cursive Shikastah-āmīz, about A.H. 1180 (A.D. 1767).

A poetical account, in Maşnavî rhyme, of the British wars in Bengal, from the first year of 'Alamgir II. (A.D. 1754) to the conclusion of peace with Shāh 'Alam, and the grant of the Divānī of Bengal to the East India Company (A.D. 1765).

Author : Musāfir, مساقر

خداوندا تو فتاح جهانی Beg. فتح بر جمله اعدا میدهانی

The poet, who designates himself only by the above takhalluş, was, it appears, with the Marattah army in Benares, and subsequently in Ilāhābād. He writes as a warm partisan of the conquerors of Bengal, whom he hails as the future masters of India. In the epilogue he states that he had previously written a similar account in Hindī.

The above title is given on fol. 38 b, with the date of composition, A.H. 1180, expressed by the chronogram طف

On the first page is the Persian seal of Johannes Matthias Reuss (?) رسى,

Add. 26,285.

Foll. 421; 121 in. by 71; 19 lines, 41 in.

long; written in Nestalik, about the close of the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

Two Maşnavis by Nizām ud-Dīn 'Ishrat Siyālkūtī Ķurashī, نظام الدين عشرت سيالكوتى قرشى

'Ishrat states in the latter part of his second poem that, having gone from Siyālkūt, his native place, to pay homage to Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, then on his return march from Dehli, he accompanied the Shāh to Kābul, and received from him, with many marks of favour, the necessary documents for the composition of a poetical record of His Majesty's reign, and the permission to go back to Siyālkūt, in order to devote himself to that task.

I. Fol. 1. شهنامه نادری, a poetical account of Nādir Shāh's invasion in India, A.H. 1151-2, concluding with a brief record of his subsequent wars and his death.

بنام شهنشاه اقلیم بخش Beg. ستاننده تاج و دیهیم بخش

The date of composition, A.H. 1162, is expressed in the following line:

II. Fol. 130. شهنامد احمدی, a poetical record of the life of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, from his rise to power under Nādir Shāh to the defeat of the Belūch chief Naşīr Khān, A.H. 1173.

III. Fol. 288 b. Continuation of the above poem, dealing with Ahmad Shāh's Indian campaign and his defeat of the Marattas at Pānīpat, concluding with the Shāh's death and the accession of Tīmūr Shāh (A.H. 1186).

الهـی کن این نامد^و دل فروز Beg. ز فضل و کرم ختم در چند روز The main part of this section was written in the life time of Ahmad Shāh, to whom the author bitterly complains of the sterility of his Jāgīr, and the annoyances which it entailed upon him.

Add. 23,982.

Foll. 64; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 16 lines, $2\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in the latter part of the 18th century.

The Dīvān of Niyāzī.

This poet, whose proper name was Navvāb Aḥmad Mīrzā, was a son of Mīrzā Sayyid Murtaẓā, who had married a daughter of Shāh Sulṭān Ḥusain, and held in that Shāh's reign the office of Ṣadr. Niyāzī, who was married to a daughter of his maternal uncle, Shāh Ṭahmāsp II., died in Isfahan A.H. 1188. Luṭf 'Alī Khān, who was personally acquainted with him, composed the following chronogram on his death, Ātashkadah, fol. 189:

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. Rubā'īs, fol. 61 a. Chronograms, fol. 63 a. The chronograms, the dates of which range from A.H. 1170 to 1187, relate to the death of some holy personages of the period, of a princess, 'Işmat Nişā, and of Shāhbāz Khān.

Add. 7820.

Foll. 205; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, and 18 lines in the margins; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Safar, A.H. 1202 (A.D. 1787). [Cl. J. RICH.]

"The Cypress and the Rose," also called "Falaknāz Nāmah," or the story of Prince Falaknāz, in Maşnavī rhyme.

2

Kuthor: Taskin, تسكين

The author states, in the conclusion, that he had adopted the above takhallus, because he had found in the composition of this poem a relief (taskin) to his woes; that his real name was 'Arab-Zādah, and that he was born of a family called Aulād Ya'kūb, in the town of Katīf. He was induced to write the present poem, as he states in the prologue, by his friend Mīrzā Sharaf, who communicated to him the prose narrative on which it is founded, and urged him to complete what Ziyā'ī had only commenced. The date of composition, A.H. 1189, is recorded on fol. 7 a.

A copy is mentioned in the Ouseley Collection, No. 69.

Or. 1267.

Foll. 271; 8 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; from 12 to 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, with miniatures in the Persian style; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1257 (A.D. 1841).

The same poem, wanting the greatest part of the prologue, and the epilogue.

Or. 291.

Foll. 120; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, about the close of the 18th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان صانع

The Dīvān of Sāni'.

Nizām ud-Dīn Ahmad Ṣāni', of Balgrām, lived in Murshidābād, and afterwards in Calcutta, where he died about A.H. 1195. See Muṣhafī, fol. 65, Naghmah 'Andalīb, fol. 105, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 217, and Garein de Tassy, Litt. Hind. iii. p. 54.

Contents: A Tarji'-band, and three Mukhammas, fol. 2 b. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 10 b, beginning:

Rubā'is, fol. 117 a.

Or. 321.

Foll. 282; 9 in. by 5½; 13 lines, 3[#] in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, in the 19th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان واقف

The Divan of Vakif.

Nūr ul-'Ain Vāķif, son of Amānat Ullah, Ķāzī of Patiyālah, was a pupil of Ārzū (p. 501 b). He died in Dehli A.H. 1200. See Naghmah 'Andalīb, fol. 191, Mir'āt Āftābnumā, fol. 157, and Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 589.

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, with a few Kitahs, fol. 2 b. Rubā'is, fol. 254 a. A long Tarji'-band, followed by a few Rubā'is and a Mukhammas, fol. 269 b.

Or. 354.

Foll. 232; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 17 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik, in four columns, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The history of Mukhtār, the avenger of Husain, a Shi'ah legend, in Maşnavî rhyme.

Author : Azād, Jį

بنام خداوند لیل و نهار . خدای نهان خالق اشکار

Mīr Ghulām 'Alī Āzād, of Balgrām, died in Aurangābād A.H. 1200. See p. 373 a. He refers in the prologue to the numerous poets who had before his time sung the praises of the Prophet's family, mentioning by name Asīr, Zulālī, 'Urfī, Kudsī, Ṣā'ib, Zuhūrī, Firdūsī, Bāzil, the author of Ḥamlah i Ḥaidarī, and Jūyā. Inspired by the memories of Karbalā, he found a new theme in the subject of the present poem, which he commenced in the month of Ṣafar, A.H. 1131.

The poem is also called, from its subject, Mukhtār Nāmah. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 364.

At the end is found a Kaşīdah addressed to Shāh Husain Şafavī, imperfect at the end.

Or. 316.

Foll. 373; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Nizam.

1

The author, who is only designated by the above takhallus, is the well-known 'Imād ulMulk Ghāzī ud-Dīn Khān Bahādur Fīrūz Jang, grandson of Nizām ul-Mulk Aṣafjāh, and Vazīr of Aḥmad Shāh and 'Alamgīr II. After the latter emperor's death, A.H. 1173, he relapsed into obscurity, and died about A.H. 1200, in Kālpī. Muṣḥafī states, fol. 101, that he was still alive in A.H. 1199. See also Khizānah i 'Amirah, fol. 18, Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 392, Gulzār i Ibrāhīm, fol. 240 a, Naghmah 'Andalīb, fol. 181, the Oude Catalogue, p. 273, and Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind., vol. ii. p. 476.

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, with two Kasīdahs, fol. 2 b. Several Ghazals are addressed to Fakhr i Jahān, the author's spiritual guide, also called Maulānā Fakhr ud-Dīn (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 273). Rubā'īs, fol. 293 b. Tarkīb and Tarjī'-bands, fol. 298 b. Musaddasāt of the kind called داموخت, fol. 323 b. Mukhammasāt, fol. 330 b. The last of these is in Oriental Turkish.

Add. 26,172.

Foll. 54; 5 in. by $8\frac{3}{4}$; about twenty lines in a page; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz, about the close of the 18th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

قاضى Poems of Kāzī Ghulām Kāsim Mihrī, قاضى مهرى

بيا ساقي آن مي كه هوش آورد . دل مـردكانــرا بجــوش آورد

At the beginning is found this heading:

منظومات فقیر حقیر کوتاه تدبیر دیوانه نظیر قاضی غلام قاسم مهری ارشده الله فی النظم والکلام و اکرمه من نظر الکرام الی یوم الـقیام آمین

The author, who uses Kāsim as his takhalluş, was affiliated to the Nakshábandi order. From a Ķaşīdah addressed to Tippu Sulţān, shortly after his accession (A.H.1197), we learn that he was the son of Ķāzī Ḥusain, and a native of Bombay. Another poem, in praise of the same prince, is stated, at the end, to have been written off Ceylon, in Zulḥijjah, A.H. 1205, on a voyage to Pegu.

The volume, which has the appearance of a scrap-book, contains Kaşīdahs, Ghazals, and Maşnavīs, mostly of a religious nature, without systematic arrangement. The latter part contains Hindustani pieces and a few chronograms for A.H. 1206 and 1207.

Or. 273.

Foll. 147; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1209 (A.D. 1795). From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Dīvān of Aftāb.

Aftāb is the takhallus of the Emperor Shāh 'Alam ('Alī Gauhar), who was born A.H. 1140, and died A.H. 1221.

The Dīvān consists of Ghazals, in alphabetieal order, with a few Rubā'īs at the end, fol. 145 b. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 318, the Münich Catalogue, p. 40, and the Ouseley Collection, No. 68.

On fol. 3 is a profile portrait of the author.

Add. 7823.

Foll. 73; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, on European paper, early in the 19th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

ديوان خاقان

The Divan of Khakan.

Khāķān is the poetical surname of Fath 'Alī Shāh.

The Divān of the royal author is mentioned by Sir John Malcolm, who had obtained a copy of it in one of his missions to Persia, A.D. 1800 or 1810. See "History of Persia," vol. ii. p. 547, Wm. Ouseley's Travels, vol. iii. p. 372, Asiatisches Museum, p. 377, and the catalogues of St. Petersburg, p. 403, and Münich, p. 41.

Contents: Preface to the Dīvān by Nashāț, fol. 1 b. This preface, as well as the short prose introductions to the various sections of the Dīvān, and the epilogue, are found collected in the works of Nashāţ (see p. 722 a), foll. 18 a—26 b. Ķasīdahs in praise of 'Alī and of the Shāh's predecessor, Aķā Muḥammad, fol. 6 a. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 15 a, beginning:

Tarkib-band, fol. 55 a. Detached verses, in alphabetical order, fol. 57 a. Rubä'is, fol. 62 b. A Marşiyah on the death of Husain, fol. 64 a. Maşnavîs, fol. 66 b. Epilogue of Nashāț, fol. 71 a.

Add. 18,544.

Foll. 74; 10 in. by 6½; 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, early in the 19th century. [H. STERNSCHUSS.]

The same Divan, wanting the Kaşīdahs and the prose prefaces.

Add. 25,017.

Foll. 188; 84 in. by 5; 13 lines, 24 in. long, with 26 lines in the margins; written in neat Nestalik, with three 'Unvans and VOL. II. gold-ruled margins, early in the 19th century.

Three Maşnavīs, ascribed, in the label affixed to the back of the MS., to Hājī Muḥammad Ḥusain Shīrāzī, حمد حاجى

The author, whose name does not appear in the text, addresses Fath 'Alī Shāh, fol. 133 a, as the reigning sovereign. He has all the prolixity of Sufi poets, and delights in the endless repetition of the same idea under different images.

I. Fol. 1 b. وامق و عذرا "Vāmiķ and 'Azrā," a love-story.

The author says in the prologue that under the hero's name he only describes the holy love that burns in his own heart.

II. Fol. 92 b. اشتر نامد, "The Book of the Camel."

The above title, which is taken from one of 'Attar's poems (p. 578 b), is justified by frequent descriptions of the wild longings of the camel, and repeated addresses to the camel-driver شتربان.

III. Fol. 106 b. A poem without title, beginning:

This poem, which is written in continuation of the preceding, without any apparent break, is distinguished from it by the change of metre. It belongs to the class called in adjuratory."

IV. Fol. 114 b. مهر و ماه, "Mihr and Māh," a love-story.

1

The various sections have extensive prose headings, showing the application of the allegory to mystic love.

Add. 19,533.

Foll. 187; 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, on English paper, with the water-mark 1809.

The collected works of Nashāt نشاط, in prose and verse.

Mu'tamad ud-Daulah Mīrzā 'Abd ul-Vahhāb, poetically surnamed Nashāţ, was courtpoet and secretary to Fath 'Alī Shāh. A letter of his composition, addressed to George III. about A.H. 1220, has been mentioned p. 392 a. His تتاب كنجيند has been printed in Teheran, A.H. 1266.

Fol. 1 b. A Maşnavî treating of mystic love, with a prose preface beginning:

ابواب مخزن وجود بحكم كنت كنزا مخفيا مسدود

Fol. 13 6. Two Kaşīdahs in praise of Fath 'Alī Shāh.

Fol. 17 a. Various compositions in ornate prose mixed with verses.

The most important are two prefaces, the first of which, beginning ناظم العوالم بديع , was written for the Dīvān of Fatḥ 'Alī Shāh, fol. 18 a, and the second for a poetical account of the wars of the same sovereign, entitled شاهنشاه نامه صبا

From the latter we learn that the author of the poem, designated by his takhalluş Ṣabā, was a native of Kāshān, and a pupil of the three poets called Azur (Lutf 'Alī Beg), Ṣabāḥī, and Hātif (see the Atashkadah, foll. 180, 197), that he recited a Ṣaṣīdah, quoted at full length, on the accession of Fath 'Alī Shāh, who appointed him Malik ush-Shu'arā, and finally that he wrote the above poem by desire of the Shah, after the Russian campaign (A.H. 1218), in which he had accompanied his sovereign.

The collection includes pieces in Oriental Turkish, fol. 35 a, and in Arabic, fol. 36 a.

Fol. 55 b. Ķasīdahs addressed to Fath 'Alī Shāh, mostly on the occasion of the Naurūz festivals.

بزم غیب از شمع ذاتش چون منور داشتند. Beg.

پرده داران صفاتش پرده بر در داشتند

This section contains some Kaṣīdahs imitated from Anvarī by desire of the Shāh. It concludes with a Turkish piece and a few Kiţʿahs.

Fol. 75 b. Letters and miscellaneous compositions in prose.

Among the former are letters written in the name of Fath 'Alī Shāh to the Sultan Maḥmūd (in Turkish), to the Emperor Napoleon, to George III. of England, to the Vahhābī ehief (in Arabic), and to other princes and dignitaries. They are undated, and for the most part without headings. The second section, beginning fol. 104 b, contains letters written by Nashāț in his own name, and other prose pieces.

Fol. 142 b. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, followed by a Tarkīb-band, fol. 181 a, and some Rubā'īs, fol. 184 a.

Add. 27,267.

Foll. 250; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in fair Shikastah-āmīz on European paper, with two 'Unvāns and goldruled margins, about the beginning of the 19th century; bound in painted covers.

[Sir J. MALCOLM.]

The Divan of Valih of Isfahan.

Vālih, whose original name Muhammad Kāzim is found in the present MS., fol. 248 b, lived in Isfahan under the Zend and Ķāchār dynasties. He was upwards of eighty years old in A.H. 1226, when Sir Gore Ouseley saw him in his native city. See Notices of Persian Poets, Memoir, p. 67, and Sir Wm. Ouseley's Travels, vol. iii. p. 53.

The present MS. is apparently in the same handwriting as some signed specimens of the author's penmanship, dated A.H. 1225, and preserved in Add. 27,271.

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b. A Maşnavî, fol. 204 b. Mukaţța'āt, mostly chronograms on contemporary events, with dates ranging from A.H. 1164 to 1217, fol. 206 b. Kaşīdahs, addressed to Fath 'Alī Shāh, Nizām 'Alī Khūn of Haidarābād, and others, fol. 218 a. Ķiţ'ahs and Rubā'īs, fol. 233 b. Moral maxims in Arabic, fol. 248 b.

Add. 7818.

Foll. 125; 8 in. by 6; 9 lines. 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, on European paper, early in the 19th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The Divan of the same poet, in a shorter recension, containing Kaşidahs, fol. 1 b. Ghazals, fol. 16 b, Maşnavis, fol. 108 a, Kit'ahs, fol. 104 b, Rubā'is, fol. 111 b, and Chronograms, fol. 117 b.

Or. 308.

Foll. 124; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz and in Nestalik; dated Ṣafar, the eighteenth year of Shāh 'Alam (A.H. 1191, A.D. 1777). From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Mubtala, with two prose works by the same author.

Shaikh Ghulām Muḥyi ud-Dīn Kurashī of Mīrath, who used the poetical surnames of 'Ishk and Mubtalā, was the son of a poet, Shaikh Ni'mat Ullah Ni'amī, and lived in Dehli as a dependent of Navvāb Najaf Khān, an Amīr of the court of Shāh 'Alam. He left, besides his poems, a Tazkirah of Rekhtah poets, composed A.H. 1222. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 187, 498, and Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind., vol. ii. p. 45.

Contents: I. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 2 b. Mufradāt, Rubā'is, and Mukhammasāt, fol. 60 b. Ķasīdalıs, fol. 65 b. Maşnavis, fol. 73 b.

II. باغ کلهای حسن, containing descriptions of the various points of female beauty, in ornate prose, with appropriate verses, partly due to the author, partly to other poets not named, fol. 78 b.

The date of composition, A.H. 1187, is expressed by the title. The work is also called جمرعه' عشق. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 187.

III. صاد دفتر اشواق, models of letters, in ornate prose, on various subjects, fol. 99 a.

It is stated in the preamble that the above title numerically expresses the date of composition, viz. A.H. 1187.

The last two pieces are the first and second parts of a collection designated in the preface, fol. 79, as چار چمن. The third and fourth parts, called مردمك عين تماشا مردمك معنى پيمانه فكر are wanting.

P P 2

723

Add. 25,830.

Foll. 69; 13 in. by 9; 6 lines, 5 in. long; written in large Nestalik, A.D. 1822.

[WM. CURETON.]

زيب التواريخ

A poetical account of the life of Zīb un-Nisā Begam.

Author : Lalah Gokul Chand, لاله كوكل چند

تـعـالـی الله زهی غفار خالـق .Beg که دروصفش دو عالم هست ناطق

Zib un-Nisā Begam, also called Begam Sumroo, was the widow of Walter Reinhard, a German soldier of fortune, better known in India by the nickname of Sombre, or Sumroo, who died A.D. 1778. His wife, who succeeded to his estate and to the command of his regiment, played a not unimportant part in the events of the reign of Shāh 'Alam, from whom she received the title of siglet allowed daughter," and died about 1825. See Francklin, History of Shah Aulum, pp. 150, 188, James Skinner's Military Memoir, p. 279, Sleeman, Rambles and Recollections, vol. ii. p. 377, and Keene, Fall of the Moghul Empire, p. 297.

The author, who is designated in the title as the Begam's Munshī, begins with eulogies on his heroine, on Colonel George Alexander Dyce (a son-in-law of Zafaryāb Khān, the son of W. Reinhard by his first wife), who had the management of the Begam's estate, and on the Colonel's two sons, David Ochterlony Dyce, and John Thomas Dyce. He then proceeds to state that a history of Zīb un-Nisā, written in prose by Munshī Jaisingh Rāi, having been lost, he had been desired to treat the same theme in verse.

The date of composition, A.D. 1822, is stated in the following line:

Or. 459.

Foll. 426; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, about the beginning of the 19th century.

[DUNCAN FORBES.]

The Divan of Khamush.

ای برتر ازان که کوید ادراك Beg. وصف تو از علم و عقل ما یاك

Şāḥib Rām Khāmūsh, a Hindu born in Dehli, and a pupil of Shaikh 'Alī Ḥazīn, acted as Munshīto Shāh'Alam, and was subsequently employed as Taḥṣīldār under Mr. Duncan in the district of Benares. The author of the Tārīkh i Muẓaffarī, who was his intimate friend, states, fol. 500, that he died A.H. 1225. He was then upwards of seventy years of age. See the Oude Catalogue, pp. 167, 461.

Contents: Kasīdahs and Ķiţ'ahs, including some chronograms with dates ranging from A.H. 1180 to 1205, fol. 2 b. Maşnavis, fol. 90 b. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 109 b, beginning:

Rubā'is similarly arranged, fol. 398 b.

On the first page is written: "G. C. Haughton, Febr. 1818. From Jonathan Duncan's library."

Or. 285.

Foll. 110; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, in the 19th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

The Divan of Sarvar.

The author was a dependent of Habib Ullah Khān. A Maşnavî addressed to that Amīr, and containing a pressing appeal to his liberality, is dated A.H. 1227.

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 2 a. A Kaşīdah in praise of Habīb Ullah Khān, fol. 100 a. Mukhammasāt, fol. 104 a. A Maşnavī also in praise of Habīb Ullah Khān, fol. 105 b.

Add. 26,169.

Foll. 167; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian writing; dated A.H. 1229 (A.D. 1814).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

جرجيس رزم

A poetical account of the British wars in India, in Maşnavî rhyme.

Author : Ṣafdar 'Alī Shāh, poetically styled Munșif, صفد, علشاد مخلص منصف

The following notice of the author, on the fly-leaf, is in the handwriting of Mr. Erskine:—

"The author's original name was Mahomed Mohiudin, which, on renouncing worldly pursuits, he changed to Safder Ali Shah. He was the son of Mozuffer Jeng, who changed his name to Kalender Ali Shah on becoming a Fakir (his mother was Nur-Jehan Begum, the niece of Tehniat Nissa Begum, the wife of Nizam u Doulet), and the grandson of Samander Shah of Herat, who married Tehniat Begum, the daughter of Nawab Evaz Khan, of the Soubah of Aurungabad. She, dying while her son Mozuffer Jeng was an infant, gave him to her sister, Syed Shah Begum, to bring up. Syed Shah's husband was Hedayet Mohiudin Khan Mozuffer Jeng, the grandson of the Nizam Asif Jah by his daughter Khyr-ul-nisa Begum."

The first of the two sections contained in this volume treats of the war with Tippoo, from the rupture of the peace (A.D. 1799) to the settlement of the Carnatic (A.D. 1802). The second, foll. 43 b—167 b, contains a record of the Marattah war. It begins with the taking of Poonah by Holkar, and the flight of Bājī Rāo (A.D. 1802), and ends with the retrocession of the conquered territories to Holkar and Sindiah (Dec., 1803). The hero of both narratives is General Wellesley, called in the text only one second territories to Holkar and Sindiah (Dec., 1803).

The first section contains in its prologue, fol. 14 a, a panegyric on Mr. [the Honourable Mountstuart] Elphinstone, and at the end, fol. 36 a, eulogies on the author's special patron, Mr. Wm. Erskine, and on Dr. Taylor, who had restored him to health.

Both sections are signed by the author نقير صفدر على شاد تادرى, and the subscription shows that this copy was written by him for Mr. Erskine.

Add. 26,170.

Foll. 61; 11⁴/₂ in. by 7; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written by the same hand.

WM. ERSKINE.]

An appendix to the preceding poem, containing an account of the war with Holkar (in A.D. 1804).

The prologue is followed by a short account of the capture of Pondichery by the French, foll. 3a-4a; after which comes this heading:

آغاز داستان تتمه واقعه هولکر که بعد فیصل مقدمه سیددیه مهراج و رگهوجی گهوسله راجه ناگپور و تدبیر تسخیر ہولکر پرداختن انکللیسیان بہوجب اشارت راجہ سریونت باجی راو شہر پونہ — Of the first part of the poem, foll. 1 a 13 b, there is a second draft at the end of the volume, foll. $48 \ b - 61 \ a$.

The first page bears the author's signature.

Add. 26,171.

Foll. 34; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written by the same hand.

[WM. ERSKINE.] A further continuation of the above poem, containing an account of the campaign of Bhartpūr, from the defeat of Col. Monson (August 1804), to the retreat of Holkar from Bhartpūr (March 1805].

چو در رزم کرنیل منسل شکست Beg. بیکبار شد هولکر چیره دست

On the first page is found the following title, with the author's signature :

وقايعه بهرت پورو تاختن جندرال ليك بهادر بر ظالمسنك راجه سيري جات برای راجه اسونت راو هولکر بهادر

Or. 295.

Foll. 177; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1226 (A.D. 1811). [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان عبرت

The Divan of Ibrat.

هیبك بر خیز بسم الله سوء عالم دلها . كه بیتو صد هزاران دل بخون افتاد بسملها

This poet, whose proper name was Husain, records the death of his father Muhammad Ṣiddīķ in A.H. 1182, that of his spiritual guide, Sayyid Hasan Shāh in A.H. 1188, and the birth of his cldest son in A.H. 1190. His Dīvān contains chronograms relating to contemporary events in Multan, from A.H. 1177 to the date of its compilation, A.H. 1226, with marginal additions coming down to A.H. 1231.

Contents: Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 2 b. Mukhammasāt, fol. 119 a. Maşnavīs, fol. 123 b. Rubā'is and Fardiyyāt, fol. 128 a. Taẓmīn, an amplification of some moral verses of Sa'dī, in Maṣnavī, fol. 132 a. Chronograms in prose and verse, with a short preamble by the author, fol. 138 b.

Or. 303.

Foll. 74; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; from 13 to 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1232 (A.D. 1817).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

ديوان قثيل

The Divan of Mirza Katil, consisting of Ghazals in alphabetical order.

بود برق دگر در جلودها جانانه مارا .Beg. نه هر شمعی مجان آتش زند پروانه مارا

Mirzā Ķatīl has been already mentioned p. 64 b. A full notice of his life is to be found in the Naghmah i 'Andalīb, fol. 149, where the date of his death, A.H. 1233, is ingeniously expressed in this contemporary chronogram, by the letters $z \downarrow z \downarrow z$:

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 535, and the Münich Catalogue, p. 40.

Add. 18,546.

Foll. 96; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with three 'Unvāns, and interlinear gilding throughout, early in the 19th century.

[H. STERNSCHUSS.]

مثنوبات شوكت

Masnavis of Shaukat.

The poet, who designates himself by the above takhallus, held a high rank under Fath 'Alī Shāh, and was probably connected with the royal family. It appears from some passages, as foll. 9, 10, 39, that he had been sent by the Shāh from Teheran to Shīrāz to take the government of that city, and that, during an illness which befell him there, he was lovingly tended by three members of the Shāh's family, for whom he professes the, most tender regard, namely Prince Husain, his mother, the first wife of the Shāh, and the Prince's sister.

Husain 'Alī Mīrzā, the eldest son of Fath 'Alī Shāh, held during thirty-six years his court in Shīrāz, as Governor of the province of Fārs. At the time of Sir Gore Ouseley's stay in that eity, A.D. 1811, he was about twenty-two years of age, the Queen about fifty, and the Princess eighteen. See Notices of Persian Poets, p. 50, and Wm. Ouseley's Travels, vol. ii. p. 13.

The poems contained in this volume have neither titles nor headings. In all the poet describes, mostly in his own person, sometimes under the disguise of fictitious characters, the longings and joys of true love, the pangs of separation, and the tortures of jealousy.

Contents : Fol. 2 b. First Maşnavî. Description of the author's journey to Shîrãz, of his amorous passion, and his dangerous illness.

بنام کردکار هستمی آرا . کزو شد جمله هستی آشکارا

It was completed, as stated at the end, fol. 13 b, in A.H. 1233:

Fol. 13 b. Second Maşnavī. The author is sent from Teheran to Khabūshān, from whence he leads a plundering raid into the hills. The pains of absence, and love messages. The author's journey to Mashhad, Nīshāpūr, and Fīrūzkūh. His return to Teheran and blissful meeting with his beloved.

Fol. 22 a. The tale of Humāyūn and Malaknūz, two lovers of Haidarābād.

Fol. 32 b. A dream of the Princess of China and her unhappy love.

Fol. 35 a. The poet's love-sickness, and his dialogue with his physician.

Fol. 36 b. A short poem addressed to the Shah at a hunting party.

Fol. 37 b. The author's message from the palace of Shīrāz to his beloved.

Fol. 39 b. Love-letter. The pangs of separation.

Fol. 43 b. Discourse with a Sufi on divine and carthly love.

Fol. 46 b. The story of Yūsuf and Zulaikhā.

Fol. 66 b. The story of Prince Humāyūn-Fāl and Gulandām, the Vazīr's daughter.

The rest of the volume, foll. 76 a—96 a, contains some short Maşnavīs, the complaints of a deserted lover.

Round the margins of the last two pages are written some Ghazals by Khāķān, i.e., Fatķ 'Alī Shāh.

Or. 359.

Foll. 130; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated A.H. 1256 (A.D. 1840).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

Author: Zīrak, زيرك

The love-story of Prince Hans, son of the king of Balkh, and the Chinese Princess Javāhir, a Maşnavī.

Jai Sukh Rāi Zīrak, a Kāyath of Dehli, is mentioned by Sarvar, writing A.H. 1242, as a young poet, then about twenty years of age. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 306, and G. de Tassy, Litt. Hind., vol. iii. p. 343.

The author, who dedicates the work to Captain (afterwards Colonel) George William Hamilton, relates how, having heard the tale told by a friend in a literary assembly, he was prevailed upon by his younger brother, Khādim Ḥasanain, to put it into Persian verse. The poem was written, as stated at the end, A.H. 1256, the author being then in his 36th year.

The MS. is, according to the subscription, in the author's handwriting : مکر الہی کہ تگارستان معنی نلدمن ثانی بخط بی ربط مولف حلیہ اتمام پوشید

The poem consists, as stated in the last line, of 2736 distichs.

Or. 297.

Foll. 60; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long in a page; written in cursive Nestalik, for Col. George Wm. Hamilton, then Commissioner of Multan, dated A.D. 1861.

Author : Gadā 'Alī Shāh, گدا علی شاہ Beg. دم تسلیم میـبایـد بـراہ عشق اولہا کہ تا اسان توان رفتن در وادی بہنزلھا

The author, who uses the takhallus of 'Alī,' is a Sufi poet of the most recent period.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 2 a. Rubā'is, fol. 30 a. Fardiyyāt, fol. 54 b.

Add. 7829.

Foll. 134; 8 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently early in the 19th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The contents are described by Rich on the fly-leaf as follows:

"Two poems in the Guran dialect of the Courdish Language; purchased at Sina, August, 1820."

Guran (probably from 2, 2, 3 fire-worshippers ") is the name given to the inhabitants of Eastern, or Persian, Kurdistān, the eapital of which, Sina, was visited by Rieh, in August 1820. See the "Narrative of a Residence in Koordistan," London, 1836, vol. i. pp. 80, 81 and 199.

Although spoken in Kurdistān, the dialect is essentially Persian. In its vocabulary and grammatical structure it agrees in the main with the language of Iran, from which it differs, however, by certain phonetical changes, by its verbal inflexions, its prepositions, and some other peculiar words. As it does not appear to have attracted notice, the following brief sketch of its principal features will not be superfluous:—

PRONETIC CHANGES.—Medial or final s is frequently dropped. Ex. دیار 'sight, face' (دیدار), نیا (زیاده) 'more' (زیاده), نیا (دیدار) (سپید), دا (سپید) 'white' سپلی ((دید)), saw' (دید)). The aspirates s, -, and z, medial or final, generally disappear, and a preceding vowel, if in a closed syllable, is lengthened. Ex.: شار 'city, empire' (شهر), شار 'understanding' (راد (مهر)) 'poison' (رهر), شار 'seal' (مهر), مار (دیم (مهر)) 'plain' (مهر) 'plain' 'love' (مورت (محنت) 'trial' مینت (محرا) 'love' (مورت (محنت) 'trial' مینت (محرا) "flame' (مار) 'space of time' (محد), and even 'flame' (ماد (شعله)), and even 'flame' (ماد (معده)), and even 'ido (زماد) (took' (زاد م) 'wound' for کو (نگاه) 'book' (زام 'look' (ماد) ' مانت (موج) 'mountain' (موج) 'bout' out ' (ماد) 'look' (ماد) ' my way' (ماد) (راد) 'love' (ماد). (ارواحت) (.

Persian ¿ is often replaced by ¿, as in خاخ 'burn' (حاخ) 'brain' (حماخ), ناخ 'garden' (حماخ) 'grief' (حماخ) 'brain' خم (باغ) 'be roared' (غم) 'grief' خم (باغ) The stands for وس in ب fenough' خم (باغ), (ببانه) 'enough' وس in ب 'springtide' وهار (ببانه) 'bretext' (ویانه ((ببار) 'springtide' وهار 'might' (شب), and many other words.

The same letter is preserved in some words in which Persian has substituted ک for it, as in ویده 'fashion, manner' (گوند), ' round' (گشته (گرد) ' become' ویل , and ویر ' to pass' (گذر).

Most Persian words beginning with خ have in Guran a ويش . Ex.: ويش 'himself' ويش (خوش) 'sweet' وش ,(خويش) 'to eat' واست ,(خوان) 'to call, to read' وان ,(خور) 'he desired' (خواست).

In a few words ل appears to have taken the place of Persian , as in و 'to go' (رَوَ) 'to yo' لو 'bird' ميل ,(مرغ) 'bird' مل 'rey- press' سول ,(سرو) , and ميل ,(سرو) , and كيل to turn, to wander' (گرد).

Nouxs.—The Guran dialect has still less vol. 11. declension than Persian; for the particle j is absent. The accusative is expressed by position alone, and the dative by prepositions. The plural is in ان for all nouns; ex. سنكان 'stones,' نكلان 'flowers.' The Yāe Vahdat assumes before the Izāfat, or enclitics, the form يزيو لائق; ex.: چيزيو لائق 'a suitable object,' 'there is a person.'

PRONOUNS. — The detached personal pronouns are من or من 'I,' تو 'thou,' وه or او 'the, she,' ايمه 'we,' ايمه 'they.' They are used also for the accusative, instead of ترا مرا etc.

The enclitical forms, which are, as in Persian, شان, تان, مان, ش, ت, م are very extensively used, both to express possession, and to form the complement of verbs and prepositions. They also play an important part, as will be seen further on, in the conjugation of the past tenses.

The reflexive pronoun has distinct forms for each person, viz. ويم 'myself,' ويت 'thyself, (خويش) ' himself' ويش

The demonstratives are او that' (آن), (آن), and اید or راین), and اینه or روه رای (neuter). The interrogatives are خ who ?', (what ?' کامین and کام (جه) 'what ?' چیش adjectively (کدامین).

VERBS.—The verb ' to be ' is represented by or ' is,' corresponding to هست , and by the enclitie (است), as in المريش, 'my heart is sore' (ريش است). Other enclitical forms are or نان for the first person, i for the second. The past has i for the second. The past has were ' بين , (بودم) ' I was ' بيم , (بود) ' was ' بي were ' (بودند) ' the perfect (بودند) ' has been ' (بودند) ', plur. (باشم) بام , (باد) بای the optative (بود) بان , and the imperative ... The present tense takes the prefix , occasionally written هم. Thus from وابي, which, in striking agreement with Sanskrit, takes the place of عواجو , we have مواجوه 'he says,' and from مواجو 'to see' موينو'. The personal inflexions will be shown by the following paradigm of the verb 'to do':---

The future, which is also used as subjunctive, has the same inflexions, but substitutes the prefix ب for ب بکرون 'I shall do,' باورو 'he will bring,' 'that he may bring,' etc. The imperative, which is generally found with the prefix ب, but sometimes without it, mostly takes in the singular the termination s. Ex.: بهای 'do' (بکن) 'do not' کرد (بگو)' say' (بگو)' (بگو)' 'say' بشنود (بگو)' read'

The past adds, as in Persian, a or to the root in the case of strong verbs, as وات 'brought,' كرد' 'did,' اورد'said,' شنفت 'heard.' Weak verbs form the same tense in 1, as 'drew' (كشيد), 'asked' (نومود) 'commanded' (برسيد), The latter formation applies to many verbs which in Persian are strong verbs, as نرما (بريست) 'rose' (شناخت), while other verbs occur with either inflexion, as سپارا or سپرد or in 'entrusted,' نويسا or in 'entrusted,' نويسا or in 'wrote.'

The personal terminations are as follows :

آمدم = آمام گفتم = واتم

The past with the prefix , forms the imperfect : موات 'was saying' (می گفت). The perfect is, in form, identical with the infinitive : کردن 'has done' کردن (کرده است), (کرده است) 'has seized' کردن 'has seized' کردن 'had seized ' کرتبی the pluperfect has (آمده است). (زباده بود) 'had laid' نیا بی (کرفته بود) '

There is, however, another form of the past, more commonly used than the first, and which is one of the most striking features of the dialect. The ground-form of the past remains uninflected, and the subject is expressed by the enclitical forms of the pronouns, which are appended, either to the past itself, or to some preceding word. Thus we have انش 'he said' (not (گفتند) ' they said ' واتشان , (او گفت but , گفتش 'thou saidst' فرمات (كرديم) 'we did' كردمان (جاہ گرفتم) 'I took place ' جام کرت ,(فرمودی) من توم قبول کرد ,(رو نهادم براه) ' I set out ' روم نیا ورا چند تأنم ,(من قرا قبول کردم) 'I adopted thee' 'how many taunts did I hear' thou savedst ' منت کرد خلاص ,(چند طعده شنودم) me' (مرا خلاص کردی) 'they read they 'مجنونشان برد ,(نامەرا خواندند) 'the خاوشان نکرد ,(مجنون ا بردند) took Majnūn 'they did not sleep' (خواب نكردند).

The same construction applies also to the other past tenses, as in the following examples : کردنت 'thou hast done' (کرده،), تو سهوت , (آرزو کردهام) 'I have desired 'آرزوم کردن تو سهو) 'thou hast made a mistake 'کردن 'thou hast made a mistake ' من توم کی دین (کرده 'thou hast made me mad' (من ترا کی دیده ام) 'he was saying ' ، موا تشان , (می گفت) ' they were saying ' علم) ' he was studying ' علمش موانا , (می گفتند) (دیده بود) ' he had seen ' دیه بیش , (می خواند

The infinitive or verbal noun adds ..., as in Persian, to the ground form of the past. Ex.: (خورد ن) 'eating ' (ردن), 'seizing ' ' coming ' دین , (آمدن), ناس (گرفتن) (رفتن), نوان , (دیدن) ' going ' نوان , (دیدن)

Causative verbs are formed by adding ن to the root, as in لرزنا 'caused to tremble, shook ' مربزنو ,((رانید) ' causes to flow, sheds ' (می ریزاند).

An interesting passive form in ي is found only in the past, as کريا ' was made ' (کرده شد), (کرده شد) , and in the was burnt ' (سوخنه شد), and in the perfect, as (کشته است), (کشته است) ' is killed ' نويسيان).

The following table shows the third person singular past and present, and occasionally other characteristic forms, of some of the most common verbs, in so far as they differ, wholly or in part, from Persian:—

شنيد ?) ' heard ' اژنى).

; (می آید) ' comes ' میار or میو , (آمد) ' came ' آما plur. بیاوه they come'; fut ' میان imper. ایشو wounded, hurt '; pres. ایشا.

. بيكر 'thrust, planted'; pres. بيكا

; (میدهد) ' gave ' مدرو or مدو ,(داد) ' gave ' دا plur. بدو. 'they give ;' subj ' مدران or مدان, first pers. plur. بدريم ,بديم, or , بدرمي ; imper. . (بده , بدو , بدرمي , بديم).

.مدروشو shone, sparkled ;' pres. مدروشا

موينو .saw ;' pres ديا or دى.

(آراست) ' prepared ' رازنا).

; (می داند) ' knew ' مزانو , (دانست) ' knew ' زانا imper. بزانه.

ن ' came out, issued.'

'takes.' مستانو ,(ستد) 'took ' ستاست or سند .»شانو or 'laid, put down ;' pres. شانا or شند they heard, ' مشنوان ' they hear. .بشو .goes '; imper' مشو ,(شد) 'went' شي .مكيرو .seized ' (گرفت) ' seized ' كرت بكيون ,بكم .did'; pres ; مكرو ; subj., 1st pers كرد 3rd pers. plur. بكن ; imper. كره , or , كره , or . (كريست) 'wept ' كروا .بكينو .fell '; subj ' كتا and (افتاد) كفت 'sends' مکیانو , 'sent' کیانا or کیاست مکیلو .turned, wandered ' (کردید); pres) ; کیلا (33, 5). 'he does not leave or let alone.' نمازو (برو) لوه went' (رفت) ; imper. لوا .بهدرstood'; imper. s، مدرا . ممانو .remained ' (ماند) ; pres ، مند منیشو .sat down' (نشست) ; pres نشت (ى نشيند). im- ; (بنهد) بنيرو .j ; subj ; نبرد) ; imper. in. موارو or , مورو ate' (خورد) ; pres. ورد or وارد (مي خورد) موازو .asked, desired ' (خواست); pres موازو (م خواهد). (می فروشد) ' sells ' مورشو · threw, cast down '; subj. (?) وست .موانو .or (خواند) ' called, read ' وانا or وند .(می گذرد) مویرو .pres ; (گذشت) ' passed ' ویرد ميار arrived, reached' (يافت); pres. ميار (می یابد).

PREPOSITIONS.—They are numerous, not to say redundant, and differ widely from the Persian words of the same class. Nearly all combine with the pronominal suffixes, a being in some cases inserted between the two elements. , which is generally substituted for Persian , , in all its meanings, forms with the pronouns the groups ونم 'to me,' ونش 'to him,' etc. پي 'to, for, on account of,' is also used to express the dative; with the pronouns it forms پيت 'to me,' پيت 'to thee'; also بنت , پنت , with the same meaning. The dative is likewise expressed by , apparently borrowed from Arabic, which occurs only in connection with pronouns, as occurs only in connection with pronouns, as 'to thee,' پري 'to them.' پري 'for, towards,' takes also the pronominal suffixes, as in پري 'for me,' پريا', for us.'

ن or من, which does not combine with the pronouns, is found, strangely enough, in two opposite meanings, viz. 'in,' and 'from.' The latter meaning is more generally conveyed by جه, جه, or جه , et also sometimes used in the sense of 'in'); with the pronouns: چنم 'from me' (ازمن), (ازمن) 'from thee.' چنم 'int': چنم 'with': me.' خیم 'like.' دما 'after' (دنبال).

s and s, are frequently affixed to a noun governed by a preposition; ex. و بیاباندا into the desert,' بروی خاکدا ground,' بلای خداوه 'before God.'

The pronominal suffix is sometimes detached from the preposition, and appended to a preceding word. Ex.: بواچم پنه, for , بواچم پنه, 'tell me'; ستانم چنه, for بواچه پنم, ' take from me.'

There are, besides, several compound prepositions, as ندور 'into,' ندور 'round,' ندلی 'amid,' ندور 'up to, towards': ندلی 'to him,' 'with, by ': چلاش 'with him, near him' چلاش (از پیش او)

ADVERBS.—, وزار , وبر out, outside, وبر 'down,' هور' 'off, away,' هور' (up, aloft,' as in هور كرت (for هورخيزا (برگرفت) 'raised' هور كرت 'rose' (برخاست) 'always,' هر ; (برخاست) ' 'now' (تى ساعت) (اوسا , (بد اين ساعت) ' then' ، اودى ', since' ، ساكد , (ازان ساعت) ' since' جوسا ' now,' ساكد ', اوند ', there' تيدا ', now,' ' longer, further, نوسه ', thus,' أرو ', to-day,' ' يام خو , (مگر) ' if, perhaps ' أيمشو ' or ', ايم خو , (مگر) ' or ', also ' (only in connection with pronouns, as منيج (يا خود) ' in also'), etc.

The following are a few other words peculiar to the dialect :-- اراكيل' wandering, distracted'; ; (آدر) ' fire 'آدر or آهر ; ' a tear ' اسرین and اسر 'brother ' برا 'father '; بابو 'brother ' يشيو ; 'great'; برك ; 'great'; برز ; (برادر) ' scattered, distressed ' (پریشان); ' time' (بار); جسته 'haste' (جهد); جخت (بار) dition'; جرك ' liver ' جرك ; eye ' جرك; چوار ; 'desert ' چول ; (جبين) ' face ' جمين 'four' (چہار); خال 'lock, ringlet'; دایہ 'mother'; دوستانے 'sound, voice'; دوستانے 'captive'; اويار; 'speech'; راكه; 'road' , اويار; 'wayfarer'; زايله ; (روز) ' day ' روز' cry, lamentation'; زوار 'sad'; زوار 'bridegroom' ; (شيدا) ' mad ' شيت ; woman' ژن ; (داماد) imuch, فرى ; 'distress, lament' شين and شيون many'; كشتين and كشت ,كردين and كرد 'all, whole'; كونا ' daughter '; كذاچه ' cheek ; كونه ' 'old ' (جان); کيان ; (کهن); soul, life ' (جان); کيان (کهن) quarter ' مانك 'a moment ;' مانك 'moon, month '; هترار ; (خواهش) ' desire ' وايد ; ' poor ' isigh, breath '; هذاس ; (حملت) ' sigh, breath '; 'place ' ياكه ; (خون) 'blood ' هون ;' sky ' هور (جاکه); باند 'house' (جاکه).

The contents of the present volume are as follows :—

I. Fol. 1 b. كتاب خورشيد خاور, the tale of Khurshid, son of the king of Khāvar Zamīn, POETRY.-GURAN DIALECT.

and Khirāmān, the daughter of the emperor of China.

دمای (بعد از) حمد ذات جهان آفرین Beg. یاوام پی (آمدم به) تعریف شای خاور زمین شنفتم نــه (از) پدیر دانای هنرور پادشاهی بی (بود) نه (در) ملك خاور

II. Fol. 68 b. كتاب ليلى و مجنون, the well known story of Laili and Majnūn.

The first line is wanting; the next following are:

> واحد بیچون حی بی همتا رازق رزاق یکانم^و تـنیا (تنها) آمین و آمین آیه هل اتا

Both poems are anonymous. They are written in popular style, and in a very simple form of versification. Each line is composed of ten syllables, without any fixed rule in respect to quantity, and is divided by a cesure into two hemistichs of equal length. The Izāfat and the conjunction, when preceded by a vowel, either short or long, form with it one syllable. The following lines, in which the Persian equivalents are added in parenthesis, may serve as a specimen:

Add. 7826.

Foll. 151; 6 in. by 4; 12 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated A.H. 1231 (A.D. 1816) [Cl. J. RICH.] Khuaran and Shirin a Magnani in the Khusrau and Shīrīn, a Maşnavī in the same dialect, and the same measure.

The MS. appears to have been transcribed from an imperfect copy; it begins abruptly with the following lines:

733

کشت بــه پشیو حال بدل کرانی پنجه دا ندل دســتــه زرانــی بشنو جه شیـریــن او شو تا برو هی کرد بشودیــز بــیاد یا هو جه صب تــا بشام رانــا مــنادی طی کـرد مـنـزلان وادي به وادی.

Add. 23,554.

Foll. 53; $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, early in the 19th century. [ROB. TAYLOR.] , a poem in the same dialect, treating of the love adventures of Bahrām, son of King Kishvar, and Gulandām, daughter of the emperor of China. It is imperfect at beginning and end. The first lines are as follows:—

ANTHOLOGIES.

Add. 7825.

Foll. 159; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 9 lines, 3 in. long; written in large Naskhi, apparently in the 14th century. [Cl. J. RICH.] A collection of short poetical extracts, Arabic and Persian, classed according to subjects. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 502.

The names of the authors are seldom given. Of Persian poets the following alone are mentioned:—Firdūsī, foll. 29, 34, 74, 75, Sanā'ī, fol. 11, the author of مقامات الحميدى (Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 57), fol. 61, Anvarī, foll. 12, 62, 83, Nizāmī, fol. 22, and Sa'dī, foll. 11, 38, 59, 134.

The MS., which is imperfect at both ends, and wants some leaves in the body of the volume, begins with the rubric: باب فى المراثى والتعازى وهو ثلاثة فصول الاول فيما يتعلق المراثى والتعازى وهو ثلاثة فصول الاول فيما م . بالاولاد والصبيان A spurious beginning and end, and false catehwords, have been added by a later hand.

Add. 16,561.

Foll. 89; 9 in. by 5; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in fine Nestalik, on tinted, glazed, and gold-sprinkled paper, with eleven 'Unvāns, and nine miniatures of the highest degree of finish; dated Shamākhī (Shīrvān), Rabī' II., A.H. 873 (A.D. 1468); bound in stamped leather.

Select Ghazals from the Dīvāns of twelve poets of the 8th and 9th centuries of the Hijrah. The first heading is انتخاب شيخ كمال

There are similar headings to the remaining sections, each of which contains Ghazals extracted from one Dīvān, and arranged in alphabetical order.

The selections are from the Divans of the following poets:

1. Kamāl Khujandī (p. 632 b), fol. 1.

- 2. Hāfiz Shīrāzī (p. 627 b), fol. 6.
- 3. Amīr Khusrau (p. 609 a), fol. 13.
- 4. Maulānā Kātibī (p. 637 b), fol. 23.

5. Maulānā Ashraf (probably Darvish

Ashraf, who lived under Sultan Muhammad B. Bāisunghar; see Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, p. 71, and Biblioth. Sprenger., No. 1379; compare Sir Wm. Ouseley's Catalogue, No. 152), fol. 41.

6. Amir Shāhī (p. 640 a), fol. 50.

7. Nāşir (a Darvīsh of Bukhārā, who visited Salmān Sāvajī in Baghdād in the reign of Shaikh Uvais, A.H. 757—776; see Daulatshāh, v. 5, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 591, Taķī, Oude-Catalogue, p. 18, and the Upsala Catalogue, p. 103; it is stated in the Țabaķāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 39, that Nāşir died A.H. 772), fol. 57.

ای چشم تو برهم زدة حال دل مارا . زلف تو بر آشفته من بی سروپا را

8. Maulānā Bisāţī (of Samarķand, a disciple of 'lşmat, and the favourite poet of Sultān Khalil, A.H. 807—811; see Daulatshāh, vi. 4, Taķī, p. 19, Laţā'if, fol. 9, and the Upsala Catalogue, p. 111. According to the Ţabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 74, Bisāţī died young, A.H. 808. The Mirāt i Jahānnumā, fol. 308, gives A.H. 815 as the date of his death), fol. 62.

There is a lacune extending from the letter : in the above section to the letter . in the next.

9. Khayāli (p. 639 a), fol. 68.

10. Jāmī (p. 643 a), fol. 74.

11. Tūsī, fol. 80. 'Abd Ullah Tūsī, a native of Khorasan, was attached to Sultan Abul-Ķāsim Bābur, after whose death, A.H. 861, he passed to the court of Jahānshāh. He died in old age, A.H. 869; see Daulatshāh, vii. 12, Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19, Lațā'if, fol. 11, etc.

12. Țăli[†]i (of Samarkand, who died A.H. 858; see Takī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19, the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 311, Lață'if, fol. 11, and the Münich Catalogue, p. 29), fol. 86.

شرف الدين حسين صلطاني : Copyist

Add. 7824.

Foll. 234; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines, $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in fine Nestalik, with goldruled margins and ten 'Unvāns, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

Select Ghazals from the Dīvāns of the following ten poets, ranging from the 7th to the 10th century of the Hijrah, with the heading: ا^نتخاب ديوان شيخ سعدى

1. Sa'dī (p. 595 a), fol. 1.

- 2. Amir Khusrau (p. 609 a), fol. 27.
- 3. Hasan Dihlavi (p. 618 a), fol. 68.
- 4. Kamāl Khujandī (p. 632 b), fol. 88.
- 5. Kātibī (p. 637 a), fol. 109.

 Amir Humāyūn (a Sayyid, of Asfarāin, who lived chiefly in Tabrīz, at the court of Sultan Ya'ķūb. He died near Ķum, A.H.
 908. See Taķî, Oude Catalogue, p. 20, Sām Mirzā, fol. 30, Atashkadah, fol. 35, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 327, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol.
 503), fol. 123.

7. Ahli Shirāzi (p. 657 a), fol. 137.

8. Bābā Fighānī (p. 651 a), fol. 170.

9. Shahīdī, fol. 190. Maulānā Shahīdī, of Ķum, was Malik ush-Shu'arā in the reign of Sultan Ya'ķūb (A.H. 883—896). After that king's death he repaired to India, and settled in Gujrāt, where he died, nearly a hundred years old, in A.H. 935. See Sām Mīrzā, fol. 99, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 401, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 232, and Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 21.

Beg. بطوف میکدها روز بینوائی ما سفال جرخ بود کاسه کدائی ما 10. Muhtasham (p. 665 b), fol. 207.

Add. 7796.

Foll. 361; $12\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 8; 15 and 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 30 lines in the margins; written in neat Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A vast collection of Kasidahs and Ghazals by various poets, ranging from the fifth to the tenth century of the Hijrah.

The original arrangement of the MS. has been disturbed, and, as many leaves are lost here and there, it is not possible to restore it with any degree of certainty. The Kaṣīdahs, followed by some Tarkīb-bands, oceupy the central space of the pages, without any apparent system of classification, except this, that poems composed in the same measure, and with the same rhyme, by different poets, are grouped together. But the authors' names are, with few exceptions, omitted.

The Ghazals are written in the margins, partly promise ously, partly in a number of alphabetical series, each by one author. These connected series belong to the following poets : Aşafī (p. 651 b), foll. 6–11. Hasan of Dehli (p. 618 a), foll. 42-63. Kāhī (probably Kāsim Kāhī, of Kābul, a pupil of Jāmī, who died in Agra, A.H. 973; see Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 384, and Blochmann, Ain Akbari, p. 209), foll. 63-73, 207-211. Shāhī (p. 640 a), foll. 74—108. Bisātī (p. 735 a), foll. 108–113. Haidar (probably Haidar Kulichah-paz, of Herat, who died A.H. 959; see Takī, p. 22, and Sām Mīrzā, fol. 106), foll. 211—230, 122—138. Ahī (a Turkish Amīr, who was attached to Gharīb Mīrzā, son of Abul-Ghāzī Sulţān-Ḥusain, and died A.H. 927; see Oude Catalogue, pp. 21, 327, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 578), foll. 139, 140, 167—189, 231-2. Ahlī Khurāsānī (p. 657 a), foll. 233—244, 253—260, 141—144. Salmān (p. 624 b), foll. 144—146. 'Iṣmat (Khwājah 'Iṣmat Ullah, of Bukhārā, who was the favourite poet of Sulţān Khalīl and of Mirzā Ulugh Beg, and died A.H. 829; see Daulatshāh, vi. 5, Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19, and Haft Iķlīm, fol. 592), foll. 147—163.

Add. 19,494.

Foll. 85; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated the 28th year (probably of Shāh 'Alām = A.H. 1200, A.D. 1786).

Select Ghazals by some of the most popular poets of Persia from the 7th to the 10th century of the Hijrah, arranged in one alphabetical series.

The most frequently recurring names are those of Jāmī, Sa'dī, Hāfiz, Khusrau, Salmān, Hilālī, Shāhī, Aṣafī.

Or. 1228.

Foll. 59; $5\frac{5}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{5}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

Select Ghazals by various poets, arranged in alphabetical order under each of the following names: Khwājah Hasan, fol. 1 b, Jāmī, fol. 18 a, Hāfiz, fol. 21 a, Shāhī, fol. 35 b, Ahlī, fol. 46 a. Appended are some Rubā'īs and Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 51 a.

Add. 6634.

Foll. 214; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; written in Nestalik, in three columns with about 16 slanting lines in each, apparently in the latter part of the 17th century.

736

1

[J. F. HULL.]

Select verses by poets of the latter part of the 10th and of the 11th century of the Hijrah.

The extracts are confined, with but few exceptions, to one or two lines, but sometimes they form a series belonging to one poet, whose name is given in the heading. The general arrangement appears to be chronological.

It may be seen from an original folio'ing, beginning with 397 (fol. 188) that the MS. once formed part of a larger volume.

The more extensive extracts are :- مجوعه محود عنه a Sufi poem in the form of a Tarji'-band, by Kashfi (Amir Ṣāliḥ; see p. 154 a, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 456), completed, as stated at the end, A.H. 1030, foll. 82—S8. stated at the end, A.H. 1030, foll. 82—S8. j, a poem by Vaḥshi (p. 663 b), foll. 160—180. فرهاد وشيرين (see p. 674 a), foll. 180—187. A fragment of a fairy tale in prose, the hero of which is called Tamim, foll. 46—54.

Add. 6633.

Foll. 242; 8⁴ in. by 4⁴; 14 lines, 2⁴ in. long; written in fair Shikastāh-āmīz, with gold-ruled margin; dated Rabi^{*} I., A.H. 1117 (A.D. 1705). [J. F. HULL.]

رياض العشاق

A collection of choice verses by ancient and modern poets, suitable for quotation in elegant letter-writing.

صادق بن شمس الدين على كود كيلوئي

ای رقعہ از مرقعات تو سپہر . Beg.

The author states in the preface that he had made this compilation by desire of his patron, Zulfaķār Khāu (the well-known Amīr of Aurangzīb's reign, who was put to death A.H. 1124), and adds in the epilogue that it was completed in A.H. 1117. The date is conveyed by the chronogram :

VOL. II.

The work is divided into four sections termed , with minute subdivisions. The MS. is, as stated at the end, the second draft written by the author himself.

Add. 16,802 and 16,803.

Two uniform volumes of 429 and 453 foll.; 8½ in. by 4¾; 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in fair Shikastah-āmīz; dated Lahore, Zulka'dah, A.H. 1152, and Muḥarram, A.H. 1153 (A.D. 1740). [WM. YULE.]

A Persian anthology compiled by Mirzā Bīdil (see p. 706 b).

It contains choice pieces by a vast number of poets from the age of Khāķānī to the author's time, classed according to the various styles of poetical composition, and arranged, in each class, in alphabetical order according to the rhymes.

Poems written by different authors in the same measure and with the same rhyme are grouped together. The names of the poets are given in versified headings liko the following: بادشاء معراج سخن كلام قدسي, and بادشاء سرير معنى اسير

Contents: Kaşidalıs, Add. 16,802, fol. 3 b. Ghazals, ib. foll. 135-429, and Add. 16,803, foll. 1-136.

Mu'ammūs, or riddles, Add. 16,803, fol. 136. Rubā'is, fol. 139. Mustazād, fol. 200. Ķiţ'ahs, fol. 212. Short pieces in Maşnavī rhyme, fol. 224.

Longer Mașnavis by the following poets:

1. Salim (Muhammad Kuli, a native of Teheran, who was first attached to Mirzä 'Abd Ullah, governor of Lähijan. He subsequently went to India, and found a patron in Islām Khān, an Amīr of Shāhjahān. He died in Kashmir A.H. 1057. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 556, Mir'āt Āftābnumā, fol. 141, Mirāt Jahānnumā, fol. 356). 2. Ashraf (Muhammad Sa'īd, of Māzandarān, who went to India and became the instructor of Zib un-Nisä Begam, daughter of Aurangzib, and a favourite of Bahādur Shāh. He died at Monghyr some time after the death of that prince. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 340, Haft Asman, p. 158, and Mir'at Jahannuma, fol. 307). 3. Mīr Yahyā (a native of Kāshān, who went to India, wrote a Shāhnāmah for Shāhjahān and poems in praise of Dārāshikūh, and died A.H. 1074. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 115, Mir'āt Āftābnumā, fol. 157, and Mir'āt Jahānnumā, fol. 410). 4. Hakīm Ruknā (p. 688 a). 5. Țālib Amulī (p. 679 b).

Mukhammasāt, fol. 293. Maşnavīs descriptive of female beauty, by Mirzā Bīdil, fol. 388. Maşnavīs on moral subjects by the same, fol. 402. Letters and other compositions in prose by Bīdil and other writers, fol. 411. Musaddasāt, fol. 423. Riddles in prose, fol. 432. Versified chronograms relating chiefly to the death of poets, and brought down to A.H. 1121, fol. 434. A tale of a simple-minded Brahman and the wiles of his artful wife, in prose, foll. 444—451.

The margins contain, besides some additional short poems, the following pieces :---1. زاد العارنيد, a tract in six Bābs, ascribed to the celebrated Sufi, Khwājah 'Abd Ullah Anṣārī (see Haj. Khal. vol. iii. p. 526), Add. 16,802, foll. 12-23. 2. نصائي "ingenious observations," by 'Abd ul-Aḥad, surnamed Vaḥdat, ib. foll. 23-26. 3. نصائي و مراعظ wingenious, "counsels and exhortations," by Nakhshabī, foll. 27-30. 4. معراج خيال, an erotie poem by Tajallī (Mullā 'Alī Rizā, a native of Ardakān, province of Yazd, stayed some time in India during the reign of Shāhjahān, and spent the latter part of his life, under Shāh 'Abbās II. and Sulaimān, in his native land, where he died A.H. 1088. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 150, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 89), Add. 16,803, foll. 388-393. 5. مباحثه مباحثه کوکنار و تنباکو, "a contest between poppy and tobaeco," a Masnavī by Mujrim (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 183), foll. 393-397. 6. Letter of Ni'mat Khān 'Alī (p. 268 b) to Irādat Khān Vāzih, foll. 403—408. 7. نقليات بزركان, "anecdotes of the great," foll. 408-411. ,رساله جشن حسن و عشق Extracts from by the same Ni'mat Khān, foll. 411-414. 9. كلشن راز , a Tarji by 'Urfi (p. 667 a), and other poems of the same kind, foll. 434-441.

Add. 7822.

Foll. 185; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 10 lines, $1\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Shikastah-āmīz, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Rabī' II., A.H. 1063 (A.D. 1653).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

A collection of Rubā'īs by the four following poets :

1. Sahābī (see p. 672 b), fol. 1.

2. Abu Sa'id B. Abil-Khair (see p. 342 b, the Oude Catalogue, p. 309, and Ethé, "die Rubā'is des Abu Sa'id," Sitzungsberichte der Bayer. Akademie, 1875, p. 146), fol. 133.

3. Mullā 'Abd ul-Vāsi' Ardabīlī, poetically surnamed Mahvī, fol. 154.

This poet, who is generally called Mir Mughīş Maḥvī Hamadānī, and is celebrated for his Rubā'is, was born in Asadābād, near Hamadān, and studied in Ardabīl. After a stay in India under the patronage of the Khānkhānān ('Abd ur-Raḥīm), he returned to his native land, and died in Hamadān, A.H. 1016. See Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 585, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 424, Badāonī, p. 343, Atashkadah, fol. 116, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 420. The last work mentions another Maḥvī Ardabīlī, whose proper name was 'Abd ul-'Alī, and who died in Burhānpūr A.H. 1025.

4. Bābā Afzal Kāshī, fol. 170.

یا رب جو بر ارنده حاجات توی .Beg

Afzal ud-Dīn, of Kāshān, died A.H. 707; see Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 17, and Atashkadah, fol. 107.

Or. 328.

Foll. 54; 83 in. by 41; 17 lines, 23 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A collection of satires written by various poets on their contemporaries.

The text has many short gaps, apparently owing to holes in the MS. from which it was transcribed.

Add. 24,987.

Foll. 157; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 8 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik for Mr. James Ewing, Registrar of Bhāgalpūr; dated April 1811.

A collection of elegies by various poets, on the martyrs of Karbalā, with the following title: "Murseeah, or Lamentation for Hosein the Imam and Martyr, as recited at Shiraz during the first ten days of Mohurrim."

Contents :--

 "Death of the Prince of Martyrs," by Karbalā'ī Shīrāzī, مواقعة جناب سيد الشهدا من , واقعة جناب شيد الشهدا من , fol. 2 b.

2. Leave-taking of the Prince of Martyrs from Sayyid Sajjād, by Nasīmī, واقعه وداع واقعه وداع نمودن سيد الشهدا با سيد سجاد عليه السلام من كلام input fol. 33 a.

چه ماتم است که چشم زمانه کریان است . Beg.

3. A Mukhammas, beginning: شد تازد باز باز fol. 45 b.

4. A lamentation, نوحة سينه زنان, beginning: روحة مينم كو حسينم كو حسينم كو حسينم كو

6. An elegy, beginning: عزای شاه شهید, fol. 51 a.

7. Another elegy, beginning: هلال محنت, of l. 53 b. The poet's name Akbar اکبر occurs near the end, fol. 74 a.

8. The lamentation of Sakinah نوحة سكينة, preceded by a short narrative in prose, fol. 75 a.

ای اسپ در از خون نو چه کردی پدرم را Beg.

The poet's name, Rafi'ā رفيعا occurs in the last couplet, fol. 82 b.

9. Two narratives in prose, without title, followed by a few verses, foll. 82 b, 88 b.

10. Departure of Imām Husain for the RR2 field and his martyrdom, حديثه ميدان رفتن امام , fol. 90 a, with a short prose narrative.

The verses begin thus:

بیا ای شمر یکدم فرصتم ده

The last couplet contains the author's name, خليلا Khalīlā, fol. 98 a.

11. An elegy on the martyrdom of 'Abd Ullah B. Hasan, by Mukbil, واقعه در بيان شهادت عبد الله بن حسن عليه السلام من كلام مقبل fol. 98 b.

زد ماه محرم بفلك خيمه ديبا ... Beg.

12. Elegy on the departure of the Holy Family from Karbalā for Kūfah, and the story of the mason, by Mukbil, حركت واقعه حركت نمودن اهل بيت عصمت از كربلاى معلى بكوفه و حكايت بنا من كلام مقبل

13. Another Vāķi'ah by Muķbil, رواقعة مقبل, fol. 120 a.

14. Another Vāki'ah on the martyrdom of the Christian of Kūfah, without title or author's name, fol. 127 b.

. روایت است که در کونیان نصارائی Beg.

15. A Vāķi'ah, without title, on Zu-l-Janāh ذو الجناح, the horse of Husain, and his return to the tents after his master's death, fol. 134 a.

روایت است که بعد از شهادت شه دین .

The author is Khalīlā خليلا, whose name appears at the end, fol. 143 b.

16. A lamentation on Imām Ḥusain, نوحه, fol. 145 a.

یاران برادر من عباس زار نومید Beg.

It is followed by some other lamentations, without special titles or author's name.

سید حیدر علی عرف میر جان : Seribe

ORNATE PROSE.

Add. 26,300.

Foll. 139; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 16 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Kāngrah (Panjāb), Sha'bān, the third year of Bahādur Shāh (A.H. 1121, A.D. 1709). [Wm. ERSKINE.]

جزئيات و كليات

Discourses, in mixed prose and verse, on the human body, considered as the noblest of God's creations, and as evidence of His greatness.

Author: Ziyā ud-Dīn Nakhshabī ضياء الدين نخشبي تحميد حميد احد قل هو الله احد الله الصمد .Beg. خطبه احديت

Ziyā ud-Dīn Nakhshabī, so called from Nakhshab or Nasaf, the modern Karshī, a town situated between Samarkand and the Oxus, led a secluded and religious life in Badā'un, and died, as stated by 'Abd ul-Hakk, Akhbār ul-Akhyār, fol. 91, A.H. 751. He left, according to the same writer, numerous works, among which the المالك المالك (the present work), and خاص نامع alone mentioned by name. He is also the author of Lizzat un-Nisā (see p. 680 b), and the tale of Ma'sūm Shāh and Naushābah, entitled Gulrīz. Compare Elliot's History of India, vol. vi. p. 485, and Stewart's Catalogue, p. 85.

740

The work is divided into forty sections called ناموس, each of which treats of a distinct part of the human body. It is therefore sometimes referred to as چل ناموس In the subscription of the present copy it is designated as خاموس اکبر but the above title is that which is given to it in the preface, where Kutb ud-Din, i.e. Mubärak Shäh Khilji (A.H. 717-721), is mentioned as the reigning sovereign.

Add. 18,187.

Foll. 104; 8½ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

شبستان نكات وكلستان لغات

"The night-show of ingenuities," a collection of conceits, or "jeux d'esprit," in prose and verse.

Author : Fattāhī, نتاحى

حمد خدایرا که چشمه میم حمدش دریای است . در حد کمال کرم و دائره میم نعمتش سفره ایست در نعت نوال قدم

Yahyā Sībak, of Nīshāpūr, was one of the most eminent writers in prose and verse of the reign of Shāhrukh. He first adopted the takhalluş Tuffāhī, evidently suggested by his surname Sībak, but changed it afterwards to Fattāhī. He uses also occasionally Khumārī and Asrārī as poetical surnames. His most celebrated works are Shabistān i Khayāl (the present work) and Husn u Dil. He died A.H. 852. See Latā'if, fol. 9, Daulatshāh, vi. 16, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 148, and Takī, Oude Catalogue, p. 19.

The lines above quoted give a fair sample of the puerile subtleties in which the work deals. They turn chiefly on the changes effected in the meaning of words by removal or transposition of some letters.

The author states in the introduction that he commenced the Shabistān after finishing his Husn u Dil, and gives the date of composition, A.H. 843, in the following line at the end:

The work, which is generally called شبستان , is divided into eight Bābs. The contents have been stated by Fleischer in the Leipzig Catalogue, p. 399, and by Hammer, Jahrbücher, vol. 64, Anzeige Blatt, p. 18. See also the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 587, and the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 31.

The Husn u Dil has been translated by Wm. Price, London, 1828. See the catalogues of Leipzig, p. 397, St. Petersburg, p. 404, Krafft, p. 49, and Vienna, vol. i. p. 419.

Add. 7610.

Foll. 80; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1125 (A.D. 1713). [Cl. J. RICH.] The same work.

Add. 25,868.

Foll. 102; 8[‡] in. by 6; 13 lines, 3[‡] in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, in the district of Bardwan, about the close of the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.]

The prose works of Zuhuri (see p. 678 a).

The first four are in praise of Ibrāhīm 'Adilshāh, and describe the splendours of his court and residence.

I. Zuhūri's preface to Nauras, نورس, a treatise on Indian music composed by Ibrāhīm 'Ādilshāh, fol. 2.

II. His preface to Khwān i Khalīl, خوان , fol. 12.

اي از تو بر اهل تخت و المليل سبيل .Beg

III. His preface to Gulzār i Ibrāhīm, للذار, fol. 33.

خرمی چمن ^{من}خن بطراوت حمد بهار پیرائی است . Beg

IV. Mīnā Bāzār, مينا بازار, a description of the Bāzār so called, built by Ibrāhīm 'Adilshāh in Bījāpūr.

V. Letters, تعات, of a lover to his beloved, fol. 76 b.

شهید تبسم دیت عشوه ٔ خون بها Beg.

The above works are popular school-books in India, and have been frequently published. The first three have been printed, under the title of سه نشر ظهوری, in Lucknow, 1846, and in Cawnpore, A.H. 1269, and A.D. 1873. The Mīnā Bāzār has been lithographed with a commentary in Dehli, A.H. 1265, and in Lucknow, A.H. 1282. The fifth, known as بنج رتعه ظهوری, has been edited with commentaries in Cawnpore, A.H. 1280.

Add. 16,852.

Foll. 330; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastahāmīz; dated A.H. 1141—1147 (A.D. 1729— 1735). [WM. YULE.]

The prose works of Ṭughrā, الطغرا.

Mullā Ṭughrā i Mashhadī, a native of Mashhad, went to India about the close of Jahāngīr's reign, and, after staying some time in the Deccan, repaired to the court of Shāhjahān, and was attached as Munshī to Prince Murādbakhsh, whom he accompanied on his expedition to Balkh. He subsequently went to Kashmīr, in the suite of the Dīvān Mīrzā Abul-Ķāsim, and spent there the latter part of his life in great seclusion. He died some years after the accession of Aurangzīb.

In the Mir'āt ul-'Alam, composed A.H. 1078, he is spoken of as dead. See Vāķi'āt i Kashmīr, fol. 120, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 279.

The compositions of Ṭughrā, which are much admired in India, are written in a most artificial style, and so overloaded with metaphors and fanciful imagery as to render the discovery of their subject matter a by no means easy task. A short notice on some of them by Ziyā ud-Dīn Khān will be found in Or. 1941, fol. 26. A volume containing eighteen tracts by Ṭughrā, and his letters, with a commentary, has been printed in Cawnpore, 1871, under the title of dغراى رسادل See also Stewart's Catalogue, dغراى مشهدى eluit , and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. vi. p. 136.

The contents of the present MS. are-

I. جوش بلبل "the outpouring of the nightingale," also called معيار الادراك "the standard of perception," in praise of the Dīvān of Ḥāfiz, fol. 1 (Cawnpore edition, No. 5.)

پیش رو ساز^شخن تراندء حمد خالقست . Beg.

II. نردوسيه, "the Paradisiacal," a description of Kashmir, fol. 7. (Cawnpore edition, No. 1.)

ثنای بہار پ_یرائی. که انکشت سبزہر Beg.

III. تحقيقات, or "verifications," treating of the names of the planets, and their use in poetical imagery, fol. 23. (Cawnpore edition, No. 3.)

از بس غلط است حرف قاموس فلك . Beg.

IV. بجمع الغرايب, or "collection of wonders," a description of the lake Kamam ركم fol. 26. (Cawnpore edition, No. 8.)

742

چه نویسم از وسعت دریاچه کمم Beg.

Itappe ars from the heading that this was the piece which first called the attention of the King of Golcunda upon the author.

V. مرتفعات, description of a Darbār at the Court of Jahāngīr, fol. 29. (Cawnpore edition, No. 7.)

VI. مرآت الغترم, "the mirror of victories," treating of the conquest of Balkh and Badakhshān by Prince Murādbakhsh, from the 19th to the 21st year of Shāhjahān (A.H. 1055—7), fol. 33. (Cawnpore edition, No. 4.)

یکه تازان میدان تقربر از دولت ستایش . ناصری

VII. الهاميد, "the inspired," a Sufi tract, fol. 42. (Cawnpore edition, No. 2.)

VIII. تذكرة الاتعيا, "memorial of the godly," or eulogies on twelve eminent contemporaries, Shaikhs, Ķāzīs, physicians and poets, living in Kashmīr [among the latter are Kalīm Hamadānī (p. 686 a), and Mīr Ilāhī (p. 687 b)], fol. 53. (Cawnpore edition, No. 14.)

طغرا تا کی تیغ زبان تیز کنی Beg.

IX. جليات, "manifestations," a description of the beauties of Kashmir, with a eulogy upon Mir Husain Sabzavārī, fol. 56. (Cawnpore edition, No. 13.)

X. كنز المعانى, " the treasury of ideas," in praise of Shāh Shujā', fol. 63. (Cawnpore edition, No. 6.)

XI. تاج المداع, "the crown of eulogies," in praise of Murādbakhsh, fol. 67. (Cawnpore edition, No. 10.)

سر خسروی و قلم بذکارش ثنای شهنشا هی است .Beg

XII. مشابهات ربيعى, comparisons drawn from the spring and other seasons, fol. 77. (Cawnpore edition, No. 9.)

The author wrote this tract, as appears from the conclusion, while engaged on the revision of the Firdausiyyah.

XIII. خمسته ناتصة, "the defective quintet," a diatribe against five personages of the Court of Golconda, fol. 81.

XIV. مرات العيوب, "the mirror of blemishes," a satire on Pulchi Khan, an Amir of the Court of Goleonda, fol. 83.

پولچی همه وقت باده، عنابی نیست Beg.

XV. Petition addressed by Mullā Sāți' ملا to Shāh Bahādur for a Jāgīr, fol. 87.

XVI. عنبر نامد, "the book of ambergris," an exposure of the plagiaries of Naşîrā i Hamadānī from "the late" Zuhūrī (p. 678 a), fol. 89.

در حالتی که تیغ جان خراشرا قلمتراش شمردی .Beg

From a versified heading it appears that this tract is not by Tughrā, but by Muķīmā, the same apparently as Muķīm Kāshī, to whom one of Tughrā's letters is addressed (see fol. 122 a).

XVII. Fol. 99 b. Ţughrā's letters to contemporaries, such as Shāh Shujā', Ķāzī Nizāmā, Mīrzā Sanjar, the calligrapher Shamsā, Masīh uz-Zamān, Ķāzī-Zādah, Khwājah Lālah, Ţālibā i Kalīm, Bazmī, Mīrzā Abulfath, and others, fol. 99. (Cawnpore edition, pp. 193—270.)

Beg.

Beg

XVIII. كلمة الحق, "a word of truth," a • complaint of the want of liberality of the king and the king's son, fol. 178.

دوران چو در ستایش مزدی بجا نداده Beg.

XIX. انوار المشارق, "the lights of the East," on the joys of spring, fol. 182. (Cawnpore edition, No. 12.)

XX. خود كاشتة, "self sown," on the art of writing, and on some images derived from it, fol. 195.

XXI. آشرب نامه, "Āshūb-Nāmah," in praise of the poetry of Zulālī (p. 677 a), whose seven Maşnavīs are commented upon in turn, fol. 207. (Cawnpore edition, No. 15.)

XXII: تعداد النوادر "enumeration of curiosities," a description of eight stages on the road to Kashmīr, fol. 220. (Cawnpore edition, No. 11.)

XXIII. جوش بلبل, the same as No. I., fol. 223.

XXIV. جلوهيية, a panegyric addressed to Aurangzib on his accession, fol. 228. (Cawnpore edition, No. 16.)

XXV. پریخانه, "the fairy-house," in praise of Shāh 'Abbās II. of Persia, fol. 241.

XXVI. ضيافت معنوى, "spiritual banquet," on a famine in the Deccan, fol. 250.

بدكن سال غم آسايش دلها تحط است . Beg.

XXVII. گريم قلم, "the weeping of the kalam," a description of the rainy season, fol. 256.

جوید زتن خلق نشان تیر اجل

XXVIII. معراج الفصاحة, "the ascent of eloquence," in praise of Sayyid Bahādur Khān, fol. 259.

XXIX. چشمند فيض, "the source of overflow," a formulary of elegant addresses to the sovereign, preceded by a long preamble which contains a fanciful description of the Mi'rāj or Ascension of Muḥammad, fol. 263. (Cawnpore edition, No. 17.)

XXX. ثمرة طبى, "the medical fruit," on images derived from the medical art, fol. 294.

شکر حکیمی که درد بیدرمان ایوب Beg.

XXXI. رجديد جان, a piece containing metaphors taken from music, fol. 310.

نغمه دلنشين بترنم خمد سازنده مقام پذيرد .

XXXII. نمونه انشا, "a sample of composition," in praise of Aurangzib, fol. 326.

سیمین ورقی زیاسمینم دادند. Beg.

Add. 16,875.

Foll. 249; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, the 20th year of Muḥammad Shāh (A.H. 1151, A.D. 1738). [WM. YULE.]

Prose compositions of Ni'mat Khān 'Alī, نعبت خان عالى (see pp. 268 b, 703 a), with some verses by the same, as follows :—

I. رساله هجو حکما, a satire on physicians, fol. 2.

حكيم على الاطلاق از دار الشفاي رحمت Beg.

II. رتعات, letters to Mīrzā Mubārak Ullah Irādat Khān Vāziḥ, to Mīrzā Muḥammad Sa'īd, steward of the imperial kitchen, and other contemporaries, fol. 5.

III. تاريخات فترج عالمكير پادشاة و غيره versified chronograms relating to the victories of Aurangzīb, and other contemporary events, fol. 16.

This section includes some Kașīdahs, satires, and Rubā'īs.

IV. Journal of the siege of Haidarābād (see p. 268 a), fol. 32.

V. شاء عالم بهادرشاء, a Court chronicle of the reign of Shāh 'Alam Bahādur (see p. 272 a), brought down in this copy to the 16th of Rabi' I., A.H. 1120.

Add. 16,866.

Foll. 83; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Rabi' I., A.H. 1154 (A.D. 1741).

[WM. YULE.]

"Subtle Thoughts," by Mirzā Bādil (sce p. 706 b).

لمل

This work, which is included in the Lucknow edition of the author's Kulliyāt, consists of a number of ingenious thoughts and pointed anecdotes, bearing on religious and moral subjects, in mixed prose and verse.

FABLES, TALES, AND ANECDOTES.

Or. 241.

Foll. 193; 9 in. by 5³/₄; 17 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1094 (A.D. 1683). [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

کتاب کلیلہ و دہنہ

The Book of Kalilah and Dinnah, translated from the Arabic version of 'Abd Ullah B. ul-Mukaffa' by Abul-Ma'ālī Nașr Ullah B. Muhammad B. 'Abd ul-Hamīd, الله بن محمد بن عبد الحميد

This version is praised as a model of elegance by Vașșāf in a chapter devoted to Kalīlah and Dimnah, Add. 23,517, fol. 516, and Ahmad Rāzī says in the Haft Iķlīm, fol. 88, VOL. 11. that no Persian prose work was ever so much admired. The latter writer, who mentions Naşr Ullah among the eminent men of Shīrāz origin, states that he was one of the Vazīrs of Khusrau Malik, the son and successor of Bahrām Shāh (who died A.H. 555), and that through the intrigues of his enemies he was east into prison, and finally put to death by that prince's order. See Barbier de Meynard, Diet. Géogr. de la Perse, p. 363. A similar account is found in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 449.

Bahrām Shāh, to whom the work was by his desire dedicated, ascended the throne in Ghaznīn A.H. 512, and, although hardly pressed by 'Alā ud-Dīn Ghūrī, who wrested from him his capital A.H. 522, he maintained himself in the eastern part of his empire until his death, which took place, according to the Guzīdah, A.H. 544, or, as stated in the Rauzat uş-Şafa, A.H. 547.

6 S

The exact date of composition is not stated, but it can be approximately inferred from the author's incidental references to his own time. Thus the death of al-Mustarshid, which took place in A.H. 529, is spoken of, fol. 11, as recent, در این عهد. The Ghaznavi dynasty is said, fol. 7, to have ruled 170 years, which, if counted from A.H. 366, when Subuktigin, according to the Tabakat i Nāsirī, established his rule in Ghaznīn, would come down to A.H. 536. Lastly, when speaking of al-Mansur, fol. 13, the author says that four hundred and odd years (چہار صد و اند سال) had elapsed since his reign. As that Khalif began to reign A.H. 136, this statement could hardly have been written before A.H. 538 or 539.

A notice on the Persian translation, with extensive extracts from Nașr Ullah's preface, has been given by Silvestre de Sacy in Notices et Extraits, vol. x. pp. 94—140. See also Pertsch, Gotha Catalogue, p. 111. A full account of other versions will be found in J. Derenbourg's Introduction to his edition of the Hebrew text.

The work is divided into sixteen Bābs, which follow the order of S. de Sacy's No. 375 (see l.c. p, 114), but bear Arabic headings. The contents are as follows:—Naşr Ullah's preface, wanting the first two leaves, fol. 3 a. Ibn ul-Mukaffa's preface, fol. 15 a. I. The introduction of Buzurjmihr, fol. 21 a. II. Life of Barzūyah, fol. 24 b. III. الاسد الاسد الاسد بالاسد, fol. 33 a. IV. (, inquiry into the conduct of Dimnah, fol. 66 b. v. التفحص عن امر دمند البوم , the dove with the collar, fol. 81 a. VI. النور والسلحفات, fol. 96 a. VII. مالالسك وابن عرس NII. القرد والسلحفات, the hermit and the weasel, fol. 125 b. IX. السنور, the cat and the rats, fol. 128 a. x. البراك وطاير فنزه ابن the cat and the rats, fol. 128 a. x. البراك وطاير فنزه ابراك وطاير فنزه Fanzah, fol. 134 b. XI. وطاير فنزه Iion and the jackal, fol. 142 a. XII. الاسد العدر العربي بلاه الما العام المال والنبوه برالاسد براه المال المال والنيف برالاسي المال والنيف الماليف بلاه الماليف والفيف الماليف بلاه الماليف والفيف الماليف بلاه الماليف والفيف الماليف بلاه الماليف والماليف الماليف بلاه الماليف والحاب الماليف بر السابي المالي والمحاب الماليف والمحاب الماليف الماني المالي والمحاب الماليف والمحاب الماليف الماليف الماليف المان والماليف والمحاب الماليف والمحاب الماليف الماليف الماليف المان والماليف والماليف والمحاب الماليف والماليف والماليف الماليف المالي

Add. 5965.

Foll. 88; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Naskhī, with 'Unvān and ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 626 (A.D. 1229).

Explanation of the Arabic verses which occur in Nașr Ullah's version of Kalilah and Dimnah. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 478.

Author: Fazl Ullah B. 'Uşmān B. Mu-فضل الله بن عثمان بن بن مثمان الله عثمان من عثمان من من

The work is dedicated to the Vazīr Majd ud-Daulah Abul-Hasan 'Alī ul-Mustaufī, who is called the pride of Khwārazm and Khurāsān. At the end the author claims the reader's indulgence on account of his youth, and states his intention to explain also the verses contained in the Book of Sindbād verses contained in the Book of Sindbād

Add. 7620.

Foll. 136; 9 in. by 6; 15 lines, 4½ in. long; written in bold Naskhi with vowelpoints, apparently in the 13th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Makāmāt, or narratives written in rhymed prose, with a copious admixture of Arabic and Persian verses.

The work is commonly known as مقامات from its author Ķāzī Ḥamīd ud-Dīn Abu Bakr Balkhī, whose name, however, does not appear in the text. Ḥamīd ud-Dīn was an eminent judge and poet of the city of Balkh. His contemporary, Anvarī, addressed to him several laudatory poems (see above, p. 555 a); two Ķit'ahs composed by the same poet in praise of the Maķāmāt are quoted in the Haft Iklim, fol. 242. Ibn ul-Aşīr, who calls him ألقاضى ابو بكر المحمودي states in the Kāmil, vol. xi. p. 207, that he died A.H. 559. Haj. Khal. gives his name in full, vol. vi. p. 57

بكر بن عمر بن محمود ألبلخى The Makāmāt i Hamīdī have been printed with marginal notes in Cawnpore, A.H. 1268. Copies are mentioned in Ouseley's Travels. vol. iii. p. 557, Ouseley's MSS., No. 707, Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 557, and the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 30.

The author states in the preface that he had read with admiration the elegant Makāmāt of Badī' Hamadānī and Abul-Ķāsim Harīrī, and had been desired by an illustrious personage, whom to obey was to him law, to match in Persian those masterpieces of Arabic prose. Hence the present work, which was commenced in the month of Jumāda II., A.H. 551. The date of the year, which has been omitted in the present copy, is found in another MS., Or. 2004, in the Cawnpore edition, and in Haj. Khal., l. e.

The Makāmāt, which are twenty-three in number, deal for the most part with scenes of personal adventure and travel, and with dialogues between typical characters; but their main object is the display of an exuberant richness of diction, and of that jingling parallelism which Hariri had brought into fashion. The supposed narrator in each of them is some friend of the author, not named, introduced by the words حکايت کرد . The text agrees with the lithographed edition, which, however, contains an additional Makāmah, the twenty-fourth. The titles, many of which differ from those of the printed text, are as follows :-- 1. , fol. 4 b. II. والشبان, fol. 4 b. المامعة, fol. 8 a. III. في الربيعية fol. 13 a. IV. في الغزو, fol. in a. v. في السكباج, fol. 23 a. VI. في اللغز, fol. 23 a. fol. 29 a. VII. والمعمى fol. 39 a. في المذاظرة . IX. 42 a. IX في التصوف . ٧١١١ , fol. 50 a. x. الوعظ fol. 50 a. بين السنى والمحد , في الفقه .xi العشق .fol. 62 a. xii بغي العشق . fol. 67 b. xIII. في الاعتبار, fol. 73 a. xIV. في رقية المشق .xv في أما. 82 م أبي السفر والمرافقه fol. 86 b. xvi. بني ألجنة, fol. 92 a. xvii. ,في حكومة الزوجين .fol. 97 a. XVIII التفضيل fol. 101 b. XIX. 1 , fol. 106 a. XX. في fol. 110 b. XXI. في مناظرة الطبيب والعجم fol. 118 a. XXII. بغي النسابة fol. 118 a. XXIII. i, fol. 131 b. 125 b.

In the 13th Makāmah it is related how a traveller visits Balkh, then a brilliant and thriving eity, and how returning, after some years spent in a pilgrimage to Meeca, he finds it a heap of ruins. This evidently refers to the devastation of the author's native eity by the Ghuz in A.H. 548.

The 22nd Makāmah contains versified lists of the Khalifs in Arabic and Persian. They are brought down to al-Mustanjid (A.H. 555—566), who is spoken of as the reigning Khalif.

s s 2

In an epilogue headed بفصل در عذر کتاب, which in the present copy follows the 21st Makāmah, but in the printed text is found at the close of the work, the author says that, overwhelmed by the calamities of the time, he had not found it in his heart to proceed further, but had brought his work abruptly to a close. The next-following Makāmah is preceded by these words, inserted by some copyist: المقامتين قد زيدتا فكتبته لما حصلت هذا الكتاب وجدت هاتين قد زيدتا فكتبته this book I found these two additional Makāmahs, and I transcribed it [sic]."

On the first page is found the following title, written by the same hand as the text, in which the work is ascribed to another author, viz. to Naşr Ullah, the translator of Kalīlah and Dimnah: المقامات بالفارسية تاليف الامير المعالى نصر الامام الاجل السيد الاوحد العالم ابى المعالى نصر الله بن محمد بن عبد الحميد قدس الله روحه العزيز لمخزانة كتب الاجل المنعم عماد الدين وجيه الاسلام ابى الفضل سعد بن الحيين ادام الله افضاله

Or. 255.

Foll. 132; 9 in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik, with goldruled margins, for the library of Sulțān-Muḥammad Ķuṭubshāh; dated Ḥaidarābād, Ramaẓān, A.H. 1031 (A.D. 1622).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

كتاب سندباد

The book of Sindbād, or the tale of the king's son and the seven Vazīrs; wanting the first page.

Author: Bahā ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. 'Alī B. Muḥammad B. 'Umar uz-Zahīrī ul-Kātib us-Samarkandī, بہام الدین محمد بن علی بن

محمد بن عمر الظهيري الكاتب السمرقندي

According to 'Aufī, quoted in Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 281, Zahīr ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. 'Alī Kātib Samarķandī was for a long time minister (صاحب ديوان) to Ķilij Ṭamghāj Khān. He left, as stated in Haft Iķlīm, fol. 559, the following three works : 1. سندباد اغراض contained in the present MS., 2. السياسة اغراض (Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 368), and 3. سمع سمع (Haj. Khal., vol. i. p. 368), and 3. السياسة The second, which is, like the first, dedicated to Ķilij Ṭamghāj Khān, is not dated, but was written, as shown by its contents, after the death of Sanjar, A.H. 552. See the Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 14.

Very little is known of Kilij Țamghāj, a Turkish Khān, who reigned in Turkistan in the sixth century of the Hijrah. Ibn ul-Aşīr mentions him in the Kāmil, vol. xi. p. 55, as early as A.H. 524, and the poet Razī ud-Dīn of Nīshāpūr, who died A.H. 598, is stated in the Haft Iklīm, fol. 307, to have been his panegyrist and favourite adviser.

The present work begins with a long exordium in his praise, in which he is called ركن الدين والدنيا غيات الاسلام والمسلمين ظل الله فى [read ركن الدين والدنيا غيات الاسلام والمسلمين ظل العالمين قتلغ بلكا ابو المظفر قلي طعماج [طمغاج [طمغاج Ite is described as a great monarch, who had returned after a long absence to his hereditary dominions, and who, after vanquishing his foes in Tūrān in the year fifty-six (i.e. A.H. 556), had restored peace and the reign of justice in his vast empire.

In the next section, fol. 11 b, the author, whose name and titles are written as follows: ميكويد مقرر اين كلمات ومحرر اين مقامات الصدر الاجل الاوحد ملك الادباء والكتاب بهاء الدين سعد الاسلام صاحب النظم والنثر معجز البيانين مفخر اللسانيين بحر الفصاحت والبلاغه مقبل زمان وعلامة جهان فريد الدهر وحيد العصر محمد بن على بن محمد بن عمر الظهيرى وحيد العصر محمد بن على بن محمد بن عمر الظهيرى called Sindbād. It had been compiled, he says, in Pehlevi by the sages of Persia, and had never been translated, until the Amīr Nāşir ud-Dīn Abū Hāmid Nūh B. Manşūr Sāmānī ordered Khwājah 'Amīd Abul-Favāris Ķanāvarzī تناورزى to turn it into Persian. This was done in the year 539, تناورزى (the date is obviously wrong, for Nūh B. Manşūr reigned A.H. 365—387), but in bare and unadorned language; and that version had almost fallen into oblivion, when the author undertook to write a new one, graced with all elegances of polite speech, in order to immortalize the name of his sovereign.

The tale, which begins on fol. 17, agrees in substance with the Greek Syntipas described by Loiseleur de Longchamps in his "Essai sur les fables indiennes," pp. 93-137, and with a version in Persian verse, composed A.H. 776, and analyzed by F. Falconer in the Asiatic Journal, vol. 35, p. 169, and vol. 36, pp. 4 and 99. An earlier poetical version by Azraki, mentioned by Daulatshah and the Burhan i Kāți', appears to be lost. The present version is noticed under the title of Sindbad Namah, by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 620, who, however, calls the author Kazvini instead of Samarkandi. There exist two other translations in Persian prose; one of them, forming part of Nakhshabi's Tūtī Nāmah, has been edited by H. Brockhaus, and another, by Shams ud-Din Muhammad Daka'iki, a poet of Marv, is mentioned by Haj. Khal., l.c., and in the Haft Iklim, fol. 223.

Notices on the origin and early versions of the Book of Sindbād will be found in the Fihrist, p. 305, in S. de Sacy's Fables de Bidpai, Notices et Extraits, vol. ix. p. 404, Gildemeister's Script. Arab. de rebus Indieis, p. 12, Benfey's Bemerkungen über das Indische Original der Sieben Weisen Meister, Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 188-203, Comparetti, Ricerche intorno al libro di Sindibad, and Fr. Baethgen, Sindban oder die Sieben Weisen Meister.

Add. 16,862.

Foll. 392; $13\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 8; 33 lines, $4\frac{5}{5}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi, with 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century. [WILLIAM YULE.]

A large collection of anecdotes.

Author: Muhammad 'Aufi, San 200

ثنا و حمد مبدعی را که از بدایت صنایع وجود .Beg

The author, whose full name was Nur ud-Din Muhammad 'Aufi, as stated in the Habīb-us-Siyar, vol. ii. Juz 4, p. 163, the Nigāristān (see Krafft's Catalogue, p. 87), and the Tärikh i Firishtah, vol. i. p. 117, is mentioned in the first and third of the above works as one of the eminent writers who lived in Dehli during the reign of Iltatmish (A.H. 607-633). In the Mir'at ul-Advar, fol. 36, and Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 510, he is called Jamal ud-Din Muhammad 'Aufi. He is known as the anthor of the earliest Persian Tazkirah, لباب اللباب, a work described by Bland, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. ix. pp. 112-126, and by Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, pp. 1-6. We learn from passages of his works that he had studied in Bukhārā, that his grandfather Kāzī Abu Tāhir Yahyā B. Tāhir ul-'Aufī, was a nativo of Māvarā un-Nahr (or, according to Bland's copy, of Marv), and that his maternal uncle Majd ud-Din Muhammad B. 'Adnan had written for Sultan Ibrähim [B.] Tamghāj Khān a history of the Turkish kings (see Jāmi' ul Hikāyāt, fol. 369, and Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 122).

'Aufī appears to have been a great traveller; he was in Nasā in A.H. 600, and visited Khwārazm and Kambāyat. He made a lengthened stay at the residence of the Sultan Nāṣir ud-Dīn Ķubāchah, to whose Vazīr, 'Ain ul-Mulk Ḥusain ul-Ash'arī, his Lubāb ul-Albāb is dedicated, and after whose fall he passed over to the court of the conqueror, Shams ud-Dīn Iltatmish.

The author's exordium is devoted to the praise of the last named sovereign, and of his Vazīr, Nizām ul-Mulk Ķivām ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. Abi Sa'īd ul-Junaidī. Then follows an account of the siege of Bhakar, in which Sultan Nāṣir ud-Dīn Kubāchah had sought a refuge from the invading forces of Iltatmish. The fortress was taken by the Vazīr above named on the 10th of Jumūda I., A.H. 625, and on the 19th the fugitive king perished in the river. The author, who was among the besieged, did homage to the victorious Vazīr, and completed for him the present work, which had been commenced by desire of Sultan Nāsir ud-Dīn.

The Jāmi' ul-Hikāyāt consists of anecdotes, detached narratives, and miscellaneous notices, either eulled from historical works, or derived from oral information. It is divided into four parts (kism), each of which is subdivided into five-andtwenty Babs, as follows :- Kism I. 1. Knowledge of 'the Creator, fol. 5 α . 2. Miracles of the prophets, fol. 11 a. 3. Supernatural powers of saints, fol. 20 a. 4. Early kings of Persia, fol. 28 a. 5. The Khalifs, fol. 49 a. 6. Excellence of justice, and stories of just kings, fol. 84 α . 7. Lives and memorable traits of kings, fol. 92 a. 8. Witty sayings of kings, fol. 100 b. 9. Regimen of kings, fol. 104 b. 10. Answers to petitions, fol. 110 a. 11. Instances of sagaeity, fol. 114 a. 12. Sound judgment, fol. 123 a. 13. Wiles and stratagems, fol. 138 b. 14. Able Vazīrs; (eight leaves are wanting after fol. 146, so that the latter part of Bab 13 and the beginning of the next are lost). 15. Advice given by sages and holy men to kings, fol. 154 a. 16. Pithy answers, fol. 160 a. 17. Anecdotes of Kāzīs and Ulamās, fol. 167 b. Anecdotes of secretaries, fol. 173 a. 19. Favourites, fol. 178 b. 20. Physicians and philosophers, fol. 180 a. 21. Interpreters of dreams, fol. 182 a. 22. Astrologers, fol. 185 a. 23. Poets, fol. 186 b. 24. Singers, fol. 188 b. Wits, fol. 189 b.

Kism II. Aneedotes illustrating praiseworthy qualities, as modesty, humility, forgiveness, elemency, etc., in twenty-five Bābs, fol. 196 b.

Kism III. Anecdotes relating to blameable qualities, as envy, avarice, covetousness, etc., similarly divided, fol. 274 b.

Kism IV. 1. Advantages of the service of kings, fol. 325 b. 2. Drawbacks of the service of kings, fol. 327 b. 3. Fear and hope, fol. 329 a. 4. Efficacy of prayer, fol. 331 a. 5. Prayers handed down by tradition, fol. 332 b. 6. Curious omens, fol. 334 b. 7. Escapes from persecution, fol. 336 a. 8. Escapes from brigands, fol. 338 α . 9. Escapes from wild beasts, fol. 339 b. 10. Men who perished in the whirlpool of love, fol. 342 a. 12. Men who escaped from the whirlpool of love, fol. 344 b. 12. Men who escaped from the abyss of perdition, fol. 354 b. 13. Wonders of destiny, fol. 358 b. 14. Marvels of ereation, fol. 361 b. 15. Longevity in animals, fol. 363 α . 16. Countries and routes, a sketch of geography, fol. 365 b. 17. Account of Rūm, Arabia, Abyssinia, and India, fol. 368 b. 18. Remarkable buildings, fol. 371 a. 19. Strange talismans, fol. 374 a. 20. Curious properties of natural objects, fol. 376 b. 21. Temperaments of animals, fol. 378 a. 22. Wild beasts, fol. 382 b. 23. Strange animals, fol. 386 a. 24. Curious birds, fol. 25. Facetiousness of the great, 388 a. fol. 390 b.

On the first page is a note written in Bījāpūr, probably in the 17th century. The last seven leaves of the MS. have short gaps, apparently due to the mutilated state of the copy from which it was transcribed.

The headings of the Jāmi' ul-Ḥikāyāt are given in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 410, and, from a Turkish version, in the Jahrbücher, vol. 70, Anzeige Blatt, pp. 77-82. Some extracts, with Professor Dowson's notice on the author, will be found in Elliot's History of India, vol. ii. pp. 155-203. See Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 728, Sir Wm. Ouseley's Travels, vol. ii. p. 363, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 56.

750

Or. 236.

Foll. 541; 11¹/₂ in. by 8; 29 lines, 6¹/₄ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 16th or 17th century. From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same work.

The beginning and end of the MS., viz., foll. 3—18, 536—541, are older than the middle part, probably of the 15th century. That portion was transcribed, as stated at the end, from a MS. dated A.H. 712.

Add. 7672.

Foll. 252; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 22 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1025 (A.D. 1616).

[Cl. J. RICH.] Kism III. and Kism IV. of the same work. There are about two pages wanting at the beginning of each Kism.

Or. 1584.

Foll. 34; 8 in. by 5³; about 32 lines, 3³ in. long; written in small cursive Nestalik; dated Kars, A.H. 1133 (A.D. 1721).

[SIR HENRY C. RAWLINSON.] A collection of anecdotes and miscellaneous notices, without preface or author's name.

On the first page is found the title كتاب On the first page is found the title للتاب والغرايب five Babs into which the work is divided. They are as follows: 1. Stratagems of wise men for warding off enemies. 2. Properties of minerals. 3. Properties of animals. 4. Rare animals. 5. Strange birds. 6. De-7. Praiseworthy qualities of vices of kings. kings. 8. Witty sayings of kings. 9. Speech and silence. 10. Fidelity and good faith. 11. Longevity. 12. The seven elimes, countries and races. 13. Remarkable buildings. 14. Talismans. 15. Human monstrosities. 16. Strokes of destiny. 17. Ready answers. 18. Anecdotes of Kāzis and Imāms. 19. Good qualities. 20. Firmness. 21. Advantage of taking advice. 21. Temperaments of men. 23. Hate and envy. 24. Cupidity. 25. Ancedotes of covetous men. 26. Avarice. 27. Lying and truthfulness. 28. False prophets. 29. Pretensions which saved men from ruin. 30. Anecdotes of fools. 31. Facetiæ. 32. Thieves. 33. Beggars. 34. Wiles of women. 35. Instances of chastity.

The work appears to have been compiled in the seventh century of the Hijrah. Imām Muḥammad 'Aufī is twice named, and several anecdotes are taken from his Jāmi' ul-Ḥikāyāt; but, on the other hand, no later dynasty than that of the Khwārazmshāhis is mentioned. The present copy, written by 'Alī B. Muḥammad Shirvānī, contains only an abridgment made by him, as appears from the subscription : هذا مما انتخبه الفقير الى الله هذا مما انتخبه الفقير الى الله الغنى على بن محمد الشروانى فى بلدة قرص سنة نلمه وتُاثمين بعد الف وماية من الهجرة النبوية

Add. 7673.

Foll. 359; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 8; 21 lines, 5 in. long; written in Naskhi; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 903 (A.D. 1498). [Cl. J. RICH.]

ترجمة الفرج بعد الشدة والضيقه

Narratives of wonderful cases of deliverance from distress or escape from danger, translated from the Arabic by Husain B. As'ad B. Husain ul-Muayyadī ud-Dihistānī, حسين بن اسعد بن حسين المويدي الدهستاني

حمد و ثناء قیومی ا که عجز عقول

Beg. The author states in the preface that he had been desired by the illustrious Vazir 'Izz ",الفريومدى ud-Din Ţāhir B.Zingi ul-Faryumadi "who had restored peace and prosperity to a distracted world," to produce a work on the above subject, and, finding nothing more appropriate than the Arabic work entitled by Abul-Ḥasan 'Alī B. الفرج بعد الشدة والضيقه Muhammad ul-Madā'inī, he had selected it for translation.

There can be no doubt, however, that the original of the present translation was the of Abu 'Alī الفرج بعد الشدة of Abu 'Alī ul-Muhassin B. Abil-Kāsim 'Alī, commonly called al-Kāzī ut-Tanūkhī, who died in Basrah, A.H. 384. (See Ibn Khallikān's translation, vol. ii. p. 564, the Kāmil, vol. ix. p. 74, Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 411, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 213.) Kāzī Tanūkhī is frequently named in the body of the work as the narrator, and he is distinctly designated as the author in the following introduction to one of the anecdotes, fol. 261 a := "The author of the work says as follows: My father, Kāzī Abul-Kāsim ut-Tanūkhī, relates," etc. This evidently refers to the father of the same writer, viz. Abul-Kāsim 'Alī B. Muhammad ut-Tanūkhī, who died A.H. 342 (see Ibn Khallikan, vol. ii. p. 564).

The attribution of the work to al-Madāinī, a much earlier writer, appears to be an error of the translator, who probably mistook one of the authorities quoted by Kāzī Tanūkhī for the writer of the book. Abul-Hasan 'Alī

B. Muhammad ul-Madā'inī, a native of Başrah, lived in Mada'in, and subsequently in Baghdād, where he died A.H. 224 or 225, leaving several works treating of the history of the Arabs and of the early wars of Islamism. See Ansāb us-Sam'ānī, fol. 515, and the Kāmil, vol. x. p. 368.

Copies of the same version, all ascribing the original work to al-Madā'inī, are noticed in Fleischer's Dresden Catalogue, No. 135, and in the catalogues of Münich, p. 56, St. Petersburg, p. 408, and Vienna, vol. iii. p. 451. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 84, No. V.

In the present copy the work is divided into thirteen chapters, each containing a large number of detached narratives. These consist for the most part of historical anecdotes relating to the times of the Umayyades and of the Abbasides down to the fourth century of the Hijrah. The Arabic verses are given in the original language, with metrical paraphrase by the translator, who not unfrequently adds to the text verses and remarks of his own.

Add. 7717.

Foll. 167; 10 in. by $5\frac{2}{3}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{5}{3}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Safar, A.H. 1074 (A.D. 1663). Cl. J. RICH.

King Kishvargīr and princess Mulk-ārāi, a Hindu tale, written in ornate prose, copiously interspersed with Arabic and Persian verses.

صد هزار جواهر زواهر حمد و سیاس Beg. The author, whose name is written, fol. محمد صدر علاء احمد حسن دبير : 8 b, as follows describes ,عيدوسي الملقب بتاج المعروف باختسان himself as a native of Dehli, an hereditary servant of the Court, and a secretary of the .ديوان الانشا ,royal chancelry

A flowery preface, which occupies no less

752

From Faryumad, a town of the district of Sabzavar, the birthplace of Khwājah 'Alā ud-Dīn Muhammad, Vazir of Khorasan under Sultan Abu Sa'id. See Daulatshāh, v., 6, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 2, p. 61.

than forty-six pages, begins with panegyrics on the reigning sovereign Muḥammad Shāh B. Tughluk Shāh (A.H. 725—752) and his predecessor Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Abul-Muẓaffar Tughluk Shāh. Then follows a detailed account of the latter's expedition to Tirhut (A.H. 725; see Firishtah, vol. i. p. 406). The author, who was in the Sultan's suite, describes the overwhelming heat and other hardships he had to endure on the return journey to Dehli. There he fell ill, and was only saved by the skill of the great Hakim Muḥammad Khujandī.

During his convalescence the present tale was brought to him for his amusement, and, as it was written in very plain language, he was requested to draw it up in elegant prose, a task which he completed in the space of a few months, A.H. 726, being then in his twenty-sixth year. He concludes with a grateful acknowledgment of the favours showered upon him by Muhammad Shāh, who for a single Kaşīdah had given him sixty thousand Dīnārs and sixty horses.

The scene of the tale is laid in India. The Rājas of Ujjain and Ķinnauj are the principal actors.

Royal 16 B. XII.

Foll. 272; 9½ in. by 5½; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ardibihisht, in the year 1039 of Yazdajird (A.D. 1670).

[THO. HYDE.]

طوطی نامه

The tales of a parrot, a Persian version by Ziyā'i Nakhshabī, ضياى نخشبى (see p. 740 b).

The author says in the preface that some great personage, whom he does not name, had shown him a book containing fifty-two tales, originally written in the Indian tongue, and, as the translation was prolix, inelegant, and ill-arranged, had requested him to rewrite it in a more attractive form. He adds that in so doing he has in some instances substituted new stories for inferior tales. The work was completed, as stated in some verses at the end, in A.H. 730.

VOL. 11.

This copy was written by a Pārsī, Khwurshīd B. Isfandiyār, surnamed ادهارو, for Captain Aungier, کیتان الجن.

The Tūțī Nāmah has been translated into English by M. Gerrans, London, 1792, and its abridgment by Ķādirī into German by C. J. L. Iken, Stuttgart, 1837. The latter version contains an appendix on Nakhshabī's work by Kosegarten. See also Pertsch, Ueber Nachschabi's Papagaienbuch, Zeitschrift der D. M. G., vol. xxi. p. 505, and Benfey, Göttinger Gelehrte Anzeigen, 1858, p. 529. A Turkish imitation of Nakhshabi's Tūțī Nāmah has been translated into German by Georg Rosen, Leipzig, 1858.

Add. 5627.

Foll. 168; 10 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, early in the 18th century.

[NATH. BRASSEY HALHED].

The same work, wanting a few lines at the end.

Add. 6638.

Foll. 469; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, 3 in. long; written in large Nestalik, about the beginning of the 18th century.

[J. F. HULL.]

The same work, wanting about six leaves at the end.

Add. 10,589.

Foll. 149; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 9 lines, $3\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. An abridged version of the Tūtī Nāmah, by Abul-Fazl B. Mubārak, ابو الفضل بن مبارك (see p. 247 b).

بعد سپاس خداوند زمان و زمین و ستایش دادار .Beg

This abridgment was written, as stated in the preface, by order of Akbar. It contains, like Nakhshabi's version, fifty-two tales.

The preface and the first thirty-five tales have a Dakhnī translation written between the lines.

Add. 12,401.

Foll. 63; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Indian Shikastah, apparently in the 18th century.

[J. CRAWFURD.]

The abridgment of Nakhshabi's Ṭūṭī Nāmah, by Muḥammad Kādirī, حمد قادرى.

بعداز جنس جنس ثنا وصفت پيداكنندة آسمان .Beg

The author says in a short preamble that, the style of Nakhshabī being hard and difficult to be understood, he had found it expedient to put his work into plain and intelligible language. The number of the tales is reduced from fifty-two to thirty-five.

The thirty-third tale is repeated at the end, foll. 56—63, in another hand.

Ķādiri's Tūţī Nāmah has been printed with an English version in Calcutta, and in London, 1801. See Kosegarten, Anhang zu Iken's Tūţī Nāmah, p. 175.

Add. 6964.

Foll. 115; 9 in. by 7; about 15 lines in a page; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley on paper water-marked 1806.

Tales extracted from Kädiri's Tūtī Nāmah, with the English translation transcribed from the Calcutta edition, and two short narratives from another source.

Add. 16,864.

Foll. 38; 9 in. by 6; 10 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik; dated Ilāhābād Ramazān, A.H. 1194 (A.D. 1780).

[WM. YULE.]

Another abridgment of the Tales of a Parrot, in still plainer language than Kādiri's.

حمد و سپاس قادر بیچون را که طوطی خوش لتجه .Beg

It contains only the four following tales: The merchant's son and the bird shārak. The goldsmith and the carpenter. The four companions. The Brahman's son and his wife.

Add. 16,813.

Foll. 202: 10 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

نگارستان

A collection of moral anecdotes, in prose and verse.

Author : Muʿīnī ul-Juvainī, معينى الجوينى Beg. حمد و سپاس خدائى را كه ازليتش از سمت بدايت

Maulānā Mu'īn ud-Dīn, born in Āvah, near Juvain, died about the close of the eighth century of the Hijrah. He was a man of great piety, and a disciple of Shaikh Sa'd ud-Dīn Hummū'ī in Sufism, and of Fakhr ud-Dīn Asfarā'inī in sciences. See Ilāhī, Oude Catalogue, p. 85, Taķī, ib., p. 19, and Haft Iķlīm, fol. 322.

After eulogies on the reigning sovereign, Abu Sa'id Bahādur Khān, and his Vazīr Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Muḥammad, son of the eclebrated Rashīd ud-Dīn, the author says that, Sa'di's Gulistān having been once praised in an assembly of learned men in his father's house, he observed that, notwithstanding its undeniable merit, it had the drawback of being too well known, and that it was time to produce a similar work which had the charm of novelty, a task which his father encouraged him to perform. That design, however, was not carried out until much later, in A.H. 735. The title was suggested by the name of a garden near Nīshāpūr, called Nigāristān, which the author happened to visit about that time. The work is dedicated to Muʿīni's spiritual guide, Sa'd ud-Dīn Yūsuf B. Ibrāhīm B. Muḥammad ul-Muʿayyad ul-Ḥummūʿī, a grandson of the famous Sufi, Sa'd ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. ul-Muʿayyad Ḥummūʿī, who died A.H. 650; see Nafaḥāt, p. 492.

The Nigāristān is divided into seven Bābs, with the following headings :---

See Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 381, Uri, p. 271, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 732.

Add. 7775.

Foll. 78; 7½ in. by 4¾; 13 lines, 2¾ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A collection of moral anecdotes, in prose and verse, by Jāmī (see p. 17 a).

چو مرغ امر ذی بالی زآغاز . نه از نیروی حمد آید به پرواز

The author wrote it, as stated in the preface, while he was reading Sa'dī's Gulistān with his son, Ziyā ud-Dīn Yūsuf, and in imitation of that work. He divided it into eight Rauzahs, and dedicated it to Sultān Husain. The date of composition, A.H. S92, is expressed in the following line at the end:

The Bahāristān has been edited, with a German translation, by Freiherr von Schlechta Vssehrd, Vienna, 1846. It has been printed in Lucknow without date, and, with a Turkish commentary, in Constantinople, A.H. 1252.

Add. 19,810.

Foll. 170; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{5}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 962 (A.D. 1584).

The same work, with Turkish glosses on the first six pages.

Add. 26,287.

Foll. 83; 6¹/₄ in. by 4¹/₄; 15 lines, 2⁸/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work.

The last three leaves are supplied by a later hand.

Add. 10,002.

Foll. 137; 8 in. by $5\frac{4}{5}$; 21 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

A Turkish commentary upon the Bahāristān, with the text, by Sham'i (see p. 607 a).

Beg. حمد و سپاس بي عد خداې که عليم وحکيم The work is dedicated to Muḥammad Pāshā, Grand Vazīr of Sultan Murād B. Salīm (A.H. 982—1003).

See the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 357, the Gotha Catalogue, p. 107, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 52.

Add. 18,579.

Foll. 426; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 19 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Naskhi with a rich 'Unvān, gold-ruled margins, and thirty-six miniatures in the best Indian style; dated A.H. 1019 (A.D. 1610); bound in stamped and gilt leather. انوار سهيلي

A modernized version of Kalilah and Dimnah by Husain B. 'Alī ul-Vā'iz Kāshifī (see p. 9 b).

حضرت حکیم علی الاطلاق جلت حکمت که .Beg. وظائف

The author states in the preface that, the version of Naşr Ullah (see p. 745 α) being antiquated and difficult to read, he had been requested by Nizām ud-Dīn Amīr Shaikh Ahmad, called as-Suhailī, to re-write the work in an easy and attractive style. In so doing he had left out the first two chapters, as irrelevant, and reduced the work to fourteen.

The above-mentioned Nizām ud-Dīn Shaikh Aḥmad was a Turkish Amīr of the Chaghatāi tribe, and a favourite of Abulghāzī Sulţān Husain. He received the surname of Suhailī from his spiritual guide Shaikh Āzarī, composed a Persian and a Turkish Dīvān, and died A.H. 907, according to Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 20, or A.H. 908, as stated in the Ātaskkadah, fol. 8. See also Daulatshāh, viii. 3, and Sām Mīrzā, fol. 150.

The Anvār i Suhailī has been printed in Hertford 1805, in Calcutta 1804, 1816, and repeatedly since. English translations by E. B. Eastwick and A. N. Wollaston have been published in 1854 and 1878. See S. de Saey, Fables de Bidpai, preface, pp. 42-47.

In a note on the fly-leaf Mīrzā Shīr 'Alī states that this MS., written and illuminated for Tānā Shāh (the last king of Goleonda), had been given him on account of pay at the rate of 500 rupees.

Add. 26,312.

Foll 379; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India; dated Rajab, A.H. 1198 (A.D. 1784.) [WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work.

Add. 26,313.

Foll. 244; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written by different hands, apparently in India, in the 17th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work, slightly imperfect at the end.

Egerton 1106.

Foll. 356; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, 5 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century. [ADAM CLARKE.] The same work.

Add. 6636.

Fol. 326; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in India; dated Jumada II., A.H. 1104 (A.D. 1693).

[JAMES GRANT.]

The same work, with a table of contents, foll. 1-6.

فتم الله ساكن سليم قصبه تپربرارى : Copyist

Sloane 3248.

Foll. 13; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8; 20 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ iu. long; written in Naskhi, by Salomon Negri (see the Arabie Catalogue, p. 335, note c), about the beginning of the 18th century.

The tale of the hermit and the pimp, from the Anvār i Suhailī, with the Turkish version from the Humāyūn Nāmah.

Add. 4945.

Foll. 217; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in neat Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1183 (A.D. 1770).

[CLAUD RUSSELL.]

عیار دانش

A modernized version of Kalilah and Dim-nah, by Abul-Fazl B. Mubārak, ابو الفضل بن (see p. 247 b).

سپاس ازل و ابد خداوندی را که تا کران Beg.

It appears, from a very diffuse preface, that the author had been commanded by Akbar to re-write in plain and easy language the version of Husain Vā'iz, and that he restored in his work the preliminary chapters omitted by the latter, thus bringing up the total number of chapters to sixteen. The new version was completed, as stated at the end, fol. 214 b, in the thirty-third year ofthe reign of Akbar, or A.H. 996. See S. de Sacy, Notices et Extraits, vol. x., pp. 197— 225, Fables de Bidpaï, pp. 47—51, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 286.

Add. 25,832.

Foll. 432; 81 in. by 51; 15 lines, 81 in. long; written in Nashki, apparently early in the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.] The same work.

Or. 477.

Foll. 334; 9 in. by 5[‡]; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins, and 38 miniatures in Indian style; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1803).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same work.

Add. 25,833.

Foll. 97; 9 in. by 5½; 18 lines, 3§ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Bandar Bharoch (Broach), Jumādā II., A.H. 1195 (A.D. 1781). [WM. CURETON.]

مفرح القلوب

Mufarrih ul-Kulūb, the Persian translation of the Ilitopadesa.

حمد سپاس بیقیاس مرحضرت شاهیرا که .Beg. از جمله بندگان خویش

Author: Tāj (i. e. Tāj ud-Dīn B.) Mu'īn ud-Dīn Malikī, تاج معين الدين ملكى.

The translation was made, as stated in a short preamble, by order of Malik Naṣr ud-Dīn (in some copies Naṣīr ud-Dīn), fiefholder of Shikk (?) Bihār, مالك الملوك الشرق مالك الملوك الشرق, a prince whose epoch has not been ascertained.

A full account of this version has been given by S. de Sacy in "Notices et Extraits," vol. x. pp. 226-264. Copies are mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 83, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 29, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 47. A Hindustani translation entitled Akhlāķ i Hindī has been published in Calcutta, 1803. See Garcin de Tassy, Littérature Hindoui, 2nd edition, vol. i. pp. 188, 609.

Add. 18,408.

Foll. 158; 9¹/₂ in. by 5¹/₄; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in fair Nestalik; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1087 (A.D. 1676). [WM. YULE.]

لطائف الطوائف

A collection of witty sayings and anecdotes.

Author: 'Alī B. ul-Husain ul-Vā'iz ul-Kāshifī, called aş-Ṣafī, الكاشفى المشتهر باصفى (see p. 353 a).

The author says that after his release from one year's confinement at Herat, in A.H. 939, he repaired, under untold hardships, to the hills of Gharjistān. There he was graciously received by the Sultan Shāh-Muḥammad, for whose diversion he completed the present work, which he had previously compiled. It is divided into fourteen Bābs, according to the persons, or classes of men, to which the anecdotes relate, as follows: 1. Muhammad. 2. The Imāms. 3.
Kings. 4. Amīrs, royal favourites, and Vazīrs. 5. Men of letters, secretaries, etc.
6. Arabs of the desert, elegant speakers, etc.
7. Shaikhs, 'Ulamā, Ķāzīs, etc. 8. Philosophers and physicians. 9. Poets. 10. Wags.
11. Misers, gluttons, and parasites. 12. Covetous men, thieves, beggars, etc. 13.
Children and slaves. 14. Simpletons, liars, and impostors.

This copy was corrected, as stated at the end, for Major Yule, by Sayyid Muhammad Navāz of Dehli.

The same work is mentioned under the title of لطايف الظرايف in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 26, and Biblioth. Sprenger., No. 1635.

Add. 8915.

Fol. 206; 10 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1233 (A.D. 1818).

The same work.

Or. 239.

Foll. 428; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1079 (A.D. 1668).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

زينت المجالس

A vast collection of anecdotcs and stories, containing also historical, geographical, and other miscellaneous notices.

Author: Majd ud-Din Muhammad ul-مجد الدين محمد , surnamed Majdi, مجد الدين محمد المتخلص بعجدى

ثناي نا متناهی و حمد نا محصور .Beg بران سزاست که شد هر دو کون ازو معمور

The author lived in Persia under Shāh Abbās I. The predilection and minuteness with which he speaks of Kāshān make it probable that it was his native place. He states in the preface that he had begun to arrange his long collected materials at the instance of some friends in A.H. 1004 (Or. 238, fol. 1 b). He enumerates the following works as his principal sources: Jāmi' ul-Hikāyāt by Muhammad 'Aufī, Nuzhat ul-Kulūb, Habīb us-Siyar, Rauzat us-Safā, Kashb ul-Ghummah by 'Alī B. 'Isā (Haj. Khal. vol. v. p. 211), Tārīkh Abu Hanīfah Dinavari, Ibn Khallikan, Bahjat ul-Mabahij by Hasan B. Husain Sabzavārī, Nigāristān by Ghaffarī, 'Ajā'ib ul-Makhlūkāt, al-Faraj ba'dash-Shiddah, Tārīkh i Yāfi'ī, and Tārīkh i Hafiz Abrū.

While following the general arrangement of the Jāmi' ul-Ḥikāyāt (see p. 749 b), the author has adopted a division of his own. The work consists of nine parts (Juz), each of which is divided into ten chapters (Faṣl), as follows:—

Juz I. 1. Knowledge of God, fol. 2 a. 2. Miracles of the prophets, fol. 3 b. 3. Supernatural powers of the saints, fol. 8 a. 4. Early kings of Persia, fol. 18 a. 5. Khalifs, fol. 42 b. 6. Muslim kings contemporary with the Abbasides, fol. 85 a. 7. Anecdotes on justice, fol. 105 a. 8. Traits of the life and manners of kings, fol. 112 a. 9. Witty sayings of the great, fol. 116 b. 10. Instances of sagacity in kings, fol. 119 a.

Juz II. 1. Instances of the divine guidance of kings and their ordinances, fol. 122 a. 2. Cunning devices, fol. 124 a. 3. Penetration, fol. 134 a. 4. Stratagems, fol. 142 b. 5. Skill of Vazīrs, fol. 153 a. 6. Advice of sages to kings, fol. 158 b. 7. Pithy answers, fol. 161 a. 8. Remarkable judgments, fol. 167 a. 9. Anecdotes of secretaries, fol. 171 b. 10. Anecdotes of royal favourites, fol. 176 b.

Juz III. Anecdotes of physicians, fol. 181 a, astrologers, fol. 183 b, poets, fol. 186 a, singers, fol. 189 a, wits, fol. 190 b, interpreters of dreams, fol. 195 a. Anecdotes illustrating modesty, fol. 199 a, humility, fol. 200 a, clemency, fol. 202 a, magnanimity, fol. 206 b.

758

Juz IV. Anecdotes illustrating urbanity, fol. 208 b, compassion, fol. 210 b, trust in God, fol. 212 a, munificence, fol. 213 b, hospitality, fol. 217 b, valour, fol. 220 b, patience, fol. 223 b, gratitude, fol. 224 b, piety, and caution, fol. 227 a.

Juz V. Anecdotes relating to diligence, silence, good faith, peace-making, secresy, probity, good temper, firmness of purpose, the taking of advice, and the diversity of men's dispositions, fol. 230 b.

Juz VI. Anecdotes on envy, greed, and cupidity; anecdotes of knaves, and beggars; stories relating to falsehood, oppression, avarice, bad faith, and foolishness, fol. 251 b.

Juz VII. Anecdotes on harshness, meanness, prodigality, treachery, incontinence, ingratitude, slander, rashness, on vile men, and on pious women, fol. 269 b.

Juz VIII. Service of kings; hope and fear; efficacy of prayer; curious auguries; deliverance from distress; escapes from brigands, from wild beasts, from the pangs of love, from the whirlpool of ruin; wonderful strokes of destiny, fol. 290 b.

Juz IX. 1. On human monstrosities and longevity, fol. 319 a. 2. Geographical sketch of the world, and of Persia in particular, fol. 321 a. 3. Remarkable buildings, fol. 354 a (including an account of the seas which should form part of the preceding chapter, foll. 355 b-358 a). 4. Talismans and wonders of the world, fol. 360 a. 5-7. Properties of domestic and wild animals, fol. 365 a, of beasts of prey, fol. 377 a, and of birds, fol. 379 a. 8. Jokes and pleasantries, fol. 379 a. 9. History of the Moghuls, i.e. Chingiz Khan and his successors, with the Chupāni, Ilkāni, Muzaffari, Kurt and Sarbadar dynastics, fol. 388 a, Timur and his successors in Iran, the Kara Kuyunlus, Ak-Kuyunlus, and the Uzbak Khāns, down to the accession of Abdul-Lațif Khān, in A:H. 947, fol. 405 a. 10. History of the Ṣafavīs, fol. 421 a. The last section contains a sketch of the reign of Shāh Ismā'il. In conelusion, the author, after a short reference to the accession of Shāh Țahmāsp and two of his victories, announces his intention of devoting a separate work to the history of that Shāh's reign.

The present copy wants a leaf which contained the greater part of the preface. One leaf or more, which followed fol. 426 and concluded the account of Shāh Ismā'il's reign, is also lost.

The Zinat ul-Majālis has been printed in Teheran, A.H. 1270. A few extracts are given in Elliot's History of India, vol. ii. p. 506. See also Barbier de Meynard, Dictionnaire Géographique, preface, p. 20, Sir Wm. Ouseley's Travels, vol. i. p. 19, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 679, vol. v. pp. 246, 519.

Or. 238.

Foll. 303; 13½ in. by 8½; 23 lines, 5½ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same work.

This copy wants the latter portion of Fașl 6, Juz i. (Or. 239, foll. 101-4), and Fașls 9 and 10 of Juz ix. (Or. 239, foll. 405-428).

Or. 237.

Foll. 320; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with ruled margins, apparently in the 16th or beginning of the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

A collection of tales.

Author: Muḥanımad Kāzim B. Mīrak Husain Muzaffarī Sajāvandī, poetically surnamed Hubbī, محمد كاظم بن ميرك حسين مظفرى سجاوندى متخلص بحبي بنام خالق دانای رزاق Beg. معلق آفرین جرخ نه طاق

The author says in a short preamble that he was seventy years of age when he compiled these rare and wonderful tales, حکایات. They are stories which he had heard told in the assemblies of the great, and which he had written down in correct and elegant language.

The tales, which are mostly of considerable extent, are partly taken from the Arabian Nights. They are the following:—

Decianus and the seven sleepers, fol. 3 b. Manşūr the jeweller, and Yūsuf the barber, fol. 24 b. Mihr u Māh, fol. 56 a. Sa'd B. Mas'ūd, the jeweller of Isfahan, fol. 89 b. Dallah, the wily woman, fol. 104 a. The Arab, his wife Uriyah, and his brother, fol. 117 b. The prince, his parents, and the questions of the princess of China, fol. 130 b. The wife of the builder, and the Vazirs of the king, fol. 140 b. Prince Shāhanshāh, who became known as Gul-Baghban, fol. Shīrzād, and how the daughter of 156 a. the king of Kābul fell in love with him, fol. 166 a. Solomon's debate with the Sīmurgh on predestination, fol. 176 b. Prince Zain ul-Ihtishām, the king of the Jinns, and the slave Mubārak, fol. 187 a. Salīm the jeweller, and Hajjāj B. Yūsuf, fol. 198 b. The three brothers, and how Hārūn ur-Rashid enquired into their history, fol. 208 a. Rizvänshäh and the daughter of the king of the Paris, fol. 217 a. Fazl Ullah of Mausil and his falling in love with the daughter of the Ra'is Muaffak, fol. 226 a. Hārūn ur-Rashid, Fazl Ullah B. Rabi', and Abul-Kāsim Başrī, fol. 235 a. Khwājah Affān, the son who was born to him in his absence, and Khwajah Uriya, fol. 244 a. The king of Balkh and his dispute with his Vazir about a man without sorrow, fol. 252 a.

The remaining portion of the volume contains tales which gradually decrease in length. The last, relating to a white snake which was saved from death by a king, and turned out to be a king of the Paris, breaks off at the end of the first page.

A modern table of contents occupies two leaves at the beginning.

Add. 7095.

Foll. 167; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 20 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulķa'dah, the 45th year of the reign (of Aurangzīb, i.e. A.H. 1112, A.D. 1701). [J. H. HINDLEY.]

قصه امير حمزة ,The romance of Amīr Ḥamzah حمد موفور و ثناى نا محصور مر ذوالجلال را كه .Beg بقدرت كمال خويش

Hamzah, who was a son of 'Abd ul-Muțțalib, and consequently an uncle of Muḥammad, is here converted into an imaginary hero of romance. The narrative deals at great length with his adventures at the court of Nūshīrvān, his wooing of that king's daughter, Mihrnigār, and his valiant deeds on various expeditions against the giant king of Serendīb, the Ķaiṣar of Rūm, the 'Azīz of Egypt, etc.

This volume is divided into twelve sections called اسمار, each of which is headed by some verses. The narrative concludes with Hamzah's expedition to the mountain Kāf, and his subsequent meeting with Mihrnigār in Tanger.

In the subscription the work is designated as اسمار الحمزة, and ascribed to Shāh-Nāsir ud-Dīn Muhammad, شاء ناصر الدین محمد

The contents correspond with the first twenty-eight Dāstāns, or about the first half, of the next-following MS., Add. 7054, foll. 1-155.

Copies are mentioned in Fleischer's Dresden Catalogue, where the work is ascribed to Abul-Ma'ālī, in the Munich Catalogue, p. 55, the Ouseley Collection, No. 430, Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1628, and a Turkish version is noticed in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 29.

760

The Dāstān i Amīr Hamzah has been lithographed in the press of Navalkishor. An enlarged version called space (see further on, Add. 24,418) has been printed in seven volumes, Teheran, A.H. 1274.

Ashk, the author of a Hindustani version of the Kişşah i Amīr Hamzah, attributes the original to Mullā Jalāl Balkhī. See Garein de Tassy, Hist. de la Litt. Hind., 2nd ed., vol. i. p. 236.

Add. 7054.

Foll. 300; 9½ in. by 6½; 17 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jumãdā II, A.H. 1188 (A.D. 1774.) [J. H. HINDLEY.]

The same romance.

الحمد لله . . . بدانكه قصه حضرت اميـر . Beg. المومنين معروف عرب

With regard to the incidents and their arrangement this version agrees substantially with the preceding; but it is written in much plainer and more familiar style. It is divided into seventy-one short sections, called Dāstān, and closes with the death of the hero, treacherously slain by the mother of Pūr i Hind.

In the subscription the work is called جنك نامد امير المرمنين حمزه, and is ascribed to Hamzah's brother, Haẓrat 'Abbās, who, in the preamble, is stated to have written down from time to time a record of the high deeds of Hamzah. Sixteen additional leaves contain a table of chapters written in Persian and English by the Rev. J. H. Hindley.

Egerton 1017.

Foll. 266; 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik, apparently in India, early in the 18th century.

A version similar to the preceding, and divided in like manner.

VOL. II.

The volume is imperfect at both ends. It begins, fol. 3 a, in the middle of Dāstān 8, treating of the fight of Hamzah with Sa'd B. Ma'dī Karib and his brothers (Add. 7054, fol. 36 b), and breaks off, fol. 264 b, in the middle of Dāstān 68, in which is related the slaying by Hamzah of the giant king of Nayistān (Add. 7054, fol. 289 b, Dāstān 66). A false beginning and end have been added by a later hand.

Or. 1392.

Foll. 317; 8[‡] in. by 7; 14 lines, 5[‡] in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Chināpatan (Madras), Ṣafar, A.H. 1214 (A.D. 1799).

Another version of the same romance, divided into eighty-two Dāstāns.

داستان اول شروع پادشاهی قباد بن پرویز .Beg و کشتن القش وزیر خواجه مجت الجمال را

Although having some leading features in common with the preceding versions, it differs from them very considerably in the succession, relative proportions, and particulars of the adventures, as well as in language.

Add. 24,418.

Foll. 330; $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{3}{4}$; 30 lines, $6\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Shikastah-āmīz, probably in India, early in the 18th century.

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.] An enlarged version of the same romance. The narrative follows the same general course as in the preceding versions, but a great number of new personages and incidents is introduced. Hamzah is uniformly called Amīr Ṣāḥib Ķirān, "the Amīr of the fortunate conjunction," and the title of Ṣāḥib Ķirān is also given to two of his companions, born on the same day as himself, who both play a conspicuous part in this version, namely Mukbil, son of Khair, a slave of 'Abd ul-Muțțalib, and 'Umar, son of Umayyah, the camel-driver.

υυ

The work is divided into a great many sections called Dāstān, but not numbered. The present copy, which is imperfect at both ends, begins with an account of the misdeeds of Arghash, Vazīr of Kaikubād, who is finally put to death, and replaced by Buzurjmihr. The next following rubric is: تال توليد يافتن الم انوشيروان و خواجه بختك و تربيت دادن خواجه ابوزرجمهر انرشيروان ر و معنى هاى بختك عجب داستانيست

In the last section, Hamzah, having alighted in Chihil Manār, at forty farsangs from Khān-Bāligh, the capital of Khatā, sends Mālik Azhdar as ambassador to King Ṣalṣāl. The rubric is partly lost:

The language of this huge composition is quite modern, and shows an admixture of Indian words and phrases.

On the fly-leaf is written صحتاب رموز [sic] همزه [sic]

Add. 8917.

Foll. 224; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 11 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān, ruled margins, and eighteen miniatures in Indian style, probably about the end of the 17th century.

قصهء چهار درویش

The Tale of the four Darvishes.

This story, which has become chiefly known through the Hindustani translation entitled Bägh o Bahār, comprises four tales, in the following order:—Story of the first Darvīsh, fol. 7. Story of the second Darvīsh (the third in Bāgh o Bahār), fol. 50. Story of the King, or the dog-worshipping merchant, fol. 89. Story of the third Darvish (the second in Bāgh o Bahār), fol. 159. Story of the fourth Darvish, fol. 192.

The work is popularly ascribed to Amīr Khusrau Dihlavī. A Ķiṣṣah i Chār Darvīsh in prose is mentioned by Muṣḥafī, fol. 5, among the works of Anjab (see p. 711 a). Sir Wm. Ouseley in his Catalogue, No. 417, names Muḥammad ʿAlī Maʿṣūm as the author of the tale.

Add. 7677.

Foll. 107; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, early in the 18th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work. The text differs slightly from the preceding, but the arrangement is the same. The five stories begin respectively at foll. 4 b, 24 b, 46 a, 86 a, 104 a. The MS. breaks off in the middle of the fifth story.

Add. 5632.

Foll. 106; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shīkastah-āmīz, apparently early in the 18th century.

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

Another version of the same tale. It is written in a more florid style than the preceding, and is copiously interspersed with verses. It differs also in its arrangement, which is as follows:—Tale of the first Darvīsh, fol. 4 b. Tale of the second Darvīsh, fol. 22 a. Tale of the third Darvīsh, fol. 40 b. Tale of the King, fol. 60 b. Tale of the tourth Darvīsh, fol. 90 b.

Add. 6597.

Foll. 78; 10³/₄ in. by 7; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jumādā II., A.H. 1196 (A.D. 1782). [JAMES GRANT.]

762

سنگهاسی بتیسی

The thirty-two tales of the throne. Beg. مهل مر حضرت ملك المتعال و ثناى باركاه ایزد لا یزال

It is stated in the preface that the work had first been translated from the Hindū (هندوى) original into Persian by Chaturbhuj B. Mihirehand Kāyat, of Sonpat, چتر بهوج بن in the time , مهرچند کایت ساکن در شهر سون پت of Akbar, and subsequently by Bhārīmal B. Rājmal Khatrī, during the reign of Jahängir. The present version, written under Shāhjahān, is described as an amalgamation of the two previous translations. The author is called ابن هرکرن. But in another and later version, Add. 5652, fol. 139 b, his name is written as follows: بسب ای ابن هرکربداس کایتهه "Bisbarāi, son of Harigarb-das Kayath, of Kinnauj."

A Persian translation in prose and verse was written by 'Abd ul-Kädir Badä'unī by order of Akbar, and with the assistance of a learned Brahman, in A.H. 982, the title iconveying the date of composition. A revised edition was prepared by the same writer A.H. 1003. See Muntakhab ut-Tavärīkh, vol. i. p. 67, and Elliot's History of India, vol. v. p. 513. A Persian version by Chand, son of Mādhūrām, is noticed in the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 29, and another entitled Gul Afshān, is mentioned in the Khulāşat ut-Tavārīkh (supra, p. 230 a).

For an account of the Sanskrit original and Hindustani versions, see the Journal Asiatique for 1845, vol. ii., p. 278, and Garcin de Tassy, Littérature Hindoui, 2nd ed., vol. ii. p. 233. A French translation from the Persian has been published by Baron Lescallier, New York, 1817.

Add. 5652.

Foll. 140; 9 in. by 6; 13 lines, 3½ in. p. 697 a).

long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the latter half of the 18th century.

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

كشن بلاس

Another version of the same tale. Author : Kishandās Bāsdev, of the Sūbah

It is a revised edition of the preceding version, written for the editor's patron, Amīr ul-Umarā Jār-Ullah, in the reign of Aurangzīb. At the end is an account of previous translators, in which the first is called translators, in which the first is called بچتربہوچ داس ابن سیر چند , and the second بہارامل بن راجمل B. Harigarb Dās is stated to have been written in the 25th year of Shāhjahān, i. e. A.H. 1061-2.

Add. 5653.

Foll. 30; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, about 5 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character; dated Calcutta, Rabī' I., iu the 26th year (of Shāh 'Alam, A.H. 1198, A.D. 1784). [N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

An abridged version of the same tale, without translator's name.

Add. 5623.

Foll. 132; 9 in. by 6; 15 lines, 3[‡] in. long; written in Nestalik, in Bengal; dated A.H. 1188 (A.D. 1774).

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

The story of Kāmrūp and Kāmlatā (see . 697 a).

U U 2

قصد پردازان غرایب آثار و داستان طرازان Beg.

In the subscription this version is ascribed to the "talented poet Muḥammad Ķāẓim," شاعر ماهر محمد كاظم. A poet of that name lived at the court of 'Abd Ullah Ķuṭubshāh. See above, p. 683 b.

An English translation by W. Franklin, entitled "the loves of Camarūpa and Camalatā," has been published in London, 1793. For other copies, see Stewart's Catalogue, p. 85, the Mackenzie Collection, vol. ii. p. 138, and Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 1630.

Add. 6965.

Foll. 328; 9 in. by 7; about 15 lines, 3 in. long; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1812.

The same version, copied from a MS. dated Ramazān, A.H. 1150, with a transcript of Franklin's English translation.

Add. 18,805.

Foll. 572; $12\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $8\frac{3}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik; dated Calcutta, Rajab, A.H. 1185 (A.D. 1771).

The story of Hatim Tā'ī, قصة حاتم طائى, or, as it is called in the subscription, "story of the seven journeys of Hatim," قصه هفت

سير حاتم

The text has been edited by G. J. Atkinson, Calcutta, 1818, and an English translation by Dr. D. Forbes has been published in London, 1828. See the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 33, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 55.

Egerton 1018.

Foll. 148; 9 in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 17th century.

I. Fol. 1. تصمر سيف الملوك, the story of Saif ul-Mulūk, and Badī' ut-Jamāl, a tale from the Arabian Nights.

راویان اخبار وناقلان اثار چنین اورده اند که .Beg در ایام دولت سلطان غزنوي

This version begins with a faneiful introduction: Hasan Mīmandī, the Vazīr of Sultan Mahmūd, sets out from Ghaznah in quest of amusing tales to entertain his sovereign, and finds the story of Saif ul-Mulūk in a book called Rūḥ-afzā, kept in the treasury of the king of Damaseus.

See the Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 27.

II. Fol. 84. قصه گل با صنوبر, the story of Gul and Sanaubar.

حکایت کل با صنوبر جه کرد و صنوبر با کل .Beg. جه کرد

Hindustani versions of the same tale are mentioned by Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind., 2nd ed., vol. i. p. 157.

III. Fol. 112. مصم² هزار گیسو و بادشاه مصر the story of the king of Egypt, his son Azādbakht, and a maiden called Hazār-Gīsū.

Harl. 502.

Foll. 35; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, about the close of the 17th century.

An abridged version of the tale of Saif ul-Mulūk, imperfect at the end.

جنین آورده اند که در شهر مصر بادشاهی Beg. دود نام او صفوان

Add. 25,836.

Foll. 44; 9[‡] in. by 6; 17 lines, 4[‡] in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Ramazān, the 24th year of Muḥammad Shāh (A.H. 1154, A.D. 1741). [WM. CURETON.] Another version of the same tale.

چنین حکایت اورده اند که از بنررکان . و حکیمان روزکار

Add. 15,099.

Foll. 174; 10 in. by 6; 10 lines, 4¹/₅ in. long; written in large Nestalik, with 'Unvān, ruled margins, and six miniatures in Indian style, apparently about the close of the 17th century.

قصه مهر و ماه

The story of Mihr, son of Khāvar Shāh, and the princess Mäh.

راویان اخبار و ناقیلان آثار و مهندسان .Beg داستان کهن

See the analysis of this tale in Garcin de Tassy's Hist. de la Littérature Hindouï, 1st ed., vol. ii. p. 550, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 410.

Add. 16,867.

Foll. 115; 10½ in. by 6½; 17 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Pānīpat, the 2nd year of Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, A.H. 1174 (A.D. 1759-60).

[WM. YULE.]

I. Fol. 3. تصد مهر و ماه, another version of the same tale.

II. Fol. 69. تصد سيف الملوك, the story of Saif ul-Mulūk and Badī' ul-Jamāl, differing from the version above mentioned, p. 764 b. چنین اورده اند که روزی از روزها سلطان . محمود

, قصم شاد همايون فال ودلارام . III. Fol. 103 the story of Shāh Humāyūn Fāl and Dilārām.

راویان اخبار و ناقلان اسمار جذین روایت . میکنند که در زمان پیشین

Add. 18,409.

Foll. 363; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1146 (A.D. 1734). [WM. YULE.]

بہار دانش

Bahār i Dānish, the romance of Jahāndār Sulţān and Bahravar Bānū, a story which serves as a frame for the insertion of many other tales.

Author: Shaikh 'Ināyat Ullah, شيخ عنايت (see p. 263 a). According to a chronological table, Add. 6588, fol. 12, he died on the 19th of Jumada I., A.H. 1088.

فاتحدم كـتاب مستطاب افرينش وإسيرايد .Beg

The preface is by the author's younger brother and pupil, Sālih, who states that the work was completed in A.H. 1061. It is followed by an introduction, in which 'Ināyat Ullah says that the tale is not his own invention. He professes to have merely given a Persian garb to a story which he had heard in the Indian tongue from the lips of a youthful Brahman.

The work has been printed in Calcutta, 1809 and 1836 in Dehli, 1849, in Lucknow, without date, and in Bombay, A.H. 1877. It has been translated into English by Alexander Dow, London, 1768, and by Jonathan Scott, Shrewsbury, 1799; lastly from the latter version into German by A.T. Hartman, Leipzig, 1802. Copies are noticed in Stewart's

765

FABLES, TALES, AND ANECDOTES.

Catalogue, p. 84, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 32, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 54.

Add. 25,840.

Foll. 271; 9 in. by 5; 19 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Shikastahāmīz, apparently in the 17th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

بہار دانش

The same work, slightly imperfect at the end.

Add. 7674.

Foll. 276; 9 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{3}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently about the close of the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The same work, wanting the last page.

Egerton 1019.

Foll. 269; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{5}{4}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvān and ruled margins, probably about the close of the 17th century.

The same work, wanting about six leaves after fol. 2.

Add. 6152 and 6153.

Two uniform volumes; foll. 227 and 221; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Indian Nestalik, in the first half of the 18th century.

The same work.

This copy belonged to Jonathan Scott, who made use of it for his translation. An abstract of the contents, written by himself, occupies the fly-leaves at beginning and end of each volume.

Add. 26,314.

Foll. 308; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{7}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated KhujistahBunyād, Rabī' I., in the 13th year of Muhammad Shāh (A.H. 1143, A.D. 1730).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

The same work. Copyist : محمد حسن ولد شيخ كمال

.

Add. 6640.

Foll. 292; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently early in the 18th century. [J. F. HULL.] The same work.

Add. 5564.

Foll. 144; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik for Capt. John Burdett; dated 'Azīmābād, Muḥarram, A.H. 1185 (A.D. 1771).

The same work.

Add. 5607.

Foll. 324; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1188 (A.D. 1775).

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.] The same work.

عبد النبى بنكالى بردوانى : Copyist

Add. 6639.

 Foll. 238; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

 long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi II.,

 A.H. 1190 (A.D. 1776).
 [J. F. HULL.]

 The same work.

Add. 6968-6997.

Thirty volumes, $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$, with an average of 90 foll. per volume, and 12 lines in a page; written on one side only of a paper water-marked 1806, by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley.

The same work, with a transcript of Jonathan Scott's translation.

Or. 242.

Foll. 87; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{5}{4}$; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, on tinted and gold-sprinkled paper, with 'Unvān and goldruled margins, apparently about the close of the 17th century. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

محرم راز

A collection of fables and anecdotes, in prose mixed with verses.

Author : Bahrām, son of 'Alī-Mardān, Bahādur Tūgh Arslān Khān, بهرام ولد عليمردان

بهادر طوغ ارسلان خان

Beg. الجه ميزان طبع تستجد همه اسم است

The preface, which is imperfect, contains a eulogy upon Aurangzīb as the reigning sovereign. The author, who calls himself the humble Bahrām, بہرام خاکسار, and claims an Uzbak origin, concludes most of his narratives with a moral or religious application conceived in true Sufi spirit, in the form of an allocution to the "man of understanding" Jēc. Several of his anecdotes relate to Indian saints.

A notable portion of the work, foll. 52-74, is devoted to a record of some episodes in the warlike career of 'Alī Mardān Bahādur, who is described as the most gallant champion in the service of Akbar, and especially of the prowess he displayed in taking possession of the estate of Būndī, in Rājputānah, a Jāgīr assigned to him by the emperor. Several Hindī couplets composed in his praise by the poet Gang are quoted. Although the hero of these adventures bears the name which the author gives to his own father, nothing is there said as to any relationship between them.

'Ali Mardan Bahadur, who served under Akbar and Jahangir, from A.H. 984 to his death, distinguished himself especially in the Deccan wars. He fell severely wounded into the hands of Malik 'Anbar, A.H. 1021, and died two days later. See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 377, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 496.

Add. 25,839.

Foll. 100; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Bhūpāvar (territory of Gualior), Ramazān, A.H. 1243, A.D. 1828. [WM. CURETON.]

کشایش نامه

Stories of wonderful escapes.

Author: Khwājah Rājkarn, خواجة راجكرن

The work, which has no preface, contains six tales, written in a florid style, and entitled كشايش, the seene of which is laid in India. The date of composition, A.H. 1100, is expressed by several versified chronograms at the end, where the author is described as an inhabitant of Ruhtak (Thornton's Rohtuk, forty-two miles north-west of Dehli).

The MS. was written by Mirzā Haidar 'Alī Beg for Doctor J. Gibson.

Add. 7619.

Foll. 342; 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{3}$; 26 lines, 5 in. long; written in Naskhī; dated Jumādā I., A.H. 1215 (A.D. 1800). [Cl. J. RICH.]

A collection of moral tales and anecdotes. Author: Barkhwurdär B. Mahmūd Turkmān Farāhī, poetically surnamed Mumtāz,

The author does not give the date of composition; but he mentions as his contemporaries two Amīrs, Ṣafī Ķulī Khān and Aşlān Khān, who lived in the reign of Shāh Sultān Husain, A.H. 1105—1135. See Zinat ut-Tavārīkh, foll. 691, 693, and Malcolm's History of Persia, vol. i. p. 614.

In a diffuse preface, written in a stilted and ambitious style, he gives an account of his life and of the origin of the work, from which the following particulars may be gathered. He left in early life his native place, Farāh, for Marv Shāhijān, where he entered the service of the governor, Aslān Khān. Two years later he proceeded to Ispahan, and became Munshi to Hasan Kuli Khān Shāmlū, then filling the office of Kūrchī Bāshī. There he heard in some assembly a delightful tale, which he was requested by a friend to adorn with the flowers of his rhetoric, and which he consequently wrote down under the title of حکایت رعنا و زیـبا. As he added to it in course of time a number of other storics, the work swoll into a large collection, containing no less than four hundred tales, divided into an introduction, eight Babs, and a conclusion, to which he gave the name of 1,1 .

Some time later the author returned to Farah, from whence, after some stay in Herat and in Mashhad, he betook himself to the district of Darūn and Khabūshān, and there remained three years in the service of Minuchihr Khān B. Karchaghāi قرچغاى Khān. This Amir had been appointed governor of the province in order to check the inroads of the Chemishkazak, چهشکزك, a savage and predatory tribe, on which the author heaps every term of abuse. He then relates how in one of those raids all his goods were plundered, and among these the precious MS. of the Mahfil-ārā, on which he had bestowed so many years of labour. All attempts to recover it having failed, the author, in order to assuage his grief, and to comply with the entrcaties of a friend, wrote down again such portions as he had retained in his memory. Hence the present work, which is divided, according to the preface, into an introduction, five Bābs, and a Khātimah. That division, however, is not thoroughly carried out in either of our two copies.

It is written in florid prose, freely interspersed with verses, mostly of the author's own composition. The arrangement is systematic, the tales being grouped under the moral maxims, or rules of life, which they are intended to illustrate.

On the first page of the present copy is found the title کتاب رعنا وزیبا. It does not properly apply to the whole work, for it belongs, as above stated, to the first tale written by the author, which forms the Khātimah of the present collection, foll. 289-342.

The Maḥbūb ul-Kulūb has been printed in Bombay, A.H. 1268.

Or. 1370.

Foll. 450; 12 in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $4\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, with two 'Unvāns, gold-ruled margins, and fifty-five miniatures in Persian style; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1220 (A.D. 1806).

[Sir CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.] The same work.

میرزا محمد رحیم : Copyist

Add. 8918.

Foll. 288; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 14 lines, $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, for Capt. Geo. Burnes; dated Rabī' II., A.H. 1217 (August, A.D. 1802).

فرح بخش

The love-story of Rāi Ratan Sen, of Chitaur, and Padmāvat, daughter of Gandharb Sen.

Author: Lachhmī-Rām, of Ibrāhīmābād (district of Ghāzīpūr), متوطن قصبه ابراهیم آباد

Beg. شكر وفور بدركاة رب الغفور و حمد نا محصور It appears from the preface that this prose version is founded on the poem of 'Akil شمع و پرواند Khān Rāzī (see p. 699 a), entitled شمع و پرواند (see the Oude Catalogue, p. 123).

The well-known tale of Saif ul-Muluk and Badi' ul-Jamal is inserted, foll. 109-220, as told by one of the actors in the main story.

On the Hindi versions of the tale of Padmāvat by Jatmal and Jaisi, see Garcin de Tassy, Littér. Hind., second edition, vol. ii. pp. 67, 86, and Pavie, Journal Asiatique for 1856.

Add. 8916.

Foll. 119; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik, in the 18th century.

دبستان خرد

A collection of moral anecdotes.

Author: Muhammad Ismä'il Sami, entitled Nu'mān Khān, محمد اسماعيل سامي مخاطب بتعمالخان

حبد ميدع که آسمانيا و زمينيا Beg.

The work, which is dedicated to Muhammad Shāh, was written in Akbarābād, A.H. 1135, in answer to a challenge to match Sa'di's Gulistan, and was completed in eightyfive days. The author gives his name incidentally, fol. 31 a, when stating that he had accompanied Aurangzib on his expedition against the Rānā.

We learn from the Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 104, that Nu'mān Khān was raised to the Khanship towards the close of Aurangzib's reign, and died in the time of Muhammad Shah.

The work is divided into eleven Babs, and a Khātimah. Many of the anecdotes relate to incidents of Indian history, especially to Aurangzib and his time; the verses are the author's own.

On the first page is written, "George Harriott, 1798."

Add. 25,834.

Foll. 259; 11 in. by 8; 17 lines, 51 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shavval, A.H. 1154 (A.D. 1741). WM. CURETON.]

نوادر النقول في مآثر العقول

A collection of anecdotes.

Author: Abul-Fath B. Muzaffar, ابو العقر بن مظفر رطائف تحميدات بيشمار وطايف [ووظايف] . Beg. تحمدات

The author says that he had compiled this work, at the request of his son Muhammad Nişār 'Alī, chiefly from the following works : Tabari, Jāmi' ul-Hikāyāt, Tārikh i Banākiti, Ibn Khallikan, Mau'izat-Namah, written by Kaikā'us B. Sikandar B. Kābūs for his son Gilanshah (i.e. Kabus Namah), Tarikh i Al i Saljūk, by Muhammad B. Abi 'Abdullah un-Nizām ul-Husaini, and Ma'ārij un-Nubuvvat. He states at the end that it was completed in A.H. 1151.

It is divided, according to subjects, into twenty-one Babs, as follows : -1. Muhammad and his miracles, fol. 4b. 2. The first four Khalifs, fol. 17 b. 3. The Imams and Companions, fol. 31 b. 4. Saints, fol. 55 a. 5. 'Ulamā, fol. 101 b. 6. Philosophers, fol. 144 b. 7. Kings, fol. 117 a. 8. Vazirs and favourites, fol. 132 b. 9. Secretaries, litterati, cup-companions, fol. 140 b. 10. Sages and physicians, fol. 143 a. 11. Poets, fol. 151 b. 12. Arabs of the desert, fol. 154 b. 13. Interpretation of dreams, fol. 163 b. 14. Generous men, fol. 166 a. 15. Misers, gluttons, and parasites, fol. 172 a. 16. Stories showing God's mercy, fol. 178 a. 17. Women and children, fol. 209 b. 18. Simpletons, liars, and false prophets, fol. 222 b. 19. Wits (wanting the beginning), fol. 223 b. 20. Curious facts relating to animals and countries, fol. 225 a. 21. Comical anecdotes, fol. 245 a.

VOL. II.

This copy was written by Hidāyat Ullah, for Lațif Khān. The subscription is followed by some additional stories, foll. 250 b-259 a.

Egerton 1025.

Foll. 68; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz, in the latter half of the 18th century.

رنگین بہار

The story of prince Bahrām, and his loveadventures with the daughter of King Dārāb. Author: Rāi Kirpādayāl, son of Rāi Mansārām, Khatrī of the Mangal tribe, كربا ديال

ولد راي منسارام كهترى قوم منكل

Beg. ابتداي نامه بر نام خداوند کريم The author, who calls himself an inhabitant of Siyālkūt, Ṣūbah of Lahore, does not lay any claim to the invention of the story. His work is only a new version in ornate prose, interspersed with verses, of an old tale. The date of composition, A.H. 1155, is given in this couplet at the end :

> بدل کشتم ^مخاطب از پـی او بکفـتا بوستانی رشك مینو

Add. 10,584.

Foll. 168; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Indian Shikastah-āmīz, in the 18th century,

The tale of Nauruz Shah, قصده نوروز شاه by Uditchand Kayath, poetically surnamed 'Azīz, اودتجند کایتهه عزیز تخلص

Beg. تازه حلايتی غريب و نو ايس روايتی عجيب. Naurūz Shāh, an Indian king, like his prototype of the Arabian Nights, takes every night a new partner to his bed. An accomplished lady, called Nīkdukht, contrives to prolong her spell of favour by telling him captivating tales on seven successive nights.

The author's name and the date of composition, A.H. 1157, are found in some verses at the end. The latter is expressed by the chronogram, متبلان مقبلان

Foll. 2—4 and 141—167 contain forms of complimentary letters addressed to a sover-reign.

Or. 1244.

Foll. 79; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with fourteen miniatures in Indian style, apparently in the 18th century.

قصمه هير ورانجهم

The love-story of Hīr and Rānjhah (see p. 710 a), in prose and verse, by Mansārām Munshī, منسارام منشى

Beg. کلام را حمد و ثنای صانع بهترین It appears from the introduction that the story had been originally composed in Hindī verse by Damodar, of Jhang Siyāl, Panjāb.

The date of the present version, A.H. 1157, is expressed in the final lines by the chronogram, تصد عاشقى تبام.

Add. 16,689.

Foll. 253; 13 in. by $9\frac{3}{4}$; 25 lines, $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century.

[WM. YULE.]

"The Garden of Fancy," a romance.

Author: Muhammad Takī ul-Ja'farī ul-بحمد Husainī, poetically surnamed Khayāl, محمد يقور الجسيني المتخطص بخيال

The author, a pupil of Ṣābit (see p. 709*b*), went to Bengal in the time of 'Alī Virdī Khān, and died A.H. 1173. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 193. In this voluminous work he relates at great length, and in familiar language, the endless and rather monotonous adventures of three imaginary heroes, and of a host of equally fictitious personages belonging to the world of the Jins and Peris, as well as to mankind. The three principal personages are generally designated by the titles of Ṣāḥib Ķirān i Akbar, Ṣāḥib Ķirān i A'ṣam, and Ṣāḥib Ķirān i Aṣghar. Their proper names are Shāhzādah Mu'izz ud-Dīn Abu Tamīm, Shāhzādah Khurshīd Tājbakhsh, and Shāhzādah Badr Munīr. The three stories form as many distinct threads, which are alternately taken up.

The present and the following three MSS. contain only a few detached volumes of that bulky composition, which, according to the conclusion of Add. 4939, consists of three parts called Bahār, subdivided into volumes (Jild). The entire work comprises no less than fifteen Jilds, some of which are again subdivided into two sections called Satar.

The first two parts (Bahār) consist together of six Jilds, while the third alone comprises nine.

It appears from the concluding lines of Add. 24,935, that the romance was written for the entertainment of two brothers, Navvāb Najm ud-Daulah Muḥammad Isḥak Khūn, and Navvāb Rashīd Khān Sālār Jang (sons of Ja'far Khān, Nāzim of Bengal).

The present copy contains the third and fourth Jilds of Bahār II., both treating of the adventures of Mu'izz ud-Dīn. The first leaves of Jild 3 and the last of Jild 4 are lost, and the two volumes have been transposed in the binding, Jild 4 occupying foll. 1—161, and Jild 3 foll. 162—253.

آغاز جلد ,Jild 4 begins with the heading چهارم از بهار دویم از کتاب بوستان خیال که آنرا معزنامه کویند

A portion of Bahār II. is described under the title of معزنامه, in the Munich Catalogue, p. 57.

Add. 24,935.

Foll. 452; 174 in. by 114; 21 lines, 74 in.

long; written in large Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins; dated Shavvāl, the third year of 'Alamgīr II. (A.H. 1169, A.D. 1756).

Two portions of the same work, both belonging to Bahār III. The first, which relates entirely to the adventures of Ṣāḥib Ķirān i A'ẓam, and is headed أغاز دفتر دويم از كتاب شاهنامه بزرك كه مشتمل است بر احوال ظفرمال كتاب شاهنامه بزرك كه مشتمل است بر احوال ظفرمال ماحب قران اعظم شاهنزادة خورشيد تاج بخش designated at the end as the second Saṭar of Jild 2 of Bahār III. It occupies foll. 1-277.

The second, foll. 278—452, treats chiefly of the history of Ṣāḥib Ķirān i Akbar, but relates, in some parts, also to the adventures of Ṣāḥib Ķirān i A'zam.

At the end the author says that, after proceeding thus far, he had determined to make this portion a volume by itself, and to call it مطر الجاد, intending subsequently to devote an entire volume to the history of Ṣāḥib Kirān i A'ẓam and his companions. But it does not appear to what volume the present Saṭar belongs.

It is stated at the end, fol. 452, that this copy was written for Navvāb Manşūr ul-Mulk Sirāj ud-Daulah Bahādur Haibat Jang, by his librarian, 'Izzat-Ullah.

Add. 4939.

Foll. 415; $16\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 11; 19 lines, $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with two 'Unvans and gold-ruled margins.

Two detached portions of the same romance, Bahār III.

The first, foll. 1—118, relates partly to the adventures of the Ṣāḥib Ķirān i A'zam, partly to those of the Ṣāḥib Ķirān i Aṣghar, Shāhzādah Badr Munīr.

The author says at the end that, after concluding the present volume, he proposes to begin the third Jild of Bahār III., the ninth of the whole work, which is to be devoted to the history of Ṣāḥib Ķirān i Aṣghar. x x 2 According to this the present volume would be the second Jild of Bahār III. Its contents, however, differ from those of Add. 24,935, which belongs to the same Bahār.

The second portion, foll. 119—415, is called, both at the beginning and at the end, the third Jild of Bahār III. It relates entirely to Ṣāḥib Ķirān i Aṣghar.

On the fly-leaf is written, "Presented by Claud Russell, Esq., Oct. 15, 1781."

Add. 26,291.

Foll. 349; 9³/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 17 lines, 3³/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the latter part of the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

Another copy of the section designated as (Add. 24,935, foll. 278-452).

Add. 7056.

Foll. 64; $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 6; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, dated Murshidābād, the 6th year of Shāh 'Alam (A.H. 1178, A.D. 1764—5).

[J. HADDON HINDLEY.]

I. The tale of Malik 'Alī, son of the king of Bukhārā, and Mihr-Bānū, daughter of Khwārazmshāh, fol. 1.

II. The tale of the three Darvishes, constructed on the same plan as the Kissah i Chahār Darvīsh, and containing:—The tale of the first Darvīsh, or Prince Hāfiz of Khorasan. The tale of the second Darvīsh, or Khalīl of Balkh, the merchant's son. The tale of the third Darvīsh, or Afzal Khān, prince of Marv. The tale of the king of Khorasan, Ashraf Khān, fol. 16. See Sir Wm. Ouseley's Catalogue, No. 442.

III. The tale of the daughter of the king of Yaman and the two Vazīrs, Aṣaf and Kāmgār, fol. 36. IV. The tale of Bihrūz, the merchant of Khorasan, and the daughter of the king of Kashmīr, fol. 44.

V. The tale of Farrukh Shāh, the prince of Khatā, who set out on his travels, and got a kingdom, fol. 51.

VI. The tale of the king of Kāshghar and the Vazīr who said that there was no man in the world without sorrow, fol. 59.

Add. 25,838.

Foll. 214; 8³/₄ in. by 5; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in small Nestalik, apparently in India, about the close of the 18th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

قصمء اكر شاهزاده وكل پادشاه

The story of Prince Agar and King Gul, a fairy tale, beginning with the following heading : قصد منصور شاہ و عاقل وزیر و خوشحال وزیر و فاضل وزیر الن_و Manşūr Shāh, king of Khashkhāsh, and his Vazīr Khushhāl obtain children through the blessing of a Faķīr. The first has a son called La'l Pādishāh, the second a son, Vazīr Maḥmūd, and a daughter called Agar. The prince having been carried away by the Parī La'l Dīv, Agar is substituted for it, and henceforth designated as Agar Shāhzādah. The Parī princess, Māhparvar, and the king of the Parīs, Gul Pādishāh, play also a leading part in the tale. It is written in homely language, and has a copious admixture of Indian words and phrases.

A Kissah i Agar Gul has been printed by Navalkishor, Lucknow, A.H. 1263. See Garcin de Tassy, Hist. de la Litt. Hind., 2nd ed., vol. ii. p. 469, and the Biblioth. Sprenger., No. 1757.

Add. 7055.

Foll. 40; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, 4 in.

long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the latter half of the 18th century.

[J. HADDON HINDLEY.]

A collection of amusing anecdotes.

باد شاهی از شخصی پرسید که علم تیراندازی میدانی Beg.

According to an English note on the flyleaf, it was compiled by a Munshī named Yaķīn for the use of his pupils.

Add. 25,837.

Foll. 229; 8[‡] in. by 4¹/₂; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in large Indian Nestalik, dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1225 (A.D. 1810).

[WM. CURETON.]

قصه عزيز شاه و مسعود شاه

The story of Mas'ūd Shāh, son of 'Azīz Shāh, king of Işfahān, and of his loveadventures with Gītī-Arā.

اما راویان اخبارات رنگین و ناقلان حکایات .Beg شیرین روایت کردهاند که در ملك اصفهان بادشاهی بود

Many local words and phrases show that this romance was written in India.

Add. 7675.

Foll. 91; 9½ in. by 5½; 15 lines, 3¾ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, about the beginning of the 19th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Fol. 1. The tale of Shîrzād, son of Gurgahan, emperor of China, and Gulshād, daughter of the Vazīr Farrukhzād, wanting a few lines at the beginning. This tale, which is endorsed حکایت نه منظر "the story of the nine belvederes," comprises nine tales successively told by Gulshād to Shīrzād, each in one of the nine belvederes of the royal palace, in order to save the forfeited life of her father.

II. Fol. 71. A short version of the tale of Saif ul-Mulūk and Badī' ul-Jamāl (p. 764 b), imperfect at the end.

Add. 16,865.

Foll. 12; $7\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 11 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik; correctly described on the fly-leaf as follows:—

"The Kazy and the Thief, حكايت قاضى و دزد , a humorous tale in the Persian language. Copied from a MS. in the possession of the Rev. H. G. Keene by James R. Ballantyne, 1834." [WM. YULE.]

حکایت چنین اورده اند که در شهر بغداد قاضی . بود در عهد هارون رشید

PROVERBS.

Or. 1613.

Foll. 269; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 6; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, with ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century.

جامع التمثيل

A collection of Persian proverbs. Author: Muhammad 'Alī Jabal-rūdī, 345

على جبل رودى

سپاس بیحد و ستایش بیعد بی مثلی را سزد .Beg.

The author states that he had come to Haidarābād A.H. 1054, in the time of 'Abd Ullah Kuţubshāh, and had been admitted to the literary assemblies held by the Vazīr Shaikh Muhammad ul-Khātūn. In one of these the collection of Turkish proverbs made by order of Shāh 'Abbās having been mentioned, the Vazīr observed that Persian proverbs should also be compiled, and the author undertook to comply with his desire. He adds that the task had never been attempted before him.

The proverbs are alphabetically arranged, each letter forming a Fașl. Short verbal explanations are occasionally added. Anecdotes illustrating the origin and application of proverbs, texts from the Coran, and poetical quotations, are introduced at the end of the sections.

The work has been printed in Teheran, A.H. 1278. See Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 522. A collection of Persian proverbs has been published by Tho. Roebuck, Calcutta, 1824.

Or. 266.

Foll. 161; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.] The same work, wanting the preface.

COLLECTANEA.

Add. 7611.

Foll. 571; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 7 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Naskhi with vowels, on gold-sprinkled paper; dated A.H. 1137 (A.D. 1724-5). [Cl. J. RICH.]

مقالات العارفين و مرآت السالكين

A collection of Sufi extracts, compiled by Sulaimān, سليمان

بهترین کلامی که افتراح مقالات ارباب یقین. Beg.

The author is designated in a nearly contemporary note on the first page as الاسام الفاضل والمرشد الكامل سيد الطايفة مولانا شيخ سليمان الهروي الانصارى

He wrote this compilation, as stated in the preface, in order that his disciples might dispense with other books. It consists of 292 prose-extracts and poetical pieces amounting to 3675 couplets.

The former are taken from the following works:---

1. لب المحققين by Allah Bakhsh B. Sayyid Şadr ud-Dīn Bhakarī, fol. 8 a. 2. مصباح الأرواح by Shaikh 'Alī Tūnī, described as a contemporary of Bāyazīd Basṭāmī, who died A.H. 261, fol. 20 a.

3. The Book Σ of Sā'in ud-Dīn 'Alī Tarikah (see p. 42 a), fol. 85 b.

4. شرح لمعات, a Commentary by Shāh Nūr ud-Dīn Ni'mat Ullah (see p. 634 b), upon the Lama'āt (see p. 594 b), fol. 124 a.

تدكرة الاوايا 5. by Shaikh 'Attār (see p. 344 a), fol. 128 b.

6. كتاب اسرار by Khwājah 'Abd Ullah Anşārī (see p. 35 a), fol. 133 a.

The poetical extracts are taken from the following works :

1. Five poems of 'Aṭṭār, viz. جواهر ذات, مع العلى المع وصلت نامه , وصلت نامه , وصلت نامه (see p. 576), fol. 136 b.

2. The Divan of Shah Ni'mat Ullah (p. 634 b), fol. 376 b.

3. The Dīvān of Shaikh Maghribī (p. 633 a), fol. 476 b.

4. Tarjī'-band of Ķāsim ul-Anvār (p. 635 a), fol. 543 b.

5. Kalandar-Nāmah, by Amīr Husaini (p. 608 a), fol. 549 b.

6. The Divān of Shaikh Irāķi (p. 593 b), fol. 551 a.

7. Gulshan i Rāz, by Maḥmūd Shabistarī (p. 608 b), fol. 555 b.

8. Silsilat uz-Zahab, by Jāmī (p. 644 b), fol. 559 a.

The above shows that the compiler, of whom no other record has been found, lived after Jāmī, probably in the tenth century of the Hijrah.

Add. 16,860.

Foll. 69; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in India, in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.] A volume of miscellaneous extracts by Bahā ud-Dīn Muḥammad 'Amilī, بهاء الدين (see p. 25 b).

Beg. اصحاب تفسير قران عظيم و ارباب ترجمه كتاب The extracts are taken from Persian poets, and from Arabic works of history and theology, the latter translated into Persian. The author frequently adds verses of his own composition, and numerous passages from his work entitled مريق حجاز He quotes among others, fol. 21 b, some verses written by him in Mashhad, A.H. 1007.

A similar collection of Arabic extracts by the same writer is described in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 409, under the name of (see p. 26 a).

The Kashkūl of Bahā ud-Dīn 'Amilī has been printed in Teheran, A.H. 1266, and in Bulak. It is described by Goldziher in the Sitzungsberichte of the Vienna Academy, part 78. See Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. vi. p. 108.

Egerton 1016.

Foll. 446; $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 21 lines, $5\frac{1}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently early in the 18th century.

شاهد صادق

A large collection of extracts, moral sayings, historical anecdotes, and miscellaneous notices.

Author: Ṣādik B. Ṣālih Iṣfahānī, صادق بن مادق بن معالى اصفهانى صالح اصفهانى المحمد لله تعالى و منه المبتدا واليه المنتهى .

Muḥammad Ṣādiķ B. Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ ul-Iṣfahānī ul-Āzādānī has given a sketch of his own life in the 12th Maţla' of the third volume (Mujallad) of his historical compilation entitled Ṣubḥ i Ṣādiķ (Or. 1728). He was born, A.H. 1018, in Sūrat, where his father served under the Khānkhānān 'Abd ur-Rahim. In A.H. 1027 he went to Ilāhābad with his father, who was there appointed by Prince Parviz as Divan of his household. After some years spent in studies at Patna and Jaunpur, Sadik went with his father in the train of Prince Parviz to the Decean, A.H. 1035, and, after the latter's death in the ensuing year, joined the camp of Shahjahan, where he was appointed news-writer (Vāķi'ah Navis). Having been presented at court, shortly after Shahjahan's accession, he obtained from that sovereign a Jāgīr in Bengal, proceeded to Jahangirnagar, then the capital of that province, and took part with the rank of Bakhshī in a war waged against a rebel Afghan chief by Kūsim Khān, then Governor of Bengal. He incurred, however, the displeasure of that Amīr's successors, A'zam Khān and Islām Khān, was kept some time in confinement in Salīmābād, A.H. 1048, and finally retired into private life.

Şādiķ gives in his memoirs copious specimens of his poetical compositions, in which he took the name of Şādiķī. He quotes also frequently verses of his numerous literary friends, and mentions as his master, fol. 230 a, Mullā Muḥammad Ḥusain Kashmīrī, who died A.H. 1037.

The author began to collect his materials, as he states in the preface, in A.H. 1054, and spent three years upon that task. When he was proceeding to put them into order, he was interrupted by a distant journey, which brought him to Jaunpūr, and it was only after settling in that place that he found the necessary leisure to complete the work. A.H. 1056 is incidentally mentioned, fol. 207 a, as the current year. The author refers in the same place to his compendium of history entitled and one (see Elliot's History of India, vol. vi. p. 453).

The work is divided into five books ($B\bar{a}b$), subdivided into numerous chapters (Fasl), and a Khātimah. A full table of the contents is given at the end of the preface, foll. 4a-7a. The principal topics of the five Bābs are as follows :—

I. God, the Prophet, prophetship and saintship (ℓk , ℓk), faith, Islām, good and bad deeds, etc., in 107 Fașls, fol. 7 α .

II. Sovereignty, kingly power, rules and precepts relating to good government, in 77 Fasls, fol. 78 α .

III. Reason, knowledge, failings, talents, etc., in 80 Fașls, fol. 135 b.

IV. Love, friendship, hatred, poverty, wealth, pleasure, sorrow, play, travel, etc., in 75 Fasls, fol. 212 b.

V. World, time, stability and decay, death, life, spheres, elements, realms of nature, in 96 Fasls, fol. 300α .

Khātimah; an alphabetical list of proper names of places and men, with fixation of their spelling, and short notices, fol. 408 a.

Three of the subdivisions (Fasls) are of exceptional length, viz. Fasl 79 of Bāb III., foll. 207 b—238 a, which contains notices of remarkable events and of the death of celebrated men, in chronological order from the Hijrah to A.H. 1042. Fasl 80 of the same Bāb, comprising Persian proverbs alphabetically arranged. Fasl 51 of Bāb IV., foll. 331 b—359 a, which contains maps of the seven climates, and an alphabetical list of places, with their longitude and latitude.

On the first page of the MS. is written "R. W. Rotton, 14 April, 1791."

A copy is mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 52.

Add. 7719.

Foll. 279; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 17 lines, 3 in. long, with oblique lines round the margins; written in a small and indistinct Shafi'ā character, ornamented with rude flowery designs in the headings and margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1225 (A.D. 1810.)

[CL. J. RICH.]

A collection جبوعه of extracts culled from the author's reading on various branches of human knowledge, by Muḥammad Ḥusain B. Karam 'Alī Iṣfahānī (see p. 137 a).

سپاس و ستایش قیاس سزاوار .Beg یکانه وجودی تواند بود

It appears from the preface that the work was written in Mashhad, and A.H. 1224 is mentioned, fol. 6 α , as the current year. The present MS. is, to all appearance, the author's autograph.

Contents: Astronomy, with tables and diagrams, fol. 4 b. Geography, fol. 17 b. History of the Prophets, Muhammad, 'Ali, the Imams, and the philosophers, fol. 44 b. Medicine, fol. 72 b. Principal dynasties of ancient and modern times, mostly in tabular form, fol. 92 b. This section concludes with a history of Fath 'Alī Shāh's reign, in which the events are chronicled year by year down to A.H. 1222. Notices on Sayyids, Vazīrs, and learned men, fol. 178 b. Religions and sects; notices on some Shī'āh doctors, fol. 182 b. Arab and Persian poets, with specimens of their compositions, fol. 285 b. The three realms of nature and the properties of minerals, plants, and animals, fol. 234 b. Knowledge of God; sayings of 'Alī and the Imāms, fol. 263 b.

The margins are crowded with additional extracts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Add. 16,720.

Foll. 20; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 11 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, in the latter part of the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

An account of the principal works treating of Eastern, and more especially of Indian, history.

No title is given in the text; but in the table of contents the work is called ماتر نامه a title which appears also on the fly-leaf. The author concludes by expressing a desire for the compilation of a history of the Moghul empire from the eleventh year of the reign of Aurangzib to the "present time," A.H. 1162.

At the end is written : راقمه ابو الحسن ولد

منشى غلام حسن متوطن بندر هوكلي

An English version is written in the margin. A table occupying five pages, foll. 2-4, shows the titles of the works mentioned in the text.

An English translation has been published under the title : "A Critical Essay on various MS. works, Arabic and Persian, illustrating the history," etc., London, 1832.

Add. 24,042.

Foll. 110; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{2}{3}$; 13 lines in a page; written in fair Nestalik, early in the 19th century. [H. H. WILSON.]

A classed Catalogue of Oriental MSS. in the Library of the College of Fort William. It is a mere list of titles, mostly without author's name. It includes Persian and Arabic MSS., with some in the Indian vernaculars.

On the first page is written: "T. Roebuck, 26 Sept. 1812."

Add. 26,321. A & B.

A. A paper roll, 10 feet by 7 inch.; an written in Nestalik, early in the 19th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

A list of fifteen Persian MSS. relating to the history of India, with a detailed statement of the contents of some of them; endorsed by Mr. Erskine: "Catalogue of Persian books sent by Henry Russell, Esq."

Mr. (afterwards Sir Henry) Russell was Resident at the court of Haidarābād from 1811 to 1820. The MSS. named in the list were added to the Erskine collection, and are now in the Museum.

B. A paper roll, 2 feet by 7, containing the titles of the same MSS.

Add. 25,864.

Foll. 37; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; written in Nestalik, early in the 19th century.

[WM. CURETON.]

A catalogue of Persian, Arabic, and Hindī MSS. in the library of Munshī Rām Dayāl, with a Persian preface by the owner's son, Rām Partāb Sahā'ī Ilāhābādī, رام پرتاب سهاى العابادى

It is arranged in alphabetical order aceording to the titles, and gives in four columns the title and description of each MS., the author's name, the number of leaves, and that of quires.

Prefixed are two horoscopes in Sanskrit, dated Samvat 1874 and 1877 (A.D. 1817 and 1820).

(778)

DRAWINGS AND CALLIGRAPHY.

Add. 18,801.

Foll. 44; $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{4}$. An album of highly finished miniatures by Indian artists, mostly portraits of princes and amirs of the reigns of Jahangir, Shahjahan, and Aurangzīb. It was made a Vaķf, or pious donation, by Ashraf Khān, whose seal bears the date A.H. 1072, and whose portrait is found on fol. 6 with this inscription in Shikastah, my ortrait of the humble, شبيه بنده واقف donor." Notes by the same hand are to be seen at the back of the other portraits, with the exception of a few, which are apparently subsequent additions. All bear later inscriptions in Nestalik, which do not always agree with the former, and are therefore not to be trusted. An English table of contents is prefixed to the volume.

Mīr Muhammad Ashraf, son of Islām Khān Mashhadī (see below, No. 11), received the title of Ashraf Khān in the fourth year of Aurangzīb (A.H. 1071-2), was subsequently appointed to the office of Mīr Bakhshī, and died A.H. 1097. See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 66.

In the following list of subjects, the names and designations taken from the donor's autograph notes are distinguished by inverted commas.

1. "Abd Ullah Khān, sovereign of Tūrān."

2. Shāh 'Abbās, of Persia.

3. "Şādiķ Khān," eousin of Aṣaf Khān, and father of Ja'far Khān, the Great Vazīr. Şādiķ Khān was Mīr Bakhshī under Jahāngīr and Shāhjahān. He died A.H. 1043. See Ma'āşir, fol. 368.

4. "Hakīm Dā'ūd Takarrub Khān." He eame from Persia A.H. 1053, was raised to the Khanship in the 20th year of Shāhjahān, and died A.H. 1073. See Ma'āşir, fol. 120.

5. "Muḥammad 'Alī Beg, who came as ambassador to Shāhjahān."

6. "The humble donor," i.e. Ashraf Khān.
(7. According to the English table, a portrait of Aşaf Khān, now missing.)

8. Fancy portrait of a lady in male attire described as a European princess بادشاهزادی فرنگ, a later addition. At the back is a calligraphic specimen dated A.H. 1182.

9. "Ilahvirdī Khān the elder." He was made Khān at the beginning of Shāhjahān's reign, was subsequently appointed Governor of Behar, and died A.H. 1070. See Ma'āşir, fol. 50.

10. The emperor Akbar, with Jahāngīr as a child.

11. "The late Navvāb Islām Khān." 'Abd ul-Salām Mashhadī, afterwards Islām Khān, father of the donor, was appointed to the Vazirate in the 13th year of Shāhjahān, and died A.H. 1057. See Ma'āşir, fol. 39.

12. "Fazl Ullah Khān, son of the donor's paternal uncle." Fazl Ullah Khān, son of Siyādat Khān, a brother of Islām Khān, was raised to the Khanship in the first year of Aurangzīb, and died in the twentieth of the same reign. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 77.

13. "Bahmanyār I'tikād Khān, son of Aṣaf Khān." He received the title of I'tikād Khān, with the office of Mīr Bakhshī, in the 25th year of Shāhjahān, and died in the 15th year of Aurangzīb. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 12.

14. "The emperor Jahängir, the emperor Akbar, the Khānkhānān, and attendant."

15 "Mahārājah Jasvant Singh," the Za-mīndār of Jaudhpūr, who fought Aurangzīb in support of Dārā Shikūh, but subsequently submitted to the victor and was appointed to the government of Mālwah. He died in the 22nd year of Aurangzīb. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 136.

16. "The emperor Jahangir."

17. "The emperor Shahjahan."

18. "Sa'id Khān Bahādur Zafar Jang," a Chaghatāi Amīr, son of Ahmad Beg Khān Kābulī. He was made Khān in the 15th year of Jahāngīr, and Şūbahdār of Kābul in the 4th year of Shāhjahān. He died A.H. 1062. See Ma'āşir, fol. 302, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 51.

19. "Ja'far Khān," son of Ṣādiķ Khān (see No. 3). He was appointed Vazīr by Shāhjahān in the 31st year of his reign, and reinstated by Aurangzīb. He died A.H. 1081. See Ma'āşir, fol. 130.

20. "Alā ul-Mulk Tūnī, entitled Fāzil Khān." He was Mīr Sāmān, or Lord Steward, under Shāhjahān and Aurangzīb, and died A.H. 1073. See Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 75.

21. Bāķir A'zam Khān Sāvajī," Mīr Bakhshī under Jahāngīr and Shāhjahān. He died as governor of Jaunpūr A.H. 1059. See Ma'āsir, fol. 42.

22. A female figure worshipped by angels, endorsed حضرت مريم, 'the Blessed Mary.'

23. Amir Timūr on his throne, with courtiers and attendants.

24. "Mirzā Nūr ul-Hasan, son of Mirzā Muhsin B. Aşaf Khān Ja'far." Mirzā Ja'far Beg, afterwards Aşaf Khān, Vazīr of Jahāngīr, and governor of Prince Parvīz, died A.H. 1021. See Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 411.

25. "Ṣafī Mirzā, son of Shāh 'Abbās the elder," with hawk-bearer, hawk, and secretary.

26. "Lashkar Khān, son of Zabardast Khān, ambassador to Persia." He was sent by Shāhjahān to 'Abbās II. to congratulate him on his accession, A.H. 1052. He died as Mir Bakhshī A.H. 1081. See Ma'āşir, fol. 433.

27. Aşaf Khān, i.e. Mīrzā Abul-Hasan, son of I'timād ud-Daulah, and Vazīr of Shāhjahān, who died A.H. 1051. See Ma'āşir, fol. 30.

28. "Sitting of His Majesty with princes and amīrs." Shāhjahān sits on his throne in full Darbār. His four sons, who stand at his side, and the amīrs who surround the throne, have their names written upon them.

29. "I'tikād Khān, son of Aşaf Khān." See above, No. 13.

30. "Hakīm Masīh uz-Zamān," i. c. Hakīm Ṣadrā, son of Hakīm Fakhr ud-Dīn Shirāzī. He came to India in the 46th year of Akbar, obtained the title of Masīh uz-Zamān in the 4th year of Jahāngīr, and died A.H. 1061. See Ma'āşir, fol. 142, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 112.

31. "Mīr Muḥammad Sa'īd Mīr Jumlah, who became Khānkhānān in Hindustan." See above, p. 266 a.

32. "Mullā Sa'd Ullah, who became Khān and Vazīr of Hindustan," i.e. Sa'd Ullah Khān 'Allāmī, who was raised to the Vazirate in the 19th year of Shāhjahān, and died A.H. 1066. See Ma'āşir, fol. 303, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 55.

33. "Khalil Ullah Khān Shāh-Ni'mat-Ullāhī," son of Mīrmīrān Yazdī. He was elevated to the Khānship in the 2nd year of Shāhjahān, and died A.H. 1072. See Ma'āşir, fol. 188, and Tazkirat, fol. 39.

34. "The emperor 'Alamgir" (Aurangzib).

35. "Dāniyāl Shāb," the eldest son of Akbar.

36. "Shā'istah Khān, son of Aṣaf Khān" (Abul-Ḥasan), originally ealled Mirzā Abu Ṭālib. He became Amīr ul-Umarā in the first year of Aurangzīb, and died A.H. 1105. See Ma'ūşir, fol. 360.

37. "Ja'far Khān, son of Ṣādiķ Khān;" see No. 19.

38. "Mullā Shafī'ā, afterwards Dānishmand Khān," a native of Yazd, who held the office of Mīr Bakhshī under Shāhjahān and Aurangzīb, and died A.H. 1071. See Ma'āşir, fol. 209.

39. "Dārāb Khān, son of 'Abd ur-Raḥīm Khānkhānān; Afẓal Khān Mullā Shukr Ullah; Rājah Mān Singh; Parvīz, and one of the descendants of 'Tīmūr.'' Dārāb Khān, governor of Bengal, was put to death, A.H. 1035, by Mahābat Khān. Se'e Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 339. Afẓal Khān died A.H. 1048; see Ma'āṣir, fol. 36. Mān Singh, Rājah of Amber, died in the 9th year of Jahāngīr; see Blochmann, p. 339. Parvīz, son of Jahāngīr, died at the age of thirty-eight years, A.H. 1035.

40. "The emperor Jahāngīr, Ilahvirdī Khān (see No 9), and Shaikh Shīr Muḥammad Kavvāl (the singer)."

41. "Mirzā Nauzar, son of Mirzā Haidar, and grandson of Mirzā Muzaffar Husain Kandahārī, a relative of Shāh 'Abbās." This Amīr, a favourite of Shāhjahān, died A.H. 1074. See Ma'āşir, fol. 512, and Blochmann, p. 461.

42. The emperor Humāyūn, attended by Mīrzā Shāhum, Lashkar Khān, and Khushhāl Beg, with two Ḥājis who recite the Fātiḥah (a miniature of the 16th century).

43. 'Umar Shaikh, father of Bābar, in a wild hilly scenery, with attendants.

44. " Izzat Khān, son-in-law of 'Abd Ullah Khān Bahādur Fīrūz Jang." He was made Khān in the 4th year of Shāhjahān, and died A.H. 1042. See Ma'āşir, fol. 378.

The miniatures are signed by the following artists:—Govardhan (No. 3, 31), Hūnhār (No. 6, 9, 11, 19, 24, 29), Chitarman (No. 20, 36, 37), Muḥammad Nādir Samarķandī (No. 21, 25, 26, 33, 35, 40, 44), Anūpehitar (No. 28, 32), Mīr Hāshim (No. 30, 41), and Bhāgvatī (No. 42).

Add. 5254.

Foll. 45; $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$. [Sir H. SLOANE.] Portraits of princes and amīrs of the courts of Dehli, Golconda, and Bījāpūr, in the latter part of the 11th century of the Hijrah, and of some princes of the same century. Most of them have the names added in the Persian character. Slips bearing Portuguese and English titles, and pasted at the bottom of each portrait, have in some cases been transposed. The subjects are as follows (the transcription of the Persian letterings is marked by inverted commas):—

Shāh 'Abbās II., fol. 1 a. "Shāh Sulaimān," fol. 1 b. "Ahmad Khān," foll. 2, 32 b. "Shāh 'Abbās the Great," fol. 3. "Muhammad Ibrāhīm," chancellor of Golconda (see Add. 22,282, fol. 24), fol. 4. "Fath Jang Khān," a general of Aurangzīb, who died in the Decean in the 26th year of the reign, foll. 5, 23 a. "Sultān 'Abd Ullah" (Kutubshäh, king of Golconda, A.H. 1035-1083), foll. 6, 25 a, b. "The emperor Jahāngīr," foll. 7, 14. "Aurang Shāh" (Aurangzīb in his youth), fol. 8. Hindu ladies, foll. 9, 10. "Mīrzā Ahmad," son-in-law of 'Abd Ullah Kutubshāh, foll. 11, 20. "The emperor Akbar," fol. 12. "Shāhjahān," fol. 13." "Sultan Muradbakhsh," son of Shahjahān, fol. 13. "Dārā Shikūh and Sultān Shujā'," sons of Shāhjahān, fol. 14 b. "The emperor Aurangzīb," fol. 15 a. "Sultān Mu'azzam," afterwards Bahādur Shāh, fol. 15 b. Kāmbakhsh, the youngest son of Aurangzīb, fol. 16. Asad Khān, Vazīr of Aurangzīb, who was arrested by Farrukhsiyar, and died A.H. 1127, fol. 17. "Sultan Mahmud" (read Muhammad), the eldest son of Aurangzīb, fol. 18 a. "Mīr Jumlah" (see p. 266 a), fol. 18 b. "Muhammad Amīn Khān," son of the preceding, fol. 19 a. Maulā Rūhā, fol. 19 b. "Rājah Karn," fol. 20 b. "Rājah Mān Singh," (a portrait of the same Rājah, Add. 7964, fol. 17 b, is inseribed "Rājah Rām Singh"), fol. 21 a. "Safshikan Khān," commander of Aurangzīb's artillery, who died A.H. 1085, fol. 21 b. "Rājah Bahār Singh" (see Add. 7964, fol. 13, where a portrait of the same officer is lettered "Rājah Bhāo Singh"), fol.

780

22 a. "Mīrzā Ilich Khān" (probably the same as Mīrzā Irich Khān, who served in the Decean, and died as governor of Berar, A.H. 1096), fol. 22 b. "Maulā Samī'ā," fol. 23 b. "Shaikh Muhammad Khātūn," Vazīr of 'Abd Ullah Kutubshāh, fol. 24 a. "Sultān Muhammad Kuli" (of Golconda, A.H. 988-1020), fol. 24 b. "Sayyid Muzaffar," chancellor of Goleonda, fol. 26 a. "Shah Mirza," chancellor of Golconda, fol. 26 b. "Sayyid 'Alī, son of Sayyid Muzaffar," fol. 27 a. "Khairāt Khān," fol. 276. "Nīknām Khān," a cunuch, general to 'Abd Ullah Kutubshah, fol. 28 a. "'Abd ul-Jabbar Beg," Vazir to Abul-Hasan Kutubshah, fol. 28 b. "Maula 'Abd uş-Şamad, Dahir," fol. 29 a. "Sultan 'Abd ul-Hasan (Abul-Hasan) Kutubshäh" (of Golconda, A.H. 1083-1098), fol. 29 b. "Mīrzā Nāsir," minister to the king of Golconda, fol. 30 a. "Shāh Rājū," confessor to the king of Goleonda, fol. 30 b. "Hasan Khān," Vazīr to the king of Golconda, fol. 31 a. "Sharzah Khān," a general under the king of Golconda, fol. 31 b. "Husain Khān," Vazīr to the king of Golconda, fol. 32 b. "Mūsā Khān," general to the king of Golconda, fol. 33 a. "Mahmud 'Adilshah," son of 'Alī 'Adilshāh, fol. 33 b. "Ikhlās Khān," general of the king of Bijāpūr, fol. 34 a. "Maulā 'Abd ul-Māli" (read Abul-Ma'ālī), fol. 34 b. "'Alī 'Adilshāh," king of Bijāpūr, A.H. 1048-1083, fol. 35 a. The bow-bearer of Shah 'Abbas, fol. 35 b. The ten Avatārs of Vishnu, foll. 36-45.

Add. 7964.

Foll. 51; 11³; in. by 8. Fifty-one portraits of Indian princes and amīrs, with the names in the Persian character. The subjects of all but one are identical with those of the preceding collection, and the treatment is in most cases so similar, that they appear to be copies derived from the same originals. The general arrangement also is nearly the same. The subject of the additional portrait is Afzal Khān, the Bījāpūr general, fol. 25.

Add. 22,282.

Foll. 26; 61 in. by 51. Twenty-six portraits of princes and amirs of the courts of Dehli, Golconda, and Bijāpūr, in the time of Aurangzib, with contemporary inscriptions in Dutch. The subjects are: Akbar, fol 1. Jahängir, fol. 2. Shähjahän, fol. 3. Därä Shikūh, fol. 4. Shāh Shujā', fol. 5. Murād Bakhsh, fol. 6. Aurangzīb, fol. 7. Sultān Mahmūd, eldest son of Aurangzīb, fol. 8. Mir Jumlah, fol. 9. Muhammad Amin Khän, son of Mir Jumlah, fol. 10. Fath Jang Khān, fol. 11. Sīvajī, 'the late Marattah prince,' fol. 12. 'Alī 'Ādilshāh, 'late king of Bijāpūr,' fol. 13. 'Alī 'Adilshāh, son of the preceding (called Mahmud 'Adilshah in Add. 5254, fol. 33, b, and Add. 7964, fol. 28), fol. 14. Sultan 'Abd Ullah Kutubshah, 'late king of Goleonda,' fol. 15. Sayyid Muzaffar, 'late state-chancellor of Golconda,' fol. 16. Niknām Khān, 'late general of Golconda,' fol. 17. Shāh Mīrzā, 'late state-chancellor of Golconda,' fol. 18. 'Abd us-Samad, 'late secretary of 'Abd Ullah Kutubshäh,' fol. 19. 'Abd ul-Jabbär Beg, fol. 20. Sultan Abul-Hasan, 'present king of Goleonda,' fol. 21. Shāh Rājū, priest of the king of Golconda, fol. 22. Maduna Pandit, state-counsellor of Muhammad Ibrāhīm, Golconda, fol. 23. state-chancellor of Goleonda, fol. 24. 'Abd ur-Razzāk, fol. 25. Sharzah Khān, colonel, fol. 26.

Add. 23,609.

Foll. 21; 16 in. by 11. Twenty-one portraits of Indian amīrs of the 17th and 18th centuries, and specimens of penmanship, with illuminated borders; bound in stamped leather.

The following portraits have names added in Persian, or can be otherwise identified :----Mir Jumlah (see p. 779 b, No. 31), fol. 2. "Abd Ullah Kutubshāh," fol.3. "Faiz Ullah Khān," fol. 4. "Sazāvār Khān," who died in the 29th year of the reign of Aurangzib, fol. 5. "Guru Govind, the Sikh leader," fol. 7. "Miyān 'Abd ud-Hādi," fol. 9. "Nādir Shāh," fol. 10. "Shujā' ud-Daulah," Navvāb of Oude, fol. 11. "Iftikhār ud-Daulah Mīrzā 'Alī Khān Bahādur," fol. 12. "Şafdar Jang," Navvāb of Oude, fol. 13. "Mulla Dupiyazah," a caricature of a fat and dwarfish old Mulla riding an emaciated hack, fol. 14. "Sayyid Niyāz Khān Bahādur, a kinsman (خ,يش) of the Vazīr Kamar ud-Dīn Khān," fol. 15. "Shāh Shujā', son of Shāhajhān," fol. 16. "Navvāb Muhammad Sādah Khān," fol. 18. "Kāmbakhsh, son of Aurangzīb," fol. 19.

The calligraphic specimens, which are in Nestalik, Naskhi and Shikastah, have the following signatures and dates:-Pir 'Alī (a friend of Jāmī; see Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. ii. p. 43), fol. 3 b. Muhammad Husain, fol. 6 b. I'jāz-Raķam Khān, fol. 9 b. 'Alī Rizā ul-'Abbāsī, (of Tabrīz; he died some time after Shāh 'Abbās I.; see Ţāhir Nasīrābādī, fol. 155), A.H. 1022, fol. 11 b. Mīr 'Imād (see p. 519 b), fol. 12. Muhammad Mūmin ul-Husaini 'Arshi (who died A.H. 1091; see Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 462), A.H. 1049, foll. 14, 16, 17. Mir 'Ali, fol. 19. 'Abd Ullah, A.H. 1057, fol. 20. Mu'izz ud-Din Muhammad ul-Husaini (of Kāshān, who went to India in the reign of 'Abbas I., and died there; see Tähir Naşīrābādī, fol. 156, and Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. ii. p. 43), A.H. 986, fol. 21.

Add. 23,610.

Foll. 28; 17 in. by $11\frac{1}{2}$; a volume containing thirty-six miniatures in Indian style, of the 18th century, and twenty calligraphic specimens, with broad illuminated margins.

The miniatures include, besides hunting scenes and fancy subjects, portraits of Indian princes and amirs of the 17th and 18th centuries, some of which are without names. The following can be identified :- Akbar, fol. 1. Jahängir, fol. 2. Parviz, fol. 3. Shähjahān, fol. 4. Akbar, with followers, hunting, fol. 5. Bidarbakhsh, son of A'zam Shah, fol. 6. Ghāzī ud-Dīn Khān Imād ul-Mulk, Vazīr of 'Alamgir II., fol. 9. Lutf Ullah Khān Sādiķ, the Khānsāmān of Muhammad Shāh, fol. 10. Muzaffar Khān, brother of Khāndaurān, who fell in the battle of Karnāl, A.H. 1151, fol. 13. Timur Shah, son of Ahmad Shah Durrānī, fol. 17. Itīķād Khān Akbarshāhī, fol. 20. 'Aklmand Khān (Don Pedro de Silva), fol. 21. 'Azīm ush-Shān, the second son of Bahādur Shāh, fol. 23. Shāh Sharaf Bu 'Alī Kalandar, an Indian saint, who died A.H. 724, fol. 25. Hazrat Kuth, i.e. the celebrated saint, Kutb ud-Din Kākī (p. 432 b), fol. 26. Rājah Jasvant Singh, fol. 27.

The calligraphic specimens contain the following signatures and dates :—Zarrīn-Raķam (Hidāyat Ullah; see p. 45 b), fol. 1. 'Alī (Mīr), fol. 2. Sayyid Mūsavī, fol. 4. Gulzār Raķam Khān, A.H. 1175, foll. 6, 21. 'Abd Ullah ul-Ḥusainī, A.H. 1013, fol. 7. Mīr Shaikh ul-Pūrānī, fol. 8. Sayyid 'Alī ul-Ḥusainī ut-Tabrīzī (Javāhir Raķam; see below, 21,928, fol. 6), A.H. 1073, 1075, foll. 10, 12. Muḥammad Hāshim ul-Ḥusainī, fol. 15. Mīr 'Abd Ullah, fol. 18. Raushan-Raķam, fol. 22. Mahdī, A.H. 1114, fol. 26. Mirzā Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ, fol. 27.

On the cover is the Persian stamp of Major Polier, with the date A.H. 1181.

Add. 21,928.

Foll. 35; 18 in. by 14. An album of miniatures and calligraphic specimens, with wide and richly ornamented borders; bound in stamped leather.

The miniatures, thirty-four in number, are in the best Indian style, apparently of the 17th and beginning of the 18th century. They represent various scenes of Indian life and of Eastern fiction, and include some portraits which bear no names. Among the latter those of Jahängīr and Āşaf Khān (Mirzā Abul-Ḥasan), fol. 3 b, of Akbar, fol. 4 a, of Shāh 'Abbās I., fol. 5 b, of Muḥammad Shāh, fol. 7 b (see Add. 22,363, fol. 22), and of Shāh Jahān sitting with his four youthful sons before a holy Shaikh, fol. 14 a, are easily recognized. Two miniatures, on foll. 17 b,-18 a, are evidently imitated from European models.

The calligraphic specimens, which are in Nestalik, are due to some of the best penmen of the 10th, 11th and 12th centuries of the Hijrah. They bear the following signatures and dates :- Mir 'Ali ul-Kātib, foll. 1, 8, 11, 13, etc. Muhammad 'Imād ul-Husainī, A.H. 1017, foll. 2, 30. Javahir Rakam Khan (Mir Sayyid 'Ali Khan, of Tabriz, writingmaster and librarian of Aurangzib, died A.H. 1094; see Mir'āt ul-'Alam, p. 463), foll. 6, 15. Muhammad Yar, master of Farkhundah Akhtar, son of Bahädur Shäh, fol. 7. 'Abd ur-Rahim 'Anbarin Kalam, foll. 9, 29. Muhammad Müsä, fol. 10. Vahid, A.H. 1152, fol. 12. 'Abd Ullah ul-Husaini ut-Tirmizi (surnamed Mushkin Kalam, see p. 154 a), A.H. 1011, fol. 16. Sultan 'Ali Mashhadī (see p. 573 a), fol. 17. Hidāyat Ullah Zarrin-Rakam, A.H. 1112, fol. 18. Muhammad Murād ul-Kātib, foll. 22, 32. Mir Husain ul-Husainī ul-Kātib, foll. 23, 31. Ahmad ul-Husaini, foll. 23, 31. Nür ud-Din Muhammad Lāhiji, fol. 25. Muhammad Husain ut-Tabrizi (in the reign of Shah Tahmäsp, see 'Alamäräi, fol. 44), fol. 27. 'Abd ul-'Azīz, fol. 34.

Add. 11,747.

Foll. 61; 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 11 $\frac{1}{2}$; a collection of 16

Indian miniatures of the 18th century, bearing the Persian seal of Sir Elijah Impey.

Foll. 2—28 and 57—61 form one uniform series, and represent groups of figures, chiefly females, in various attitudes and different surroundings. These are the conventional symbols of the musical modes called Rāgs and Rāginīs, the names of which are written at the back in the Devanagarī and Persian characters.

The rest of the volume contains favourite subjects of Eastern fiction, as Krishna and the Gopis, Kāmrūp and Kāmlatā, Farhād and Shīrīn, Lailī and Majnūn, etc., and scenes of Indian life. It includes also a few portraits, some of which bear names, as those of Jahāngīr, fol. 33, Aurangzīb, fol. 34, 'Azīm us-Shān (son of Shāh 'Alam Bahādur) and his son Karīm ud-Dīn, fol. 44. At the back of some of the drawings are found specimens of Persian calligraphy.

Add. 18,800.

Foll. 12; 13 in. by $9\frac{1}{2}$; bound in stamped leather.

Eleven portraits of Indian princes, with ornamental borders, and twelve calligraphic specimens in the Naskhi character; apparently of the first half of the 18th century. Five of the portraits bear names in the Persian character, viz. Muḥammad Maḥfūẓ, Muḥammad Aḥmad, Akbar Pādishāh, Ḥasan Ķulī Khān, and Navvāb Ḥusain Kulī Khān.

The last two are probably meant for Hasan 'Alī and Husain 'Alī, the two Sayyids of Bārhah.

The calligraphic specimens are signed by Faiz Ullah, pupil of Yāķūt Raķam Khān, Husain ud-Dīn Khān, and Muḥammad Shukr Ullah.

Add. 18,802.

Foll. 22; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; bound in stamped leather.

Forty-two miniatures in Indian style, of the early part of the 18th century, enclosed in ornamental borders, and representing, for the most part, Hindū ladies in various attitudes. There are also portraits of Aurangzīb and Farrukhsiyar.

Add. 22,363.

Foll. 28; 16 in. by $11\frac{1}{2}$; a collection of twenty-eight large miniatures in fine Indian style, of the 18th century, with illuminated borders.

They represent subjects of Eastern fiction, incidents of the legend of Krishna, symbolical figures of Rāginīs, and hunting scenes. There are also a few portraits, one of which, fol. 22, bears the name of Muhammad Shāh, fol. 22.

A calligraphic specimen, fol. 9 b, is signed Muḥammad 'Ābid B. Muḥammad Hāshim Kuraishī, and dated Akbarābād, A.H. 1125.

Add: 18,803.

Foll. 21; 14 in. by 10; miscellaneous Hindū miniatures of the 17th and 18th centuries, representing mythological subjects, female figures emblematic of the Rāginīs, and scenes of Hindū life. The last three are portraits. The first of these, a Moghul warrior drinking, is lettered Hulākū Khān. The second, a young prince riding, hawk in hand, is inscribed young prince riding, hawk in hand, is inscribed young prince riding, hawk in hand, Shān, the third son of Shāh 'Alam Bahādur Shāh. The third, a gentleman in the European costume of last century, has no name. Some specimens of Nestalik writing are signed Mīrzā Ṣāliḥ and Mīr 'Imād.

Add. 21,154.

Foll. 24; $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $10\frac{1}{2}$; a collection of Hindū miniatures of the 18th century, and calligraphic specimens.

The miniatures represent Indian ladies, and scenes of Hindū life and romance. They also include some portraits bearing the following names:—Shāh 'Abbās, fol. 12. The grandson of Tānā Shāh (i.e. of Abul-Hasan Kutubshāh), fol. 15. 'Ināyat'Alī Khān Bangash, fol. 17. Rasūl Khān Bangash, fol. 18. Rājah Mān Singh, fol. 19. Nūr Jahān Begam, fol. 20.

Seven of the calligraphic specimeus are detached leaves of the Dīvān i Shāhī (p. 640 a). Two, foll. 17, 18, are fragments of the tale of Gopīchand and Mirgāvatī, a scene of which is depicted on fol. 6 a. Others bear the signatures of Kashfī (p. 154 a), fol. 9 a, 'Abd ul-Khāliķ B. Habīb Ullah ul-Haravī, A.H. 990, fol. 11 a, Muhammad Ṣādiķ, A.H. 1102, fol. 14 b, and Ķiyām ud-Dīn Khān, fol. 22 b.

Add. 15,526.

Foll. 22; 18 in. by $11\frac{1}{2}$. A volume containing twenty-six miniatures in fair Indian style, of the 17th and 18th centuries, with some specimens of calligraphy.

The miniatures, which represent mostly scenes of Hindu life and of Eastern fiction, include also the following portraits:—Chānd Bībī of Aḥmad Nagar, the wife of 'Alī 'Ādil Shāh, fol. 1. Farrukhsiyar, fol. 8. Muḥammad Mu'azẓam (afterwards Bahādur Shāh), fol. 9. 'Alīmardān Khān (of Ḥaidarābād, who died in the fiftieth year of Aurangzīb's reign; see Taẓkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 70), fol. 12. Sulaimān Shikūh, son of Dārā Shikūh, fol. 14. Sayyid Muẓaffar, chancellor of Golconda, fol. 16. Sulṭān Maḥmūd (Muḥammad), the eldest son of Aurangzīb, fol. 17.

Two European engravings, a Dutch landscape, fol. 2, and the assumption of the Holy Virgin, fol. 12, have been inserted.

The calligraphic specimens, which are in Nestalik, Naskhi and Shikastah, show the following signatures and dates:—Hidāyat'Alī Tajallī Vilāyat Raķam Ḥaidarābādī, A.H. 1179. They are Shīrīn Raķam, A.H. 1134, Javāhir Raķam Şānī, A.H. 1134, Muḥammad Ismā'īl, Abul-Baķā ul-Mūsavī, A.H. 1101, and Muḥammad Ḥusain B. Sharaf ud-Dīn 'Alī.

Add. 22,470.

Foll. 32; 15 in. by 11; an album containing thirty-two highly finished Indian miniatures, of the 17th and 18th centuries, with calligraphic specimens; bound in painted eovers.

The miniatures, which mostly represent seenes of Indian life and Eastern fiction; include also portraits of princes, amīrs, and saints, to some of which names are added. The following can be identified :—

Akbar sitting on his throne, surrounded by officials, to most of whom names are added, fol. 4. Prince Dāniyāl, fol. 5. Shāh Shujā', fol. 6. Jahāngīr, with suite, crossing a river in boats, fol. 13. Farrukhsiyar, fol. 19. Muḥammad Amīn Khān, fol. 20. The Vazīr Ḥasan 'Alī Khān (afterwards Sayyid 'Abd Ullah Khān Ķutb ul-Mulk), fol. 29. 'Abd ul-Majīd Khān, fol. 30.

The portraits of saints, as Khwājah Aḥrār (p. 353 b), fol. 1, Bairāgī Rāmdās, fol. 11, and Shāh Madār (p. 361 b), fol. 14, are probably imaginary.

The specimens of penmanship are signed by Mir 'Ali, foll. 1, 24, 31, Muḥammad Murād fol. 2, Muḥammad Ḥusain ut-Tabrīzī, foll. 8, 18, 28, Minūchihr, A.H. 1075, fol. 12, Khādim 'Alī, A.H. 1189, fol. 15, Sulțīn 'Alī Mashhadī, fol. 17, Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ ul-Ḥusainī, fol. 27.

An English note on the fly-leaf states that the MS. had been taken from the library of Häfiz Rahmat (see p. 212 a), at the time of his death.

Or. 375.

Foll. 39; 17 in. hy 13; a collection of Hindū drawings of various sizes, of the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries, containing portraits of Indian princes and amīrs, and some fancy subjects. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

The portraits are those of Akbar, fol. 1, Jahāngīr, fol. 2, Shāhjahān, as prince, fol. 3, Shāhjahān, as emperor, fol. 4, Dārā Shikūh, foll. 5, 6, Nür Jahān Begam, fol. 7, Muhammad A'zam Shāh, fol. 8, Farrukhsiyar, fol. 9, Akbar Shah II., foll. 10, 11. Muhammad Bahadur Shāh, fol. 12, Nādir Shāh, fol. 13, Ranjīt Singh, fol. 14, Amir Khān, fol. 15, Kamar ud-Din Khān, fol. 16, Shāistah Khān, fol. 17, Khānkhānān, fol. 18, Ghāzī ud-Din Khān, fol. 19, Khān-Daurān Khān, fol. 20, Lālah Hazārā Beg, fol. 21, Shāhnavāz Khān, fol. 22, Hakim Muhtadi 'Ali Khān, fol. 23, the Mahārājah of Udaipūr, with queen and female attendants, fol. 24, Mahārājah Jagat Singh of Jaipūr, fol. 25, Rājah Bīrbal, with attendants, fol. 26, Rānā Pirthī-Dās, fol. 27, General Perron with wife, fol. 28, Ranjit Singh, fol. 29, the saint Kabir, Pir Dastgir, fol. 31, Shaikh Salīm Chishtī, fol. 32.

Add. 5717.

Foll. 66; 13 in. by 7³/₄. Miscellaneous Hindū drawings of various sizes, mostly black, or slightly tinted, of the 17th and 18th centuries; collected in Lucknow, 1785-88.

They represent hunting scenes, fights of elephants, figures of large animals cunningly made up of smaller ones, mythological subjects, scenes of Hindū life, Faķīrs, etc.

There are also some portraits. The following have names:—Jalāl ud-Dīn Rūmī, foll. 44, 60, Dārā Shikūh, with his son Sulaimān Shikūh, fol. 45, Mīr Muḥammad Sa'īd, fol. 46, Bābar, fol. 52.

Add. 5027 B.

(Originally numbered Sloane 2925).

Foll. 44; 8½ in. by 12. Album of Engelbert Kaempfer, containing drawings by himself and by Persian artists, as follows :—Pen and ink drawings, by Kaempfer, of Yazdīkhāst, fol. 1, Hormuz, fol. 3, a fortress on a hill, without name, fol. 4, and the column of horns, Isfahan (see Amœnitates Exoticæ, p. 291), fol. 5. Native drawings representing a scene from Laila and Majnūn, foll. 6, 7; costumes of various classes in Persia and neighbouring countries, with Persian lettering, foll. 8—21; various animals found in Persia and Irak, with their names in Persian, foll. 22—34, 38—44.

ZZ

From a note on fol. 42 the above drawings appear to have been executed for Kaempfer, in Isfahan, A.H. 1096, by Jānī, son of Ustāz Bahrām. The same name and date appear on a lady's portrait, by the same artist, fol. 37.

Map of the world, transcribed by Kaempfer from a Persian original, fol. 35. Map of the northern parts of Persia, from Isfahan to the Caspian, with names in French, by Kaempfer.

Or. 1372.

Foll. 51; $16\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $10\frac{1}{2}$; bound in painted covers. [Sir CHARLES ALEX. MURRAY.]

An album of miniatures and specimens of ealligraphy, with rich 'Unvān, and ornamental borders.

The miniatures, which are partly in the Persian and partly in the Indian style, represent, for the most part, fancy figures and varied scenes of Eastern life. They include, however, a few portraits, to some of which names have been added, as follows:—Hakīm Shifā'ī, a physician and poet of the reign of Shāh 'Abbās I., fol. 7 α . Aķā Hādī, with a lady, fol. 10 b. Sulțān 'Alā ud-Dīn [B.] Fī-rūz Shāh and Khwājah Hasan (see p. 618 α), fol. 15 α . Shāh Salīm (Jahāngīr), with hawk-bearer, fol. 19 α .

Four engravings, German and Flemish, of the 16th and 17th centuries, have been inserted. See foll. 36, 38, 50, 51.

The names of the following painters are found on some of the Persian miniatures : Rizā i 'Abbāsī, who lived under Shāh 'Abbas I., foll. 4 b, 7 a, 11 a, 34 b, Muḥammad Ķāsim, apparently of the same period, foll. 27 a, and Bihzād, a painter of the reign of Sulțān Ḥusain Baiķarā (see Memoirs of Baber, p. 197), fol. 50 a.

The ealligraphic specimens, mostly in `large Nestalik, are by celebrated penmen of the 10th, 11th, and 12th centuries of the Hijrah. They bear the following signatures and dates: Mīr 'Alī ul-Kātib (see p. 531 α), A.H. 939, and Bukhārā, without year, foll. 5—15, 18, 19, 49. Mīr 'Imād ul-Ḥusainī (the first calligrapher of the time of Shāh 'Abbās I.; see p. 519 b), Isfahan, A.H. 1023, foll. 16, 35. 'Abd ur-Rashīd ud-Dailamī, Isfahan, A.H. 1025—1052, foll. 16, 17, 20—23, 38—48. Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ B. Abu Turāb, Isfahan, A.H. 1093—1120, foll. 1—4, 24—37.

Add. 7468.

Foll. 100; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; an album of calligraphy, with some miniatures; mounted in cloth and enclosed in painted covers.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

The specimens of penmanship in Nestalik, Naskhi, and Shafī'āī, are mostly of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th centuries. The following names are found in the signatures, or in the notes of the collector, with the accompanying dates :-- Hasan Shāmlū, of Herat (reign of Shāh 'Abbās II.; see Zīnat ut-Tavārīkh), fol. 6. Mīr 'Imād, foll. 7, 92. Shafī'ā ul-Husainī, A.H. 1148, foll. 16, 75. Mīrzā Zain ul-'Abidīn (reign of Shāh Sulaimān; see Zinat ut-Tavārīkh), A.H. 1127 and 1105, foll. 19, 52. Mīrzā Abul-Kāsim Injū Shīrāzī, A.H. 1180, foll. 23, 53. Ummidi, foll. 46, 47, Muhammad Muhsin Isfahānī, A.H. 1149, fol. 49. Darvish Majid, foll. 60, 72, 73. Mīrzā Hasan Kirmānī, fol. 61. Mīrzā Kūchak, pupil of Darvish Majid (the collector speaks of him as "now" living in Isfahan), foll. 66, 67, 96.

786

The collector dates one of his notes at Isfahan, A.H. 1228.

Among the miniatures, which are mostly in the Indian style of the 18th century, there are, besides fancy subjects, portraits to which the following names are added :—Shāhrukh, fol. 14. Tīmūr, fol. 15. 'Işmat of Bukhārā, with Bisāţī of Samarķand (see pp. 736 b, 735 a), fol. 32. Hāfiz, with Abu Ishak Shīrāzī (see p. 634 a), fol. 33. Valī Ķalandar, fol. 44. Vais Hakīm ul-Mulk (apparently a portrait of Aurangzīb), fol. 50. Khwājah 'Abd Ullah Marvārīd (of Herat, a poet and calli: grapher, who died A.H. 922), fol. 51. Sa'dī, fol. 63. Shāhjahān (two profile portraits, one of which is lettered Akbar Shāh), foll. 90, 91.

Add. 27,271.

Foll 18; 11² in. by 8, written on gold ground, with coloured borders, and mounted on cloth; enclosed in painted covers.

[SIR JOHN MALCOLM.]

Eighteen specimens of Persian penmanship, in the character called Tarassul, signed Muhammad Käzim ul-Välih ul-Işfahānī (see p. 723 a), and dated A.H. 1225.

They contain forms of official and complimentary letters, frequently repeated.

Or. 1373.

Foll. 40; 11[‡] in. by 7[‡]; an album of calligraphic specimens, with illuminated borders and ten miniatures; mounted on cloth, and enclosed in painted covers.

[SIR CHAS. ALEX. MURRAY.] The 'calligraphic specimens in Naskhi, Nestalik, and Shikastah, have the following signatures and dates :—Fazl Ullah ul-'Amilī, A.H. 1254, foll. 13, 14. 'Abd ul - Majīd (Darvīsh), Isfahān, A.H. 1173, fol. 21. Ibn 'Alā ud-Dīn Muḥammad ul-Ḥusainī, A.H. 1199, fol. 31. Aḥmad un-Nairīzī, A.H. 1117, fol. 32. Ķā'im Maķām, foll. 11, 12, 35, 36. Shāh Maḥmūd, fol. 40. Most of the miniatures represent fancy figures in the Persian style of the 17th and 18th centuries. One of the earliest, fol. 37, has for its subject the reception of Khān 'Alam, the envoy of Jahāngīr, by Shāh 'Abbās I., which took place in Kazvīn, A.H. 1027.

Add. 4832.

A single leaf, 14 in. by 8. A letter endorsed by Alex. Dow, "Fine writing of Aga Reshidec Chaun Husseini, first master in this art." The writer, who signs 'Alī, requests a continuance of friendly support for his son Muḥammad Bāķir. At the back is the seal of Rashīd Khān Ḥusainī, with the date A.H. 1118. An English translation is subjoined.

Add. 4833.

Four leaves, bound up with the preceding, and endorsed by Alexander Dow, "Allahabad, 1763," and "Benares, 1764."

Four calligraphic specimens, two of which are signed Rahm Ullah ul-Husainī, and Mīr Fakhr ud-Dîn Husain Khān Ni^ematullāhī.

Add. 21,474.

Foll. 13; 144 in. by 12; autographs and calligraphic specimens collected by Lewin Bowring, Esq., in Dehli, A.D. 1854. They are signed by the following penmen :---Munshi Dipchand, of Dehli, Samvat, 1903 (A.D. 1846), foll. 1. Muhammad Kuli, of Peshāwar, A.D. 1854, fol. 2, 10. Abuz-Zafar Sirāj ud-Din Bahādur Shāh, emperor of Dehli, fol. 3. Mīrzā Dārābakht Valī 'Ahd, 'the late heir to the throne,' fol. 4. Mirzā Muhammad Sultan Fath ul-Mulk Shah Vali 'Ahd, ' heir to the throne,' fol. 5. Muhammad Amir Rizavi, known as Sayyid Amir, of Dehli, A.H. 1270, foll. 6, 7. 'Ibād Ullah, fol. 8. Mu'jiz-Rakam Khān, of Kandahār, foll. 11-13.

The specimens include verses in Urdu, Pushtū, Panjābī and Ķashmīrī.

Add. 15,969.

Three sheets, 30 in. by 21, containing bird's-eye views by native artists of royal gardens and palaces, endorsed : "Presented to Ozias Humphrey at Lucknow, May 11th 1786, by Col. Anthony Polier. It represents the inside and the amusements of the Sultan's Zinnana."

Egerton 1061.

A paper slip, 42 feet by $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. Coloured drawing, by native artists, of the cortège of Shujā' ul-Mulk, king of Kābul, with the names of the principal officers and corps added in Persian; 19th century.

Egerton 1062.

A paper slip, 22 feet 9 in. long by 14 in. A panoramic view, by native artists, of the city of Benares, as seen from the river, with the names of the Ghāts and principal buildings in Persian; 19th century.

Add. 22,716.

Thirteen sheets, the largest of which measures two feet and a half in breadth by 23 inches in height. They contain coloured drawings, carefully executed by native artists in the present century, of the principal buildings of Agra, as follows:—1. Mausoleum of Akbar at Sikandrah. 2. Gate of the Mausoleum. 3. Mausoleum of I'timād ud-Daulah (father of Nūr Jahān), on the other side of the Jumna. 4. The Dīvān Khās, or audience-hall, inside the Fort. 5. Dehli gate of the Fort. 6. Rauzah Munavvarah Mumtāz Maḥall, or Tāj Maḥall (see p. 430 a), viewed from the Jumna. 7. Enclosure se of the tombs of Mumtāz Maḥall and Shāhjahān. 8. Tomb of Shāhjahān. 9. Tomb of Mumtāz Maḥall, 10—13. Detail of ornament and inscriptions on the sarcophagus.

Add. 8893, Art. II., No. 1.

A single sheet, 24 in. by 26; 6 lines in Nestalik.

Fac-simile of a Persian inscription in old Dehli, stating that on the first of Rabī' I., in the year 101 [read 1015], Ṭāhir Muḥammad [B.] 'Imād ud-Dīn Ḥasan B. 'Alī سبزوارى [read سبزوارى] came from Agra, in attendance upon the Shāhzādah Sulṭān Khūram, visited the sepulchres of the saints, and set out on his way to the court of His Majesty Nūr ud-Dīn Muḥammad Jahāngīr Pādishāh Ghāzī in Lahore.

The inscription relates to the author of the Rauzat ut-Tāhirīn (see p. 119 b), and shows that he accompanied Sultān Khūram, afterwards Shāhjahān, when that prince was summoned by Jahāngīr from Agra to Lahore. The prince's meeting with his father took place on the 12th of Rabī' II., A.H. 1015. See Toozuki Jehangeerce, p. 36, and 'Amal i Ṣāliḥ, fol. 19.

An inscription in Persian verse by the same Muḥammad Ṭāhir, dated A.H. 1014, is engraved upon the tomb of Amīr Khusrau. See Āṣār uṣ-Ṣanīdīd, Appendix, p. 37, No. 38.

(789)

MANUSCRIPTS OF MIXED CONTENTS.

Harl. 500.

Foll. 138; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by 5; 17 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, in a page, written partly in Nestalik, partly in Naskhi; dated from Ṣafar, A.H. 1010, to Zulķa'dah, A.H. 1012 (A.D. 1601— 1604).

I. Foll. 1—18. The beginning of the Gulistan of Sa'dī (see p. 597 a).

II. Foll. 20—39. Tuhfah i Shāhidī (see p. 513 b).

III. Foll. 40-73. معدة الهاديد 111.

A Persian manual in ten sections (Ķism), and four chapters (Fașl), giving grammatical forms and familiar words, with their Turkish equivalents.

Author : Muhammad B. Hājī Ilyās, s

Beg.

الحمد لله القوي الجبار والصلوة

See Haj. Khal., ii. p. 243, Krafft's Catalogue, p. 6, and the Leyden Catalogue, vol. i. p. 98.

IV. Foll. 73—106. جمع مختصر, a treatise on Persian prosody and poetical ornaments.

Author: Vahid Tabrizi, وحيد تبريزى

سیاس بی قیاس واجب التعظیم را Beg.

The anthor, whose full name was Vaḥid ud-Dīn, wrote it for his brother's son. Hence it is designated in a Latin notice prefixed to the MS. by Solomon Negri as Braserzadeh (برادرزاده). Copies are mentioned in the Jahrbücher, vol. 62, Anzeigeblatt, p. 11, and the catalogues of St. Petersburg, p. 436, Vienna, vol. i. p. 206, Gotha, p. 14, and Munich, p. 120. The author is not to be confounded with a later writer, Maulānā Vāḥid إحد Tabrīzī, a Sufi and poet, for whom Shāh 'Abbās II. entertained great regard, and who died in Isfahan A.H. 1080. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 497, and Hammer, Redekünste, p. 380.

V. Foll. 108-138. A versified Arabie-Turkish vocabulary, without preface or title.

خبر اتمك قبله اوپهق زرع اكمك قول غلام . Beg.

It consists of twenty-two sections, each on a different rhyme, and has no systematic arrangement of words. This is apparently the work of 'Abd ul-Latif B. Firishtah, known as نبن فرشته اوغلی or رفنت ابن فرشته See the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 116, and Krafft's Catalogue, p. 7.

Harl. 5446.

Foll. 45; 6‡ in. by 4‡; 14 and 11 lines, written in Naskhi and Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

I. Foll. 1—15. An extract beginning, باب اندر منافع حشرات و حيوانات

It treats of the magical or medicinal properties of certain parts of various animals. It also contains recipes for the keeping off of insects, and others relating to sexual intercourse and parturition.

II. Foll. 16—45. An abridgment of the بدانکه این Book of Precious Stones, beginning, بدانکه این مختصریست از جواهر نامه

It contains twelve chapters (Bāb), treating of the following stones: diamond, yāķūt, ruby, emerald, pearl, turquoise, bezoar, amber, lapis lazuli, coral, cornelian, and jasper. The values are estimated in florins, نلورى, and the European (Firangī) jewellers are frequently referred to.

Harl. 5464.

Foll. 163; $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 11 lines, $1\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi' II., A.H. 1078 (A.D. 1667).

A volume of miscellaneous tracts; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 83. The following are partly Persian :

I. Foll. 67-144. The Pand Nāmah of 'Aṭṭār (see p. 579 b), with Turkish glosses.

II. Foll. 146—163. A short Arabic treatise on the conjugation of the Persian verb, with the heading, القواعد و الامشله.

In the subscription it is designated as الصحاح التجمية. This is the title of a Persian dictionary by Muḥammad B. Pīr 'Alī ul-Birgavī (who died A.H. 981; see Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 91), from which the above tract is probably taken.

Harl. 5468.

Foll. 103; 5 in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 6 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in coarse Naskhi; dated Rabī' II., A.H. 1069 (A.D. 1658).

A volume containing Arabic prayers, with Persian rubrics, and a short Shī'ah catechism entitled مول دين, in Persian, foll. 74—85. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 382.

Harl. 5490.

Foll. 371; 8 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; about 17 lines; written in Naskhi and Nestalik, about A.H. 1076 (A.D. 1666).

A volume of miscellaneous tracts, mostly Turkish. The following contain Persian texts:—

I. Foll. 19-120. The first part of a

Turkish commentary upon the Maşnavī (sce p. 584 b), entitled, مجموعة اللطائف وهامورة المعارف.

باسم من اوجد الاشياء من عدم واعدمها . Beg.

The author, whose name does not appear, was, according to Haj. Khal., vol. v. pp. 375, 377, Rusūkh ud-Dīn Ismā'il B. Aḥmad uk-Anķuravī ul-Maulavī, known as Ismā'il Dadah, who died A.H. 1042.

The work is stated in the preface to have been compiled from two distinct commentaries previously written by the author, entitled ناتج and الأبيات. It was written by desire of Sultan Murād B. Aḥmad, and completed A.H. 1039.

The present fragment comprises the Arabic preface, and the beginning of the poem, down to this line (Bulak edition, p. 10) :—

Il. Foll. 197—213. Hundred sayings of 'Alī, with a paraphrase in Persian quatrains, by Rashīd ud-Dīn Vaṭvāṭ (see p. 553 b), and a Turkish version in similar form.

III. Foll. 214—220. Forty sayings of Muhammad (Hadīş), in Arabic, with a paraphrase in Persian quatrains.

انما الاعمال بالذیات و لکل امر^م ما نوی Beg. اصل اعمال نیت نیکوست نیت نیک دار ای مهتر زانکه هرکارنیکونیت نیست هست ان جملکی هبا و هدر

Royal 16, B. XXI.

Foll. 27; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $10\frac{1}{4}$. Miscellaneous Oriental papers. The following are Persian :---

I. Foll. 6—12. An almanack for the "year of the hen," تخاقرى يييل, which began on the 11th of Shavvāl, A.H. 1042 (March, 1633), giving the positions of the planets for each day.

II. Fol. 12. A slip of pink paper, with 16 lines in large Dīvānī. A petition addressed by three native servants of the East India Company at Sūrat, namely Chauth, Tulsīdās, and Benīdās, to the King of England (Protector Cromwell), asking compensation for damages suffered during the Dutch war, "signed by them, in the Gujrātī character, dated Swally Marine, January 26th, 1655."

Lansdown 1245.

Foll. 146; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 25 and 16 lines; written in the 17th and 18th conturies.

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

I. Foll. 2-131. A horoscope of the birth of Shāhjahān, with astronomical tables.

Author: Fath Ullah B. 'Abd ur-Rahmān فتح الله بن عبد الرحمن Burūjī, الزبيرى البروجى

The author, who wrote during the reign of Shāhjahān, bases his calculation of the position of the heavenly bodies at the emperor's birth on the statement of the contemporary astrologers, who had fixed it at 12 Gharīs and 3 Pals of the night before Thursday, the 30th of Rabī' I., A.H. 1000.

II. Foll. 132—146. An almanack for the "year of the hare," توشقان يميل, corresponding to A.H. 1172-3 (A.D. 1759), written in Bengal for Navvāb Mīr Muḥammad Ja'far Khān.

Arundel Or. 8.

Foll. 148; 8 in. by 5½; 14 and 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century.

I. Foll. 1-75. A collection of short tracts relating to the rules and traditions of the religious order called Ahl i Futuvvat (see p. 44 a). They are in Turkish, with the exception of the last two, foll. 72-77, which are Persian, and treat of the origin of the felt-cloak and other garments of Bābā 'Amr, a patron of the order.

II. Foll. 76-139. Preface and first part of the Divan of Hafiz. Select pieces, mostly of religious character, from the Divans of the following poets :—Lisānī (p. 656 b), Dā'ī Shīrāzī (a disciple of Ni'mat Ullah Valī; he collected his Divan A.H. 865. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 387, and Mir'āt Jahānnumā, fol. 347), Khusrau (p. 609 a), Sa'dī, Hāfiz, Shams i Tabrīz (p. 593 a), Khākānī, Ahmad i Jām (p. 551 b), Jāmī, Asafī (p. 651 b), Kāsim (p. 635 b), and Sabūhī (a Sūfī, of Chaghatāi extraction, who lived in Herat, and later in India. He died in Agra, A.H. 972 or 973. See Badāoni, vol. iii. p. 257, Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 582, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 43, 125).

The latter portion, foll. 132—139, is chiefly taken up by Turkish poems.

III. Foll. 149-148. A Turkish tract on the Salmani order.

Egerton 695.

Foll. 192; 94 in. by 5. [ADAM CLARKE.]

I. Foll. 1-90; 12 lines, 2½ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century.

The Divan of Aşar.

Shafi'ā, surnamed Aşar, a native of Shīrāz, who had lost his sight at the age of nine years, lived in Isfahan in the time of Sulțān Husain (A.H. 1105—1135). He was considered the first poet of his time, and especially excelled in satire. He died in Lār, A.H. 1113, or, according to Sirāj, Oude Catalogue, p. 149, A.H. 1124. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 53, Atashkadah, fol. 119, and the Oude Catalogue, pp. 138, 344.

Contents: Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 1 b, Rubā'īs, fol. 80 b. Maţāli', or openings, and fragments of Ghazals, in alphabetical order, foll. 85 b—90. Ķasīdahs, in praise of Muḥammad, 'Alī, and the Imāms, foll. 1 b—45 b, in the margins.

II. Foll. 91—192; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik.

Letters of Shaikh Faizī (see p. 450 α), edited by Nūr ud-Dīn Muḥammad.

يا ازلى الظهوريا ابدى الخفا Beg.

The editor was the son of 'Ain ul-Mulk, a physician of Shīrāz, who had risen to high favour with Akbar, and died in the 40th year of the reign (A.H. 1003. See Badāonī, vol. ii. p. 403, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 480). His mother was a sister of Shaikh Faizī and Shaikh Abu'l-Fazl. He says in his preface that, while the poems of Faizī, as Markaz i Advār and others, had been collected and arranged by Shaikh Abulfazl, his prose compositions had been neglected. In order to save them from oblivion, he made the present collection in the year indicated by the above title, i.e. A.H. 1035.

The work is divided, according to the preface, into five Lațīfahs, three Manţūķahs, and a Khātimah. The first five sections contain Faizī's letters to Akbar, fol. 97 a, to Shaikhs and 'Ulamā, fol. 131 a, to physicians, fol. 157 b, to Sayyids and Amīrs, fol. 174 a, and to relatives, fol. 184 a. Faizī's preface to his Dīvān is prefixed.

The remaining sections, which contained invocations مناجات by Shaikh Abulfazl, letters of Shaikh Abu'l-Khair (a brother of Faizī), letters addressed to Faizī, and some compositions of the editor, are wanting in this copy.

Egerton 707.

Foll. 181; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in plain Nestalik; dated Muharram, A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1802).

[ADAM CLARKE.] I. Foll. 2—62. تصم⁶ سیت بسنت, the story of two brothers, Sit and Basant, a Hindū tale.

دانایان اسمار و راویان اخبار چنین روایت Beg.

II. Foll. 63—137. ذخيرة الفواد, a treatise on the religious observances of the Hindūs.

سیاس بیجد و ثناء بیعد مر خالقی ا · Beg.

It is stated to have been written for the use of the Hindūs in A.H. 1210, Faslī 1203, A.D. 1796, and comprises the following three Bābs :—1. Fast days (Brat) throughout the Hindū year, from Chait to Phāgun, fol. 64*b*. 2. Cosmogony and origin of castes, fol. 114*b*. 3. Orders of Hindū devotees and their distinctive marks (Tilak), fol. 126 a.

The last two tracts contain several Sanskrit. Slokas in the Persian character.

Copyist: محمد عليبيك

The MS. was written for Mr. Henry George Keene, whose name and seal are found on the fly-leaf, with the date, March, 1802.

Egerton 1004.

Foll. 204; $10\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1232 (A.D. 1817).

I. Foll. 4—57. Zafar Nāmah i 'Alamgīrī, by 'Akil Khān (see pp. 265 α , and 699 α), wanting the introduction.

A table of the Timurides from Babar to Shāh 'Alam, and a list of the children of Shāhjahān and Aurangzīb, are prefixed, fol. 3.

II. Foll. 57—70. Extract from the Shāh jahān-Nāmah (i.e. 'Amal i Ṣāliḥ, see p. 263 a), relating to the eapture of Dārā Shikūh, and the death of Shāhjahān (corresponding to Add. 26,221, foll. 669—678). Letter of Shāhjahān to Ķuţb ul-Mulk (the king of Golconda), enjoining him to put down offensive Shī'ah practices; the latter's answer, dated Zulḥijjah, A.H. 1045. Letter of 'Adil Khān, of Bijāpūr, to Shāhjahān, and the lat-, ter's letter to 'Adil Khān, dated the 23rd of Zulḥijjah, A.H. 1045 (see 'Amal i Ṣāliḥ, foll. 373—375), fol. 66.

III. Foll. 70—114. Extract from the Khizānah i 'Amirah (see p. 373 a), comprising the lives of Nizām ul-Mulk Aşaf Jāh and his children, Burhān ul-Mulk Sa'ādat Khān, Şafdar Jang, Shujā' ud-Daulah and Shāh 'Alam, Aḥmad Shāh Durrānī, and Isḥāķ Khān Mūtaman ud-Daulah (corresponding to Or. 232, foll. 25—98).

IV. Foll. 115—125. Letter of Nādir Shāh to his son Rizā Ķulī Mīrzā, announcing his victory in India. Letter of Shāh 'Abbās I. to Jahāngīr, relating to his capture of Ķandahār (A.H. 1031, see 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 380), and the latter's answer, fol. 120 a. Letter of Aurangzib, on his march upon Ķandahār, to his father, Shāhjahān (A.H. 1062), fol. 121. Letters of Shujā' ud-Daulah to Najīb Khān and Shāh 'Alam, fol. 122 a.

V. Foll. 126—135. Five letters, پېچ رقعه by Maulānā Zubūrī (see p. 742 a, v.).

Some Ghazals by the same author are written in the margins from fol. 115 to 122.

VI. Foll. 135—204. Letters of Rājah Lachhmī-Narāyan, Munshī, رتعات لچهمی نزاین, edited by Muḥammad Faiẓbakhsh B. Ghulām Sarvar, of Kākūrī (see p. 309 6). هرچند طوطی شکرین مقال خامـ در برابر . آئینه بـیان

From a memoir of the author's life, prefixed by the editor, we learn that he descended from a Lahore family settled in Dehli, that his father's name was Rāi Manī Rām, and that he was a pupil of Sirāj ud-Din 'Alī Khān Ārzū (see p. 501 b). Having been driven from Dehli by the invasion of Ahmad Shah Durrānī, Laehhmī-Narāyan stayed some time in Aurangabad and Bareli, and settled in Lucknow, where he found a protector in Shah After his patron's imprisonment by Madan. Shāh Shujā', he obtained, on the recommendation of Akhund Ahmad 'Ali, employment under Navvāb Muhammad Javāhir 'Alī Khān, Nāzir of Faizābād (see p. 309 b), and spent there seven years, in constant intercourse with the writer of this notice. He then passed into the service of Asaf ud-Daulah in Lucknow; but subsequently returned to Faizabad, where his mind became deranged. Three years later, the editor obtained possession of his papers, and compiled the present collection, which he completed A.H. 1205.

The dates of the letters range from A.H. 1183 to 1195. Some arc mere rhetorical exercises addressed to the author's pupil, Shaikh Bāķir 'Alī, sister's son to Akhund Aḥmad 'Alī ; others are written in the name of Navvāb Javāhir 'Alī, Akhund Aḥmad 'Alī, and Bahū Begam, to the successor of Governor Hastings (Sir John Maepherson), Shāh 'Alam, Aṣaf ud-Daulah, and others, while a few are addressed by the author in his own name to the editor.

A tabulated index of the contents is given on fol. 125 b. The work has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1265.

Egerton 1008.

Foll. 167; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{2}{4}$; 13 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in plain Nestalik, apparently in India, early in the 18th century.

3 A

VOL. II.

I. Foll. 1—69. خرقه, a treatise on sexual intercourse.

مرتضى Author: Murtazā Ķulī Shāmlū, قلى شاملو

سبحان الله رنك اميزى بساط حمد و سياس حكيمي .Beg

Murtazā Ķulī Khān, son of Hasan Khān Shāmlū, governor of Khorasan (see p. 682 a), stood in high favour with Shāh Sulaimān (A.H. 1077—1105), who appointed him to the office of sword-bearer, شمشير بردار, and to the government of Kum. He is described as a poet of taste, and an elegant Shikastahwriter. See Ṭāhir Naṣīrābādī, fol. 32, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 437, and Atashkadah, fol. 11.

This work, written in a highly artificial and ornate style, is dedicated to the Shāh (probably Shāh Sulaimān). It is divided into thirty sections, which, in conformity with its title Khirkah, or "patched cloak," are termed خيد "patches." Two copies are described in Krafft's Catalogue, p. 81, No. 232, and p. 151.

II. Foll. 70-74. A short Arabic-Hindustani dictionary of drugs.

III. Foll. 75—167. ام العلاج, a treatise on purgatives considered in connection with the age and temperament of the patients, the season of the year, and other conditions.

Beg. جان داروی که مزاج بخردی را از فساد نقصان. The work, which is dedicated to Jahāngīr, was written in A.H. 1036. It is divided into a Mukaddimah and six Bābs, comprising sixty-three Fasls.

Egerton 1009.

Foll. 218; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in.

long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century.

A miscellaneous volume, containing,— I. A collection of medical prescriptions, without any preamble, or methodical arrangement, fol. 2. II. Extracts relating to compound medicaments, in Persian and Arabic, fol. 74 b. III. Descriptions of compound medicaments, alphabetically arranged, foll. 107 b-215 b.

At the end of this last section are found the words, نقل من قرابادین مجیب الدین السمرقندی, which leave it uncertain whether Najīb ud-Dīn us-Samarķandī is named as the author of the treatise, or of the last prescription only.

The volume is endorsed قرابادین سعدالدین لادین but in the text Sa'd ud-Dīn Ṭabīb is only quoted as the author of an observation on the use of naphtha, with which the book begins.

Egerton 1024.

Foll. 163; 11 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 18 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Indian Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1229 (A.D. 1814).

Prose works of Mīrzā Ķatīl (see p. 64 b), as follows :—

I. Foll. 2—20. Letters written from the court of Fath 'Alī Shāh to the author's patron in India.

صبحدمی که سلطان اریکه رابع افلاک Beg.

These letters deal less with public events than with personal and familiar incidents, or what may be termed the "chronique scandaleuse" of the residence. Their approximate date may be inferred from their including, fol. 7, a contemporary record of the capture and blinding of Zamān Shāh, the Afghan ruler of Kandahār, by his brother Maḥmūd Shāh, an event of A.H. 1217. See Brydges, Dynasty of the Kajars, p. 159. The title رساله قانون مرزة حسن is written by a later hand on the first page.

A larger and later collection of Mirzā Ķatil's letters, compiled A.H. 1232 by his pupil Imām ud-Dīn, has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1259-60, under the title of Lucknow, a.H. 1259-60, under the title of معدن الفرائد معروف رقعات ميرزا قتيل printed in Cawnpore, A.H. 1264.

II. Foll. 21—34. شجرة الامانى, a treatise on the niceties of Persian grammar and idioms.

Beg. نصيح ترين كلامي كه از جوش مفا

This work, written at the request of Sayyid Amān 'Alī, from whose name the title is derived, was composed, as appears from the preface of art. iv., in A.H. 1206. It is divided into six "branches" ($i_{2,3}$), subdivided into "fruits" ($i_{2,3}$).

Contents: 1. The three classes of words. 2. Ellipses of particles. 3. Compounds, ترکیب. 4. Peculiarities of the Persian of Iran, Turan, and India. 5. Elegance of diction.

The Shajarat ul-Amānī has been lithographed in Lucknow, 1841.

III. Foll. 35-70. Nahr ul-Faşāhat (see p. 520 b).

IV. Foll. 71—131. جار شربت, another treatise on Persian composition.

مخوت فريشي زبان فصيم بيانان Beg.

Katīl wrote it on his return from Kālpī to Lucknow, after an absence of two years and a half, in A.H. 1217, at the request of Mīr Muḥammad, the younger son of Mīr Amān 'Alī. It is divided, as its name implies, into four Sharbats, variously subdivided, on the following subjects: 1. Persian prosody and rhyme. 2. Modern idioms and figurative phrases. 3. Elegant expressions, faulty phrases used in India, and models of epistolary composition. 4. Short vocabulary and grammar of the Turkī language (the Persian equivalents are frequently written in numerical figures).

The Chahār Sharbat has been lithographed in Lucknow, A.H. 1268.

V. Foll. 132—163. A treatise on Arabic grammar, without title or preface.

It contains the conjugation of the verb and its secondary forms, a classed vocabulary of nouns, and a sketch of the syntax. In the subscription the treatise is called قانون مجدد and ascribed to Mirzā Ķatīl.

Egerton 1028.

Foll. 87; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; about 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the latter half of the 18th century.

I. Foll. 2—34. Inshāi Harkarn. See p. 530 a.

II. Foll. 35-52. A tract on the atoning efficacy of worship at the Siva shrines of Benares, translated from a Sanskrit original entitled Panchakrosi, بنجكروش, by Kishan Singh, poetically surnamed Nashāţ, son of Rāi Prān Nāth, Khatrī of the Mangal tribe, an inhabitant of Siyālkūt, منكل ساكن سيالكوت نشاط ولد راى يران ناته كهترى قوم منكل ساكن سيالكوت حمدو ثناى بى پايان و متايش و نيايش بيكران.

The Panchakroșa is a portion of the Kāsī-Māhātmya; see Aufrecht, Bodleian Catalogue, p. 28.

III. Foll. 53—57. غريب الانشا, a short narrative in ornate prose, written in imitation of the Shash-Jihat and the Badā'i' ul-Jamāl of Dīvān Rūp-Narāyan Ṣāḥib.

Author: the same Kishan Singh.

Beg. سخن سازی زبان شیرینکار به تحمید صانعی است. The work was written, as stated at the end, in A.H. 1157.

IV. Foll. 58—86. سراج الطريق, the story of Nāskīt ناسكيت, son of the devotee Ūdālik, اودالك, and of his visit to the realm of Yama, جم پوري, apparently translated from a Sanskrit original.

ان داستان غرابت نشان را بعبارت فارسی .

Add. 5622.

Foll. 285; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century, [N. BRASSEY HALHED.] I. Foll. 1—38. راحت القلوب, satirical sketches of some contemporaries, by Ni'mat Khān 'Alī (see p. 268 b).

Beg. افرین ^سخن افرینی را که در صلای ثنایش The names of the objects of the author's satire are disguised under various riddles.

II. Foll. 39-99. Journal of the siege of Haidarābād, by the same (see p. 268 a).

III. Foll. 100—117. Husn u 'Ishk, by the same (see p. 703 b).

IV. Foll. 117—121. A letter beginning, مکیم حقیقی میرزای دوستان, apparently by the same.

VI. Foll. 130—133. A letter written by Țāhir Nașīrābādī (see p. 368 b), in answer to the Uzbak ambassador.

VII. Foll. 133—137. Short pieces in prose and verse, by Mīr Sayyid 'Alī Mihrī, headed بحر طویل میر سید علی مہری

Mīr Sayyid 'Ali, whose father Sayyid Musā'id was a native of Jabal 'Āmil, was born in Isfahan, and held the office of Malik ush-Shu'arā under Shāh Sultān Ḥusain (A.H.

1105—1135). He died in that Shāh's reign, leaving about six thousand lines of poetry. See Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 440, and Khulāsat ul-Afkār, fol. 277.

VIII. Foll. 137—145. تضا و قدر, "Fate and Destiny," a Maşnavî by Muḥammad' Ķulī Salīm (see p. 738 a).

شنیدم روزی از خونابه ^م نوش Beg.

See the Oude Catalogue, p. 556, Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 122, the Munich Catalogue, p. 4, and Bland, Earliest Persian Biography, p. 163.

A Maşnavī of the same name, by Mīr 'Alī Rizā Tajallī, has been lithographed in the press of Gulzār i Hind, A.H. 1283.

IX. Foll. 145—159. Short pieces by the three following poets: 1. Navvāb Rustam Jang Makhmūr (Murshid Kulī Khān, of Sūrat. He lived at the court of Aṣafjāh, who died A.H. 1161, and survived him but a few years; see the Oude Catalogue, p. 194). 2. Murtaẓā Kulī Beg Vālā (a native of Īrān, who entered the service of Sarbuland Khān, and, after that Amīr's death, A.H. 1090, went to Bengal, where he died; see Riyāẓ ush-Shu'arā, fol. 500). 3. Țughrā (see p. 742 a).

X. Foll. 160—164. Letters and short prose pieces by Ni'mat Khān 'Alī.

XI. Foll. 165—172. Some poetical pieces by the same.

XII. Foll. 172 b—285. A Maşnavî containing short moral tales and anecdotes, probably by the same Ni'mat Khān.

حمد و شکر اورا که هر چه هست ازوست . دام هستی حلقه دار از هاي و هوست

Add. 5629.

Foll. 297; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; about 18 lines, $3\frac{2}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated 'Azīmābād, A.H. 1153-8 (A.D. 1740-5).

[N. BRASSEY HALHED.]

I

I. Foll. 1—14. Arabic verses of the Dīvān of Hāfiz, with interlinear Persian version. Exposition of the spiritual meaning attached to the names of material objects, and glossary of some rare words occurring in the Dīvān. Commentary on some difficult verses of the same Dīvān. The title given in the subscription is خرهنك ديوان خواجه حافظ

II. Foll. 18—28. A versified Persian-Hindustani vocabulary, divided, according to subjects, into twenty sections.

بسم الله خدای کا نـانـو .Beg. لا مکان نـا نهین وه تهانو

It was completed, as stated in the last line, in A.H. 990. Three additional sections at the end are stated to be due to another author. The title in the subscription is مقبول صبيان.

III. Foll. 31-33. Khāliķ Bārī. See p. 516 b.

IV. Foll. 34—41. A tract on archery, called in the subscription رساله تير و كمان.

اما بعد این رساله ایست در بیان تیرانداختن. Beg.

V. Foll. 41-45. Hindustani verses.

VI. Foll. 46—50. Two series of Ghazals, consisting of one Ghazal for each letter of the alphabet. In the first the takhallus is فرشته, in the second محمود.

A Dīvān of Firishtah, called from its first words Mā Muķīmān, is noticed in the Mackenzie Collection, ii. p. 142, Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 43, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 397. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 83.

VII. Foll. 54-63. An alphabetical vocabulary of Persian verbs, conjugated through all tenses, with the Hindustani equivalents.

آفریدن آفرید خواهد آفرید می آفریند پیداکرنان Beg.

VIII. Foll. 64—70. سورة' زبور, the Sūrah of David put into Arabic verse by Ibn 'Abbās (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 312, art. 34), with a paraphrase in Persian verse, and a poetical prologue by Naķī, نقى.

IX. Foll. 71-101. Jāmi' ul-Ķavānīn. See p. 414 b.

X. Foll. 102—143. Inshāi Harkarn. See p. 530 a.

XI. Foll. 144—192. برهنك بدائع الانشا, a glossary to Inshāi Yūsufī. Sce p. 529 a.

XII. Foll. 193-294. Badā'i ul-Inshā (see p. 529 a), with interlinear glosses.

Add. 5660, F.

Foll. 28; $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $10\frac{1}{2}$; a volume of miscellaneous contents. The following are Persian:—Three poems on the wickedness and wretched end of Nand Kumār, foll. 25, 26. Invocations to Muhammad and 'Alī, written so as to form the outline of two horses, fol. 27. The words على شانع عاصيان, in ornamental letters, fol. 28.

Add. 6541.

Foll. 156; 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Masulipatan, A.H. 1197 (A.D. 1783).

[JAMES GRANT.]

I. Foll. 9—127. Lubb ut-Tavārīkh. See p. 104 a.

A very full table of reigns occupies foll. 2-8.

II. Foll. 128—156. A part of Rauzat ut-Tāhirīn (see p. 119 b), viz., the preface, table of contents, and the first five pages of Kism I.

Add. 6587.

Foll. 216; $11\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; from 17 to 20 lines, about 5 in. long; written by different hands in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1197 (A.D. 1783). [JAMES GRANT.]

I. Foll. 3—29. Malfūzāt i Amīr Tīmūr (see p. 177 b), viz.: 1. the Institutes, imperfect at the end (White's edition, pp. 156— 390), fol. 3 b. 2. Extracts from the Designs and Enterprises, fol. 22 a. 3. Continuation of the Institutes (Add. 26,191, foll. 326-347) abridged, foll. 23 b—29 b.

II. Foll. 20—27. Extracts from the Muntakhab ul-Lubāb (see p. 232 b), relating to Todarmal, to Murshid Ķulī Khān, to the reforms effected by Aurangzīb in the collection of the revenue, etc.

III. Foll. 38—45. History of the Osmanli Sultans (from Mir'āt uṣ-Ṣafā; see p. 129 a).

IV. Foll. 46—90. The first portion of the Khizānah i 'Amirah (see p. 373 a), ending with the notice on Aḥmad Shāh Durrānī.

V. Foll. 91—96. History of Malabar (from the Tārīkh i Mamālik i Hind, by Ghulām Bāsiț; see p. 237 a).

VI. Foll. 96—104. Account of Kūch Bahār, and Assam, with a detailed narrative of the campaign of Khānkhānān Muḥammad Muʿazzam Khān; see p. 266 a.

VII. Foll. 105-108. Account of Gondwanah, and of Tibet, from the Akbar Namah.

VIII. Foll. 109, 110. Account of Kashmīr, and of Bījāpūr, from the Iķbāl-Nāmah of Mu'tamad Khān (see p. 255 α).

IX. Foll. 111, 112. Account of Baglānah, from the Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, and of Mālvah, from the Iķbāl-Nāmah.

X. Foll. 113—119. History of the kings of Bengal and Jaunpūr (from the work of Ghulām Bāsiț; see p. 237 a).

XI. Foll. 120—125. Biographical notices on Muḥammad Khān Bangash and his sons, on Sayyid Saʿādat Khān Burhān ul-Mulk and his successors, on 'Alī Muḥammad Khān Rohillah, Najīb ud-Daulah, Mirzā Najaf Khān, Jaʿfar Khān Naṣīrī, afterwards Murshid Ķulī Khān, and his successors in Ben-' gal, and on some other amīrs. Account of the Marattahs, Sikhs, Jāṭs, and the English. The author, whose name does not appear, wrote about A.H. 1200, as a decided partisan of the British rule.

XII. Foll. 126—133. Chronological sketch of the Hindū and Muslim kings of Dehli, سلسله سلاطین هنود و مسلمین, from Judishtir to the accession of Muḥammad Shāh, A.H. 1131; followed by a tabulated list of reigns.

XIII. Foll. 133—142. Tables of the dynasties of India, from the Hindū period to the sixth year of Farrukhsiyar (A.H. 1129), from the Dastūr ul-'Amal of Hādī 'Alī Khān.

XIV. Foll. 143-159. Tables of the principal dynasties of the East, from the early kings of Persia to the time of Karīm Khān Zand.

The length of the several reigns is given in parallel columns according to Hamzah Isfahānī, and other authorities, the latest of which are Habīb us-Siyar, Lubb ut-tavārīkh, Rauzat ut-Ṭāhirīn (p. 119 b), and Mirāt uş-Ṣafā (p. 129 a).

XV. Foll. 160—184. History of the Safavis from the Mir'āt uṣ-Ṣafā.

XVI. Foll. 185—216: History of Persia from the death of Shāh Sultān Husain to the death of Karīm Khān Zand, A.H. 1193, by Razī ud-Dīn Tafrishī, رضى الدين تفرش

حمد و سیاس مالک الملکی را سزاست که .Beg. تاج خلافت

The author states in a short preamble that he had not at hand any record of that period, nor had he been a witness of the events recorded, but he had compiled this account from the information of trustworthy persons.

He begins his narrative with the invasion of Mahmūd Shāh and the proclamation of Shāh Țahmāsp in Ķazvīn, in the month of Muharram, A.H. 1135.

A table of contents, foll. 1 a-2 b, is prefixed to the volume.

Add. 6588.

Foll. 94; 9²/₄ in. by 6; 12 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in the latter part of the 18th century. [JAMES GRANT.]

I. Foll. 1-5. Extracts from the Muntakhab ut-Tavārīkh (p. 222 b), and the Akbar Nāmah, relating to some administrative changes introduced by Akbar, A.H. 982, 937 and 990.

II. Foll. 6—15. Chronology of the Timurides from Timūr to Shāh 'Alam's accession in Dehli, A.H. 1185.—Obituary notices, relating mostly to Indian saints.—Enumeration of Hindū and Muslim sciences.

III. Foll. 15—47. دستور العمل شاهجهانی, An official manual, containing rules of conduct for civil servants, a statistical account of the Ṣūbahs, and the titulature of princes and dignitaries.

منشور الادب شاهنشاهی و دستور العمل کاراگاهی . The work was written in the reign of Aurangzib.

IV. Foll. 47-63. Moral sayings of Shāhjahān, recorded by Aurangzīb. Last directions of Aurangzīb, and some of his familiar letters (shukkah).

V. Foll. 64-91. خلاصة السياق, a treatise on arithmetical notations, and the keeping of public accounts.

احقر العباد اکر چه در نن سیاق چندان . وقوف ندارد

The author, who does not give his name, states that he had written this work in the 47th year of 'Alamgir's reign, A.H. 1115.

II. Foll. 102–241. The Memoirs of Bābar, translated from the Turkī by Mīrzā Pāyandah Hasan Ghaznavī and Muḥammad Kulī Mughūl Hiṣārī.

Beg. x_i this translation is earlier than the better known version of Mīrzā 'Abd ur-Raḥīm (see p. 244 a). It differs from it in wording, sometimes in meaning, and does not on the whole keep so close to the text. It has, however, the same abrupt breaks in the narrative. There are, besides, some gaps in the present copy.

In a preface, which the continuator, Muhammad Kuli, has prefixed to his part of the work, fol. 147, he states that a portion of the Memoirs had been translated in Bābar's time by Shaikh Zain (see Or. 1999), and that in the reign of Akbar, A.H. 994, Bihrūz Khān, "now" entitled Naurang Khān, son of "the late " Kuth ud-Din Muhammad Khān Bahādur Beg Atālik Beglarbegi, being but imperfectly acquainted with Turki, desired to procure a plain and faithful Persian version of a work, which every devoted servant of the dynasty was bound to know. Pursuant to his commands Mirza Pavandah Hasan Ghaznavi translated the first six years and a portion of the seventh. The writer, who had grown up in the service of His Highness, was then ordered to translate the remaining portion of the work, beginning with the latter part of A.H. 906, and ending with A.H. 935 (sic).

Naurang Khān was the son of Kuţb ud-Dīn Khān Atgah, who had been appointed Atālīķ, or governor, to prince Salīm (Jahāngīr) with the title of Beglarbegī, and died A.H. 991. He served with distinction in several campaigns under Akbar, and died as governor of Jūnāgarh in the 39th year of the reign (A.H. 1002). See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 411, Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 101, and Blochmann, Ain i Akbari, p. 333.

Contents : First part of the Memoirs, from the beginning, A.H. 899, to the flight of Babar to Samarkand after his defeat by Shaibānī Khān, in the month of Shavvāl, A.H. 906 (Erskine's translation, pp. 1-94), fol. 102. Preface of Muhammad Kuli, fol. 147 b. Continuation of the Memoirs down to Babar's arrest in Karnān (Erskine, pp. 94— 122), fol. 148 a. Second part of the Memoirs, from A.H. 910 to 914 (Erskine, pp. 127-235), fol. 160 b. The year 926 (Erskine, pp. 281-284), fol. 205 b. The year 925, from the beginning to the 8th of Sha'bān (Erskine, pp. 246-272), fol. 207 b. The year 933, from the beginning to the 14th of Jumāda I. (Erskine, pp. 343—353), fol. 219 b. The year 935, from the beginning to the 1st of Shavval (Erskine, pp. 382-422), fol. 224 a—241.

Add. 6590.

Foll. 241; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 24 lines, $5\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 1203 (A.D. 1789). [JAMES GRANT.]

I. Foll. 4—101. Malfūzāt i Amīr Tīmūr (see p. 177 b), containing:—the preface of Abū Ţālib. The Memoirs, from the beginning to the account of Tīmūr's attack upon Urūs Khān, foll. 4 b—81 a (i.e. a little more than the portion translated by Stewart, which ends on fol. 79 b). The Institutes, imperfect in the end (White's edition, pp. 156— 360), fol. 81. The Designs and Enterprises, imperfect at the beginning (White's edition, pp. 116—152), fol. 95. The continuation of the Institutes, imperfect at the end, and defective in the body of the work (corresponding to Add. 26,191, foll. 326—337), fol. 98.

II. Foll. 102 b—241. راقعات بابرى, the Memoirs of Bābar (see p. 244 a).

The first two parts begin on foll. 102 b and 160 b. Of the third and fourth there are only the following fragments:—A.H. 926 (Translation, pp. 281—284), fol. 205 b. A.H. 925 (Translation, pp. 246—272), fol. 207 b. A.H. 933 (Translation, pp. 343— 353), fol. 219 b. A.H. 935 (Translation, pp. 382—422), fol. 224 a.

A table of contents, including both works. occupies foll. 1—3.

Add. 6591.

Foll. 136; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 4; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with seven Unvans, and gold-ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 884 (A.D. 1480).

[JAMES GRANT.]

I. Foll. 1—18. بغال نامة امام جعفر the book , of divination ascribed to Imām Ja'far Ṣādīķ. الحمد لله . . . بدانك اين ضمير بغايت خوب Beg. و مجربست

It is stated in the preamble that this Fāl, or Zamīr, \dot{o} , on which Imām Ja'far had spent fifty years, was kept as a great treasure by the Khalīfs, and that Sultan Maḥmūd, who had received it from them, kept it by him for constant use. It contains in tabular form Coranic verses, with the answers which they are supposed to give to various questions.

II. Foll. 19—90. A medical treatise on the means of guarding against injuries, رساله, purporting to have been translated, with additions, from the Arabic of Abu 'Alī B. Sīnā.

افتتاح سخن سزاواربنام حکیمیست که بدن آدم را .Beg

The translator, whose name does not appear, dedicates the work to Amīr Jamāl ud-Daulah vad-Dīn Ḥusain Tarkhān.

III. Foll. 91—93. A short extract from the Zakhīrah (see p. 466 b), on prognostics or premonitory symptoms, تقدمة المعرنة.

800

IV. Foll. 94—109. مدخل منظوم, a manual of astrology, in Maşnavî rhyme.

مرد دانا ^{مس}خن ادا نکند Beg. تـا بنام حق ابتدا نکند

The author, whose name does not appear, concludes his prologue with a short eulogy on Jamāl ud-Dīn Abū Maḥāmid Muḥammad B. Aḥmad.

A versified astrological treatise by Mubārak عوزى, or عوزى, is mentioned by Haj. Khal. under مدخل; see vol. v. p. 472, and Add. 7446, fol. 436.

V. Foll. 110—121. مدخل رمل, a versified manual of geomancy, without preface or author's name.

VI. Foll. 122—125. ضمير خسروانى, a book of divination in verse, ascribed to Buzurjmihr بوزرجمهر

VII. Foll. 126—136. A short treatise on the good and evil effects of wine, مختصر در منافع و مضار جنس الاجناس, in four Faşls, without author's name.

حمد وسپاس وشکربی قیاس پادشاهی را سزاست .Beg

Add. 6601.

Foll. 116; 8½ in. by 5; from 13 to 17 lines; written in Nestalik and Shikastah-āmīz. The first part is dated in the 8th year of Shāh 'Alam (A.H. 1180, A.D. 1766).

[JAMES GRANT.]

I. Foll. 1-42. Familiar letters of Aurangzīb, رتمات عالم گري. The collection begins with a preamble in which the designations of the princes and amīrs are explained, and in which reference is made to Farrukhsiyar, probably the reigning emperor at the time of compilation.

The contents, which are in part identical with those of the Dastūr ul-'Amal Agahī (see p. 402 a), are as follows:—Seven letters to prince Mu'azzam Shāh 'Alam Bahādur. Seventy to prince Muḥammad A'zam. One to prince Muḥammad Akbar. One to Kāmbakhsh. Two to Mu'izz ud-Dīn. Four to 'Azīm ud-Dīn. Twenty-five to Bīdārbakht. One to Shāyistah Khān. Twenty-two to Asad Khān. Four to Ghāzī ud-Dīn Khān. Four to Zulfaķār Khān. Four to Chīn Ķilīch Khān. One to 'Aķil Khān. Seven to Ṣadr ud-Dīn Muḥammad Khān. Five to Muḥammad Amīn Khān. One to Luțf Ullah Khān. Two to Ḥamīd ud-Dīn Khān. Fourteen to 'Ināyat Ullah Khān.

VOL. II.

The collection printed in Lucknow, A.H. 1260, under the title رقعات عالمكير, contains letters addressed to the same persons, but generally much shorter. See p. 401 b.

II. Foll. 43-62. An account of the Marattah Peshväs, from the appointment of Bājī Rāo to that office by Rājah Sāhū to the negotiations carried on by Raghūnāth with Colonel Upton in Purandhar, A.D. 1776.

مادهو راو پسر ناراین راو ولد بالا راو Beg.

III. Foll. 63—116. Tabulated notices relating to the principal inhabitants of Surat and Bombay in A.H. 1189, to the distances between the chief towns of India, fol. 64, to the measurements of Tāj Maḥall, fol. 67, and to the Ṣūbahs of India under Akbar and Farrukhsiyar, fol. 109.

Add. 6603.

Foll. 103; 8¹/₄ in. by 5¹/₂; from 13 to 16 lines; written by various hands in Shikastahāmīz and Nestalik, about the close of the 18th century. [J. F. HULL.] I. Foll. 1—27. An account of the Marattah empire, compiled A.H. 1197, without preface or author's name.

مهاراجه راجه ساهو بهونسله در ستاره .Beg. سکرنت داشت 3 B

Beg.

Contents: Notice on the great offices of the court, viz. Pirtī-Nidhī, Pandit Pardhān, Sipahsālār, Pharnavīs, Mantrī, etc., and on the men who held them from the time of Sīvājī to the date of composition, fol. 1 a. Account of the towns, forts, and parganahs of the provinces of Pūnah and Satārah, fol. 4 a. A short history of the Marattahs from their origin to A.H. 1197, with detached notices on the leading families and chiefs, viz. the Bhonslahs, the Rājahs of Satārah, Rānojī Sīndhiyah, Mahādajī Holkar, Dāmānjī Gāikwār, Gobind Rāo Bondelah, Raghojī Bhonslah, Jādū, etc., fol. 10 b.

II. Foll. 28—39. احوال نواب حيدر عليخان , a history of Ḥaidar 'Alī Khān, of Maisūr, from his birth to A.H. 1196.

چو این تارد تر نهالیست از چمنستان کیتی Beg.

The author, whose name does not appear, remarks, in a short preamble, that Haidar 'Alī was the only man in India who had shown himself able to cope with the English power. He traces the origin of his family to Kuhīr, , a town twenty-eight Kos west of Haidarābād, in which his forefathers held the office of Kāzī from the time of Sultan 'Abd His grandsire Dūst Muhammad Ullah. settled in Kolār, district of Surā, province of Arcot, where he married the daughter of a noble Sayyid, and had a son called Mir Fath 'Alī, afterwards Fath Nāik, the father of Haidar 'Alī. The latter is said to have been born A.H. 1131.

At the end the author states that, at the date of writing, namely on the 29th of Zulka'dah, A.H. 1196, the chances of war were still undecided. But the death of Haidar 'Alī on the first of Muharram, A.H. 1197, is briefly recorded in a subsequent addition.

III. Foll. 40-84. An alphabetical glossary of the technical terms used in the collection of revenue, compiled for the use of English officials by Khwājah Yāsīn, of Dahā, خواجه يسير، ساكن دها حمد بیجد متعهد روزی عباد را سزد Beg.

IV. Foll. 85—103. Tables of the revenue of the Sūbahs of Irān and Hindūstān, and of the distances between the principal places of India.

Add. 6631.

Foll. 123; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, 3 in. long; written in large Nestalik; dated Ahmad-ābād, Zulḥijjah, A.H. 1138 (A.D. 1726). [J. F. HULL.]

I. Foll. 1—95. مظہر الآثار, a Sufi poem by Hāshimī, هاشمی.

> بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم فاتحه آرای کلام قدیم

Mīr Hāshimī Kirmānī, surnamed Shāh Jahangir, who was said to descend from two great saints, viz., on his father's side, from Shāh Kāsim Anvār, and, through his mother. from Shāh Ni'mat Ullah Valī, is described as the most eminent Sufi of his time. He went from his native Khorasan to Sind in the early part of the reign of Mīrzā Shāh Hasan Arghūn and stayed some years at the court of that prince, who gave him the greatest marks of favour. He set out for the Hijāz in A.H. 946, and was slain on the way by brigands near a place designated as Kij Mukrān, كيم مكران. See 'Alī Shīr Ķāni', Add. 25,189, fol. 525. In the Nafa'is, Oude Catalogue, p. 55, A.H. 948 is given as the date of his death. Compare Haft Iklim, fol. 121. Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 520, Atashkadalı, fol. 68, Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 420, and Haft Asmān, pp. 90-99.

Shah Hasan (as he is called in the present poem), son of Shāh Beg, reigned, according to 'Alī Shīr, fol. 269, from A.H. 928 to 962. Firishtah, who calls him Shāh Husain, says that he died A.H. 962, after a reign of thirtytwo years. See the Bombay edition, vol. ii. p. 621.

In a prologue of considerable extent the poet pays a tribute of praise to his predecessors and models, Nizāmī, Amīr Khusrau, and Jāmī, authors of the Makhzan ul-Asrār, Maţla' ul-Anvār, and Tuḥfat ul-Aḥrār, and says that two generations (ķarn, i.e. sixty years) after the last of them the key of speech had been given to him by divine love:—

He concludes with a dedication to Shāh Hasan, and adds that this poem is the first of a Khamsah:

It is stated at the end that it was completed in Tattah, A.H. 940:

The poem is divided into three Rauzahs and twenty Mau'izahs. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 606.

II. Foll. 96—107. معراج الخيال, an erotic poem by Mulla 'Alī Rizā Tajallī. See p. 738 a.

III. Foll. 108—117. An extract from the Subhat ul-Abrar (see p. 644 b).

IV. Foll. 118—123. تواعد القران, a treatise in twelve chapters (باب) on the correct pronunciation of the Coran.

Author: Yār Muhammad B. Khudādād Samarkandī, يار محمد بن خداداد سمرتندي Beg. حمد بي حد و ثذاي بي عد حضرت قادري را The work is dedicated to Abul-Ghāzī 'Ubaid-ullah Bahādur Khān (who reigned in Māvarā un-Nahr, A.H. 939—946). The present copy breaks off at the beginning of Bāb 3.

At the end is found the seal of Nīk 'Ālam Khān, a dependent of Nizām ul-Mulk Āşafjāh, with the date A.H. 1153.

Add. 6632.

Foll. 139; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 11 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in large Nestalik; dated Jumadā II., A.H. 1192 (A.D. 1778). [J. F. HULL.]

I. Foll. 1—68. تصد كام روپ, the tale of Kāmrūp.

Munshi 'Alī Rizā, who wrote the present volume, professes to have translated this tale, which he calls تصد کلاکام, from the Hindu tongue تصد کلاکام; for Captain John Ritchie. This version, which is written in the colloquial Persian of India, is quite distinct from that which has been mentioned p. 763 b.

II. Foll. 69—114. The tale of Madhumālat تصد مدحمالت and Prince Manohar, in Muşnavî (see p. 700 a).

The author of the Hindi original is called in this copy Shaikh Manjhan, هزاران افرين بر مجهن . It is stated at the end that the version was completed in A.H. 1059:

and that it consists of 952 distichs.

For Hindī and Dakhnī versions of the tale of Madhumālat see Garcin de Tassy, Litt. Hind., 2nd edition, vol. i. p. 388, and vol. ii. p. 486.

III. Foll. 115-139. The Pand-Nāmah of 'Attār (see p. 579 b).

Add. 6641.

Foll. 195; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; from 12 to 15 lines, about $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in India, in the 18th century. [J. F. HULL.]

I. Foll. 1—67. The Līlāvatī, translated by Shaikh Faizī; see p. 449 b.

II. Foll. 68—149. The Bij-Ganit, translated by 'Ațā Ullah Rashīdī; see p. 450 b.

III. Foll. 150-195. The writer's manual,

دستور العمل نويسندكي

The contents, mostly in tabulated form, are arranged in three Bābs, as follows:

1. Numerals, weights, measures, and divisions of times, fol. 151 a. 11. Names of the signs of the zodiac and asterisms, of the Rāginīs, and of the Hindū sciences and Shāstras, fol. 153 b. 11. The numeral notation called Siyāk, and models of official accounts, fol. 162 a.

Add. 6931.

Foll. 203; 13 in. by 8; about 25 lines, 4 in. long; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1811.

I. Foll. 1—65. Notices on the Amīrs, 'Ulamā, and poets, of the reign of Akbar, from the Ṭabakāt i Akbarshāhī; see p. 220 a.

II. Foll. 66—88. Preface and Bāb 4 of the A'in i Akbarī (see p. 248 a), with the English translation of some passages.

III. Foll. 89—125. The early kings of Persia, from the Rauzat us-Ṣafā, with lists of kings derived from other sources, and extracts from "P. Bizari Rerum Persicarum historia."

IV. Foll. 126-203. History of the kings of India during the four ages of the world, by Pandit Krishnānand, son of Pandit Anandkhan Jī, چنٽت آنند کھن جی Beg. سياس بيقياس مران قادر بيچون را

The author, a native of Dehli, had resided for years in Benares, where his father was in the employ of Mr. Jonathan Duncan. Having subsequently proceeded to Bombay, and entered the service of Mr. Duncan, then governor of that city, he commenced by his order, on the 15th of May 1807, the present compilation, based on the Harivansa and the Bhāgavata Purāna.

Add. 6932.

Foll. 550; 13 in. by 8; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley, on paper watermarked 1814—1816.

Notes and extracts relating to Persian history.

I. Foll. 1—56. Early kings of Persia, from the Dabistān, Rauzat us-Ṣafā, Farḥat un-Nāzirīn, Jahān-ārā, and Burhān Ķāți^e.

II. Foll. 112—136. Extracts from the Tabakāt i Aulād i Changīzkhānī, relating to the successors of Hulāgū, and, more fully, to the Īlkānī dynasty down to the death of Sultan Ahmad B. Uvais, A.H. 813.

III. Foll. 136—151. Extracts from the Zafar Nāmah of 'Alī Yazdi, the Ma'āşir i Rahīmī (see Elliot, vol. vi. p. 237), the Latin version of Abulfaraj, and Pococke's supplement, relating to Tīmūr and his successors in Persia down to the extinction of the Ak-Kuyūnlus, A.H. 914.

IV. Foll. 153—161. The Safavis, from Pococke's Supplement.

V. Foll. 162-203. "Cosmogonical Dynasties anterior to the Pishdadian," from the Dabistān and the Muntakhab ul-Lughat; Persian and English.

V1. Foll. 204-382. Notes and extracts relating to the Pishdadians, Kayānians and Sassanians, from Burhān Ķāți', Jahān-ārā, Rauzat uş-Ṣafā, etc.

VII. Foll. 383-387 and 416-518. The Abbasides from Rauzat uş-Şafa.

VIII. Foll. 388—415. The Ashkanians from Jahān-ārā.

IX. Foll. 519-533. Timūr's wars in Persia from A.H. 782 to 794, from the English translation of Zafar-Nāmah.

X. Foll. 535-550. Lists of Eastern Dynasties, Persian and English. A list of. Arabic and Persian historical works.

Add. 6933.

Foll. 277; 13 in. by 8; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley on paper watermarked 1811-1814.

Notes and extracts relating chiefly to the history of India and China, compiled about 1820.

Contents :-- Chronological sketch of a scheme towards forming an epitome of the history of Hindoostan, fol. 1. Cosmogony and early dynasties of the Hindus, from Firishtah (Dow's Hindoostan), Mas'ūdī, Abu 'I-Fazl, Rādhākant, etc., English and Persian, fol. 8. "Chronicon XIX seculorum post diluvium, analyzante E. A. Maarshamo," Tables showing how the Hindu, fol. 89. Egyptian and Chinese chronology may be reduced to that of the Bible, fol. 139. "Chinese or Khataian History, from Beidavee" (Nizām ut-Tavārikh); Persian and Latin, fol. 153. Account of Shah Rukh's embassy to China, from the Matla' us-sa'dain; Persian and English; fol. 230. Route of John Bell, of Antermony, from St. Petersburg to Pekin, and extracts from his travels, fol. 238. List of the kings of Khatai, Persian, fol. 262.

Add. 6936.

Foll. 362; 12³/₄ in. by 8; written by J. Haddon Hindley on paper water-marked 1814-1818.

I. Foll. 1—18. "Remarks on the modern state of Afghanistan;" sketch of the history of the Afghans; enumeration of their tribes and clans; from Elphinstone's Caubul.

II. Foll. 19—118. "Illustrations of Afghan history from Asiatic authors;" consisting chiefly of lists of saints from the Malfūzāt i Sultānī, by Khwājah Nizām ud-Dīn (Auliyā), and tables of the Afghan tribes from the Makhzan i Afghānī (see p. 210 a); Persian and English.

III. Foll. 120-249. Extracts from the Favātih of Husain B. Mu'in ud-Din Maibudi (see p. 19 b).

IV. Foll. 250—362. The Divan of 'Ali, with a Persian paraphrase by the same author (see p. 19 a).

Add. 6937.

Foll. 185; 12 in. by 8; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley on paper watermarked 1811-1815.

I. Foll. 1—176. The Kayānian dynasty, and the Greek philosophers, from the Rauzat uş-Ṣafā, with extracts from Jahānārā, and Khulāşat ul-Akhbār; Persian and English.

II. Foll. 177—185. Account of Diu, and of the extraordinary adventures of Maulānā Ismā'il and a party of one hundred Turks, in search of the gold-mountain, dated A.H. 969, with the heading:

ذکر جزیره که مشهور است بدیو حمل در راهی که از دکن به میروند تازه پیدا شده

Add. 6945.

Foll. 369; 13 in. by 8; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley, on paper watermarked 1805—1820.

Headings of historical works relating chiefly to India, viz. :- Tabakāt i Akbarī (see p. 220 a), fol. 1. Lubb ut-Tavārikh Hind (p. 228 b), fol. 10. Tārīkh Ilāh Virdī Khān, by Yūsuf 'Alī Khān, son of Ghulām 'Alī Khān ("an intimate friend of Mahābat Jang. He married a daughter of Sarfaraz Khan"), fol. 18. Tārīkh i Jauhar Shāhī (see p. 246 a), fol. 19. Siyar ul-Mutaakhkhirin (see p. 280b), Farhat un-Nāzirīn (see p. 131 a), fol. 22. Ma'āşir i Jahāngīri (see p. 257 α), fol. 50. Nafahāt ul-Yaman, Calcutta, 1811, fol. 59. fol. 62. Mujmal i Tārīkh ba'd-Nādiriyyah, a history of Nādir Shāh's death and of the subsequent period down to the death of Karīm Khān (A.H. 1193), fol. 69. This work, apparently written in India, has a preface, in which the author states that it is in part translated from Arabic records. The first در بیمان مجملی از احوال اواخر نادر شاه heading is و سبب قستل اوالغ . Vāķi'āt i Kashmīr (p. 300 a), fol. 78. "Genghiz Khān Nāmah" (i.e. Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 1 and 2), fol. 81. Rauzat us-Safa, fol. 89. "Two volumes of treatises (on philosophy, mathematics, etc.), found in the fortress of Gwalior," fol. 165.

List of printed Arabic books, from 1505 to 1810, fol. 168. Short notices on some Oriental books and MSS., fol. 178. Notes on the Persian Mahābhārat (from a MS. in four volumes, Chetham Library, Manchester), fol. 186.

Headings and extracts from the following works:—Aḥvāl i Paighambarān (i.e. I'jāz i Muṣṭafavī, by Mīr Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ Kashtī; see p. 154 α), fol. 194. Tazkirat ul-Mulūk, an abridgment of Rauzat uṣ-Ṣafā, compiled in Bījāpūr and brought down to A.H. 1017, with an extract on Pegu, fol. 234. Ma'āşir i Raḥīmi (see p. 131 b), fol. 250. Kachkūl (of Bahā ud-Dīn 'Amilī; see p. 775 α), fol. 261. "Faraj ba'd az Shiddat" (see p. 751 b), fol. 305. The Maşnavī (see p. 584 b), fol.

318. Two Arabic Tazkirahs (Yatīmat ud-Dahr and Dumyat ul-Kaṣr), fol. 322.

Three Arabie poems, viz. Yā dāra Mayyah, Lāmiyyat ul-'Arab, and al-Ķasīdat ut-Țanțarāniyyah, fol. 342. Tuḥfat ul-'Irāķain (see p. 560 b), Persian and English, fol. 353.

Add. 6946.

Foll. 118; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley, on paper watermarked 1805—1810.

Notes and extracts relating to the genealogy of the Patriarchs and to the nations which Eastern tradition connects with them, from the Burhān i Ķāți', Tārīkh i Guzīdah, Rauzat uṣ-Ṣafā, Khulāṣat ul-Akhbār, Firishtah, etc., in Persian, English, and Latin.

Add. 6947.

Foll. 286; 9 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; written by the Rev. J. Haddon Hindley, on paper water-marked 1804—1816.

Miseellaneous notes and extracts. The following are Persian:-The tale of Hatim Tā'i (see p. 764 a), with the English translation of some passages, fol. 76. Headings of the following works: A treatise on medicaments, classed, according to diseases, in thirty-eight chapters, Persian and English, fol. 166. The Divan of Hakim Sana'i (see p. 551 a), fol. 172. A medical work not named (Ma'dan ush-Shifā Sikandarshāhī; see p. 471 b), fol. 200. Ikhtiyārāt i Badi'i (see p. 469 a), fol. 223. Song of a Georgian boy, Ballad of Lutf 'Alī Khān, Ghazals by Fath 'Alī Shāh, Muhtasham, Rakīb, and Jāmī, with English translations.

Add.6962.

Foll. 252; 13 in. by 8; written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley on paper watermarked 1810-1813. Headings of the Maşnavî (see p. 584 b), fol. 1. A portion of the Shāhnāmah, (Macan's edition, pp. 1030—1080), Persian and English, fol. 111.

Add. 6998.

Foll. 236; 9 in. by 7‡; about 9 lines, written by the Rev. John Haddon Hindley on paper water-marked 1808.

I. Foll. 1—211. The Sad Dar (see p. 48 b), transcribed from Roy. 16, B. VII., with Hyde's Latin version.

II. Foll. 212-236. Tables of the Divans of Hazin (see p. 715 b), and Ahsan.

Khwājah Ahsan Ullah, entitled Zafar Khān, and poetically surnamed Ahsan, governor of Kābul, and subsequently of Kashmīr, under Shāhjahān, died A.H. 1073. See Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 374, and the Oudo Catalogue, p. 325.

Add. 7053.

Foll. 210; 9¼ in. by 5¼; about 15 lines, mostly written diagonally, in Nestalik, with silver-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [J. H. HINDLEY.]

Verses from Sa'di's Gulistān, and Bustān, fol. 2. Detached verses of Mirzā Țāhir Vahīd (see p. 189 b), fol. 42, and of Ni'mat Khān 'Alī (see p. 268 b), fol. 49. Rubā'īs of Kudsī (see p. 684 b), fol. 55. Detached verses and Ghazals of Ṣā'ib (see p. 693 a), fol. 66, and of Kalīm (see p. 686 b), fol. 123. Rubā'īs of Kudsī, Sahābī (see p. 672 a), and some other poets, fol. 155.

Add. 7057.

Foll. 65; 8 in. by 6; 11 lines, 44 in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastah-āmīz, on European paper, apparently in India, about the beginning of the 19th century.

[J. H. HINDLEY.]

I. Foll. 2-35. Detached tales in the colloquial Persian of India.

Beg. پسر لقمان آنوقت که سفر رفتن شوق کرفت. Prefixed is a note relating to the price of shawls in Bombay.

II. Foll. 36-65. A fragment of Sa'di's Gulistān.

Add. 7608.

Foll. 184; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; 15 or 16 lines, $3\frac{3}{3}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, probably in the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-34. خلاصة الاسلام, a popular treatise, in twenty-two Bābs, on religious duties and observances, according to the Hanafī school, by Ismā'īl B. Luţf Ullah ul-Bākharzī, اسماعيل بن لطف الله الباخرزى

II. Foll. 35-38. جہل حدیث, forty Hadiş, with a paraphrase in Persian quatrains, imperfect at the end.

III. Foll. 39—45. لوامع الأذكار, forty Hadiş, relating to the praise of God, in five Faşls, compiled and translated by Jalāl B. Muhammad B. 'Ubaid Ullah ul-Ķā'inī, جلال بن محمد بن عبيد الله القايني

IV. Foll. 45—184. A full treatise on legal prayer and ablution, according to the Hanafi school. It begins with some sayings of Muhammad taken from the Targhib uş-Şalāt, (by Muhammad B. Ahmad uz-Zāhid; see Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 282), and is slightly imperfect at the end.

الحد لله رب العالمين . . . اما بعد اين حديث .Beg چند از كتاب ترغيب الصلوة ^{انتخ}اب شد

Add. 7615.

Foll. 80; 8 in. by 5³/₄; 18 lines, written diagonally, in Nestalik; dated Baghdād, A.H. 1226 (A.D. 1811). [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 2-37. مرآت الحقيقة, an account of various sects.

It was written by a Mussulman, who does not give his name, for Mr. Rich, then British Resident in Baghdād, and treats of the ancient philosophers, the Magians, Manes, Mazdak, the Jews, Christians, Muslims and Sufis.

II. Foll. 39-58. Letter of Fath 'Alī Shāh to Sulaimān Pāshā, Governor of Baghdād, relating to the raid of the Vahhābis upon Karbalā (A.H. 1216), with the Pāshā's answer. See Brydges, Dynasty of the Kajars, p. 154.

III. Foll. 59—63. Short poems by Tūfān and contemporary poets. Mīrzā Tayyib, of Hazār-Jarīb, Māzandarān, surnamed Tūfān, died in Najaf, according to a chronogram of Luțf 'Alī Khān, fol. 186, A.H. 1190.

IV. Foll. 63—30. An account of the war of Alexander with Darius, compiled for Mr. Rich by Amīr Aḥmad ul-Ḥasanī ul-Lārījānī, امير احمد للسنى اللاريجانى

كيفيت وقوع محاربه فيمابين اسكندر ودارا : Heading

Add. 7621.

Foll. 179; $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $1\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, probably in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—74. The treatise of $M\bar{i}r$ Husain Mu'ammā'i on versified riddles (see p. 649 b).

II. Foll. 75—179. Manāzir ul-Inshā by Khwājah Mahmūd Gāvān (see p. 527 b).

This copy wants a leaf at the beginning, three after fol. 79, and about twelve at the end. A spurious beginning and end have been supplied by a later hand.

Add. 7649.

Foll. 110; 11 in. by 7; 25 and 31 lines, about 5 in. long; written in Naskhī; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1017 (A.D. 1608), and A.H. 1113 (A.D. 1701). [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—96. Nusakh i Jahān-ārā. See p. 111 b. The later dynasties are brought down in marginal notes to A.H. 1193. Some additions by a still later hand come down to A.H. 1226.

II. Foll. 97—110. A commentary by Jāmī (see p. 17 a) on some verses of the Sufi poem القصيدة للغرية of Ibn ul-Fāriz (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 401 a, and Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 537).

Beg. سليحانه من جميل ليس لوجهة نقاب الا النور The commentary is called لوامع and each of its paragraphs is headed لامعة. It is mentioned under the former title by Lārī in the life of Jāmī, fol. 172, and by Sām Mīrzā, fol. 82. The date of composition, A.H. 875, is expressed in a Rubā'ī at the end by the words شهر صفر.

Add. 7654.

Foll. 318; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 and 21 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik and Naskhi, in the 17th and 18th centuries.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 3—92. The first portion of 'Alam Arāi 'Abbāsī (see p. 185 a), viz., the preface, introduction, and the reigns of Shāh Ismā'il, and Shāh Țahmāsp, in the same recension as Add. 17,927 (see p. 187 a), corresponding to foll. 5 b—149 b of the same MS. A false beginning and end, foll. 1, 2, 93—97, have been added by a later hand, that of Muhammad Husain B. Karam 'Alī Işfahānī (see p. 137 a).

II. Foll. 99—164. A collection of state letters that passed between Shāh Ismā'il, fol. 97, Shāh Țahmāsp, fol. 108, Shāh Ismā'il II. and Shāh Sulțān Muḥammad, fol. 186, and the contemporary sovereigns of Māvarā un-nahr, Egypt, Turkey, and India. It appears, from the original pagination, to have lost the first thirty leaves: A false beginning, foll. 97, 98, has been supplied by the same hand as above.

Letters of 'Abd ul-Mūmin Khān to Shāh 'Abbās I., and of the latter to Sultan Sulaimān, are found in the margins of foll. 50—62.

III. Foll. 196-318. Maksad II. of 'Alam-Arāi (see p. 186 a), wanting the biographical notices at the end; dated Rajab, A.H. 1038.

Add. 7666.

Foll. 372; 9 in. by 5; 17 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik and Naskhi, apparently in the 16th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-317. The latter half of the Persian translation of Ibn Khallikān (see p. 334 a), beginning with Saif ud-Danlah Ghāzī B. 'Imād ud-Dīn Zingī, and corresponding to Add. 16,714, foll. 216-409, and to M'Guekin de Slane's translation, vol. ii. p. 440-vol. iv. p. 602.

II. Foll. 318-348. An abridgment of the Kitāb ul-Mu'jam (see p. 811, Add. 7712).

III. Foll. 349—372. A compendium of geography, beginning with the heading صفت بحار بحر اخضر

. It consists of four chapters, treating of seas, fol. 349 b, rivers, fol. 351 b, mountains, fol. 353 a, countries and towns, fol. 356 b, each of which contains detached notices arranged in alphabetical order. It evidently formed part of a more extensive work, including history and biography; for the author refers incidentally to his account of Alexander, fol. 366 a, of the Khalif al-Mansūr, fol. 359 a, and of the philosophers and poets of Ghaznīn, fol. 368 b.

The author speaks of Azarbā'ijān with a certain predilection, as though it were his native land, and his reference, under Kazvin, fol. 369 b, to the pleasantries of 'Ubaid Zākānī and other friends خوش طبيعهاي عبيد خوش طبيعهاي عبيد و ياران ديكر خوش طبيعهاي and other friends خوش طبيعهاي on its inhabitants, seem to imply that he was a contemporary of that poet, and wrote before the invasion of Timūr, of which no mention is made. 'Ubaid Zākānī died A.H. 772; see Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 18.

The geographical notices are extremely inaccurate, and deal mostly in mythical legends and childish fables.

Add. 7667.

Foll. 368; 82 in. by 5. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1–78; 21 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated A.H. 1022 (A.D. 1613).

The Tuhfat ul-Irākain (see p. 560 b), with the preface.

The latter wants the first three pages. A false beginning has been prefixed by a later hand.

The subscription states that this copy was written by Kāni'ī for "the most elegant of poets," Auliyā Beg, جبة افصح الشعرا جناب حضرت أوليا بيك

II. Foll. 79-368; 17 lines, 3 in. long; written in neat Nestalik, probably in the 16th century.

The Tazkirah of Daulatshih (see p. 364 a). This copy contains at the end, fol. 363 a, an additional notice of a seventh contemporary poct, Amīr Husain Jalā'ir. It wants the latter part, about five leaves, of the history of Sulțān Husain. A spurious conclusion has been supplied by a later hand.

3 c

VOL. II.

Add. 7685.

Foll. 167; 8¼ in. by 5½; 18 and 16 lines, 4 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, early in the 19th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—130. Lață'if ul-Lughāt; see p. 590 b.

II. Foll. 131-159. Three Arabic tracts, described in the Arabic Catalogue, p. 459.

III. Foll. 160—165; 16 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, in a page.

Account of a debate which had taken place in Isfahan, in Rabī[•] I., A.H. 1221, between the author and Padre Joseph, and in which the former attempted to refute the doctrine of atonement.

The author refers in the preamble to a treatise which he had written after a previous controversy with the same Padre, and in which he established the divine mission of Mohammad by proofs drawn from the Pentateuch and the Gospel, رساله اثبات نبوت بادله مذکوره از توریت وانجیل

Add. 7689.

Foll. 209; 8 in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; written in Naskhi and Shikastah-āmīz, early in the 19th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—35. Inshā, or forms of letters, in Turkish.

II. Foll. 39—111; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 1218 (A.D. 1804).

Forms of letters to be written by, or addressed to, persons of various classes, as 'Ulamā, Sayyids, Daftardārs, Amīrs, Mustaufīs, Kāzīs, merchants, Sultans, princes, Vazīrs, etc.

للحمد لله . . . اما بعذ بر ضمایر عارفان این . Beg. فن پوشید و محفی نماناد

The preface contains some remarks on the value of the art of epistolary composition, and general directions to letter-writers.

III. Foll. 111—149. A similar collection, with the heading من منتخب بحر الانشا.

It contains a letter of 'Urfi (see p. 667 a) to Hakīm Abul-Fath, and one of Mīrzā Muhammad Ashraf to Ibrāhīm Khān.

IV. Foll. 150—191. The Lavā'iḥ by Jāmī (see p. 44 a); dated Baghdād, A.H. 1223 (A.D. 1808.

V. Foll. 192–209. Forms of letters in Turkish.

Add. 7690.

Foll. 264; 9 in. by 6; 13 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—138. منشأت مرزا طاهر وحيد, prose compositions of Mīrzā Ṭāhir Vaḥīd (see p. 189 b).

مكتوبيكه مصحوب كلب على سلطان بخوندكار .Beg

This collection, which has been printed in Calcutta, 1826, and in Lueknow, 1844, consists of letters addressed in the name of Shāh 'Abbas II. to contemporary princes, amīrs and dignitaries, and of prefaces composed by Ṭāhir for various works, among others, for his own history of Shāh 'Abbās. The royal letters are addressed to the Sultan of Turkey, Shāhjahān, Dārā Shikūh, Murādbakhsh, Aurangzīb, the king of Bījāpūr, Kutubshāh, 'Abd ul-'Azīz Khān ruler of Balkh, Abul-Ghāzī Khān ruler of Urganj, and the emperor of Russia.

II. Foll. 139–241. Letters of Mirzā Bīdil (see p. 706 b), with a short preface by the author.

عجز مراتب حمد و ثنا تسليم باركاة صمدى Beg. , تعات بيدل This is the collection entitled and published as part of the author's Kulliyāt, Lucknow, A.H. 1287, pp. 69-215. Most of the letters are addressed to the author's patron, Shukr Ullah Khān, and to the two sons of that Amir, 'Akil Khan and Shākir Khān.

Sayyid Shukr Ullah Khān died, as has been stated p. 370 a, A.H. 1108. His sons are mentioned in the Tazkirat ul-Umara, foll. 69 a and 59 b. The first, Mir Karam Ullah, received the title of 'Akil Khan in the latter part of the reign of Aurangzīb.

III. Foll. 242-264. جامع الامثال, Persian proverbs, arranged in alphabetical order, by Hadi B. Muhammad Mahdi ul-Husaini, 19 محمد مهدى هادى الحسيني

Beg.

اما بعد چند، كويد اقل العباد

The work is based, as stated in the preamble, upon an earlier collection designated as منتخب to which the author added, at the request of the friend who had shown it to him, such proverbs as he could recollect.

Add. 7696.

Foll. 97; 8 in. by 42; 17 and 14 lines, about 3 in. long; written in Nestalik and Naskhi; dated Muharram, A.H. 1065 (A.D. 1654). . [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-24. A treatise on almanacs, by Naşîr ud-Dîn Tûşî. See p. 452 b.

II. Foll. 24-32. A treatise on horoscopes, در شرف و هبوط beginning with the heading ستاركان

It is divided into many short sections headed , but not numbered.

III. Foll. 33-45. Madkhal i Manzum; see p. 801 a.

IV. Foll. 49-97. The astronomical treatise of 'Alī Kūsliī. See p. 458 a.

ابن مولانا محمد صالح محمد زمان الرازي : Copyist

Add. 7707.

Foll. 295; 10 in. by 63; 17 lines, 41 in. long; written in small Nestalik; dated Jumāda I., A.H. 27 (probably for 1027 = A.D.1618). [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-239. Nuzhat ul-Kulub. See p. 418 a.

The third Makalah, or geographical portion of the work, is defective and out of order. It wants the greater part of Kisms II .- IV.

II. Foll. 240-295. Favātih ul-Maibudi. See p. 19 b.

Add. 7712.

Foll. 390; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi; Şafar, Ramazān, A.H. 1113 (A.D. 1701-1702).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1-237. Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī. See p. 469 a.

II. Foll. 238–319. كتاب العجم في آثار ماي. a history of the early kings of Persia, from Kayūmarş to Anūshīrvān.

فضل الله Author : Fazl Ullah ul-Husaini, فضل الله الحسینی ان احق ما یغتم بـــه الکلام

Beg.

The author, who calls himself as above in the preface, fol. 246 b, must have been a Sayyid, and was, according to the Jahān-ārā, fol. 138, a native of Kazvin. He must therefore be distinguished from his namesake, Izz ud-Din Fazl Ullah, father of the historian Vassaf, with whom he has been wrongly identified by Amin Rāzi, Haft Iklim, fol. 37, and others. The latter, who was no Sayyid, and was born in Shīrāz, died A.H. 698 (see p. 162 a), probably before the composition of the present work.

The Mu'jam is written in an extremely ornate and laboured style. A wordy preface, foll. 238-247, is chiefly taken up by a panegyric upon the reigning prince, Atābak Nuṣrat ud-Dīn Aḥmad B. Yūsuf Shāh, of the dynasty of Lur Buzurg, who succeeded his brother Afrāsyāb, slain by the Moghuls at the close of A.H. 695, and died, after a long and prosperous reign, in A.H. 730 or 733. See Guzīdah, fol. 156, Jahānārā, Add. 7649, fol. 52, and Mīrkhwānd, History of the Atabeks, pp. 66-68.

Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 628, who calls the author Fazl Ullah B. 'Abd Ullah ul-Kazvīnī, assigns to the work a date obviously too early, viz. A.H. 654. Compare Morley's Catalogue, p. 132, the Munich Catalogue, p. 78, and Sir Wm. Ouseley's Catalogue, No. 315.

III. Foll. 320—390. Akhlāķ i Muḥsinī. See p. 443 b.

Add. 7720.

Foll. 123; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; from 7 to 10 lines, about 3 in. long; written in Naskhi and Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—21. A treatise on logic, be-بدانکہ آدمیرا قوتیست دراکہ کہ منتقش : ginning کردد در وی صور اشیا چنانکہ در آئیذہ

It is the work known as الرسالة الكبرى فى by Mir Sayyid Sharif Jurjānī (see p. 522 a), noticed by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. pp. 416, 446, by Sprenger, Zeitschrift, vol. 32, p. 9, and printed in the Majmū'ah i Manțik, Lucknow, 1819, pp. 10—50. It is found with a commentary in Add. 25,869. See p. 440 a.

II. Foll. 22-62. The same treatise, with a Latin translation written over the text, wanting nine leaves at the beginning, and imperfect at the end.

III. Foll. 63—106. جام گيتى نبا, a philosophical treatise, with a Latin translation, written by the same hand as the preceding.

سیاس حکیمی را که افکار حکما وانظار علماء . Beg.

On the first page is found the following title :---

"Universum, seu, ut Persæ vocant, poculum mundi, opera Georgi Strachani Mernensis Scoti in Latinum idioma traducta (sic) 1634."

The work is dedicated to a Shāhzādah not named, described as the ruler of the land (Fārs). It is divided, as stated in the preface, into an introduction (Fātiḥah), thirty Makṣads, and a Khātimah. The present copy, however, ends with Makṣad 27.

An Arabic version has been edited with a a Latin translation, under the title of "Synopsis propositorum sapientiæ Arabum philosophorum," by Abraham Ecchellensis, Paris, 1641. The author, who is called Kāzī Zādah Husain in a copy noticed in Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. v. p. 262, and Kāzī Mīr Husain ul-Maibudī by Haj. Khal., vol. ii. p. 499, has been already mentioned, p. 19 a.

In a copy of the Persian text noticed by Uri, p. 283, the work is ascribed to a later writer, Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Manşūr, who died, according to the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, A.H. 948.

The following notice, written by Mr. Rich on the fly-leaf, relates especially to the last two articles. "This volume is a very great curiosity; it contains two Persian tracts with an interlinear translation, the work and writing of Strachan, a Scotchman who lived much among the Mowali Arabs when they were the princes of the desert. He was a friend of Pietro della Valle, in whose travels much mention is made of him. Baghdad, 1816." A sketch of Strachan's life will be found in "Viaggi di P. della Valle," Rome, 1658, vol. iii. p. 493. IV. Foll. 107—123. A geographical account of the Persian empire, endorsed, انتخاب از كتاب سور [صور] اقاليم

حمد بیحد و ستایش بیعدد مرخالقی را که از .Beg کتم عدم

This work, which appears to have been written for a Begzādah ealled Ishāk, in the reign of Shāh 'Abbās I. (A.H. 996—1038), consists of a meagre enumeration of the Persian provinces, and their principal towns, with the distances between them. At the end is a table of the longitudes and latitudes of the chief cities of Persia, foll. 121—123.

Add. 7721.

Foll. 277; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; written by different hands in various characters, for the most part A.H. 1222 (A.D. 1807).

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—8. The Lavā'ih of Jāmī. See p. 44 a.

II. Foll. 11-16. Explanation of terms used by official writers, in tabular form, with the heading, تاعدة در بسیان خلاصه الفاظی کم نیزد اهل تحریر مصطلم است

III. Foll. 17—32. Copies of some letters that passed between Fath 'Alī Shāh and Sulaimān Pāshā, Governor of Baghdād, on the subject of the raid of the Vahhābis upon Karbalā in A.H. 1217, and of letters written in the same year by the governor of Baghdād to the British Consul, Mr. Harford Jones (afterwards Sir H. J. Brydges). They were transcribed for Mr. H. Jones by some person in the employ of Sulaimān Pāshā.

IV. Foll. 32—49. Fragment of Vāmiķ u 'Azrā, رامق و عذرا, a Maşnavī by Nāmī (i.e. Mīrzā Muḥammad Ṣādiķ; see p. 196 a). It begins with the following line, which belongs to the early part of the prologue:—

Further on the poem is described as the fourth of a Khamsah ببر چارم کنج برمی ساختم and the poet adds that he had chosen a theme hitherto unsung in preference to the worn out tale of Shīrīn u Khusrau :

It is well known, however, that the same story has been treated by two poets of the fifth century of the Hijrah, 'Unşurī and Faşīḥī, and by one of the tenth, Zamīrī, who lived at the court of Shāh Țahmāsp. See Hammer, Redekünste, pp. 42, 46, Wamik und Asra, Vienna, 1833, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 27.

V. Foll. 52-67. Ghazals by Ţūfān (see p. 808 a, iii.), Hātif, and Mushtāķ.

Sayyid Ahmad of Isfahan, surnamed Hātif, was a friend of Lutf 'Alī Khān, who speaks of him about A.H. 1190 as still living. See Atashkadah, fol. 197. Some of his Ghazals have been translated by J. M. Jouannin, Mines de l'Orient, vol. ii. p. 307. See also Bland, Century of Ghazals, x., and Defrémery, Journal Asiatique, 5° Série, vol. vii. p. 130.

Mushtāķ, whose proper name was Mīr Sayyid 'Alī, was also a native of Isfahan and a friend of Luţf 'Alī Khān, who collected his poems after his death. See Atashkadah, fol. 194, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 442.

VI. Foll. 68, 69. Fragment of Majnūn and Lailā, a Maşuavī, by Mirzā Ṣādiķ Nāmī. See art. iv.

VII. Foll. 70-75. Kaşīdah, by Ţūfān, and some short pieces.

VIII. Foll. 76-128. Farhād u Shīrīn, by Vaḥshī. See p. 663 b. IX. Foll. 128—146. Tarkīb-band in praise of 'Alī, and some shorter poems.

X. Foll. 147—162. دنع الشك والمين في تحرير, an Arabic treatise on the poems called Zajal and Mawāliyā, by Tāj ud-Dīn 'Abd ul-Vahhāb ul-Banvānī.

XI. Foll. 163—192. انيس العشاق, a treatise on the poetical description of female beauty, with examples from classical poets; wanting a few lines at the beginning.

بن محمد الملقب بالشرف المشهور بالرامي

The work is divided into nineteen chapters treating severally of the various parts of the face and body. The contents are stated in the Jahrbücher, vol. 83, Anzeige-blatt, p. 23, and in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 414. See also Stewart's Catalogue, p. 71, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 122.

From the author's reference, in the extant portion of the preface, to a visit paid by him to the tomb of Naṣīr ud-Dīn Ṭūsī at the time of composition, it is evident that the work was written in Azarbā'ijān; but there is some uncertainty about its date. Haj. Khal. states, vol. i. p. 488, that it was completed A.H. 826, and dedicated to Abul-Fath Uvais Bahādur. At that date, however, Azarbā'ijān, having been wrested from Ķarā Yūsuf by Mīrzā Bāisunghur in A.H. 823, formed part of the empire of Shāhrukh.

Shaikh Uvais, of the Ilkānī dynasty, the prince to whom the work seems to have been dedicated, reigned from A.H. 757—776. Two other circumstances make it probable that this was the period at which the author lived. He refers in the preface to Auhadī, who died A.H. 738 (see p. 619 a), as a poet of his time, and further on, fol. 190 a, he mentions as his own master, Hasan B. Mahmūd Kāshī, a poet who, according to Taķī Kāshī, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, died A.H. 710. It must be noticed, however, that a still later date, viz. A.H. 878, is assigned by Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 21, to another work of the same writer, also dedicated to Uvais Shāh, namely a commentary on حدائق السحر. Compare Krafft's Catalogue, p. 21.

XII. Foll. 193—212. A treatise on rhyme, without title or author's name.

Beg. حمد بيحد و ثناي بيعد مر خالقي. كم زبان حدائق The author frequently quotes the حدائق of Shams i Kais, and, among late poets, Şā'ib, who died A.H. 1088.

XIII. Foll. 212—240. مجمع الصنائع, a treatise on poetical figures.

Author: Nizām ud-Dīn Ahmad B. Muhammad Ṣālih uṣ-Ṣiddīķī ul-Ḥusainī, نظام

الدين احمد بن محمد صالح الصديقى الحسينى الحمد لله الذي انعم علينا وهدانا Beg.

It was completed, as stated at the end, in A.H. 1060, the twenty-fourth year of the reign of Shāhjahān. The same date is fixed by a versified chronogram in the preface. The author mentions incidentally a Maşnavī entitled $\overline{l}_{,}$ composed by his father in A.H. 1056.

The work consists of four chapters (Fasl), as follows:—1. Various kinds of composition. 2. Word-ornaments. 3. Concetti, منائع معنوى. 4. Plagiarisms, or borrowed ideas. Appendix on technical terms.

The present MS. is imperfect at the end. A complete copy is found in Add. 12,560.

XIV. Foll. 242—245. An Arabic treatise on philosophical terms, الاصول والضوابط المحكمة

XV. Foll. 247—255. An extract relating to some curious combinations of numbers, with diagrams. The heading is, باب سیم در ذکر شطری از نوادر وغرایب اوضاع اعداد

XVI. Foll. 256—267. Moral sayings of 'Alī in Arabic, نثر اللالى. XVII. Foll. 268—277. Ghazals rhyming in Alif, by Mushtāķ. See p. 813 b.

Add. 7722.

Foll. 202; 8[‡] in. by 5[‡]; 17 lines, about 3 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Baghdād, Muḥarram, A.H. 1225 (A.D. 1810). [Cl. J. Rich.]

I. Foll. 1—39. A treatise on astronomy, by Muhammad Husain B. Karam 'Alī Işfahānī (see p. 137 a), in the author's handwriting.

Beg. حمد بيحد عظمت كبرياي رسد كه مرافق The work, written for Akā Ahmad Lāhi-jānī, includes a versified treatise on the astrolabe, foll. 27-38.

II. Foll. 40-44. A treatise on the preparation and preservation of medicaments, in six Faşls and a Khātimah, extracted from the محتار الادريد of Hājī Zain ud-Dīn 'Aṭṭār (see p. 469 a).

فصل اول در امتياز ميان دوا و غذا ... Beg.

III. Foll. 44-62. Two extracts from the Tuhfat ul-Mūminin (see p. 476 b).

IV. Foll. 64—196. Alchemical tracts in Arabic. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 464.

V. Foll. 197—207. A treatise on instantaneous eures, translated from the Arabic of Muhammad B. Zakariyyā ur-Rāzī, by Muhammad Husain Ibn Karam 'Alī (see art. i.).

حسب الخاهش جناب سيد عزيز القدر Beg.

The title of the Arabic work is دستور الطب The title of the Arabic work is دستور الطاعة و بزو الساعة xeii., art. 6.

Add. 7723.

Foll. 78; 7¹/₄ in. by 4²/₄; 19 lines, about 3 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz and Naskhi, apparently in the 17th century.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—14. A tract on the rational explanation of the Mi'rāj.

Beg. سپاس و مستایش خداوند زمین و اسمان را It is commonly ascribed to Abu 'Alī B. Sīnā. See the Dabistān, Troyer's translation, vol.iii. pp. 176—200, where extensive extracts are given, and Haj. Khal., tit. رسالة في الهعراج, vol. iii. p. 443.

II. Foll. 15—48. A philosophical treatise on crafts and professions, their relative importance and mutual relations, endorsed كتاب معرفة الصنايع

الحمد لله . . . غرض از این رساله بیان حد . Beg. مناعت است

In another copy, Add. 16,839, xxii., Amīr Abul-Ķāsim ul-Fandarsakī, امير ابو القاسم is named as the author.

Mir Abul-Käsim, who came of a family of Sayyids settled in Astrābād, took his Nisbah from Fandarsak, a neighbouring town (see Burhan i Kāți'). He is described as the most eminent philosopher and Sufi of his time. and stood high in the estimation of Shah 'Abbās I., whom he is said, however, to have scandalized by his habit of mixing with the lowest orders and attending cock-fights. He spent many years in India, and was twice introduced to Shähjahan by the Vazir Asaf Khān (Abul-Hasan), namely in the first and tenth years of the reign, A.H. 1037 and 1046. But he subsequently returned to his native country, and died in Isfahan during the reign of Shäh Safi, A.H. 1038-1052. The present work, commonly designated as مناعات, is mentioned as the most popular of his writings. See Tahir Naşrabadı, fol. 119 a, Amīn, Pādishāh Nāmah, fol. 425, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 31, and Atashkadah, fol. 86.

According to the Dabistān, Mīr Abul-Ķāsim became, through his intercourse with the disciples of Kaivān, much imbued with Pārsī ideas. See Troyer's translation, vol. i. p. 140, vol. iii. pp. 205, 206.

The word صناعت, " craft," is taken by the author in an exceptionally wide sense, and is made to include the highest forms of human activity. His first chapter treats of prophets, Imāms, and philosophers.

III. Foll. 49—78. Eleven Sufi tracts, by Muḥammad Dihdār, محمد دهدار.

Khwājah Muhammad Dihdār, son of Khwājah Mahmud, belonged to a family of Arab extraction settled in Havizah, a town of Khūzistān, and subsequently in Shīrāz. He went to India under Akbar, and became intimate with the Khānkhānān 'Abd ur-Rahim, to whom several of his treatises are dedicated. He died in Sūrat under Jahāngīr (according to Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 393, A.H. 1016), leaving poetical compositions in which he took the name of Fani, and many prose works, among which glosses to the Nafahāt, Rashahāt, and Gulshan i Raz, and a commentary upon the preface of Tibyān, are mentioned. See Riyāz ul-Auliyā, fol. 169, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 330. Some of his tracts are noticed in the Jahrbücher, vol. 85, Anzeigeblatt, p. 54, and the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 455.

The subjects of the present treatises are the following:-1. Spiritual meaning of the Zikr, fol. 42 b. 2. Comments on the verse Coran, lvi. 74, fol. 54 b. 3. Free-will and predestination, fol. 56 a. 4. Defence of Muhyi ud-Dīn Ibn ul-'Arabī against 'Alā ud-Daulah (see p. 413 a), and Gīsū Darāz (see p. 347 b), fol. 61 b. 5. Relato individuals, انسان کلی to individuals fol. 64α . 6. Muhammad and the universal soul روم اعظم, fol. 66 a. 7. Relation of individual minds to the ten intellects, fol. 68 b. 8. Comparison of the insight of previous prophets and of Muhammad, fol. 69 b. 9. Mutual relations of men, and the twelve Imāms, fol. 71 b. 10. Comments on 'Ali's saying with regard to the existence of Adam before creation, fol. 75 a. 11. The beginning of light and the world of darkness. This last tract is imperfect.

Add. 7737.

- 5.

Foll. 253; 9 in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$; 18 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabī' II., A.H. 1033 (A.D. 1624). [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—72. اخلاق شمسيد, a treatise on ethics, in prose and verse, by Hasan B. Rūzbahān, حسن بن روزيهان

احمدك يا ذا الجود والفضل و الأحسان Beg.

The preface contains a eulogy upon the Vazīr Shams ud-Daulah Muḥammad, from whose name the title is derived. The author states further on that he had been determined, after long delays, to issue the present work by the appearance of the Akhlāķ i Muḥsinī (a work completed A.H. 900; see p. 443 b).

It is divided into fourteen Bābs and a Khātimah.

Dr. Sprenger, who notices the work in the Zeitschrift der D. Morg. Gessellschaft, vol. xiii. p. 540, calls the author Hasan B. Rūzbahān Shīrāzī.

II. Foll. 73—137. Manțik uț-Țair. See p. 576 a.

III. Foll. 137—242. Muṣībat Nāmah. See p. 576 b.

IV. Foll. 242-253. Gulshan i Rāz. See p. 608 b.

Add. 7776.

Foll. 121; 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{4}$; 23 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in four gold-ruled columns, with two 'Unvāns, and 36 miniatures in Persian style; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1004 (A.D. 1596). [Cl. J. RICH.] I. Foll. 1-64. Mihr u Mushtari. See p. 626 a.

In this copy the date of composition, fol. 64 a, is not A.H. 778 as in the above copy, but A.H. 748, نوميم با ذال

icopyist : نور الدين محمد لاهجي

II. Foll. 65—121. Duval-Rānī Khizr Khūn. See p. 612 a, xiv.

عبد اللطيف بن نعمان : Copyist

Add. 7802.

Foll. 110; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 15 lines, about 3in. long; written by various hands in Nestalik and Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in the 17th century. [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 1—63. Prologue of a Maşnavī in the measure of the Makhzan ul-Asrār, with a dedicatory epistle in prose to some patron of letters not named.

Beg.

ای خرد مرحله پیمای فکر قدرت بازوی توانای فکر

The author, who designates himself only by his poetical surname Afitāb آنڌا ب, mentions, as his models, the works of Nizāmī, Khusrau, Jāmī, and lastly the Markaz i Advār of Faizī (see p. 671 a). This line, نطق مرا لهجه خراسانيست of Khorasan, while from his appeals to the Shāh's indulgence, and some references to Kirman such as this, مرا خورد, it is evident that he had fallen into disgrace, and had been some time confined, much against his will, to that city.

Foll: 39-55 are occupied by some Kaşīdahs and Ghazals, apparently by the same poet. These also contain references to the author's compulsory stay in Kirman, as in the following line: كرمان كشيده كرد من از تار. كرمان كشيده كرد من از تار. One of the Kaşīdahs fixes the period of the poet : it is addressed to the Kūrchī Bāshī Murtazā VOL. II.

Kulī Khān, an Amīr of the Shāmlū tribe, who, as we learn from Ţāhir Naṣrābādī, fol. 30, held the government of Kirmān in the reign of Shāh 'Abbās II. (A.H. 1052— 1077). Another is in praise of Shāh 'Abbās.

II. Foll. 64—110. Letters and other prose pieces, without author's name.

سپاس کبریای احدیت بمثابه ایست که .Beg. ادب آموزان

The letters are mostly written in the name of Hasan Khān, and of 'Abbās Ķulī Khān, to whom the author appears to have acted as secretary.

Hasan Khān B. Husain Khān Shāmlū, governor of Khorāsān (see p. 682 a), was a great patron of poets, and the author of a Dīvān, a preface to which is found in the present collection. His son, 'Abbās Ķulī Khān, who succeeded him in the government, was still living when Ṭāhir Naṣrābādī wrote, i.e. A.H. 1083; see fol. 29.

Add. 7819.

Foll. 189; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long, with 28 lines round the margins; written in small Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1056 (A.D. 1646). [Cl. J. RICH.]

I. Foll. 2—154. ديوان نظيري نيشاپورى the bivan of Naziri of Nishapur.

This poet, whose proper name was Muhammad Husain, went to India, after a stay of some years in Kāshān, and became a favourite follower of that great lover of poetry, the Khūnkhānān 'Abd ur-Rahīm Khān. After a pilgrimage to Mecca, performed in A.H. 1012, he adopted a religious life, and settled in Ahmadābād, where he died A.H. 1022 or 1023. See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 515, Blochmann, Ain Akbarī, p. 579, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 318, Badāonī, vol. iii. p. 355, Riyāz, fol. 457, and Ouseley's Notices, p. 252. Contents: Kaşīdahs, Tarkībs, Tarjī's and Ķiţ'ahs, arranged apparently in chronological order, with rubrics due to the author, showing for whom and on what occasion the several pieces were composed. The poems are addressed to the Khānkhānān, to Akbar and Jahāngīr, to 'Abd Ullah Khān of Gujrāt, to Akbar's son, prince Murād, Naurang Khān, A'zam Khān Kūkah, and other Amīrs. Some are elegies on the death of the author's children and of contemporary poets. The section is imperfect in the beginning.

2. Ghazals in alphabetical order, fol. 70, beginning :

اذا ما شلت ان تحيي حيوة حلوة المحيى

This section has two lacunes after foll. 123 and 141, and breaks off at the beginning of letter J.

II. Foll. 155—188. The Ghazals of Vahshī (see p. 664 a), wanting the first part of letter 1, and the latter part of letter \ldots , with the rest of the alphabet.

III. Foll. 155—188, and 2—30 (margins). The Dīvān of Shāpūr. See p. 674 b.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, imperfect at the beginning, fol. 155. Ghazals in alphabetical order, with a lacune extending from letter \smile to letter ρ , foll. 175—188, 2—23. Two Tarjī⁻bands, fol. 24.

IV. Foll. 30—127 (margins). ديوان شيخ , the Dīvān of Shaikh 'Alī Naķī, of Kamrah.

آنانکه از سرشک پیا یے حشر کنند Beg.

This poet and his brother Ulfatī came of the family of the Shaikhs of Kamrah, a borough situate near Jarbādķān, in Irac. 'Alī Naķī was the panegyrist of Shāh 'Abbās I. (A.H. 995—1038), and of Hātim Beg, who was that king's Vazīr during the early part of his reign. He is mentioned as still alive in the Haft Iķlīm, a work written A.H. 1002. He died, according to Tāhir Naṣrābādī, fol. 176, in A.H. 1012, or, as stated in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 460, A.H. 1013. Dr. Sprenger gives a later date, viz. A.H. 1030 or 1031. See the Oude Catalogue, pp. 91, 514.

Contents: Kaşīdahs, fol. 30 a. Ghazals, in alphabetical order, fol. 64 a. Rubā'is, fol. 117—127.

V. Foll. 128—154. Select Ghazals from the Dīvān of Fighānī (see p. 651 α), in alphabetical order; wanting the latter part of letter c and the rest of the alphabet.

Add. 7827.

Foll. 89; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 25 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi[•] II., A.H. 997 (A.D. 1589). [Cl. J. RICH.]

A volume of poetical extracts in Persian and Turkī, including connected series of Ghazals by the following poets: Ķāsim i Anvār (p. 635 a), foll. 16—29. Jāmī (p. 643 a), foll. 31—35. Navā'ī (Mīr 'Alī Shīr, p. 366 a), by whom are some Tarkīb-bands and a collection of Ghazals entitled فرائب الصغر in Turkī, foll. 41—53. Humāyūn (p. 735 b), foll. 54—57. Aṣafī (p. 651 b), foll. 78—80.

Add. 7828.

Foll. 54; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; about 17 lines, 4 in. long; in the handwriting of Mr. Rich; dated Dec. 25th, 1803. [Cl. J. RICH.]

A volume of miscellaneous extracts, containing an Arabic notice on the fire-temples, headed عربى [Shahristānī] عربى, fol. 1. The prologue and epilogue of Ṣad Dar i Naẓm (see p. 48 b), fol. 2. Extracts from Khwānd Amīr on the early kings of Persia, fol. 6, from the Bahāristān and Yūsuf u Zulaikhā of Jāmī, fol. 7, from the Zīj i Muḥammad-Shāhī (see p. 460 b), fol. 16, from the Futūḥ Ibn A'ṣam (see p. 151 a), fol. 21, from the Maķāmāt of al-Ḥarīrī, fol. 24, from Sa'dī; Ḥāfiẓ, Firdūsī, etc.

Add. 7938.

Foll. 49; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; written in Dīvānī and Nestalik by different hands, apparently in the 16th and 17th centuries.

[Cl. J. RICH.]

Ghazals by Kātibī, Hilālī, Ahī, Aṣafī, Ahlī, Hāfiz, Jāmī, Shahīdī, Hairānī, Saifī, and Hairatī, foll. 23—33.

Kaşīdahs by Kātibī, Khwājūi Kirmānī, and Ibn Husām, foll. 35—46.

The rest of the volume contains forms of letters and poetical extracts in Turkish.

Add. 8149.

Foll. 83; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursivo Nestalik; dated 'Azīmganj, province of Murshidābād, in the month of Asin of the Bengali year 1128, the fourth of the reign (of Muhammad Shāh = A.H. 1134-5, A.D. 1721).

I. Foll. 1-28. بتصد المير المومنين حسن و حسين , history of the Amīr ul-Mūminīn Hasan and Husain from their birth to the death of the former, poisoned by Yazīd, and to the martyrdom of the latter in Karbalā.

II. Foll. 29-82. حمد حنفيه, history of Muhammad, son of the Hanafiyyah, from the time when the tidings of his brother Husain's death reach him to the time when he releases the latter's son, Zain ul-'Abidin, from captivity, and finds the charred body of the accursed Yazid at the bottom of a well.

The above stories are apparently detached portions of a late composition exhibiting the Shi'ah legend in its most exuberant growth.

Add. 8908.

Foll. 218; 9½ in. by 6; 13 lines, 4 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated February, A.D. 1819. I. Foll. 1—39. The diary of the siege of Haidarābād. See p. 268 a.

II. Foll. 40—218. The third volume of the Ikbāl-Nāmah (see p. 255 a), wanting the concluding notices on the Vazīrs and celebrated men of the reign.

Add. 8919.

Foll. 86; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines in a page; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century.

I. Foll. 1—13. Alphabetical list of Persian verbs, with their Hindustani equivalents.

II. Foll. 14—22. Alphabetical list of Hindustani verbs, with their Persian equivalents.

III. Foll. 23—86. Lailą Majnūn, by Hātifī. See p. 652 b.

Add. 8991.

Foll. 161; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 5; 14 and 16 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ and 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

I. Foll. 2—126. The Shāhnāmah of Mirzā Ķāsim Gūnābādī (see p. 660 a), wanting four leaves after fol. 97, three single leaves after foll. 113, 117, and 121, and about four at the end.

II. Foll. 127—140. An alphabetical series of Ghazals, by Tāhir, طاهر.

می طیم زبی بالی تا پری کنم پیدا . در بدر هی کردم تا دری کنم پیدا

The series is imperfect at the beginning, and has some other lacunes. The author names in one passage, fol. 135, Sāib Tabrīzī, who died A.H. 1088 (see p. 693 a), as his 3 D 2 model, and it appears from another line, fol. 128 a, that he lived in Isfahan.

III. Foll. 141—161. A fragment of the Inshā of Yūsufī. See p. 529 a.

Add. 9697.

Foll. 95; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, about the close of the 18th century.

1. Foll. 1—16. Forms of official documents and civil contracts.

II. Foll. 17—54. دستور الصبيان, the Munshi's manual, containing models of letters and official papers.

Author: Shaikh Anīs ud-Dīn, son of Ķāzī Na'īm ud-Dīn, of the town of Chanwah, Bardwān, الحدين ولد قاضى نعيم الحدين العدين ساكن قصبه چنوه

چون حمد و ثنای حضرت افریدکار ^بهیچوجه .Beg

The author was, in A.H. 1175, Munshī to Gandarbh-Dās, Nāib Zamīndār of Hijlī. He compiled the present work shortly after, and inserted in it many of his own letters. The present copy is imperfect.

III. Foll. 55—70. Copies of letters written to various officials in Bengal, in the time of Mīr Ja'far and Clive, by a person in the Company's employ.

IV. Foll. 71—95. Fragment of Bahār i Dānish. See p. 765 b.

Add. 10,463.

Foll. 28; 10 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; from 12 to 19 lines; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1233 (A.D. 1818).

I. Foll. 1—17. Nān u Ḥalvā. See p. 679 α.

II. Foll. 18–23. Six Ķasīdahs from the Dīvān of Sa'dī.

III. Foll. 24-27. A fragment of Haft Paikar. See p. 567 a.

Add. 10,579.

Foll. 271; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{3}{4}$; from 15 to 25 lines; written in Nestalik and Shikastahāmīz, in India.

I. Foll. 1—48; dated Muharram, A.H. 1096 (A.D. 1684).

A commentary on some difficult verses of the first part of Iskandar Nāmah (see p. 568 a).

Author: Hāmid B. Jamāl Bukhārī ul-Hasanī ul-Jaunfūrī, حمال بخارى الحسنى بالجونفورى

حمد بی نهایت و سپاس بیغایت مرحضرت .Beg

The work is dedicated to Farīd ud-Dīn Abul-Muzaffar Shīr Shāh (A.H. 946—952). It is mentioned in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 439, under the title of كشف الدقائق.

II. Foll. 49-271; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1149 (A.D. 1736).

A commentary on some poems of Khāķānī by Muḥammad Shādiyābādī. See p. 561 b. This copy contains only 34 Ķasīdahs.

Add. 10,587.

Foll. 34; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastahāmīz; dated A.H. 1175 (A.D. 1761-2).

I. Foll. 1-9. Mi'rāj ul-Khayāl. See p. 738 a and 803 a.

III. Foll. 10-34. Sūz u Gudāz. See p. 674 a.

Add. 11,633.

Foll. 242; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 5; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century.

I. Foll. 2—81. راتعات مشتاقى "Memorable events of Mushtākī," a collection of detached narratives and anecdotes relating to the sovereigns of the Lodi, Timuride, and Sūr dynasties. Author: Mushtāķī, commonly called Rizķ Ullah, مشتاقى عرف رزق الله حمد و ثناي مر بادشاهي را كه خطبه احديت . Beg.

Shaikh Rizk Ullah, of Dehli, the eldest son of a well-known devotee, Shaikh Sa'd Ullah (the grandfather of Shaikh 'Abd ul-Hakk Dihlavi; see p. 14 a), was born A.H. 897, and became, as a child, the Murid of a renowned saint, Shaikh Muhammad Maikan, of Milāvan (a town near Kinnauj), who died A.H. 906. Rizk Ullah led the wandering life of a Fakir, and associated with thousands of holy Shaikhs. He was deeply versed in the history of saints and kings, and died at the age of ninety-two years, A.H. 989, leaving several poetical compositions in Hindi and Persian. In the former he took the name of Rājan, while in the latter he adopted the takhallus Mushtäki. See notices of his life by his nephew 'Abd ul-Hakk, in Akhbar ul-Akhyar, foll. 142, 215, and in his memoirs, Or. 1696, fol. 84. Compare Rivāz ul-Auliyā, fol. 121, Tārīkh i Khānjahānī, fol. 4, and Dorn, History of the Afghans, p. 3.

An account of the work, with copious extracts, is given in Elliot's History of India, vol. iv. pp. 534-557. A translation is preserved in manuscript, Add. 20,773, foll. 128-187.

The contents are arranged under the following heads: Bahlūl Lodī, fol. 3 a. Sikandar Lodī, fol. 8 a. Ibrāhīm Lodī, fol. 40 b. Bābar, fol. 42 a. Humāyūn, fol. 44 b. Akbar, fol. 45 b. Shīr Shāh Sūr, fol. 46 a. Islām Shāh, fol. 56 b. Ibrāhīm, fol. 60 b. Character and rule of Islām Shāh, fol. 74 a. Muḥammad Shāh, called 'Adlī, fol. 76 b. Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Khiljī, of Mandū, fol. 79 b.

The present copy breaks off in the last section, fol. 81 b; it wants about twelve folios.

II. Foll. 82-242. A portion of Zubdat ut-Tavārīkh (see p. 224 b), corresponding to foll. 151—376 of Add. 10,580.

The last page, containing a subscription dated A.H. 1089, is by a later hand.

Add. 12,560.

Foll. 203; 9 in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with gold-ruled margins; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1228 (A.D. 1813).

I. Foll. 2—83. Majma' uş-Ṣanā'i'. See p. 814 b, xiii.

II. Foll. 84, 85. Reply of Mullā Muḥammad Țāhir Ghanī (see p. 692 a) to a charge of plagiarism founded on the discovery of a verse of his in a copy of the Tārīkh i Badāonī (see p. 222 b).

III. Foll. 85—103. Firdausiyyah, by Tughrā. See p. 742 b, ii.

IV. Foll. 104-121. Panj Ruk'ah and Minā Bāzār, by Zuhūrī. See p. 742 a, v. iv.

.V. Foll. 122-134. كل كشتى, a Maşnavī on the art of wrestling, by Mīr Najāt.

در کپ عشق هر آن نامه که دلخواد بود .

Mīr 'Abd ul-'Al Najāt, son of Mīr Muḥammad Mūmin, a Husainī Sayyid of Isfahan, is deseribed as a skilled accountant and consummate wit. He began life as Mustaufī of the Ṣadr Mīrzā Habīb Ullah, discharged the same office in Astrābād, and was employed as secretary by Shāh Sulaimān and Shāh Sulțān Husain. He was about thirty years of age in A.H. 1076 (see Ķiṣaṣ ul-Khāķānī, fol. 168), and as he reached, according to Hazīn, Oude Catalogue, p. 137, the age of eighty years, he must have died about A.H. 1026. See Țāhir Naṣrābādī, fol. 254, Atashkadah, fol. 86, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 512.

The author of the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 470, reflects severely on the low tone of Najāt's compositions, and says, that he shares with Zulālī (p. 677 a), Jalāl Asīr (p. 681 b), and Shaukat of Bukhārā (who lived in Khorasan and afterwards in Isfahan, and died A.H. 1107; see Mir'āt Jahānnumā, fol. 362), the blame of having debased poetry by lowering it to the level of vulgar speech and trivial jokes.

Beg.

The date of composition, A.H. 1112, is expressed by the following chronogram in the epilogue:

غثچه کل که بود بر سر دل تاریخست

The poem has been elucidated in India by two commentators, Ārzū and Ratan Singh, and has been printed in Lucknow, A.H. 1258. Copies are noticed in Ouseley's Catalogue, No. 258, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 4.

VI. Foll. 134—140. سيزوه بند, a satire by Hakīm Sharaf ud-Dīn Shifā'ī, imperfect at the end.

ای صدر نشین کشته در ایوان Beg.

Iskandar Beg, who calls the author Hakīm Tīmūr Shifā'ī, of Isfahan, speaks of him, 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 243, as a distinguished physician, wit, and poet, a favourite companion of Shāh 'Abbās I., but universally dreaded for his malignant epigrams and ruthless satire. He adds that he died in Isfahan, A.H. 1037. According to others his original name was Sharaf ud-Dīn Hasan. See Tāhir, fol. 158, Mir'āt i Jahānnumā, fol. 362, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 237, Atashkadah, fol. 100, the Oude Catalogue, p. 570, and Haft Āsmān, p. 134.

Shifā'i's Dīvān is described in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 600.

VII. Foll. 141—168. Extracts from Nizāmī's poems and Firdūsī's Shāhnāmah.

VIII. Foll. 169—177. Love-letters of Duvalrānī and Khizr Khān, from the poem of Amīr Khusrau. See p. 612 a, xiv.

IX. Foll. 177–185. Extract from Vis u Rāmīn, a Masnavī by Fakhrī Jurjānī. جو رامین دید کورا دل بیازرد

Fakhr ud-Dīn As'ad Jurjānī composed this poetical version of a romance, originally written in Pehlevi, in Isfahan, about A.H. 440, at the request of 'Amīd ud-Dīn Abul-Fath Muzaffar, of Nīshāpur, who governed Isfahan for Sultan Tughrul, the founder of the Saljūk empire. See Guzīdah, fol. 242, Habīb us-Siyar, vol. ii., Juz 4, p. 85, Haj. Khal. vol. vi. p. 468, and Haft Iklīm, fol. 465, the Oude Catalogue, p. 338, and Haft Asmān, p. 17.

The poem has been published, from a defective copy, in the Bibliotheca Indica, 1864. Extensive extracts are given in the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 323, and Khulāṣat ul-Afkār, fol. 209. An analysis of the contents by K. H. Graf is to be found in the Zeit-schrift der D. Morgenl. Gesellschaft, vol. 23, pp. 375-433.

The present extract corresponds to pp. 248-252, 261-269 of the printed edition, from which, however, it differs very considerably.

X. Foll. 186—197. Love-letters of Lailā and Majnūn, from Nizāmi's poem. See p. 566 b.

XI. Foll. 200—203. Ghazals by Hilālī. Sce p. 656 a.

On the fly-leaf is written : "Purchased of W. Campbell Richley, a soldier, who stated it to have been part of the plunder found within the fortress of Ghuznee, when captured by the English troops under Sir John Keanc, in 1839."

Add. 14,374.

Foll. 109; 9 in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, late in the 18th century.

I. Foll. 2-11. Life of Bibi Juliana, endorsed احوال بي بي جليانا

متایش و نیایش احدی اکه صانع جز و کل .Beg.

The author, کستن برویت (Gaston Bruit), states that Monsieur Gentil, at whose request he had written this account, had come to India in A.H. 1165, twenty-two years before the date of composition (which therefore must be A.H. 1187), and, having entered the service of Shujā' ud-Daulah, had been settled for the last twelve years in Faizābād.

Colonel Jean-Baptiste Joseph Gentil, the able assistant of Shujā' ud-Daulah in the organization of his army, left India shortly after that prince's death (A.H. 1188), and died in his native town, Bagnols, in a state of great poverty, in 1799. See Langlès, Bibliothèque Universelle.

According to the present memoir, Bibi Juliana had been captured as a child, with three thousand Portuguese, in the early part of Shāhjahān's reign, and given as a slave to one of the ladies of the court. Having been married to a European, who soon after fell in battle, she was attached to the household of Prince Mu'azzam (afterwards Bahādur Shāh) and his mother, whom she served with singular devotion during their long confinement. After the prince's accession she rose to a position of great trust and influence, and maintained it during the early part of the reign of Muhammad Shāh, whose deliverance from the galling yoke of the Sayyids she is said to have obtained by means of a vow to S. John.

She died at Dehli, in great repute of sanctity, some years after that event (according to Tārīkh i Muḥammadī, fol. 277, in Rabī' I., A.H. 1147), when a relative, Bibī Pasquale بسكول, succeeded to her office and assumed her name.

A French translation of the work by Prof. E. H. Palmer will be found in the Nouvelles Annales des Voyages, 1865, tom. ii. pp. 161— 184, and a notice on Juliana in Gentil's Mémoires sur l'Indoustan, pp. 367—380.

II. Foll. 12-80. Memoirs of Shaikh Hazin. See p. 381 a.

Add. 16,701.

Foll. 126; 8 in. by 5; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, the sixth year of Farrukhsiyar (A.H. 1129, A.D. 1717). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—91. Zikr ul-Mulūk, by 'Abd ul-Haķķ Dihlavī. See p. 223 b.

عبد الجليم خيرابادي : Copyist

II. Foll. 92—126. Account of Aurangzīb's victories over Jasvant Singh and Dārā Shikūh, from the 'Alamgīr Nāmah (see p. 266 b); corresponding to pp. 59—105 of the Calcutta edition.

Add. 16,703.

Foll. 111; 9 in. by 5¹/₂; 15 and 17 lines, about 3 in. long. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—71. نظام التواريخ, a general history of Persia from Adam to A.H. 674.

Author: Kāzi'l-kuzāt Nāsir ud-Din Abu Sa'id 'Abd Ullah B. Kāzi'l-kuzāt Imām ud-Din Abil-Kāsim 'Umar B. Fakhr ud-Din Abil-Hasan 'Ali ul-Baizāvī, ناصر القضاة المام الدين الدين ابو معيد عبد الله بن قاضي القضاة امام الدين الدين ابي القاسم عمر بن فخر الدين ابي الحسن على البيضاوي حمد بي نهايت و شكر بي غايت مبدعي را

The author, whose well known commentary upon the Coran (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 64), has made the name familar in Europe, was the son of Imām ud-Dīn Abul-Ķāsim 'Umar, who, as stated in the present work, fol. 62, held the office of chief judgo work, fol. 62, held the office of chief judgo in the kingdom of Fārs under the Atābak Abu Bakr B. Sa'd. Nāşir ud-Dīn, who also discharged the functions of Ķāzī in Shīrāz, spent the latter part of his life in Tabrīz, where he died, according to the Vāfī bil-Wafayāt, fol. 99, A.H. 685. A later date, however, A.H. 692, is assigned to his death by al-Yāfīī (see Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii, Juz 1, p. 77), and Hamd Ullah Mustaufi who mentions the Nizām ut-Tavārīkh as one of his sources, states that the author died after A.H. 710.

In a short preface written on the 21st of Muharram, A.H. 674, Baizāvī says that, having composed in early life works on every branch of the sacred sciences, he now proposed to write a compendium of the history of Iran from Adam to his own time.

The work is divided into four Ķisms, as follows : 1. Prophets, saints, and kings, from Adam to Noah, fol. 3 b. 11. Early kings of Persia, in four dynasties, fol. 6 b. 111. The early Khalifs, the Umayyades, and Abbasides, fol. 32 a. 1V. Dynasties contemporary with the Abbasides, viz. Ṣaffāris, fol. 46. Sāmānis, fol. 47 a. Ghaznavis and Ghūris, fol. 48 a. Dailamis, fol. 51 b. Saljūķis, fol. 56 a. Salghuris, fol. 59 a. Ismā'īlis, fol. 64 b. Khwārazmis, fol. 66 a. Moghuls, fol. 67 b.

The time of composition is fixed not only by the date given in the preface, but also by the author's statement that the Salghuri dynasty had ruled 131 years from its origin, in A.H. 543, to the "current year," which must therefore have been A.H. 674.

The last section, however, has a conclusion of later date than the preface, but apparently also due to the author, in which Abāķā Khān is spoken of as dead, and the Ṣāḥib Dīvān as being still at the height of his power. It must therefore have been written between A.H. 680 and 683. The same conclusion is found in another copy, Or. 1583.

A further continuation, foll. 69 b—71, ending with the accession of Ghāzān Khān, A.H. 694, in whose reign it was written, cannot be ascribed to Baizāvī. This latter appendix occurs also in another MS., Or. 1859, foll. 98—102. There is also an addition of later date than the conclusion in the account of the Salghuris, for it is brought down to the death of Abish Khātūn, A.H. 686.

The contents of the Nizām ut-Tavārīkh have been fully stated by S. de Sacy, Notices et Extraits, vol. iv. pp. 672—695, Hammer, Jahrbücher, vol. 81, Anzeigeblatt, p. 37, and Sir H. Elliot, History of India, vol. ii. pp. 252—258. See also Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 354. Copies are mentioned in Stewart's Catalogue, p. 7, Uri, p. 215, Ouseley's MSS., No 686, Leyden Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 1, Vienna Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 60, and Upsala Catalogue, p. 162. A Turkish translation, in which the history is brought down to A.H. 973, is preserved in Add. 6020. Another is noticed in Krafft's Catalogue, p. 91.

The present copy is apparently of the 16th century, but the latter portion, foll. 55-71, which is by a later hand, is dated A.H. 1072 (A.D. 1662).

II. Foll. 72—91. A versified abstract of Indian history, from the time of the Muhammadan conquest to A.H. 1133, by 'Abd ullah Yakīn, عبد الله يقرب

للحمد الله الذي مسلطانه في الدهر دام . يفعل ما شاء في جبروته الافهام هام

The whole poem is on the same rhyme. It was written, as stated in the prologue, at the request of Şābit Kadam Khān, an amīr of the court of Muhammad Shāh.

In the concluding lines the author claims descent from the Moghul Chākui Purlās پرلاس, the grandson of Ķarāchār, and gives A.H. 1133 as the date of composition.

Shāh Yaķīn is mentioned in Hamīshah Bahār as 'now' (i. e. A.H. 1136) living in Dehli. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 130.

The present copy is dated in the 28th year of Muhammad Shāh (A.H. 1158, A.D. 1745).

III. Foll.92—111. مراقد واسباب المغفرة , a treatise on the attributes of God as expressed by His names.

Author : Bāyazīd [B.] Ibrāhīm, بايزيد ابراهيم.

حمد بی قیاس وسپاس بی انتها مر حضرت .Beg.

The work is divided into several sections called مرتبة. The present copy appears to be of the 16th century.

Add. 16,779.

Foll. 583; 10¹/₄ in. by 6¹/₄; 17 lines, 3¹/₂ in. long, and 38 lines in the margins; written in fair Nestalik, with Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

[WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 3—583. Dīvān i Șhams i Tabrīz. See p. 593 a.

ای طایران قدس را عشقت فزوده بالها .Beg

در خرمن مسودای تو روحانیانرا حالها

At the end of the alphabetical series of Ghazals are found some Tarji'-bands, fol. 552 b, and a few Rubā'īs, fol. 578 b.

The margins, which form a consecutive text, contain :--

II. Foll. 3—151. The Divān of Sanā'i (see p. 551 a), with a prose preface beginning: سپاس و ستایش مبدی را که بسخن باك سخن دان

The author states that he had been induced to collect his poem by the instances of his friend, Ra'is Ahmad B. Mas'ūd.

The Divān begins on fol. 12 a, with a long Kasīdah, the first line of which is

This poem is quoted by Daulatshäh, fol. 50 a, and in the Haft Iklim, fol. 132.

III. Foll. 155—166. Some Ghazals by Amir Sayyid 'Ali Hamadāni, who uses both 'Ali and 'Alā'i as his takhallus. See p. 447 b.

IV. Foll. 166—181. Ghazals by Sayyid Muhammad Nürbakhsh, who has been already mentioned, p. 650.

Beg. زتاب عكس رويت شد خور سركشته هر جاى At the end are some Rubā'is, fol. 175 b, and Maşnavis, fol. 176 b.

V. Foll. 187—319. The Divān of Ķāsim i Anvār. See p. 635 b.

VOL. II.

Add. 16,800.

Foll. 63; $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 3; 11 lines, $1\frac{7}{6}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1-55. The third Daftar of Silsilat uz-Zahab. See p. 644 b.

II. Foll. 56—63. جيلية, "Jamīliyyah," a tract, in Maşnavī rhyme, on the filiation of the Nakshabandi order.

The author, whose name does not appear, enumerates five successive heads of the order from Khwājah Aḥrār, who died A.H. 895, to his own time. From this it may be conjectured that he wrote in the latter half of the 11th century of the Hijrah. The title is contained in the following line at the end: بکتابت چو آمد این منظوم بجمیلیه کردمش موسوم Sir Gore Ouseley's name is written on the first page of the MS.

Add. 16,806.

Foll. 89; 9½ in. by 5½; written by various hands, apparently in India, in the 17th and 18th centuries. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—18. نصاب الصبيان, an Arabic-Persian vocabulary. See p. 504 a.

II. Foll. 19—69. A portion of the Dīvān of Hāfiz, extending from letter من to ...

III. Foll. 70—77. An extract headed in gradient in the intervention intervention in the intervention intervention in the intervention intervention in the intervention interventinterventintervention interven and of miscellaneous anecdotcs classed under the headings of modesty, meekness, justice, beneficence, patience, and love.

825

IV. Foll. 78-89. Țarik 5 of Kism I. of the Tuhfat ul-Mūminin (see p. 476 b).

The volume bears the stamp of General Claud Martin (see p. 2a).

Add. 16,819.

Foll. 217; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; from 21 to 24 lines, $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, about A.H. 1152 (A.D. 1739). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—4. Extracts from Akhlāķ i Manşūrī اخلاق منصورى, by Mīr Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Manşūr.

The author was the son of the celebrated philosopher Mīr Ṣadr ud-Dīn Muḥammad of Shīrāz. He held for some time the office of Ṣadr under Shāh Ṭahmāsp, but resigned it in consequence of his orthodoxy having been impugned by the Mujtahid Shaikh 'Alī B. 'Abd ul-'Al, and retired to Shīrāz, where he died A.H. 948, leaving numerous philosophical and scientific works enumerated in the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 380.

The contents have been stated in the Jahrbücher, vol. 81, Anzeige Blatt, p. 29, and in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 292.

II. Foll. 5—54. Majlis 4—11 of Abvāb ul-Jīnān, ابواب للبنان, an ethical work based on the Coran and the moral precepts of the Imāms, by Mīrzā Muḥammad Rafī' Vā'iz Ķazvīnī, who died about A.H. 1105; see p. 698 a.

The work, which is divided into a Mukaddimah and sixteen Majlis, has been lithographed in Teheran A.H. 1274, and in Lucknow 1868. The edited portion, however, is described by the author at the end as forming the first only of eight Bābs, which the entire work, according to its title, was intended to comprise. In the former of the above editions the preface contains a eulogy upon the reigning sovereign Shāh 'Abbās II. (A.H. 1052—1077). The present fragment corresponds to pp. 52—189 of the Teheran edition.

A copy is described, without author's name, in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 293.

III. Foll. 55-73. Nikāt i Mīrzā Bīdil; see p. 745 b.

IV. Foll. 81—86. Lavā'ih by Jāmī; see p. 44 a.

V. Foll. 89—95. ميرزا نامه, the book of the Mīrzā, or perfect gentleman, containing rules of good manners.

Beg. قلمی سرکذم بنام خدا میرزا نامه را کذم انشا The work, which is anonymous, was apparently written in India.

VI. Foll. 97—149. A collection of letters and other compositions in ornate prose, without title or preface.

The author's name, Muhammad Khalil محمد خليل, occurs incidentally on foll. 136 a, 147 a; and it appears from another passage, fol. 116 b, that his takhallus was , and his surname (lakab) , 2. Several letters addressed by him to Zib un-Nisā Begam, the eldest daughter of Aurangzib, seem to show that he was attached to that princess's service. There is also one written to her brother, Shāhzādah Muhammad A'zam, fol. 142 a, and another to Aurangzib's head secretary, Mullā Makhdūm Fāzil Khān, fol. 147 a. That amīr received the title of Khān in A.H. 1095, and died in 1099. See Māaşir ul-Umarā, fol. 406. The letter addressed to him must have been written between those two dates.

VII. Fol. 150. Copy of a letter written by Shāhjahān to Shāh 'Abbās I. at the time of his reconciliation with Jahāngīr and his return to Māndū (A.H. 1032). VIII. Foll. 153—155. اعتقاد نامد, a short exposition in Maşnavî rhyme of the Muhammadan creed, probably by Jāmī (see Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 591—3).

بعد حمد خدا و نعت رسول . بشنو این نکته را بسمع قبول

IX. Foll. 175-180. Medical advice, in verse, by Yūsufī. See p. 475 b.

ای که داری تندرستی از در حکمت درآ Beg.

The last couplet contains the date of composition, A.H. 913, expressed by the words نوايد اخيار.

The rest of the volume is occupied by short poetical pieces, Persian and Hindustani, and miscellaneous notices relating to medicine, the interpretation of dreams, and astrology.

Add. 16,821.

Foll. 131; 7 in. by 43; 15 lines, 23 in. long; written in small Shikastah-āmīz, probably in India, in the 17th century.

[WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 2-99. اشعة اللبعات (see p. 594 b), with copious marginal notes.

II. Foll. 100—131. شرح الرباعيات, a commentary by Jāmī on Sufi Rubā'īs.

حمدا لاله هو بالحمد حقیق . در بحر نوالش همه ذرات غریق

The author, who gives his name at the end, states in the preface that in his Rubā5s on the nature of God and on His various manifestations he had been prevented, by the necessities of rhyme and metre, from giving his thoughts their due development, and had therefore deemed it desirable to add some explanations in prose. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 447, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 373.

Add. 16,824.

Foll. 266; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 15 lines, $3\frac{7}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1215 (A.D. 1801). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1-92. تكميل الايمان و تقوية الايقان An exposition of the Sunni creed.

Author: 'Abd ul-Hakk B. Saif ud-Din ut-Turk ud-Dihlavi ul-Bukhāri, عبد الحق بن سيف (see p. 14 a).

A copy is mentioned in the Munich Catalogue, p. 128.

A Hindustani translation, entitled Sabīl ul-Jinān, has been published in India.

II. Foll. 93—108. A treatise on the use of the quadrant, رساله در اعتمال ربع مجيب Author : Nūr (B.) Sirāj, نور سراج حمد بی نهایت علیمی ا و ثنای بی غایت Beg.

It is divided into an introduction, nineteen Bäbs, and a Khātimah.

III. Foll. 109—165. The history of Shīr Shāh, by 'Abbās Khān (see p. 242 b), with a preamble, which differs from the copy above described.

هر جنس حمد واهب خالق بریه را سزد .Beg.

A doxology of four lines is followed by this heading:

طبقه مىيوم در ذكر احوال سلطنت شير شاه سور از قوم لودى افغان

IV. Foll. 166-239. A cosmographical work already described. See p. 417 a, ii.

V. Foll. 240—246. Chronological sketch of the Sultans of Dehli from the Muslim conquest to Shāh 'Alam.

VI. Foll. 247-254. An account of the course of the river Gomatī, by Fath Chand, son of Udit Rāi, a Kāyath of Balgrām.

Beg. بعد از حمد بيعد احد الصمد This work was written, as stated in the 3 E 2 preamble, in A.H. 1180, at the request of a Christian priest, only designated as Padrc Sāḥib.

VII. Foll. 255—266. بجمع البحرين, a treatise on the technical terms of Hindu pantheism and their equivalents in Sufi phraseology.

Author: Dārā Shikūh, دارا شكوه

In a preface found in another copy, Add. 18,404, ii., the author says that he had embraced the doctrine of the Sufis, and that, having ascertained in his intercourse with Hindu Fakirs that their divergence from the former was merely verbal, he had written the present work with the object of reconciling the two systems. He completed it, as stated at the end, in A.H. 1065, when he was forty-two years old. See the Munich Catalogue, p. 140.

Add. 16,825.

Foll. 47; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 7 and 9 lines, about 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—9. Forty sayings of Muhammad, with the Persian paraphrase of $J\bar{a}m\bar{n}$. See p. 17 a.

II. Foll. 10—39. Risālah i Khwājah Abd Ullah Ansārī (see p. 35 a); dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 1048 (A.D. 1639).

III. Foll. 40-47. A religious tract, the author of which designates himself, as in the preceding, by the name of 'Abd Ullah.

بسمك القدوس قدسنى منّى الهى اين چه . فضل است

It is endorsed رساله سيد على همدانى. See p. 447 b.

Add. 16,832.

Foll. 442; 11 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 19 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, Nestalik, and Shikastah-āmīz, from A.H. 1165 to 1174 (A.D. 1751—1761). [Wm. YULE.]

Sufi and Shī'ah tracts, in Arabic and Persian, collected and transcribed by Sayyid 'Alī Naķī Khān B. Sayyid Abu Ṭālib ul-Ḥusainī ul-Mashhadī, who dates successively from Radaulī, Lucknow, Faiẓābād, Ilāhābād, Aḥmadnagar, Fatḥpūr, Shāhjahānābād, and Lucknow.

On fol. 7 is an autograph note of the poet Hazīn (see p. 372 b), stating that he had perused this valuable collection on the fifteenth of Rajab, A.H. 1172, and had given it the name of k = 1.

Foll. 2—4 contain some verses of another poet, Matīn (who died A.H. 1175; see the Oude Catalogue, p. 487), the last of which is a chronogram on the birth of a son of the collector, dated Ilāhābād, A.H. 1172.

A table of contents has been prefixed by 'Alī Naķī Khān on fol. 7 b.

اي پيداتر از هر پيدائي و اي اشکاراتر .Beg.

II. Foll. 22—24. ". juick endow ters on Sufi subjects, ascribed to Bāyazīd Basţāmī (Abu Yazīd Țaifūr, who died A.H. 261; see Ibn Khallikān's translation, vol. i. p. 662, Nafaḥāt ul-Uns, p. 62, and Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 287).

III. Foll. 24—34. Commentary of Jalāl ud-Dīn Davānī (see p. 442 b) on a Ghazal of Hāfiz, beginning:

در همه دير مغان نيست چو من شيدائي

IV. Foll. 34-62. Commentary of Jāmī on the mystic poem of Ibn Fāriz. See p. 808, Add. 7649, ii.

V. Foll. 62—73. Jāmī's Lavā'iḥ. See p. 44a.
 VI. Foll. 73—77. نكات عشره , ten observations on man considered as a manifestation of God, by Ni'mat Ullah Valī (see p. 634 b).

828

الحمد لله الذي عيّن اعيان العالم بعين وجودة .Beg.

VII. Foll. 77—81. جمع الاسرار, a Sufi tract in thirteen sections called 'Asrār,' by the same author.

VIII. Foll. 81-86. شرح فاتحة الكتاب, a commentary upon the Fātihah, by the same.

الحمد لله الذي نوّر قلوب اوليائه بانوار العرفان .Beg

IX. Foll. 86—105. طعن بر مجتهدين, a tract addressed to the doctors of the Law, rebuking them for their hatred of Darvishes, by Şadr ud-Din Muḥammad ush-Shīrāzī.

سپاس وستایش بی انتها پروردکاري را سزاست .Beg

Mullā Şadr ud-Din Muḥammad B. Ibrāhīm Shīrāzī, commonly called Mullā Şadrā, a pupil of Mīr Bāķir Dāmād, is regarded in Persia as the most eminent philosopher of his time. He died in Başrah, on his way to Meeca, in A.H. 1050. See Zīnat ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 554, and Gobineau, Religions de l'Asie, p. 84. He is often confounded with Mīr Ṣadr ud-Dīn Muḥammad B. Mīr Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Manşūr Shīrāzī, an earlier philosopher and theologian. The latter, born in Shīrāz A.H. 828, was slain, as stated in the Majālis ul-Mūminīn, by the Bāyandarī Turkomans. A.H. 903.

X. Foll. 105—133. الواردات القلبية, an Arabic tract by the same writer; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 401.

XI. Foll. 133—137. دو قاعدة, the ten rules of contemplative life, by Amīr Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī (see p. 447 b).

حمد و ثنای نا متـ ناهی پروردکاریرا که استحکام .Beg

It is evidently translated, but without acknowledgment, from the Arabic work of Najm ud-Dīn Kubrā, which is found further on, foll. 342—344 (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 401, viii.). XII. Foll. 137—145 , a Sufi tract, by Bābā Afzal ud-Dīn Kāshī.

الحمد لله رب الارباب و مسبب الاسباب Beg. Afzal ud-Din Muhammad, of Kāshān, a renowned Sufi and poet, is mentioned in the Atashkadah, fol. 107, as a contemporary of Nasir ud-Din Tüsi, who composed verses in his praise, and who was, according to the Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 13, his sister's son. He died, as stated by Taki Käshi, Oude Catalogue, p. 17, A.H. 707. The following works are ascribed to him in the Haft Iklim, , جاودان نامه , رة انجام نامه , مدارج الكمال : fol. 384 the first three of ,انشا نامه and عرض نامه which are noticed by Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 469, vol. iii. p. 515, vol. ii. p. 582. The story of his having been carried away to Ghaznin by Sultan Mahmūd Ghāzi, which is related in the same work, and would make him three centuries earlier, must refer to another person. The Rubā'is of Afzal Kāshī are mentioned in Ouseley's Catalogue, No. 90.

The present tract is avowedly derived from the Kīmiyāi Šaʿādat of Ghazālī, a work written about A.H. 500. See p. 37 a.

XIII. Foll. 146—162. اوصاف الاشراف, a treatise on spiritual life, by Muhammad B. Muhammad B. Hasan ut-Tūsī (Naṣīr ud-Dīn; see p. 525 b).

سپاس بيقياس بار خدايرا بسبب انکه هيم عقلرا. Beg.

The author wrote it, as stated in the preface, some time after his Akhlāķ i Nāşirī (see p. 441 b), by desire of the Şāḥib Dīvān, Muḥammad B. Bahā ud-Dīn Muḥammad ul-Juvainī.

See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 44, No. 80, and Fleischer, Dresden Catalogue, No. 348.

XIV. Foll. 163—296. كلمات مكنوند, one hundred sayings of Imāms and Sufis, in Arabic, with comments in Persian prose and verse. Author: Muḥammad B. Murtaẓā, called Muḥsin, محمد بن مرتضى الهدعو بعحسن الحمد لله الأول في اخريته الاخر في اوليته Beg.

Muhsin, of Kāshān, whose original name was Muhammad B. Murtazā, and poetical surname Faiz نيض, was a disciple of Mullā Sadrā (see above, art. ix.), who gave him his daughter in marriage. He was called from Kāshān to Isfahan, in A.H. 1067, by Shāh 'Abbās II., who took great delight in his society. He followed his celebrated master in the attempt of reconciling Sufism with orthodoxy, and wrote no less than seventy-six works and tracts on theological subjects, besides a Dīvān of ten thousand lines. He died in Kāshān after A.H. 1090. See Zīnat ut-Tavārīkh, fol. 554, Ķisas ul-Khākānī, fol. 156, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 346, Atashkadah, fol. 110, and Gobineau, Religions de l'Asie, p. 91.

The date of composition, A.H. 1057, is expressed by the title.

XV. Foll. 296—303. تدقيق ^{الت}حقيق , a tract on the presence of God in man.

Author: Sayyid Ja'far ur-Rūḥī un-Ni'matullāhī, سيد جعفر الروحي النعبت اللهـ الله لا اله الا هو ^{ال}حي القيوم هو الاول والاخر . Beg.

The date of composition, A.H. 1152, is conveyed in a chronogram at the end. The collector, 'Alī Naķī Khān, says that he had met the author both before and after that date.

At the end is a commentary by the same writer upon three Sufi verses of Shaikh 'Abd ul-Kaddūs Gangūhī (an Indian saint, native of Gangū, who died A.H. 945; see Akhbār ul-Akhyār, fol. 177).

XVI. Foll. 303—319. A tract on resurrection and future life, by Naşīr ud-Dīn Tūsī (see art. xiii.).

ربنا لا ترغ قلوبنا بعد اذ هديته ا

This work, which is designated in the preface as آغاز و انجام. It is divided into twenty chapters (Faşl).

XVII. Foll. 322-330. Refutation of a work entitled كشف الغطا, commonly known as عرض مكر, in which the author, 'Abd ul-'Azīz, advocated the paramount claims of Abu Bakr and 'Umar to the Khilāfat.

Author : Ghulām Muḥyu-d-Dīn B. Ghulām Ashraf, poetically surnamed Rifʿat, غلام

محيى الدين بن غلام اشرف المتخلص برفعت الحمد لله رب العالمين . . . اما بعد فقير . . Beg. حقير غلام محيى الدين

In the table the work is called رفع شبهه عبد العزيز

XVIII. Foll. 330—344. Three Arabic tracts; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 401, articles vi.—viii.

XIX. Foll. 344—360. مدارج الكمال, a Sufi work in eight sections called كشايش. Author: Bābā Afzal Kāshī.

Beg. قر مردم

اما کشایش در اول که کوهر مردم

The author states that this is a translation of the work written in Arabic by himself under the same title. See above, art. xii.

XX. Foll. 360—368. Itiel, and religious precepts, by the Imām Muhammad Ghazālī (see p. 37 α).

الحمد لله الذي نوّر مصابيح القلوب بانوار حكمته .Beg.

XXI. Foll. 368—378. رساله جبر و اختيار, a tract on necessity and free will, in ten chapters, by Nașīr ud-Dīn Ţūsī.

الحمد لله رب الارباب و مسبب الاسباب . Beg.

XXII. Foll. 378-381. An Arabic tract on the same subject.

XXIII. Foll. 381-391. A metaphysical tract on consciousness and cognition, headed روانجام نامه, in three chapters, by Bābā Afzal Kāshī (see above, art. xii.).

الحمد لله اصله الحمد و وليه و منتهاة Beg.

XXIV. Foll. 391-415. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 401, art. ix.

XXV. Foll. 415-442. جاونان نامد , a metaphysical tract on self-knowledge and on the beginning and end of being, in four chapters, by Bābā Afzal Kāshī (see above, art. xii.).

للحمد لله رب العالمين ... بدانكه اين نامه .Beg. ايست از ما

The margins, which form a consecutive series, contain :--

XXVI. Foll. 9-38. Gulshan i Rāz; see p. 608 b.

XXVII. Foll. 38-83. Zād ul-Musāfirīn; see p. 608 a.

XXVIII. Foll. 83—95. Nān u Halvā, by Bahā ud-Dīn ul-'Amilī; see p. 679 a.

XXIX. Foll. 95—100. شير و شكر, "Milk and Sugar," a Sufi poem by the same, with a short prose preface.

> اي مرڪز دايــره امکان اي زېده عالم کون و مکان

Beg.

It is mentioned among Bahā ud-Din's works in the Atashkadah.

XXX. Foll. 102 a—229. Arabic poems and tracts; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 402, artt. x.—xxvi.

XXXI. Foll. 230-241. A commentary upon the Lama'at of Fakhr ud-Din 'Irāķī (see p. 594 b).

Beg. سپاس و ستایش پرورد کاري را که پرتوی از لمعات. The commentary is called in the subscription ضو اللمعات. In another copy, Add. 16,839, fol. 56, the author's name is given. It is Ṣā'in ud-Din 'Alī Tarikah (see p. 42 a), and the date of composition, stated at the end, is A.H. 815. See Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 335. XXXII. Foll. 242—296. Arabic tracts; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 403, artt. xxvii. —xxxiii.

Add. 16,837.

Foll. 510; 12¹/₂ in. by 7; 21 lines, 4 in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; apparently in the 17th century. [WM.YULE.]

A large collection of Sufi tracts, several of which bear the name of the celebrated saint and prolific Sufi writer, Shāh Ni'mat Ullah Valī (see p. 634 b), whose life is also inserted, foll. 339—354. It may be presumed that those which are anonymous are due to the same author.

I. Foll. 1—24. A tract without title or author's name, endorsed ججع الفتو, and consisting of Sufi comments, in prose and verse, on detached verses of the Coran. It begins with the first verse of the Sūrat ul-Fath, or chap. xlviii., انا فتحنا لك فتجا مبينا, which is followed by an exposition of three kinds of فترم, or revelations.

II. Foll. 25-59. A commentary on the Lama'āt of Fakhr ud-Dīn 'Irāķī (see p. 594 b).

Beg. الحمد لله اذى نور وجة جبينه بتجليات الجمال Passages of the text marked with the letter (i.e. عراقى) alternate with comments distinguished by the letter (i.e. (i.e. 10).

III. Foll. 61—100. A commentary on a portion of the Fuşüş ul-Hikam of Muhyi ud-Dîn Ibn ul-'Arabî (see Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 424).

IV. Foll. 101-118. Explanation of some difficult verses in the same work.

V. Foll. 119—128. Another commentary upon the same work, endorsed جواهر ترجمه نقوش فصوص الحكم

الحمد لله . . . حمدی که سنرای او بود او کوید .Beg

VI. Foll. 129—168. A Persian paraphrase of the Istilāhāt uṣ-Ṣūfiyyah of Kamāl ud-Dīn 'Abd ur-Razzāk Kāshī, endorsed شرح شرح الرزاق كاشى see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 400 a.

سپاس بی قیاس حضرت واجب الوجودی .Beg. را که خواص امت

From the concluding lines it appears that the work had been written down from the dictation of Ni'mat Ullah.

VII. Foll. 169—175. A Sufi tract, with the heading رساله نكات در تحقيق وجود الحمد لله . . . قال اهل الحق الموجود ما له تحقق . Beg.

VIII. Foll. 176—180. A tract on various kinds of knowledge, endorsed معرفات.

الحمد لله . . . قال الله تـعـالى سنريهم آياتنا Beg. في الَافاق

IX. Foll. 181—189. A metrical paraphrase of the Sufi aphorisms, واردات, of Imām 'Abd Ullah Yāfi'ī, by his disciple Ni'mat Ullah Valī, with the heading ترجمات واردات امام عبد الله يافعي

الحمد لله ... اين عنايت بين كه باما كرد .Beg. الطاف خدا

X. Foll. 190—191. The treatise of the soul, سالد نفس,

XI. Foll. 122—196. Maşnavīs of Shāh Ni'mat Ullah. The first has the heading رائس نامه, and begins:

> ای نهانی طالب فقر و ادب کرطلبکاری با از خود طلب

XII. Foll. 198–206. Short tracts endorsed : بشارت نامه در میان ذوق ,رساله روح ; edited is a constructed is a constructed in the conventional terms of the Sufis, by Shaikh 'Irākī (see p. 594 b), مصطلحات صوفیه شیخ عراقی , (by the substructed is a constructed is a constructed is a constructed in the substructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the constructed in the constructed is a constructed in the construct رساله تسويه آدم و نفع روح ,اصول عشرة در طريق سلوك , اعتقادات ,سوال كميل و جواب امام ,رساله برزخيه , لوايح ,گنچ العارفين ,رساله در تحقيق مناقب .

XV. Fol. 247. Filiation of the Fakīr's cloak of Ahmad Shāh, نسب خرقه احمد شاه Ahmad Shāh Bahmanī, who reigned A.H.

825—838, had sent a deputation to Ni'mat Ullah Valī with the request to be admitted as one of his disciples. See Firishtah, vol. i. p. 433.

XVI. Foll. 248—256. A tract entitled رساله تحقيقات

XVII. Foll. 257—264. Answers of Shaikh Muḥyi ud-Dīn Ibn ul-'Arabī to the questions of 'Alī Ḥakīm Tirmizī, على امام على , translated from the Arabic.

XVIII. Foll. 270—276. رسالة البيان, an exposition of the Sufi doctrine, by Ni^emat Ullah.

لخمد لله . . . ابتداء ^{سخ}ن بنام یکی Beg.

XIX. Foll. 281—291. Commentary upon the Ișțilāḥāt of Kamāl ud-Din. See above, art. vi.

بعضی زاصطلاحات کردم بیان روشن Beg. XX. Foll. 318–323. A tract entitled کشف الاسرار در تنزلات خمس Beg. باحدیته باحدیته XXI. Foll. 332-335. Answers to the questions of Sultan Sikandar, رساله در جواب, سلطان سکندر.

Mīrzā Iskandar, son of 'Umar Shaikh, held the government of Fārs and Kirmān under Shāhrukh from A.H. 812 to 816.

XXII. Foll. 339-354. Life of Shāh Ni'mat Ullah Valī, مناقب حضرت شاة نعمه الله ولى

Author: 'Abd ul-'Azīz B. Shīr Mulk B. عبد الغزيز بن شير ملك بن Tā'izī, محمد واعظي سپاس و ستایش بیجد و قیاس مر حضرت . Beg.

It is dedicated to 'Alā ud-Dīn Ahmad Shāh B. Ahmad Shāh Valī Bahmanī (see art. xv.), who reigned from A.H. 838 to 862.

XXIII. Foll. 463-473. A tract entitled "Revelations," سالد مكاشفات, یا حبیبی من انت و من هو لست انا Beg.

XXIV. Foll. 475—486. A tract on the degrees of spiritual ecstasy, مراتب الرنديد

للحمد لله . . . سخن از ذوق رند میکویم . Beg.

XXV. Foll. 487—510. The conventional terms of the Sufis اصطلاحات صوفيد, by Kamāl ud-Din 'Abd ur-Razzāķ Kāshī, in Arabic. See above, art. vi.

The remaining portions of the volume contain upwards of sixty Sufi tracts, which are mostly, if not all, by Ni'mat Ullah; they are of too small extent and of too little importance to be separately enumerated.

On fol. 256 is a note stating that the MS. had been thus far collated in Ramazān, A.H. 1090 (A.D. 1679).

Add. 16,839.

Foll. 360; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; 28 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in small Naskhi, apparently about the close of the 17th century.

[WM. YULE.]

VOL. II.

I. Foll. 2—16. A treatise on the mystic meaning of the letters composing the name of محمد باقر

Author: Muḥammad Ķāsim B. 'Abd ul-اتحمد قاسم بن عبد القادر تونى ,Ķādir Tūnī

Beg. اسم سامی اختر بالغ نظر اوج تقدس ذات It is stated at the end to have been written by the author in his native city Tūn, when he was past fifty years of age.

کتاب مناظرات خمس از .31.—II. Foll. 16 تالیف محقق کامل خواجه صاین الدین علی ترکه اصفهانی اول مناظرة عقل با عشق دوم مناظرة وهم با عقل همیوم مناظرة وهم با خیال چهارم مناظرة سمع با بصر پنجم مناظرة عاشق با معشوق

Five contests, or allegorical debates, by $S\bar{a}$ 'in ud-Din 'Alī Tarikah (see p. 42 a), viz. between reason and love, opinion and reason, opinion and fancy, hearing and sight, lover and beloved.

للحمد لله الذي رتب نظام برية العالم Beg.

IV. Foll. 62—66. بحرطويل, a tract in praise of Muhammad and 'Alī, and a Ķasīdah in praise of Imām Rizā, both by Mirzā Ķāsim Tūnī (see art. i.).

V. Foll. 66—69. محت ومرض, "Health and Disease," a Sufi tract by Fuzūlī.

VI. Foll. 70—71. The fourth Faşl of Kanz ul-'Ulūm, treating of Sīmiyā, in Arabic. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 463 b.

metaphysical tract on the categories of beings, by Naṣīr ud-Dīn Ṭūsī (see p. 525 b). Beg. قال مولانا سلطان ^{ال}حکما ... اندر قسمت

VIII. Foll. 78—84. رساله موجزة في المنطق, a short treatise on logic by the same writer.

دانستن چیزها از دو نوع خالی نبود یا دانستن Beg.

IX. Foll. 84—90. حتى اليقين, by Shaikh Mahmūd Chabistarī. See p. 828 a, Add. 16832, i.

X. Foll. 90—96. بشرح رباعيات, a commentary by Jāmī on his Sufi Rubā'īs. See p. 827 α .

حمدا لأله هو بالحمد حقيق .

XI. Foll. 96—112. شرح ربا عيات, a commentary by Jalāl ud-Dīn Muḥammad Davānī (see p. 442 b), on his Sufi Rubā'īs.

حمدا لاله شمل الخلق الاه . لا معبود سواة بل ليس سواة

XII. Foll. 112—119. Arabic tracts. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 454 a, iii., iv.

XIII. Foll. 119—121. Sufi Rubā'īs by Salmān, Mīr Ḥusainī, Jāmī, and Muḥammad Dihdār (sec p. 816 α).

XIV. Foll. 121—132. Arabic tracts; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 454, artt. v.—vii.

XV. Foll. 132—145. A treatise on crafts by Mīr Abul-Ķāsim Fandarsakī. See p. 815 b.

It is stated in the heading to have been transcribed from a copy corrected by the author.

XVI. Foll. 145—151. Miscellaneous extracts, including one from the introduction of Jāmī's Nafaḥāt ul-Uns, and an Arabic tract. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 454, ix.

XVII. Foll. 151—157. A tract on the Mi'rāj, ascribed to Abu 'Alī Ibn Sīnā. See p. 815 b. XVIII. Foll. 157—166. Three Arabic tracts by Ibn Sīnā, etc. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 454, art. x.—xiii.

XIX. Foll. 166—170. تلريخ الحكما, a short account of ancient sages and philosophers.

• شیاس و ستایش حکیمی را که اول بی اولست . Beg.

XX. Foll. 170—194. Forty Hadiş (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 455, xiv.), and miscellaneous extracts.

XXI. Foll. 194—201. Aușăf ul-Ashrāf by Nașīr ud-Dīn Țūsī. See p. 830 a, xiii.

XXII. Foll. 205-215. Translation of the sayings of Hermes the Great, "who is the prophet Idrīs," in thirteen chapters.

XXIII. Foll. 215—226. كتاب نفس, the Book of the Soul, in three Maķālahs, purporting to be translated from Aristotle.

چنین کوید دانای یونان که دانش از چیزهای .Beg خوب و کرامی است

XXIV. Foll. 226—234. Madārij ul-Kamāl. See p. 831 a, xix.

الحمد لله رب العالمين . . . خداوند بفرونى .Beg. جود و فروغ وجودت

XXV. Foll. 234—238. مقصد الاقصى, a treatise on Sufism, in eight chapters (Fasl).

Author: 'Azīz B. Muḥammad un-Nasafī, عزيز بن محمد النسفي

الحمد لله . . . اما بعد چنين كويد اضعف .Beg

According to Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 90, the work, originally written in Arabic, was translated by Kamāl ud-Dīn Husain Khwārazmī, who died A.H. 845. The present copy does not contain any mention of the translator.

XXVI. Foll. 238-249. Another tract on the same subject, in six Bābs, without title or author's name.

باب اول در ^{مس}خن اهل تصوف در معرفت . ذات خدای تعالی

XXVII. Foll. 249—297. Miscellaneous extracts, with short Sufi and cabalistic treatises.

XXVIII. Foll. 297—344. جذرات, a treatise on the mystic meanings of the detached letters in the Coran.

Author: Muhammad Bāķir Dāmād, محمد باقر داماد

Beg. عينان عينان لم يكتبهما قلم

Mir Muhammad Bākir, a native of Astrābad, received the surname of Damad from his father Mir Shams ud-Din Damād, so called as 'son-in-law' of the famous Mujtahid Shaikh 'Ali B. 'Abd ul-'Al. Having studied in Mashhad, he rose to great eminence in all branches of philosophy and theology, and stood high in favour and influence at the court of Shah 'Abbas I. He died at an advanced age in Najaf, A.H. 1040, a date fixed by a contemporary chronogram : عروس He left numerous works, علم دين را مردة داماد مدرة ,شرح كليني ,افق المبين ,صراط المستقيم such as the present work, تسبات , ايقاظات , المنتهى and others, besides some poetical compositions in which he assumed the name of Ishrak. See 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 38, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā. fol. 38, Mir'āt ul-'Alam, fol. 121, Zinat ut-Tavārikh, fol. 553, aud Haft Asmān, fol. 154.

The work is divided into twelve preliminary chapters called جذوة, and a large number of sections termed ميقات.

XXIX. Foll. 344—360. Arabic tracts. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 455, xix. and xx.

Add. 16,840.

Foll. 508; 10 in. by 7; 19 lines, 41 in.

long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century. [WM. YULE.]

A collection of Sufi treatises, mostly by Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī. See p. 447 b.

I. Foll. 2—153. Zakhīrat ul-Mulūk (see p. 447 b), wanting a few pages at the beginning.

II. Foll. 154—156. A tract on contemplation, with the heading رساله نورية. It consists chiefly of extracts from the writings of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī.

III. Foll. 157—161. A notice on Sayyid Muḥammad Ṭālaķānī and his spiritual pedigree, by his disciplo 'Alī Muḥibbī, على بحبي

The subject of the notice was a disciple of Muhammad Nūrbakhsh, who died A.H. 869. See p. 650 a.

IV. Foll. 161—169. Letters of Mir Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī on spiritual subjects, with the heading رساله مکتربات.

تا مهندسان کارکاه تقدیر نقوش صور . Beg.

V. Foll. 169—171. Spiritual pedigree of Sharaf ud-Dīn Maḥmūd Mazdaķānī, the Shaikh of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī.

VI. Foll. 172—178. A tract on the Zikr, اهناد اوراد فتحية عن احد من with the heading المريدين

VII. Foll. 179—187. On the bodily and در معرفت صورت (معرفت معرفت معرفت) و سیرت انسان

حمد و سپاس و ثناي بی تياس حضرت .Beg. صانع حکيمرا

VIII. Foll. 188—199. Ghazals by Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī.

IX. Foll. 200—207. Rules to be observed by disciples and devotees, در بیان اداب مبتدی و طالبان حضرت صمدي X. Foll. 207—210. Answer of Sayyid 'Alī Hamadānī to some questions relating to the name of Hamadān.

XI. Foll. 210—276. Eighteen short tracts by the same author, some of which have headings as follows: مكتوبات اميريه, fol. 218. مكارم . 501. 225. مكتوبات اميريه . 501. 225. مارساله داورديه مشارب . 501. 230. رساله اعتقاديه . 501. 233. اخلاق رساله . 501. 248. رساله اعتقاديه . 501. 243. مالذواق كتاب . 501. 248. رساله فتوحيه 148. 502. مدرويشيه رساله . 501. 268. مشكل حل . 501. 268. مناميه رساله . 501. 270.

XI. Foll. 276—-279. صفة الأداب, rules of Sufi life, in seven Bābs, by Najm ud-Dīn Kubrā.

This celebrated saint, a native of Khīvah, died, according to the Nafaḥāt ul-Uns, p. 480, A.H. 618.

XII. Foll. 279—299. Seven tracts by Sayyid 'Alī Hamadāni, five of which have the following headings: اسناد حليه حضرت رسالت, fol. 291. رساله خطبه اميريه, fol. 292. رساله منادات ذامه 292. منادات فاطريه, fol. 296. رساله مناجات, fol. 298.

XIII. Foll. 299—325. Three collections of Hadīş, in Arabic. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 406, artt. i.—iii.

XIV. Foll. 326—347. A treatise on the real nature of penitence, در حقائق تربة, in four Bābs.

حمد و ثنای نا متناهی حضرت حکیمیرا که .Beg حقایق آثار

XV. Fol. 347—385. Two Arabic treatises. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 406, artt. iv. and v.

XVI. Foll. 385-389. A tract headed رساله واردات

رب اشرح لي صدری و يسر لی امري Beg.

XVII. Foll. 389-395. A tract on intellect, عقل, and its attributes, and on various degrees of capacity for the apprehension of truth, in three Bābs.

حمد و ثناي نا متناهی آن فاطر حکيم را ڪه Beg· پاشعه انوار

XVIII. Foll. 395—399. سير الطالبين, a tract on the duties of the Murīd or disciple, according to the teaching of Sayyid 'Alī, by Burhān B. 'Abd uṣ-Ṣamad.

حمدي كه بزورق ورق اصداق بصاير اولى الابصار . Beg.

XIX. Foll. 399—405. Three tracts, headed مكارم الاخلاق and دة قاعدة , رسالة داتردية, the same as above, art. xi.

XX. Fol. 405. حل الفصوص, a Persian commentary by Sayyid 'Alī on the Fuṣūṣ ul-Hikam (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 406, art. vi.; and Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 426), slightly imperfect at the end.

Add. 16,851.

Foll. 151; $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 6; 19 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Lahore, Sha'bān, A.H. 1114, and Sanbhal, Ramazān, A.H. 1115 (A.D. 1703-4). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 2—92. مفتاح المعانى, an alphabetical glossary to the letters of Abul-Fazl. See p. 396 a.

Author: Shaikh Muḥammad ʿAlī Fārūķī, شيخ محمد على فاروقي

The work, which is dedicated to Jahāngīr, was completed, as stated in the preface, in A.H. 1035.

II. Foll. 95—126. مغتاج الأخلاق, an alphabetical glossary of Arabic words and phrases in the Akhlāķ i Nāṣirī (see p. 441 b). Author: 'Abd ur-Rahman B. 'Abd ul-Karīm 'Abbāsī Burhānpūrī, عبد الكريم

عباسي برهانپوري

Beg. قسم اول مشتبلست برحل لغات و اصطلاحات An appendix called قسم دوم, foll. 121— 126, contains a translation of the Arabic passages in the order of the text. The date of composition, A.H. 1085, is found in another copy, Or. 1913.

III. Foll. 127—141. A versified Arabic-Persian vocabulary, without title or author's name.

> شکر خدا کز کرم و لطف ان چند لغت چون درر نظم دان

Beg.

The author groups together, quite irrespective of their meaning, such words as have the same final letter, or present similar combinations of dotted or undotted letters.

IV. Foll. 143—151. رساله تير اندازي, a treatise on archery, in Maşnavī rhyme.

چو از دور خانه کمانرا کشی .Beg.

According to a short preamble the tract had been originally written in prose by a man called Shahbāz شهباز, for the Shāhzādah, son of the sovereign of Irac, شاوزاده والا نزاد والى عراق

Add. 16,855.

Foll. 22; 91 in. by 71; written in Nestalik, in the latter part of the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1-15. An account of the Indian coins, their weights and legends, from the earliest times to Shāh 'Alam, in tabular form, with some drawings.

نظر فيض اثر بر دارندة سند جاة وجلال Beg.

It is dedicated to the Vazīr Shujā' ud-Daulah, and was written, as stated on fol. 13 b, A.H. 1186. II. Foll. 16—22. A short sketch of Nādir Shāh's history down to his return from India to Persia (A.H. 1052).

ذکر احوال نادر شاہ راوي اين اخبار چنين . نـقل ميکند

Add. 16,859.

Foll. 166; 8 in. by 5¹/₂; 15 lines, 4 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Jumāda II., in the 34th year of 'Alamgīr (A.H. 1102, A.D. 1690). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—127. Letters of Khānjahān Sayyid Muzaffar Khān.

عرضداشت پير غلام ندوى زمين عبوديت . Beg.

The first letters, foll. 1—25, are addressed to the emperor (Shāhjahān), and relate chiefly to engagements with the Bondelah chief Prithīrāj, about A.H. 1049; the others are written to various amīrs and private persons.

Sayyid Muzaffar Khān, of Bārhah, afterwards Khānjahān, held the post of Governor of Gwalior from the accession of Shāhjahān to his own death, which happened in A.H. 1055. See Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 184.

II. Foll. 128—137. A notice on Rājah Jagat Singh, son of Rājah Bāsū, and Zamīndār of Mau and Pathān, Panjāb, relating chiefly to the expedition sent against him, under command of Khānjahān Sayyid Muzaffar Khān, in the 15th year of Shāhjahān's reign (A.H. 1051-2).

Beg. مجملى از احوال و اوضاع جكت سنكه پتهانيه. The author, who had been attached to the expedition of Khānjahān as official newswriter (see fol. 130 b), states at the end that Jagat Singh was then in the districts of Kandahār and Bust engaged in keeping down the rebels.

Jagat Singh died shortly after, A.H. 1055. See Maāsir ul-Umarā, fol. 257 b. III. Foll. 137—146. واقعت جهوجهار سنكه, an account of Jhojhār Singh Bondelah, Rājah of Ūnchah, by Shaikh Jalāl Ļiṣārī.

از جمله وقايع و مسوالحه کليه که در عهد دولت .Beg.

This notice begins with a sketch of Jhojhār's predecessors, and in particular of his father Barsingh Deo, the murderer of Abulfazl, and of the early eareer of Jhojhār. It dwells chiefly on the expedition sent against him by Shāhjahān under command of Sayyid Khānjahān, which ended in his overthrow and death, A.H. 1044.

See the account of that campaign in the Pādishāh Nāmah, ii., p. 94, and the life of Jhojhār Singh in Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 251, and Tazkirat ul-Umarā, fol. 136. Compare Thornton, East India Gazetteer, under 'Oorcha and Bundeleund.'

IV. Foll. 146—166. كواليار نامه, a history of Gwaliyor from its origin to A.H. 1055, by the same author.

حمد صانعی خداوند شوکت که قلعه متین Beg.

The author states at the end, fol. 160 a, that he had spent his life as secretary in the service of Sayyid Muzaffar Khān, entitled Khānjahān, who had been in command of Gwaliyor from the beginning of Shāhjahān's reign to the time of writing, viz. the 16th year of Shāhjahān, corresponding to A.H. 1050. (The date is wrong; for the 16th year of Shāhjahān began in Jumāda II., A.H. 1052).

In the preface, foll. 146 b—148 a, the author, after mentioning the most remarkable buildings erected at various times in Gwaliyor, and the holy men who dwelt there, states that he had taken the present account from a Hindi work, in which an old Brahman called Siyām had written down the local traditions.

At the end is found a subsequent addition, foll. 160—166, in which the author records the death of Khānjahān in A.H. 1055, and the appointment of his successors Sayyid Sālār and Sayyid 'Alim. This is followed by an account of the assassination of Ṣalābat Khān by Amar Singh, a Rathor Rājpūt, in A.H. 1054.

It has been already noticed, p. 304 a, that a later history of Gwaliyor, by Hīrāman, has been almost entirely transcribed from the present work.

Add. 16,863.

Foll. 430; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 18 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, dated Hūglī, Rabī' I., A.H. 1123 (A.D. 1711).

[WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1-83. \Rightarrow , "The four parterness of Barahman (Chandarbhān)," or memoirs of the author's life and time, with specimens of his poetical compositions. See p. 397 b.

چین اول مشتمل بر سیرابی و شادابی . همیشه بهار

The work was written shortly after A.H. 1057; the restitution of Balkh to Nazr Muhammad, which took place at that date, is mentioned, fol. 54 b, as a recent transaction. It is divided into four Chamans. The first contains descriptions of various festivals at Court, with pieces of poetry recited by the author on those occasions. The second, fol. 17 b, describes the splendours of the Court, the daily occupations of Shāhjahān, his new eapital Shāhjahānābād; and the principal cities and Ṣūbahs of the empire. The third, fol. 55 α , contains the author's life and some of his letters. The fourth, fol. 71 b, deals with moral and religious thoughts.

Another copy, Or. 1892, contains an additional introduction.

II. Foll. 84—103. رقعات شيخ ابو الفضل, familiar letters of Abul-Fazl to friends, collected and edited, with a short preface, by his nephew, Nūr Muḥammad (see p. 792 a).

بعد از انشا حمد و ثنا حضرت خداوند .Beg واهب العطایات

They have been printed in Calcutta, A.H. 1238. See also the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 26.

III. Foll. 103—119. Complimentary letters, mostly addressed to men of rank in Bengal.

IV. Foll. 122—429. Anvār i Suhailī. See p. 756 a.

copyist : بشناتهد برهمن کشمیری

Add. 16,871.

Foll. 344; 9½ in. by 6; 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabi'I., A.H. 1216 (A.D. 1801). [WM. YULE.]

A treatise on mechanical contrivances for purposes of utility or amusement.

Author: Shaikh Abu l-'Izz B. Ismā'ıl Razzāz Khūzī, شيخ ابو العز بن اسماعيل رزاز خوزى

تفحص كردم از كتابها متقدمان وعلما متاخران .Beg

The author says in his preface that, after testing by experiments the devices of ancient and modern writers, with many of his own invention, he had exhibited his results to Abul-Fath Mahmūd B. Muhammad Ķizil Arslān, Juan S. Muhammad Ķizil Arslān, teilāz عمد تزل ارسلان زعيم ديار (Ķizil Arslān B. Ilduguz, Atābak of Āzarbāijān, reigned from A.H. 582 to 587), and had availed himself of the experience and advice of that master of the art in composing the present work, which he wrote under the auspices of the reigning Imām, Nāṣir Abul-'Abbās Aḥmad, Amīr ul-Mūminīn (A.H. 575—622).

The work is divided into six sections , comprising altogether fifty figures شكل. They treat of the following subjects :---1. Hourglasses, ننكان (Arabie بنكار; see Haj. Khal., vol. i., p. 69), dials, and other instruments for the measurement of time, fol. 2 b. 2. Magical cups آرندها, and other devices connected with wine-drinking, fol. 123 b. 3. Magical ewers and basins, ابريقها و طاس , fol. 184 b. 4. Fountains, fol. 233 a. 5. Pumps and other contrivances for raising water, fol. 262 b. 6. Secret locks, etc., fol. 278 a.

Many spaces intended for diagrams have been left blank.

II. Foll. 295—344. خوان نعمت, an Indian cookery book, consisting of detached recipes, without preface or author's name.

Copyist: محمد امین بیك

Add. 16,876.

Foll. 24; 7½ in. by 4½; 12 lines, 3¼ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the latter part of the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

منازل الفتوح

"The stages of victory," by Muḥammad Ja'far Shāmlū, محمد جعفر شاملو

حمد و سپاس ^{بی}حد و عد خالقی را سزاست .Beg

It was written by desire of the Safavi prince, Abul-Fath Sultān Muhammad Shāh Bahādur Khān (see p. 133 b). The author, who calls himself a born servant of the Safavi house, states in the preface that he had served in his youth Shāhrukh Shāh, a descendant on his mother's side of the same family (see p. 194 b), and had been attached towards the end of his career to Muhammad Beg Khān Hamadānī in India, but that for twenty-five years in middle life he had followed Ahmad Sultān Durrānī in his successive incursions into Hindustan, and had been engaged in that prince's victorious encounter with Visvās Rāi and Bhāo on the field of Pānīpat, A.H. 1174. He adds that his record of that battle is based upon his own observation and upon information received from trustworthy reporters.

It must be noticed, however, that his account is upwards of thirty years posterior to the event; for the prince at whose suggestion it was written did not reach India until A.H. 1205. Muhammad Beg Khān Hamadānī, afterwards Iftikhār ud-Daulah Fīrūz Jang, was one of the principal officers of Najaf Khān, who died A.H. 1196, and survived his chief several years. Both he and Sindhiah, who died A.H. 1208, are spoken of by the author as dead.

The work consists of two distinct parts, viz. :--

I. Foll. 1—10. Description of the route from Kandahār to Dehli, with notices on the principal stages.

II. Foll. 11-24. Account of the battle of Pānīpat.

A translation by Major Fuller is preserved in manuscript, Add. 30,784, foll. 81—100. The greater part of it will be found, with an account of the work by Prof. Dowson, in Elliot's History, vol. viii. pp. 144—157.

Add. 17,955.

Foll. 218; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 and 16 lines, 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated A.H. 1169 (A.D. 1755).

I. Foll. 17—55. مختصر شانی, a manual of medicine and astrology.

Author: Fakhr ul-Islām (?) B. Kuţb ud-Dīn un-Nassābah ul-Husainī ul-Ubaidī ul-فخر الاسام [الاسلام] Arghandī ul-Khurāsānī, الاسلام] بن قطب الدين النسابة لخسيني العبيدي الارغندي لخراساني

حمدو سپاس بی قیاس تحفه بارکاه بادشاهی منزد .Beg

The work is dedicated to a sovereign designated as Shāh Hasan, described as conqueror of the realms of Cæsar and Khāķān, فاتج ملك قيصر و خاقان (probably Shaikh Hasan Ilkānī, who reigned A.H. 737—757).

It is divided into a Mukaddimah, two Maksads, and a Khatimah, as follows :---Mukaddimah treating of the pulse, hygiene, humours of the body, etc., in twelve Fasls, fol. 25 a. Maksad I. Treatment of diseases, in ten Bābs, fol. 28 a. Maksad II. treating of the spheres, planets, calendar, etc., in fourteen Fasls, fol. 44 a. Khātimah. Medical prescriptions, fol. 51 b.

A full table of contents is prefixed, foll. 6-11.

II. Foll. 55—66. List of medicaments mentioned in the Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī (see p. 469 a).

III. Foll. 71-78. A short dictionary of names of drugs, in Arabic, Persian, and Hindi.

IV. Foll. 79—174. برياض الأدوية, a treatise on medicaments, by Yūsufī. See p. 475 b.

Beg. للجمد لله الذي خلق لكل داء دراء We learn from a Ķiţ'ah at the beginning that it was written for Humāyūn in A.H. 946. It is divided into two Bābs, treating of simple and compound medicaments, in alphabetical order.

V. Foll. 174—218. A collection of medical extracts and prescriptions. It includes a treatise on the healing properties at the end as abridged from the Tibb Davā'iyah of Hakīm Ismā'il, physician of Tīmūr,

أنتخاب طب دوايه حكيم اسمعيل تمور شاهى

Add. 17,958.

Foll. 63; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Zulka'dah, A.H. 123 (probably for 1123, A.D. 1711).

I. Foll. 2-39. التحفة الملك شاهيه, a treatise on alchemy درعلم اكسيز, translated from an

840

Arabic work ascribed to Abu 'Alī Manşūr B. Nizār al-Ḥākim Billah (more correctly al-Ḥākim Bi Amr-illah) ابو على منصور بن نزار الحاكم بامر الله

الحمد لله . . . اما بعد بدانکه در ملك نشست . ونوزده سال

It is stated in a short preamble that al-Hākim, who sat on the throne from A.H. 386 to 410 (the real date of his disappearance is A.H. 411; see Ibn Khallikān, de Slane's translation, vol. iii. p. 449), had written the original work for his son Abu 'l-Husain. The translator, who does not give his name, says that he had been ordered to prepare a version of that treatise, which he calls رسالت تمويذ الحاكم بالله

II. Foll. 39—53. An alchemical tract headed باب اكبر, in which each section begins, as in the preceding, with the words "O my son," اى پسر من

III. Foll. 54—62. Another tract on the art of gilding and on various alloys, with the heading باب اندر تلویح وترکیب

Add. 17,967.

Foll. 78; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{2}$; written by different hands, about the beginning of the 19th century.

I. Foll. 1-10. Alchemical recipes.

II. Foll. 11—21. Table of the contents of Kisms 1.—111. of منتخب التواريخ (see p. 122 b), drawn up by Munshī Ghulām Muḥammad, A.H. 1222.

III. Foll. 21-78. Extracts relating chiefly to alchemy, with English notes by Doctor Pouget.

Add. 18,404.

Foll. 259; 10 in. by 6¹/₂; from 17 to 21 VOL. II. lines, about 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Rabī[°] I., the 5th year of 'Alamgīr II. (A.H. 1172, A.D. 1758). [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1–230. Translation of the Upanishads by Dārā-Shikūh. See p. 54.

In this copy the translator's preface is followed by a glossary of Sanskrit terms, and a table of the Upanishads.

II. Foll. 231-248. Majma' ul-Baḥrain. See p. 828 a, vii.

III. Foll. 24S—259. An abstract of conversations between Bābā La'ldās and Dārā Shikūh on the life and doctrine of Hindū Faķīrs, انتخاب جواب و سوال بابا لعلداس وبادشاه زادة حق پزوة دارا شكوة

اول انکهاز ورود کلمه معظمه ادم در بهشت میرود .Beg

A copy is mentioned by Prof. Palmer in his Catalogue of King's College Library, No. 14.

Add. 18,417.

Foll. 23; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 14 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

Manāzil ul-Futūķ. See p. 839 b.

Add. 18,422.

Foll. 43; 7³/₄ in. by 6; from 14 to 20 lines, 4 in. long; written in Shikastah, in the 18th century. [WM. YULE.]

I. Foll. 1—28. Dastūr ul-'Amal Āgahī (see p. 402 a), wanting the first page and the latter part of the work.

II. Foll. 30-43. Account of the author's journey from Cawnpore to Benares, and back through Jaunpūr and Partābgarh to Lucknow, from the 23rd of April 1798 to the 8th of October in the same year, with descriptions and historical accounts of the localities traversed.

On fol. 29 b, Major Yule has written: "Journal of my friend Muhummud Buqqa (عجد بقا) from Juanpore to Lucnow, 1798."

Add. 18,870.

Foll. 411; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$.

I. Foll. 2—143; 15 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Haidarābād, Jumāda I., A.H. 1252 (A.D. 1836).

A collection of medical prescriptions classed under the diseases, beginning with the heading امراض الراس الصداع

This is a late compilation written in India. Ghāzi ud-Dīn Khān, Vazīr ul-Mamālik (A.H. 1174) is mentioned on fol. 64 a. A table is prefixed, foll. 2—4.

• II. Foll. 144-289; written by the same hand.

تاليف شريف

Indian materia medica, or dictionary of simple medicaments.

Author : Hakīm Muḥammad Sharif Khān, son of Hāzik ul-Mulk Hakīm Muḥammad Akmal Khān, حكيم محمد شريف خان ولد حاذق الملك حكيم محمد اكمل خان

برك درختان سبز در نظر هوشيار Beg.

The author says in the preface that, having found the دستور الهنود and دستور الهنود tar from complete, he had undertaken to supplement them from Hindū works, as well as from experience gained by himself and his forefathers before him. He adds that he had performed that task while besieged by the unbelievers and deprived of books.

In the introduction the author says that, with regard to the names of drugs, he conforms with the usage of Shāhjahānābād (Dehli). Another copy, Or. 1696, contains a dedication to Shāh 'Alam (A.H. 1173—1221), and another work of the same writer علاج expresses by its title the date of its composition, A.H. 1177.

The Tālīf i Sharīf has been lithographed in Dehli with the Alfaz ul-Adviyah, A.H. 1265. See the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. 20, p. 620, and Biblioth. Sprenger., No. 1901. A second edition, lithographed in Dehli, A.H. 1280, contains, besides, the Tuhfah i 'Alamshāhī or Khavās ul-Javāhir by the same author, also dedicated to Shah 'Alam, and some other medical tracts by the author's grandson, Ghulām Muhammad B. Hakim Muhammad Sadik 'Alī Khān B. Hakīm Muhammad Sharif Khān. An English translation, entitled "the Taleef Shereef, or Indian materia medica," has been published by Dr. George Playfair, Calcutta, 1833.

III. Foll. 290—411; 21 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1101 (A.D. 1690).

خواص الحيوان

A work on the medicinal properties of animals, extracted from Damīrī's Arabic work called حيوة ¹¹حيوان (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 215).

Author: Muḥammad Taķī Tabrīzī, son of Khwājah Muḥammad, ابن خواجه محمد محمد محمد تقى تبريزى

The work of Damīrī having been mentioned in an assembly of learned men in the house of the author's patron, Navvāb Mīrzā Muḥammad Ibrāhīm, son of Ṣadr ud-Dīn Muḥammad, during the reign of Shāh 'Abbās II. (A.H. 1052—1077), the author was desired to write the present abridgment, in which he followed the alphabetical order of the original. See Stewart's Catalogue, p. 96.

Add. 18,873.

Foll. 239; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in.

long; written in small Nestalik; dated Kazvin, Rajab, A.H. 999 (A.D. 1591).

I. Foll. 1—88. The first portion of the sixth volume of the Rauzat us-Ṣafā, corresponding to pp. 1—84 of the Bombay edition.

II. Foll. 89-239. The latter half of the first volume of Habīb us-Siyar, beginning with p. 24 of Juz 2, Bombay edition.

Add. 18,879.

Foll. 214; 9 in. by 7; 13 and 11 lines, written in Nestalik, on English paper watermarked 1809.

I. Foll. 1-152. Letters and other prose compositions of Mirzā Ţāhir Vaḥīd.

الحمد لله . . . نامه که مصحوب شاهقلی بیك .Beg. در طلب تندهار ببادشاه هندوستان نوشته شد

The contents agree substantially with those of Add. 7690, i. See p. 810 b.

II. Foll. 153—214. The first half of Daftar II. of Inshā i Abul-Fazl. See p. 396 a.

Add. 18,882.

Foll. 85; 9 in. by 5; 17 lines, 3[‡] in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1081 (A.D. 1671).

I. Foll. 1—14. A collection of letters and short prose compositions by Nūr ud-Dīn Muhammad (see p. 792 a), imperfect in the end.

Beg. بعد حمد الله أكبر و شفيع روز محشر The dates of the letters range from A.II. 1025 to 1037. Some are written from Jahāngīrnagar, Bengal, others from Lahore. Tho collection includes a dedication of the لطيفة (see p. 792 a) to the author's patron, Khānahzād Khān Fīrūzjang (see p. 509 a).

. II. Foll. 15-85. The memoirs of Timur.

(see p. 177 b), containing :—The Institutes, wanting about three pages at the beginning (White's edition, pp. 162—408). The Designs and Enterprises (White's edition, pp. 2—152).

Add. 19,344.

Foll. 24; miscellaneous Oriental papers, collected by George Viscount Valentia, of which the following are Persian:—

I. Foll. 1-6. Letters written to Lord Valentia, by the following native princes:

1. Udit Näräyan Singh, Rājah of Benares, apologizing for not calling upon Lord Valentia in Benares (March 1803; see Lord Valentia's Voyages and Travels, vol. i. p. 104). 2. Vazīr ul-Mamālik Sa'ādat 'Alī Khān, sending his affectionate remembrance and his portrait; dated 28 Sha'bān, A.H. 1218 (December 1803). See ib., pp. 135—175. 3. Shahāmat 'Alī Khān, called in the endorsement Mirza Jungly, referring to the late Navvāb's regard, and assuring Lord Valentia of the Begam's and his own friendship.

II. Transcript of a Kit'ah engraved on the bridge of Jaunpūr, and containing the date of its construction, A.H. 975. See ib., p. 124.

For the rest of the contents see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 532.

Add. 19,497.

Foll. 191; 10 in. by 6; 15 lines, 3¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1244 (A.D. 1829).

I. Foll. 1—109. Memoirs of Shaikh Muhammad 'Ali Hazin. See p. 381 a.

II. Foll. 110-191. Notices on contemporary poets, by the same. See p. 372 b.

Add. 19,619.

Foll. 310; 81 in. by 41; 15 lines, 25 in. 3 G 2 long; written in Nestalik, with gold-rulcd margins; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 1103 (A.D. 1692). [SAMUEL LEE.]

I. Foll. 3—128. جام جهان نمای عباسی , a treatise on wine, its beneficial properties, and legitimate use.

Author: Ķāzī B. Kāshif ud-Dīn Muḥammad, تاضى بن كاشف الدين محمد

صافترین صهبائیکه از پرتو اشعه انوار آن Beg.

Mīrzā Ķāzī, whose father Kāshif was physician to Shāh 'Abbās I., was born in Isfahan, and became Shaikh ul-Islām in that city. He died in Ardabīl A.H. 1075. See Ķisas ul-Khākānī, fol. 159.

This work was written, as stated in the preface, by order of Shāh 'Abbās I. It is divided into a Mukaddimah, thirty Bābs, and a Khātimah, and was completed in Rajab, A.H. 1037, a few months after the Shāh's death.

II. Foll. 129—156. رساله چوب چينى, a tract on the medicinal properties of the Chūb i Chīnī, or China root, coffee, and tea, by the same author.

الحمد لله . . . چون بتوجه خاطر افتاب مآثر .Beg

This work was also written in the reign of 'Abbās I.

The Chūb i Chīnī, also called بيخ چينى, is here said to have been introduced by Europeans and to have spread in Irak at the beginning of the reign of Shāh Ismā'īl.

An earlier but insufficient account of it, by "the late" 'Imād ud-Dīn Maḥmūd (see p. 474 a), is mentioned in the preface.

The work is divided into the following three Bābs:—1. China root, in fourteen Fașls, fol. 130 a. 2. Coffee, fol. 154 a. 3. Tea, fol. 155 b.

III. Foll. 157—162. رساله افيون, a treatise on the beneficial and injurious properties of opium, by Mahmūd B. Mas'ūd ut-Tabīb ('Imād ud-Dīn; see p. 474 a).

الحمد لله العجمود في كل افعاله والصلوة والسلام .Beg

The treatise is divided into a Mukaddimah, an Aşl, and a Khātimah. See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 368.

IV. Foll. 243-247. Two Arabic tracts; see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 458.

V. Foll. 247—262. رسالدء چوب چينى, a treatise on China root, by 'Imād ud-Dīn Maḥmūd.

Beg. پوشیده نهاند که این بیخ چینی که دراین تاریخ See above, art. ii., Haj. Khal. vol. iii. p. 386, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 112, the Copenhagen Catalogue, p. 44, and Fleischer's

Leipzig Catalogue, p. 513. VI. Foll. 263—265. Another treatise on the same subject. Author: Nūr Ullah, commonly called 'Alā, نور الله مشهور بعلا

اما بعد چنین کوید محرر این رساله ومقرر .Beg این مقاله

The author, who wrote in A.H. 944, says that he had spent twenty years in India, and had obtained his information on China root from a European physician. See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 386.

VII. Foll. 265-270. A tract on the Pāzahr or bezoar-stone, by 'Imād ud-Dīn Maḥmūd (see p. 474α).

VIII. Foll. 270–285. Extracts from the Nauras i Shāhī on the bezoar and precious stones; miscellaneous notices on aphrodisiacs, weights and measures, and on China root.

IX. Foll. 285—308. A treatise on Atashak, or venereal disease, by 'Imād ud-Dīn Maḥmūd.

و بعد چون مرضی که معروفست باتشك در .Beg زمان سابق

844

Beg.

That disorder, formerly unknown, had lately been treated of by Mīr Bahā ud-Daulah Nūrbakhshī. The author improved the leisure he enjoyed during a stay at Mashhad to write a fuller account of it.

Add. 19,621.

Foll. 150; 8 in. by 5; 13 lines, 2³/₈ in. long, with 22 lines in the margins; written in fair Nestalik; dated Jumāda II., A.H. 1139 (A.D. 1726). [SAMUEL LEE.]

I. Foll. 3-121. The Divan of Kasim Divanah. See p. 707 b.

II. Foll. 1, 2, and margins of foll. 3—150. Mahmūd and Ayāz, by Zulālī, with the preface. See p. 677 a.

Add. 19,623.

Foll. 162; 8½ in. by 5¾; 10 and 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written apparently early in the 18th century.

I. Foll. 1-32. The Shi'ah creed by Ibn Bābavaih. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 385.

II. Foll. 33—72. ترجمة العقائد, a popular exposition of Shi'ah tenets, by Muhsin B. Murtazā (see p. 830 a).

حمد بیحد و ثنای بیعد خداوند جهان آرای Beg.

It is also called an account of its division into eight chapters called "gates." These chapters treat of God's existence, unity, holiness, of prophetship, Imāmat, resurrection, the terrors of death, heaven and hell.

- III. Foll. 73—162. ترجمه توحيد مفضل, a discourse of the Imām Ja'far Ṣādiķ on the proofs which the scheme of creation affords of the existence, unity, and attributes of the Creator; translated from the Arabic by Muمحمد تـقى hammad Taķī B. Muḥammad Bāķir, بن محمد باقر

الحمد لله الذي هدانا الى توحيدة بصفوته

This discourse was handed down, as the translator states in his preface, by Mufazzal B. 'Umar, a disciple of Imām Ja'far. In his introduction Mufazzal relates how he had been distressed one day in Medina by the bold negations of an atheist called Ibn Abil-'Aujā, and how his master Imām Ja'far, seeing his perplexity, had promised him comfort and assurance. This preamble is followed by the discourse addressed by Ja'far to Mufazzal, who acts as his interlocutor. It is divided into four sittings real.

Add. 19,661.

Foll. 109; 8 in. by $4\frac{2}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 16th century.

I. Foll. 1-50. Khulāsat ul-Khamsah. See p. 575 a.

يوسف كشميرى : Copyist

II. Foll. 51-109. Majma' ul-Abkār, by 'Urfī. See p. 667 b.

Add. 19,809.

Foll. 89; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 21 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Aurangābād, Ṣafar, A.H. 1090 (A.D. 1679).

I. Foll. 5—30. Gulshan i Rāz. See p. 608 b.

II. Foll. 31-53. كنز الرموز, a Sufi poem, by Amīr Husainī (see p. 608 a).

See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 431, Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 254, Krafft, p. 66, Ouseley's Catalogue, No. 677, and the Gotha Catalogue, p. 12.

III. Foll. 54—87. Zād ul-Musāfirīn, by Amīr Husainī. See p. 608 a.

Add. 21,589.

Foll. 527; $13\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $9\frac{1}{4}$; 25 lines, 6 in. long; written in small Nestalik, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 1246 (A.D. 1830). [JAMES BIRD.]

I. Foll. 1-338. تحفق الكرام, a work on general history from the earliest times to A.H. 1180, comprising a special history of Sind.

میر, Author : Mīr ʿAlī Shīr Ķāni 'Tattavī عیشیر قانع تـتوی

Beg.

بعد حمد خالقی که آثارات کون مکان

The author, the fourth son of Sayyid 'Izzat-Ullah, who died A.H. 1161, traced his origin to Ķāzī Shukr-Ullah, a distinguished Sayyid of Shīrāz, who had settled in Tattah A.H. 927 (see fol. 316 b). 'Alīshīr, who was born A.H. 1140, began writing poetry at the early age of twelve, under the takhallus of Mazharī, which he afterwards changed to that of Ķāni'. He composed a poem of about 3000 distichs on the story of Kāmrūp and Kāmlatā in A.H. 1169, another Maṣnavī, Ķazā u Ķadar in A.H. 1165, a Dīvān in A.H. 1171, and several prose works, one of which is called $id_{ij} \leq i_{ij} \leq i_$

The author states in the preface that he had begun the present work in his 40th year, and that the date of composition, A.H. 1180, is conveyed by the title z . Two versified chronograms at the end give A.H. 1181 as the date of its completion. But it must have received later additions; for more recent dates are mentioned, as A.H. 1183, foll. 195 a, 198 a; and in one passage (fol. 288) the narrative is brought down to A.H. 1188.

An account of the work, with some extracts, is given in Elliot's History of India, vol. i. pp. 327-351. Some chapters translated by T. Postans will be found in the Journal of the As. Soc. of Bengal, vol. vii., pp. 96-104, and 297-310.

It is divided into three volumes (Mujallad), the contents of which are as follows :—

Volume I., divided into a Mukaddimah and three Daftars; viz. Mukaddimah. Creation and Genii, fol. 2 a.-Daftar I. Prophets, fol. 3 a. Ancient kings of Persia, Arabia, etc., fol. 38 a. Sages, saints, and poets, anterior to the Islām, fol. 62 b.-Daftar II. Genealogy of Muhammad, fol. 73 b. His life, fol. 75 a. The first four Khalifs, fol. 87 b. The Imāms, fol. 100 b. Descendants of the Imams, fol. 112 b.—Daftar II., in three Tabakahs: 1. Umayyades, fol. 116 b. Amīrs of the Umayyades, fol. 120 b. Men who rose against the Umayyades, fol. 124 b. 2. Abbasides, fol. 132 a. Abbasides of Egypt, fol. 146 b. Amirs and Vazirs of the Abbasides, fol. 147 a. Men who rose against the Abbasides, fol. 156 b. The Karmatites, fol. 158 b. 3. Dynasties contemporary with the Abbasides.

This last Tabakah is subdivided into nine sections (Asās), as follows : 1. Tābirīs, Saffārīs, Sāmānis, Ghaznavīs, Ghūrīs, Al i Buvaih, Saljūkīs, Khwārazmshāliīs, Atābaks, Ismā'ilis of Egypt, Ayyūbis, Ismā'ilis of Kuhistān, Al i 'Abd ul-Mūmin, Karākhitā'is of Kirman, fol. 160 b.-2. Cæsars, Saljuks of Rūm, Dānishmandīs Salīkīs, Manguchakīs, Karāmān, Zulkadr, fol. 169 a.—3. Sharīfs of Mecca and Medina, fol. 169 b.-4. Chingiz Khān and his descendants in Ulugh Yūrt, Dasht Kipchāk, Īrān, and Tūrān; the Shaibānīs, and the Khāns of Kāshghar, fol. 169 b.--5. Local dynasties of Iran after the Moghuls, namely, the Chaupānīs, Ilkānīs, Al i Muzaffar, Kurts, and Sarbadars, fol. 179 b.-6. The Karā Kūyunlus, fol. 183 a.—7. The Aķ Kūyunlus, fol. 183 b.—8. The Safavīs, ib.—9. Tīmūr and his successors in Irān and Tūrān, foll. 183—186.

Volume II. contains an Introduction (Mukaddimah) on the inhabited quarter of the globe, and seven sections (Makalah), treating of the seven climates. The principal countries and cities belonging to each climate are enumerated, with accounts of their rulers and biographical notices of their celebrated men. The contents are :-- Mukaddimah, fol. 186 b. First climate, fol. 187 a. Second climate, fol. 190 a. Kings of the Deccan, Kings of Bengal, fol. 199 b. Third 10. climate, fol. 201 b. Kings of Hindustan, from Mahmud Ghaznavi to 'Alamgir II., fol. 231. Princes and Amirs of the Dehli empire, foll. 240 b, 241 b. (The last portion of this section, the whole of the fourth, and the first part of the fifth, are missing. The latter part of the fifth, foll. 242-247, treats of Samarkand, Kash, Nasaf, Nakhshab, Karshi, Bukhura, etc.). Sixth climate, fol. 247 b. Sultans of Käshghar, fol. 249 a. Seventh climate, fol. 252 a. Khātimah; distances between the principal cities, fol. 253 a.

Volume III., treating of the history of Sind. The author mentions as his sources, in the first place, an ancient record of the Arab conquest, which 'Alī B. Hāmid B. Abī Bakr ul-Kūfī, of Uelh, translated from the Arabic, A.H. 613 (see p. 290 b), then the histories of Mīr Ma'şūm Bhakarī (p. 291 a), and Mīr Muḥammad Ṭāhir Nisyānī (p. 292 b), the Arghūn Nāmah, Tarkhān Nāmah, and Beglar Nāmah (see Elliot, vol. i. pp. 289 and 300).

Contents: Mukaddimah. Description of Sind, fol. 254 b. Țabakah i Rāyān, or Hindū Rājahs, fol. 255 b. Țabakah i Barāhimah, rule of the Brahmans, fol. 256 a. Conquest by Muhammad B. Kāsim, fol. 257 b. Governors under the Umayyades, fol. 260 a.

Governors under the Abbasides, fol. 261 a. Governors under the Sultans of Ghaznah, Ghür, and Dehli, fol. 261 b. Tabakah i Sumarah, fol. 263 b. Jams of the Sammah tribe, fol. 267 a. Tabakalı i Arghün, fol. 269 a. Tabakah i Tarkhān, to the death of Ghāzī Beg, A.H. 1021, with an account of the conquest of Sind by Akbar, fol. 272 a. Amirs of the Arghun and Tarkhun dynastics, fol. 279 a. Amirs of the Timurides, and governors of Tattah, from A.H. 1002 to 1149, fol. 281 a. Rule of the Kalūrah 'Abhāsiyyah family from its origin to A.H. 1188, fol. 284 a. Enumeration of the cities and towns of Sind, with notices of the Sayyids, Shaikhs, and other eminent men of each, beginning with Multan and closing with Tattah, fol. 288 b.

II. Foll. 339-447. رمعيار سالكان طريقت. lives of celebrated Shaikhs, and heads of religious orders, from the time of Muhammad to the close of the twelfth century of the Hijrah, by the same author.

Beg. منت خدايرا عز وجل كه بنداي هدايت انتما This work was composed, it is stated, in A.H. 1202 (a date expressed by the title), when the author had nearly completed his 63rd year. He had written in the same year two other works on kindred subjects, entitled مديت سند الهلبيت سند

It contains an introduction treating of the Vilāyat, or saintship, fol. 340 a, and twelve sections termed Mi'yūr, on the following subjects :—

1. Holy men of the first century, namely, the first four Khalīfahs, the uncles and cousins of the Prophet, his principal Companions, the first three Imāms and their children, fol. 341 b. 2. Holy men of the second century, including especially the founders of the fourteen Khānavāds, or religious families, fol. 350 a.

The remaining Mi'yars, treating, in the same order, of the saints of each succeeding century, begin as follows :---

3, fol. 357 a.—4, fol. 367 a.—5, fol. 375 a. 6, fol. 379 b.—7, fol. 391 b.—8, fol. 401 b. 9, fol. 410 b.—10, fol. 421 a.—11, fol. 428 b. 12, fol. 436 a.—They all contain numerous notices, arranged in chronological order.

III. Foll. 448 –527. مقالات الشعراء, notices on the poets of Sind, alphabetically arranged according to their names or poetical surnames, with copious specimens of their compositions, by the same author, Mir 'Alishīr Ķāni'.

Beg. تحمد من خص بالقوة النطقية الانسان The author states that, having found that the two Tazkirahs most frequently quoted in his day, namely معرام by Muhammad Afzal Sarkhush (see p. 369 a), and hammad Afzal Sarkhush (see p. 369 a), and so by Mīr Ghulām 'Alī Azād (see p. 374 a, No. 14), were very deficient with regard to the Sind poets, and that there existed no special work on that subject, he had undertaken the present composition in A.H. 1169, while engaged upon his poem of Kāmrūp and Kāmlatā, and had completed it in A.H. 1174, a date expressed by its title.

The author devotes an extensive notice to himself, foll. 498—509, in which he gives copious extracts from his poems and prose works.

It appears from the subscriptions, foll. 185 b, 338 b, 447 b, that this volume was written by Mihr 'Alī Ḥusainī for an amīr of Sind named Mīr Murād 'Alī Khān Tālpar.

Add. 21,625.

Foll. 34; 12 in. by 9. Miscellaneous Oriental papers collected by Cl. J. Rich (see the Arabic Catalogue, p. 530).

The following are Persian :---

Fol. 4. A detached leaf of the Iskandar حرب Nāmah of Nizāmī, containing the rubric سکندر با روسیان روز دیکر

Foll. 5—11. Original minutes of the examination of two troopers, Hāshim Khān and Nūr Khān, arrested by order of Capt. James W. Skinner on a charge of bribery, at Sīkrah, Bikānīr, and tried in June and July 1813.

Add. 22,695.

Foll. 159; 10 in. by 7.

I. Foll. 2—39; 25 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in minute Nestalik, apparently in the 15th century.

A history of the Saljūķis, from their origin to their extinction in A.H. 590.

Author: Muḥammad B. Muḥammad B. Muḥammad B. 'Abd ullah B. un-Nizām ul-Ḥusaini, محمد بن محمد بن عبد الله بن محمد بن النظام للسيني حمد بي حد و شکر بي عد سياس فراوان Beg.

The author, who occasionally diverted his mind from the pursuit of divinity and law by perusing the records of history, fell in, as stated in the preface, with a book in which the writer, only designated as an accomplished Imām, یکی از اثبہ فضل شعار, had recorded the rise and progress of the Saljūkis down to the end of the reign of Sultan Mahmūd B. Muhammad B. Malakshāh (A.H. 511-525), an epoch which he looked upon as the beginning of their decline. Considering, however, that several mighty sovereigns of the same line had sat upon the throne during a subsequent period of nearly eighty years, the author had been induced to compose a complete history of the dynasty. The preface concludes with a panegyric on a just and powerful Vazir, whose name is not explicitly stated, but is said to adorn the work. From this it may be supposed that its title 'Irākiyyah is derived from the Vazīr's surname "'Irāķī."

The work is written in ornate prose, freely interspersed with Arabie and Persian verses, much in the style of the well-known contemporary writer, Vașsāf. The time of composition is fixed by an incidental mention of Uljāitū as the reigning sovereign (A.H. 703—716), and a description of his splendid residence, namely Sulțāniyyah, which was founded A.H. 705 (see D'Ohsson, vol. iv. p. 485).

The earlier history referred to in the preface is probably the Saljūk Nāmah of Zahīr ud-Dīn Nīshāpūrī mentioned as one of the sources of the Guzīdah. See Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 606.

H. Foll. 40—159; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in the 16th century.

سمط العلى للحضرة العليا

A history of the Karā-Khitā'is of Kirmān from their rise to their downfall.

The author's name, Nāṣir ud-Dīn, is not found in the preface; but it occurs in the following line, the first of a poem composed in his praise by the Ṣadr Mayd ud-Dīn, and quoted on fol. 119:

His father, Khwājah Muntajab ud-Dīn 'Umdat ul-Mulk Yazdī, bad left his native place Yazd, A.H. 650, as stated fol. 80, to attach himself to Ķuţb ud-Dīn Muḥammad, Sultan of Kirmān, and had become the trusted adviser of that sovereign. Nāṣir ud-Dīn, who was brought up by his uncle, Shihāb ud-Dīn Abul-Hasan 'Alī Yazdī (see fol. 94), was appointed by Pādishāh Khātūn, A.H. 693, although still young, to the headsecretaryship of the chancelry, ديوان رسائل وانشا, view of the source of the second se

The author states in the preface that a partial account of the Karā-Khitā'is had been written under the title of Tārīkh i Shāhī by Khwājah Shihāb ud-Dīn Abu Sa'īd; but the events which followed the death of Pādishāh Khātūn (A.H. 694) had not yet been recorded. At the request of some friends, who regarded him as one of the most elegant writers of the age, he took up the subject, and brought down the history to the extinction of the dynasty. The work was written at the beginning of A.H. 716, and dedicated to an illustrious Amir sent at that time by the Ilkhānī Court to Kirmān, Isan بقلابة بريان Kutlugh Nūyān ايسن قتلغ نويان B. Amīr Zingī, a noble Uighūr, who traced his origin to Altan Khan.

VOL. II.

$

Contents: Preface, including a review of the principal dynasties of Iran, fol. 40 b. Sketch of the early history of Kirman, fol. 54 a. (For a more detailed account of that period the reader is referred to the work of Afzal ud-Din Kātib Mustaufi.) Nusrat ud-Din Kutlugh Sultin Burak Hajib, the founder of the dynasty, who died A.H. 632, after a reign of fifteen years, fol. 67 a. Kutb ud-Din Abul-Fath Muhammad B. Jamtimur, nephew and successor of the preceding, fol. 72 6. Rukn ud-Din B. Burak, who succeeds A.H. 633, fol. 75 a. Second reign of Kutb ud-Din, A.H. 650-655. Regency of 'Ismat ud-Din Kutlugh Turkan, the widow of the preceding, fol. 86 b. Muzaffar ud-Din Hajjāj Sultan, son of Kutb ud-Din, fol. 88 a. Jalal ud-Din Suyürghatmish, son of the preceding, who succeeds his father A.H. 681, fol. 104 a The daughter of the above, Padishah Khatun, A.H. 691-694, fol. 124 a. Muzaffar ud-Din Muhammad Shāh, son of Hajjāj Sultān, who succeeds A.H. 694, fol. 136 b.

The detailed narrative comes to a close with the account of the chequered and intermittent rule of the last-named sovereign, who died at the age of twenty-nine years (A.H. 703). It is followed by a brief record of the appointments of Kutb ud-Dīn Shāh Khātūn (read Shāh Jahān) by Ghāzān (A.H.

3 п

703), fol. 155 b, and of Nāṣir ud-Dīn Muhammad B. Burhān by Uljāitū (A.H. 707), who was still on the throne at the time of composition, fol. 157 b.

Haj. Khal., who ealls the author Nāṣir ud-Dīn Munshī Kirmānī, speaks of an appendix coming down to the reign of Abu Sa'īd. See vol. iii. p. 618. Accounts of the Kara-Khitā'īs will be found in Tārikh i Vaṣṣāf, vol. iii., where their history is brought down to A.H. 694, in the Guzīdah, and, with full détails, in the geographical work of Hāfiz Abrū, foll. 147—155. See also Rauzat uṣ-Ṣafā, vol. iv. p. 128, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 2, p. 10.

Add. 22,789.

Foll. 340; $9\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 14 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Shabān, A.H 1250 (A.D. 1835).

I. Foll. 1–292. كلشى خسروى, a eopious collection of select pieces in verse and in prose, compiled by Bakā for Mīrzā Khusrau Beg. According to a versified chronogram at the end, fol. 292 a, the work was completed in A.H. 1246:

The first or poetical portion, although including verses of some early poets, deals ehiefly with those who flourished in Persia about the elose of the twelfth and in the first half of the thirteenth century of the Hijrah, as Sulaimān Ṣabāhī (see Atashkadah, fol. 180), Sayyid Muḥammad Hātif (see p. 813 b), Luṭf 'Alī Beg Azur (see p. 375 a), Fatḥ 'Alī Khān Kāshī, surnamed Ṣabā (see p. 722 a), 'Abd ul-Vahhāb Nashāṭ (see ib.), ete. It contains the following divisions :— Ķaṣīdahs, fol. 5 a. Ghazals, without alphabetical arrangement, fol. 57 b. Detached verses in alphabetical order, fol. 85 b. ' Rubā'is alphabetically arranged, fol. 114 b. Mukhammasāt, fol. 125 a. Kiţ'ahs, fol. 131 b. Maşnavīs, fol. 141 b.

The last section includes two longer poems of the kind ealled سري , by Mihri 'Arab, and Mīrzā 'Abd ullah, surnamed 'Ishķ.

The prose portion, which is taken from some elegant writers who lived in India under Shāhjahān and Aurangzīb, contains :— Journal of the siege of Haidarābād by Ni'mat Khān 'Alī (see p. 268 a), fol. 160 b. "Beauty and Love," by the same (see p. 703 b), fol. 210 b. A satire on doetors, by the same (see p. 744 b), fol. 223 a. حسن و عشق "Beauty and Love," by Tughrā. Bahāriyyah مرتفعات, and Murtafi'āt مرتفعات, by the same (see p. 742), fol. 231 a. شهر آشوب, by Mīrzā Muhammad Shafi' Munshi, fol. 241 b. This last piece is a statement addressed to the lawyers of Iran, respecting the estate of the late Shahzadah (Muhammad Akbar, the eldest son of Aurangzib), who died in Persia in A.H. 1118, and to whose service the writer appears to have been attached.

II. Foll. 293—338. رمز الرياحين "the secret language of sweet-scented flowers," a description, in Maşnavī rhyme, of the royal garden of Saʿādat-ābād, at Isfahan (see Ouseley's Travels, vol. iii. p. 19).

Author : Ramzī, رمزى

The author, whose proper name was Mīrzā Hādī, son of Mīrzā Habīb, was a native of Kāshān. He is mentioned in the Ķiṣaṣ ul-Khākānī, a work written A.H. 1076, fol. 170, as a poet and skilled painter, who was then past thirty years of age.

After a eulogy on the reigning sovereign, Shāh 'Abbās II., the poet relates how he had been summoned to the Shāh's presence in the royal garden, and desired to write a poem in praise of it. The work concludes, however, with an address to Shāh Sulțān Husain, who ascended the throne in A.H. 1105.

The present copy contains twenty-nine coloured drawings representing the various flowers described in the poe:n.

The last two leaves contain a satire by Mirzā Sharif on one of the Mustaufis of Shāh Țahmāsp. A table of contents has been prefixed to the volume, foll. 1—3.

Add. 23,496.

Foll. 252; 10 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 21 lines, 6 in. long; written in bold Naskhi; dated Shīrāz, Muḥarram, A.H. 847 (A.D. 1443).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

I. Foll. 2-246 a. The first volume of the Persian Țabari (see p. 68), containing little more than a quarter of the work.

This copy has no preface, but only a short doxology in Persian, beginning :

سپاس و افرین وستایش خدای کامکار کامران وآفریننده زمین وزمان را

The text is in some parts considerably abridged: the introduction, which precedes the account of the creation of Adam (Zotenberg's version, pp. 9-72) is condensed to seven leaves, foll. 4-10. The history is brought down to the death of Yazdajird ul-Aşīm (Zotenberg's version, vol. ii. p. 104).

It is stated in the subscription that the MS. was transcribed by Bahā ud-Dīn B. Hasan B. Bahā ud-Dīn, an attendant of the shrine of Hājī Bahā ud-Dīn 'Uşmān, near Shīrāz, and that it belonged to the Ṣadr Ra'īs Nizām ud-Dīn, son of the Ṣadr Hājī Fakhr ud-Dīn Aḥmad.

The first half of a table of contents, occupying four pages at the beginning, has been supplied by a later hand.

 phet," consisting of moral precepts addressed by Muhammad to 'Alī, and handed down by the latter.

روايت است از امير المومنين على عليه التحية . والشا وكرم الله وجهه كه كفت روزى رسول الخ

Written by the same scribe as art. i., and dated A.H. 848.

Add. 23,558.

Foll. 361; $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 23 lines, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz; dated Ṣafar, A.H. 1100 (A.D. 1688).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

I. Foll. 2-243. Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī. See p. 469 a.

In the subscription of the first Makālat, the work is designated as Miftāh ul-Khazā'in, commonly called Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī. But the former title belongs to another treatise by the same author. See ib.

II. Foll. 243—276. خواص الاشيا, a treatise on the medicinal properties of natural substances, without author's name.

It is said in the preamble that the number of Bābs had been reduced from sixteen to eight. In the text, however, nine chapters are found, treating of the following subjects: Properties of various parts of the human body aidited b, fol. 244 a, of quadrupeds, fol. 245 b, birds, fol. 254 b, reptiles and insects, fol. 259 b, fruits and flowers, fol. 262 a, seeds, fol. 270 b, herbs, fol. 271 b; leaves, fol. 272 a, gums, ib., and stones, fol. 273 a.

III. Foll. 276 b—294. A treatise in ten chapters (Faşl) on hemorrhoids and three kindred diseases, بواسير و شقاق Author : Muḥammad B. Jamāl, called 'Alā ut-Ṭabīb, محمد بن جمال المدعو بعلاء الطبيب 3 n 2 للحمد لله الذي ابدع بفضله في الانسان عجايب . البداعات

IV. Foll. 296-305. An extract relating to the medicinal properties of various kinds of food, without title or author's name.

The rubrics have not been inserted.

V. Foll. 306—361. قرابادين للكيم شفائي, a treatise on compound medicaments. See p. 473 b.

Add. 23,568.

Foll. 102; 7 in. by 5; from 18 to 23 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik; dated A.H. 889-894 (A.D. 1484-1489).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

I. Foll. 2-31. شرح مختصر در معرفت تقويم , a commentary upon the treatise of Naşir ud-Din Tūsī on the almanac, with the text. See p. $452 \ b$.

Beg. الله احمد على نعماية واشكر على آلاية واصاى Erom a passage, fol. 7 a, in which the date of Naurūz is fixed for A.H. 727, it becomes probable that the commentary was written in that year.

II. Foll. 32—53. اصول البلاحم, a treatise on prognostics to be drawn from eclipses, storms, and other phenomena, according to the time of their appearance in the solar year.

Author: Abu'l-Fazl Hubaish B. Ibrāhīm ut-Tiflīsī, ابو الفضل حبيش بن ابراهيم التفليسي

The work is intended, according to the preface, to elucidate two books called كتاب, one of which is ascribed to Daniel, and the other to Ja'far Ṣādiķ. The author says that he had written it after completing another work, entitled تانون الادب (see Haj. Khal., vol. iv., p. 494, and the Munich Catalogue, p. 110), and that he had drawn its matter from Greek and Arabic writers. It is divided into twenty-five Fasls.

The author, who wrote several other works on medicine and astrology, is stated by Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 25, to have dedicated one of them to Ķilij Arslān Rūmī, while he composed another, كفاية الطب, for Abul-Hāriş Malakshāh (see the Gotha Catalogue, p. 64). The former of these princes was apparently Ķilij Arslān B. Mas'ūd, who died A.H. 588, after a nominal reign of nineteen years, during the latter part of which he had been confined in Ķūniyah by his son Ķuţb ud-Dīn Malakshāh. See Kāmil, vol. xii. pp. 31 and 57. Wüstenfeld, Arabische Aertzte, p. 30, mentions the author without fixing his period.

The present work is mentioned by Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 111, under the title of محجة but the author's name is altered to Jalīs. For similar works see the Bodleian Catalogue, vol. ii. p. 332, note i.

III. Foll. 55—77. هداية النجوم, a manual of astrology.

Author: Nāșir ud-Dîn Haidar B. Muhammad ush-Shīrāzī.

شکر و سیاس خدابرا که منزه است ذات او .Beg

The author states that he had written it A.H. 687, after finishing another work called زيج رصد السيار. It is divided into thirty Bābs, partly disposed in tabular form.

IV. Foll. 77 b—85. An extract from a work entitled روضة المنجمين, with the heading مقالت مسائل في العلل والاسباب . It explains in twenty questions and answers the origin and reasons of the terms and divisions adopted by astronomers. See further on, Add. 27,261, xii., and Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 512. V. Foll. 86—101. An account of the institution of Naurūz by the early kings of Persia and of various usages and observances connected with that festival.

ابن کتابیست که دلیف کردهاند در کشف .Beg. حقیقت نوروز

Add. 23,580.

Foll. 378; 10 in. by 7; 23 lines, 4½ in. long; written in Nestalik, with 'Unvan, gilt headings, and gold-ruled margins; dated Ramazān, A.H. 891 (A.D. 1486).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

I. Foll. 2-155. رشف النصائح الايمانيم، Realistic libertian of Hadis, or sayings of Muhammad, with Sufi comments, translated from the Arabic of Shihāb ud-Dīn 'Umar B. Muhammad us-Suhravardī,

شهاب الدين عمر بن محمد السهروردي

This celebrated Sufi was born, A.H. 539, in Suhravard, near Zanjān, in Irak, and died in Baghdād, A.H. 632. See his life in Ibn Khallikān, de Slane's translation, vol. ii. p. 382, the Nafaḥāt ul-Uns, p. 544, and Majālis ul-Mūminīn, fol. 315. The Arabic work is mentioned, under the title of رشف , in the last two of the sources above quoted. Compare Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 465, who notices a Persian translation by Mu'in ud-Din Yazdī (see p. 168 a).

The translation is divided into fifteen Bābs and two Khātimahs. The present copy wants the preface and a portion of the first Bāb. The translator's name does not appear.

II. Foll. 156—378. بجمع البحرين, a Sufi allegory, in which man is represented as a kingdom, the Khalifah or sovereign of which is the spirit.

Author: Shams ud-Din Ibrāhim, Muhtasib of Abarķūh, المحتسب بابرتود

It is stated in the preface that the long contemplated work had been delayed by a journey which the author was compelled to take in A.H. 711, and by the loss of his books at sea. He subsequently proceeded to Tustar in the train of one of the late rulers of the land, and thence to the shrine of the Imām Zain ul-'Abidīn (in Medina), where he settled in the monastery of Shaikh Ṣadr ud-Dīn. There he wrote the present work in A.H. 714, in obedience to a behest conveyed to him in a dream by 'Alī.

It is divided into seven Kisms, each of which comprises five Bābs. A full table of contents is given at the end of the preface. The author inserts occasionally verses of his composition in which he takes the poetical surname of Muhtasib.

Add. 23,569.

Foll. 135; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{1}{2}$; 18 lines, $1\frac{7}{8}$ in. long; written in Naskhi, with three 'Unvans and gold-ruled margins; dated A.H. 1055— 1057 (A.D. 1645—1647).

[ROBERT TAYLOR.]

I. Foll. 1—46. The astronomical treatise of 'Ali Kūshi. See p. 458 a.

II. Foll. 46 b-56. Tashrih ul-Aflāk, by Bahā ud-Din 'Amili, in Arabic. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 622 b.

III. Foll. 56*b*-77. A treatise on the almanac by Nașîr ud-Dîn Țūsĩ. See above, p. 452 b.

IV. Foll. 78-103. A treatise on the astrolabe by the same. See p. 453 a.

V. Foll. 103 6-185. Khulāsat ul-Hisāb. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 622 6.

Add. 24,041.

Foll. 430; 8[‡] in. by 6; from 11 to 15

lines; written in Nestalik, early in the 19th century. [H. H. WILSON.]

I. Foll. 1—96. نيرنىڭ ظهور, an account of the mythology, castes, and sects of the Hindus.

بنام آن که او مقصود هر نام Beg.

The author, whose name does not appear, - states in the preface that he had written some years previously a shorter treatise on the same subject. The work is divided into seven chapters termed Jalvah, and subdivided into Furūghs.

Contents: 1. Creation, Brahma, fol. 5 b. 2. The four and twenty Avatārs, fol. 8 a. 3. The four castes, fol. 23 a. 4. Their ramifications, fol. 26 a. 5. Hindū doctrines; fol. 37 a. 6. Hindū faķīrs, fol. 46 a. 7. Hindū sects, fol. 53 b.

This last chapter, which is said to follow the same arrangement as the author's previous treatise, is divided into nine sections. The first contains an introduction. The six next following treat of the Vaishnavas, Shaivas, Shāktas, Nānakshāhīs, Jainas, and Vedantīs. The eighth contains a census of Benares compiled by the author A.D. 1800, fol. 81 b. The ninth enumerates the Hindū sciences and the standard works on each, fol. 86 b.

This is in all probability the work referred to by H. H. Wilson in his "Sketch of the religious sects of the Hindūs," p. 6, and ascribed by him to Sītal Sinh, Munshī of the Rājah of Benares. A similar work of the same author, Silsilah i Jogiyān, is noticed in the Mackenzie Collection, vol. ii. p. 143.

II. Foll. 97—180. The tale of 'Ain ul-Başar and Munīr ul-Mulk, in Hindustani.

III. Foll. 181—198. Chronological account of the kings of Dehli from Fīrūz Shāh, A.H. 633, to Aurangzīb, with the legends of their coins; written in January, A.D. 1809, for Mr. Foster. IV. Foll. 199-355. A Maşnavî on Tauhīd in Hindustani, eight lines in a page.

V. Foll. 356-410. An abstract of Indian history, without preface or author's name.

باب اول تمامی حقیقت سرزمین که این دیب را Beg.

It contains a short account of the cosmogony and divisions of the world according to the Hindūs, of the Ṣūbahs of India and their revenue, of the early kings of India and of the kings of Dehli from the Muslim conquest to Shāh 'Alam, A.H. 1204.

VI. Foll. 411-417. A list of the early kings of Persia, and of the sovereigns of Bengal.

VII. Foll. 419—429. Tabulated list of the sovereigns of Hindustan from Judhishtir to Shāh 'Alam.

Add. 25,016.

Foll. 134; 6 in. by 4; 11 lines, 2 in. long; lithographed in small Nestalik; dated Ramazān, A.H. 1248 (A.D. 1832).

I. Foll. 1—108. The Journal of the siege of Haidarābād, by Ni'mat Khān 'Ālī. See p. 268 a.

II. Foll. 109—132. Husn u 'Ishk, by the same. See p. 703 b.

The last two folios contain a eulogy on the author by the editor, Mīrzā Ḥamzah Māzandarānī.

Add. 25,493.

Foll. 138; 7 in. by 4; 15 lines, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik in two gold-ruled columns, with 'Unvān, probably in the 17th century. I. Foll. 2—58. Rauzat ul-Anvār, by Khwājū Kirmānī. See p. 621 a.

On fol. 12 there is a considerable gap, without any apparent break. It extends from the latter part of the prologue to the fourth Makālah, and corresponds to foll. 156—161 of Add. 7758. The last page is also wanting.

II. Foll. 59—132. Mazhar ul-Aşār, by Hāshimī. See p. 802 b.

Add. 25,791.

Foll. 111; $7\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 14 lines (3 in. long) in a page; written in a small and plain Nestalik, and dated (fol. 36 b) Muharram, A.H. 1208 (A.D. 1793).

[WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 2-36. An abridged recension of the Institutes of Timūr (Jos. White's edition, pp. 156-408), with the continuation.

II. Foll. 38-77. Two extracts from the Tārīkh i Nādirī (see p. 192), relating to Nādir Shāh's invasion in India and to his death, and corresponding to foll. 166-188 and 227-237 of Add. 6576.

III. Foll. 78—111. راجارلی, an account of the kings of Dehli from Judhishtir to Shāhjahān, giving the name and length of reign of each.

شنو ز ولي وفاي دنيا اي شاه Beg.

The author, who designates himself by the poetical surname Vali, is called in the subscription Banvālī Dās, Munshī of Dārā Shikūh, بنواليداس ^{المتخ}لص بولى منشى سلطان دارا. In other copies he is called Bhavānī Dās. A Maşnavī ascribed by Dr. Sprenger to Valī Rām, called Banvālī Dās, Oude Catalogue, p. 589, is probably also due to him.

Add. 25,792.

Foll. 202; $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 12 lines, $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik; dated Fathābād, Ṣafar, A.H. 1066 (A.D. 1656).

[WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 1—107. Zikr ul-Mulūk, by 'Abd ul-Haķķ Dihlavī. See p. 223 b.

II. Foll. 109—130. An extract relating to 'Alī, from the Manāķib Murtazavī of Mīr Ṣāliḥ (see p. 154 a). Rules for bloodletting. An account of the Hindū Jugs, or ages of the world. An anecdote of Abu 'Alī Ibn Sīnā. Account of Shaddād, the King of Yaman. Historical anecdotes relating to 'Imād ud-Daulah, 'Azud ud-Daulah, Māmūn, Shāh Shujā', Rashīd and the Barmakides. An account of the embassy sent by Mīrzā Shāh Rukh to China, A.H. 822; from Maāşir ul-Buldān, and other extracts.

III. Foll. 131—199. The Institutes of Timūr, fol. 131 a. The Designs and Enterprises, fol. 170 a. Continuation of the Institutes (Add. 26,191, foll. 326—347), slightly imperfect in the end, fol. 188 b.

Add. 25,823.

Foll. 105; 12 in. by 8; from 13 to 15 lines, 3½ in. long; written in Nestalik, for a Mr. Rigby, dated Sūrat, Jumāda II., A.H. 1231 (A.D. 1815). [WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 1—73. The Dīvān of Hilālī. See p. 656 a.

II. Foll. 74—105. A collection of Hindustani poems, including elegies on the death of Hasan and Husain, with a few Persian verses.

Add. 25,835.

Foll. 246; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; from 15 to 17 lines, about 4 in. long; written in Nestalik; apparently in India, about the close of the 18th century. [WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 4-60. انيس احسن, the tale of 'Akil, the carpenter's son, Prince Kais, and Princess Gītī-Afrūz.

Author: Ahsan Ullah, احسن الله

بعد از حمد و سیاس داوری که هفت ورق .Beg.

The author states at the end that he had written this tale in Shāhjahānābād during the reign of Aurangzīb. The date is enigmatically conveyed by the following line :

با انیس احسن و خوش قلب را از دست ده "With a fair and sweet mate let loose the heart," which, interpreted as a chronogram, probably means: "from the total formed by the words وخوش i.e. 1152, let go the heart, or the value of the middle letter, of دست, viz. 60." This would give A.H.1092.

II. Foll. 61—149. قصة شير مردان على مرتضى, the story of Shīr Mardān 'Alī Murtazā.

It comprises a series of fabulous narratives relating to the favourite hero of a Shī'ah legend, as follows :—'Alī's expedition against Zumrah the fire-worshipper, king of the Barbars, fol. 61. The story of Hanafiyyah Bānū, a daughter of the Kaiṣar of Rūm, captured by 'Alī, and of the son she bore him, Shāhzādah Muḥammad i Hanafiyyah, fol. 71. 'Alī's encounter with a dragon in the Maghrib, fol. 89. 'Alī's expedition against the infidels, in revenge of Amīr Hamzah's death, fol. 98, etc.

III. Foll. 150-246. The tales of a parrot (see p. 753 a), wanting a page at the beginning, and breaking off in the twenty-second tale.

Add. 25,843.

Foll. 215; 14 in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$; 29 lines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik; dated Akbarābād (Agra), A.H. 1082 (A.D. 1671).

[WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 2—72. Akhlāķ i Nāşirī, the ethics of Naşīr ud-Dīn Ṭūsī (see p. 441 b), with the earlier preface mentioned p. 442 a. The later preface has been added in the margin.

II. Foll. 73—180. The Rubā'is of Mullā Saḥābī (see p. 672 a), about five thousand in number, alphabetically arranged.

III. Foll. 181—215. Theological tracts by Manşūr (Ghiyāş ud-Dīn; see p. 826 a), Akā Husain Khānsārī, and Muhammad Bākir Dāmād (see p. 835 a), in Arabic.

Add. 25,856.

Foll. 308; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; from 11 to 15 lines a page; written by several hands, in Faizābād, Oude, about A.H. 1230 (A.D. 1815). [WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 1—53. برق لامع, a Hindustani Maşnavī, composed in refutation of سيف قاطع, a Sunni poem, A.H. 1231.

II. Foll. 54—109. صراط التجاة, a Shī'ah manual on the laws relating to ablution, prayer, and fasting, in nine Bābs.

Author: Muḥammad Ḥusain Ṭihrānī, محمد حسين طهراني

The author, a Shī'ah convert, wrote it in Mashhad by order of the great Mujtahid Sayyid 'Alī ut-Ṭahāṭabā'ī, as a popular abridgment of that learned man's Arabic treatise, designated as شرح مختصر نافع.

III. Foll. 110—184. صحيفة الابرار در بيان A work treating of Shiʿah traditions relating to 'Alī, and of some nice points of Shiʿah law.

Author: Aḥmad B. Muḥammad Riẓā B. احمد بن المسلمين المارندراني محمد رضا بن محمد باقر المازندراني الحمد لله الذي أكرمنا بالدين المشهور والعلم الماثور . Beg

The work, which consists of an introduction and eight chapters (Faşl), is dedicated to Navvāb Muḥammad Dārāb 'Alī Khān Bahādur (steward of the Begam of Oude from A.H. 1196 to A.H. 1230; see p. 310 a).

IV. Foll. 185—193. محمد باقر دساله جبر و تفويض ملا . Comments on a saying of Imām Rizā relating to free will and predestination, by Mullā Muḥammad Bāķir (see p. 20 a).

الحمد لله . . . اما بعد شیخ صدوق محمد بن . . Beg. بابویه قمی

V. Foll. 194—308. در بحر المناقب, a work treating of the merits and prerogatives of 'Alī.

Author: 'Alī B. Ibrāhīm, surnamed Darvīsh Burhān, درويش برهان

سپاس بی تیاس و ثنای بی منتها مر حضرت مبدع .Beg.

It is stated to have been abridged from an extensive Arabie work of the same author entitled بحر المناتب (see Bibliotheca Sprenger., No. 167). It is divided into an introduction and twelve Bābs.

Add. 25,860.

Foll. 173; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 16 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in a cursive character; dated Mednīpūr, Orissa, A.H. 1224 (A.D. 1809).

[WM. CURETON.]

VOL. II.

I. Foll. 1—41. منتخب النحو, a treatise on the rules of syntax applied to Persian, and illustrated by poetical quotations.

Author : Amīr Ḥaidar Ḥusainī Balgrāmī, امیر حیدر حسینی بلکرامی Beg. حمد فاعل اشیا حق جل و علا را بکدام نحو

This work was written, as stated in the preface, in A.H. 1214.

II. Foll. 42—89. منتخلب الصرف, a treatise on the formation of Arabic words used in Persian, by the same author.

Beg. برارباب تتبع محاورات السندم مختلفه هویداست. III. Foll. 90—111. قواعد فارسی a Persian grammar.

Author: Raushan 'Alī Anṣārī Jaunpūrī, روشن على انصارى جونپوري

بعد حمد حضرت افریدکار و نعت رسول .Beg.

Raushan 'Alī, known as the author of several treatises on arithmetic and grammar, and of an imitation of Harīrī's Maķāmāt, died as professor in the College of Fort William, Calcutta, about A.D. 1810. See Tārīkh i Farrukhābād, Or. 1718, fol. 177, and above, p. 311 b.

The work, which is founded on the Farhang i Rashīdī (see p. 500 b), is divided into a Mukaddimah, eleven Bābs, and a Khātimah. It has been printed in Calcutta, A.H. 1232 and 1249, and lithographed in Lucknow.

IV. Foll. 112—170. The prose works of Zuhūrī (see p. 741 b, artt. i.—v.), wanting the latter part of the Rukaʿāt.

Add. 25,866.

Foll. 111; 10³/₄ in. by 7; 18 lines, 4¹/₄ in. long; written in Nestalik, with four 'Unvans; dated Jumada I., A.H. 1229 (A.D. 1814). [WM. CURETON.]

857

3 I

Four prose works by Mīrzā Katīl, viz.: Letters from Persia, fol. 1. Shajarat ul-Amānī, fol. 19. Nahr ul-Faṣāḥat, fol. 31. Chār Sharbat, fol. 62. See p. 794 b, artt. i—iv.

Add. 25,871*.

Foll. 177; $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; written by several hands, apparently in India, in the 18th and 19th centuries. [WM. CURETON.]

I. Foll. 2—36. A treatise on astronomy by 'Alī Ķūshī. See p. 458 a.

II. Foll. 39—54. A short treatise on Arabic conjugation, called in the subscription ميزان عربى. See p. 523 b, Add. 5566.

III. Foll. 55—107; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1231 (A.D. 1816) رسالد بيلى, a treatise on Arabic flexion, translated from the English of (John) Baillie, Professor of Arabic in the College of Fort William.

للحمد لله رب العالمين . . . اما بعد اين رساله .Beg. ايست در صرف انتخاب شافيه وفصول اكبرى

IV. Foll. 109—157; dated Rabi' II., 24th year of Shāh 'Alam (A.H. 1196, A.D. 1782). Journal of the siege of Haidarābād, by Ni'mat Khān 'Alī. See p. 268 a.

V. Foll. 158-169. A portion of a collection of anecdotes in Arabie.

VI. Foll. 171-177. The Pand-nāmah of Sa'dī, imperfect at beginning and end.

Add. 26,173.

Foll. 68; 8¹/₄ in. by 3³/₄; 17 lines, 3 in. long, in a page; written in Nāskhi and cursive Indian Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.] A scrap-book containing prayers, and short poems in praise of Muḥammad, in Arabie, Persian and Hindustani.

Add. 26,237.

Foll. 215; 9 in. by 5; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik, in India; dated A.H 1192 and 1200 (A.D. 1778 and 1786.)

[WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—77. Dastūr ul-'Amal Āgahī.'-See p. 402 a.

II. Foll. 78—128. رساله مسالار جنگ, an account of Dehli, by Navvāb Dargāh Ķulī Khān Bahādur Sālār Jang Mūtaman ud-Daulah.

It was written, as stated in a short preamble, during the author's stay in the capital, whither he had followed Nizām ul-Mulk Aşafjāh. This probably happened in A.H. 1150, when the latter Amīr was called by Muḥammad Shāh to Dehli, and stayed there two months (see Ma'āşir ul-Umarā, fol. 567). Shaikh Ḥazīn, who came to India A.H. 1147, is mentioned by the author as one of the poets of Dehli; but there is no reference to the invasion of Nādir Shāh which took place in A.H. 1151.

Dargāh Kulī Khān, son of Khānadān Kulī Khān, traced his origin to the Būrbūr, a Turkish tribe fixed near Mashhad, but his forefathers had settled in India under Shāhjahān. Born in Sangmīr, Decean, A.H. 1122, he rose in the service of Nizām ul-Mulk Āṣaf Jāh, who kept him in constant attendance upon himself. He received from Ṣalābat Jang the title of Mūtaman ud-Daulah, and the Ṣūbahdārī of Aurangābād, and died A.H. 1180. See Ḥadīkat ul-ʿAlam, vol. ii. p. 283.

The author notices not only the sacred edifices and places of public resort, the festivals, and the tombs of the saints, but also the celebrated Shaikhs, poets, singers, and dancers, who lived at that time in Dehli. III. Foll. 129—176. دستور نظم, a treatise on Persian prosody.

Author: Sayyid Muḥammad B. Muḥammad Bāķir Mūsavī, poetically surnamed Vālih, سيد محمد بن محمد باقر موسوى مخخص بواله

برجسته مصرعی که از رنکینی و رسائی چون سرو .Beg

This elementary treatise, which the author wrote at the instance of some friends in A.H. 1140, is divided into a Mukaddimah, three Bābs, and a Khātimah. The metres are illustrated by numerous examples, among which are many verses of the author's composition.

IV. Foll. 177-215. نسخه آتشبازی, a treatise on pyrotechny.

Beg. حمد و سپاس بیجد مر خدائرا که نار را بر خلیل It is a compilation from the most approved works on the subject, divided into twenty chapters. Its approximate date may be inferred from a reference to a firework prepared for the Shab i Barāt of A.H. 1183.

Add. 26,243.

Foll. 69; 8½ in. by 6; from 15 to 17 lines, about 4 in. long; written in a cursive Indian character, apparently in the 18th century.

WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—11. The first part of the Journal of the siege of Haidarābād, by Ni'mat Khān 'Alī. See p. 268 a.

II. Foll. 12—68. نوايد عليشيرى, a commentary on some difficult verses in the first part of the Iskandar Nāmah of Nizāmī, by Muhyi ud-Din B. Nizām ud-Dīn; imperfect at the end.

میاس بیقیاس مردارای کونین را که میزان اشعار .Beg

The author, who was a disciple of Sayyid Ashraf Jahāngīr (see p. 412 a), compiled it A.H. 956, from the marginal notes of a writer designated as Shaikh Muhaddiş, and from other sources, by desire of his patron, Nașîr ud-Dîn Miyân 'Alî Shîr.

See Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 522.

Add. 26,267.

Foll. 41; 9¹/₄ in. by 7; 15 lines, 4²/₅ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, on paper water-marked 1806. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—37. Counsels of Nizām ul-Mulk (sec p. 446 a), wanting the last quarter of the work (Or. 256, foll. 71—93).

II. Foll. 37 b—41. Notice on the life of بیان احوال حضرت ,Maulānā Muḥammad Ķāẓī مولانا محمد قاض

This Shaikh, originally called Muhammad B. Burhān ud-Din, was a native of Samarkand, and became a disciple and Khalifah of the well-known chief of the Nakshabandī order, Khwājah 'Ubaid Ullah Ahrār (see p. 353 b). He is the author of the Silsilat ul-'Arifīn (see Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 607), in which he gave an account of his own life. Having left Bukhārā at the time of the Persian conquest, A.H. 916, he settled in Andajān, and died A.H. 921. See Tārīkh i Rashīdī (supra, p. 167 b), and Ţabakāt i Shāhjahānī, fol. 145.

The author of the notice, whose name does not appear, had received his information from the disciples of Muhammad Kāzī.

Add. 26,273.

Foll. 143; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, about the beginning of the 19th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—109. History of the Deccan from the rise of the Bahmanī dynasty to A.H. 1203.

برضهایر آگاهدلان بیدار مغز ظاهر و باهر است . Beg. برضهایر آگاهدلان بیدار مغز ظاهر و باهر است

This work, which has neither title nor preface, was written, as appears from a reference to the current year, fol. 15 a, in A.H. 1203. The substantial agreement of the chapter relating to the Marattas with the Bisāț ul-Ghanā'im of Lachhmī Narāyan Shafīķ (see p. 328 b) leads to the inference that it is due to the same author. It is probably a later edition or abridgment of the history of the Deccan which Lachhmī Narāyan is known to have written A.H. 1200, a date expressed by its title تنبيق شكرف (see p. 238 b).

Contents:—Introduction treating of the wealth of the Deccan, the manners and character of its inhabitants, and their mode of warfare, fol. 2 a. The Bahmanis from their origin to the rise of Amir Barid, fol. 3 a. The kings of Bijānagar from the accession of Tamrāj to the death of his son Rāmrāj, in A.H. 972, fol. 6 a. The 'Adilshāhīs of Bijāpūr down to the capture of Sikandar, A.H. 1097, fol. 15 b. The Nizāmshāhīs of Daulatābād down to their extinction, A.H. 1040, fol. 43 b. The Kutubshähis down to the capture of Golconda, A.H. 1098, fol. 64 b. Some chiefs who attained a short lived independency, viz. Bahādur Gilāni, in Kokan, Dastūr Dinār, an Abyssinian eunuch, in Hasanābād and Sāghar, Fathullah 'Imād ul-Mulk in Berār, Amīr Kāsim Barīd in Bedar, fol. 67 a. Asafjah Nizām ul-Mulk, and his successors, the Nizāms of Haidarābād, down to the peace made by Nizām 'Alī with Nānā Pharnavīs, fol. 68 b. The Marattas from the rise of the Bhoslah family to the battle of Pānīpat, A.H. 1161, which is described at great length, fol. 74 a. Here the copy breaks off, the death of Jankoji being the last event recorded.

II. Foll. 110—136. رساله نانك شاه, an account of the Sikhs from their origin to A.H. 1178.

Author: Budh Singh, of the Khatri easte, surnamed Arūrah, ابدة سنكه قوم كهتري عرف ارورة

Beg. كار پردازان ايجاد و تكوين كه عبارت از قضا The author, who describes himself as a servant of the Dehli Court and an inhabitant of Lahore, states in the preface that he had written this work by desire of Major James Mordaunt, موان معين الدوله نصير الملك ميجر جمس, who had arielp معين الدوله نصير الملك ميجر جمس, who had arrived at the capital A.H. 1197, and to whose service he was attached. He adds that he had been assisted in its composition by Lālah 'Ajā'ib Singh, of the Sūraj tribe, a service aga more as a service at the singht of the sural tribe, a service as a service as a service be as a stached. He adds that he

The narrative, beginning with a short notice on Nānak and a meagre enumeration of his successors, becomes fuller for the time of Gūrū Gobind, and still more so for the subsequent period, in which transactions are recorded year by year, from A.H. 1131 to 1178. The last event mentioned is the attack of the Sikhs on Ahmad Shāh Durrānī, during his retreat across the Satlaj, A.H. 1178. The author adds that from that time to the date of composition the Sikhs had remained in undisturbed possession of their territories.

III. Foll. 137—143. Fragment of a chronicle written in the reign of Farrukhsiyar. It contains an account of that emperor's accession in Dehli, and of the expedition of 'Abd uş-Ṣamad Khān, Ṣūbadār of Lahore, against the Sikhs, which ended in the capture and execution of their chief Bandā (A.H. 1126. See Khāfī Khān, vol. ii. p. 761).

جلوس میمنت :It begins with the heading مانوس محمد فرخ سیر پادشاه غازی بر تخت فرمانروای در شاه جهان ابساد و کستن محمد معز الدین و ذو الفقار خان

The author, whose name does not appear, states incidentally, fol. 141 b, that he served at that time as Nā'ib under 'Arif Beg Khān, governor of Lahore.

On the fly-leaf of the MS. is written, "From Gen. Malcolm to Wm. Erskine, Nov. 1811."

Add. 26,275.

Foll. 49; 8 in. by 6; from 10 to 20 lines; written by several hands, apparently in the 19th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 1-13. A short account of the Marattas from the rise of Sīvajī to the death of Narāyan (A.H. 1188).

Author: Munshi Husām ud-Din, منشى حسام الدين

اول کسی که بر سر قوم مرهته نامور و مشهور .

As the son of Narāyan, Mādhū Rāo, who was born A.H. 1188 (see Grant Duff, vol. ii., p. 264), is spoken of as a child of two years; the work must have been written A.H. 1190. It concludes with a description of the Marattah country, its produce, trade, and customs.

II. Foll. 14-25. Extract from the Matla' us-Sa'dain (see p. 181 b), relating to the embassies sent by Shāhrukh to China. See Journal des Savants, vol. xiv. p. 308.

III. Foll. 26—31. بغية الباحث عن جمل , a versified treatise on the law of inheritance, in Arabic.

IV. Foll. 33—35. An account of the incursions of the Vahhābīs into Hijāz and Yaman, A.H. 1217 and 1218, by Munshī Hājī 'Abd Ullah Makkī.

V. Foll. 35-44. Preface of the Divan of Hafiz, with some Kasidahs.

VI. Foll. 45-49. A fragment of Favā'id Ziyā'iyyah. See the Arabic Catalogue, p. 232 b.

Add. 26,292.

Foll. 114; 8 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in cursive Shikastah-āmīz, apparently in India, in the 17th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.] I. Foll. 2—86. Nuzhat ul-Arvāķ. See p. 40 a. II. Foll. 86 b—94. Risālah i Khwājah 'Abd Ullah Anṣārī. See p. 35 a.

III. Foll. 94 b—114. The Lavā'ih of Jāmī. See p. 44 a.

Add. 26,293.

Foll. 105; 7 in. by 4; 14 lines, $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Shikastah-āmīz; dated Sha'bān, A.H. 1079 (A.D. 1669).

[WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2-86. سراج المنير, a collection of moral anecdotes.

ستایش کریمی را که حلیه خلتش زیوریست . زیبنده

The author describes in a fanciful prologue, evidently imitated from Sa'di's Gulistān, an enchanted garden in which he culled these flowers for his friends. The work is written in ornate prose, interspersed with verses, and is divided into twenty sections called Lam'ah, a table of which is given in the preface. They treat of good manners, modesty, meekness, justice, liberality, patience, and other virtues, or of passions and vices, each of which is illustrated by the precepts of Muhammad and by anecdotes, chiefly relating to prophets and saints.

The author gives his name at the beginning of the epilogue, fol. 85 b. Although it has been purposely obliterated in the present MS., it appears, from the faint lines still visible, to be Ibn Shams ud-Dīn Muḥammad Sharīf الدين محمد شريف, as in two other copies noticed in Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. ii. p. 58, and vol. iv. p. 498.

Before the epilogue is found the statement that "the book was finished" at the end of Rabi' I., A.H. 1030. Whether that date refers to the composition of the work, or to the transcription of some earlier copy, remains doubtful: the fact that the second of the MSS. above mentioned is said to bear a still earlier date, viz. A.H. 1024, favours the latter alternative.

II. Foll. 88—103; about 30 lines in a page, written diagonally, in minute Nestalik.

The preface of Nauras, Gulzār i Ibrāhīm, and Khwān i Khalīl, by Zuhūrī (see p. 741 b, I.—III.), and a letter to Shaikh Abul-Fazl by the same.

Add. 26,294.

Foll. 124; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 13 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written partly in Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century, partly (foll. 94—124) in cursive Shikastah-āmīz, in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—18. Notice on the life and miracles of Khwājah 'Abd ul-Khālik Ghujdavānī, عبد ^{ال}خالق ^غجدواني

This eelebrated saint, son of Shaikh 'Abd ul-Jamīl of Malāțiyah, and one of the four Khalīfahs of Khwājah Yūsuf Hamadānī, who died A:H. 535 (Nafaḥāt, p. 428), was born in Ghujdavān, near Bukhārā, and died there, according to the Riyāz ul-Auliyā, fol. 62, A.H. 575, leaving a book of precepts, Vaṣiyyat Nāmah, to his disciples (Haj. Khal., vol. vi. p. 444). See Nafaḥāt ul-Uns, p. 431, Rashaḥāt, foll. 6 and 12, and Haft Iķlīm, fol. 582.

II. Foll. 19—50. Sayings of Khwājah Bahā ud-Dīn Naķshaband, collected by Muhammad B. Muhammad Hāfizī Bukhārī.

The subject of the notice, the founder of the order called after him Nakshabandī, was born in Bukhārā A.H. 728, and died A.H. 791. See Nafahāt, p. 439, Rashahāt, fol. 31, and Habīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz. 3, p. 87.

The work was written, as stated in the preface, at the request of 'Alā ud-Dīn Muhammad Bukhārī, surnamed 'Aṭṭār, one of the leading disciples of Bahā ud-Dīn (who died A.H. 802; See Nafaḥāt, p. 445).

The writer of the notice, better known as Khwājah Muḥammad Pārsā, an eminent follower of the same master, died in Medina, A.H. 822. See Nafaḥāt, p. 448, Rashaḥāt, fol. 33, and Ḥabīb us-Siyar, vol. iii., Juz 3, p. 142.

The work, which is endorsed مقامات خواجه مقامات خواجه is described in Krafft's Catalogue, p. 113, under the title رسالة القدسيد النقشبنديه. Compare Stewart's Catalogue, p. 28.

III. Foll. 51—71. Sayings and miracles of Khwājah 'Alā ud-Dīn Bukhārī ('Aṭṭār; see the preceding art.), imperfect at the end.

نقل كردنل خواجه علام لخق والدين قدس سرة .Beg

IV. Foll. 72—76. Comments on a Rubā'ī of Abu Sa'īd B. Abil-Khair (see p. 738 b), beginning حورا بنظاره منارم صف زد, and supposed to possess a healing virtue.

للحمد لله فياض لحكم و المواهب

V. Foll. 77-78. Observations of Jāmī on the hidden meanings of the Kalimah, or Creed.

Beg.

Beg.

لا اله لاله ایست از باغ هدایت

VI. Foll. 79-86. Teachings of Khwājah 'Abd ush-Shahīd فوايد حضرت خواجه عبد الشهيد on the rules and observances of religious life.

ای درویش اکر همت و قوت زانت هست . Beg.

VII. Foll. 87—93. Comments on this Hadīş, لا يسعنى ارضى ولا سمائى ولكن يسعنى قلب by Farīd Mas'ūd Abu Bakr 'Umar , عبدي الموس Ṣalāḥ Bukhārī.

الحمد لله رب العالمين ميكويد درويش Beg. ضعيف فريد مسعود

VIII. Foll. 94-96. Explanation of Mu-

این کان ربنا hammad's answer to the question, این کان ربنا قبل ان یخلق

ای پاک زحین ومبرا ز مکان

Beg.

IX. Foll. 97—100. Jāmī's comments on a mystic couplet of Amīr Khusrau, beginning:

X. Foll. 102-104. Another recension of art. v.

XI. Foll. 105—112. Sufi notes of Khwājah Muḥammad Pārsā (see art. ii.) found in the margins of some of his books.

The title للاشيه القدسية is found in the subscription.

XII. Foll. 113—116. A tract on the road leading to communion with God, رساله، , by Jāmī.

سر رشته دولت ای برادر بکف آر Beg.

XIII. Foll. 117—124. A tract in prose and verse, by Jāmī, on the mystic meaning of the plaintive flute mentioned in the first line of the Maşnavī.

عشق جزنای وما جزنی نه ایم .Beg

Add. 26,295.

Foll. 128; 7 in. by 4[‡]; 17 lines, 2[‡] in. long; written in Naskhi, with two 'Unväns and gold-ruled margins, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2-51. مرج العرين و جامع الطريقين, a treatise showing that Sufism may be brought into harmony with orthodoxy.

Author: 'Abd ul-Hakk B. Saif ud-Din Dihlavî (see p. 14 a).

II. Foll. 52-86. تفسير آية النور, comments of the same upon the Coranie verse الله نور (Sur. xxiv., v. 35).

الحمد لله الذي نور السموات والارض بنورة .Beg.

It is an enlarged edition of a previous tract of the author, based upon Ghazālī's (Haj. Khal., vol. v. p. 558).

III. Foll. 86—95. A treatise by the same on the practice observed by Muhammad with regard to dress, رساله مختصر در بیان آداب لباس حضرت سید البشر

Beg. بعد حمد و ستایش الهی و پس نعت و تحیت . The author refers occasionally to his Por

The author refers occasionally to his Persian translation of the مشكوة المصابيح (see p. 14 a).

IV. Foll. 97—128. A description of the personal appearance of Muhammad حليه جليه جليه, by the same.

Beg. بسم الله والحمد لله على جودة ونواله والصلوة It is extracted from the work entitled , which the author had just eompleted. The Madārij has been printed in Lucknow, A.H. 1283.

Add. 26,296.

Foll. 99; 7 in. by $4\frac{1}{2}$; 9 and 13 lines, about 3 in. long; written in Shikastah-āmīz, and Nestalik, apparently in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2-17. اخلاق النبى, a tract on the character of Muḥammad, without author's name.

II. Foll. 19—99. A new recension of the Fașl ul-Khițāb, in which the Arabic texts are translated into Persian.

سپاس بي اندازة آفريد کاري را که محمدرا صلي . الله عليه بهترين پيغامبران The author of the original work, who is not named by the translator, is Khwājah Muḥammad Pārsā, who has been already mentioned, p. 862 b. The Faşl ul-Khiṭāb contains an account of the lives of the twelve Imāms, based upon the most authentic Sunni records, to the exclusion of Shī'ah traditions, which are rejected as arrant heresies. Its contents have been stated in the Jahrbücher, vol. 84, Anzeigeblatt, p. 37, and in the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 421. Compare Rauzat ush-Shuhadā, fol. 123, Haj. Khal., vol. iv. p. 422, Stewart's Catalogue, p. 29, and the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 215.

The date of the present recension, A.H. 1010, is expressed by the versified chronogram :

Add. 26,297.

Foll. 19; $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; 12 and 16 lines; written in Naskhi, in the 18th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—14. A metaphysical tract on the various degrees of existence, بیان مراتب, ascribed in the endorsement to Mīr Sayyid Sharīf (see p. 522 a).

بدان وفقك الله تعالى وايانا كه ^{اص}حاب .Beg. بحث و نظر

II. Foll. 15—19. A short treatise on Physiognomy, قيانة

Author: Muhazzib ud-Din Ahmad B. 'Abd ur-Rizā, مهذب الدين احمد بن عبد الرضا وبعد فيقول لجانى الراجى عفو ربه الغفور . Beg.

Add. 26,299.

Foll. 116; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$; 17 lines, $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. long; written in cursive Nestalik, in India, A.H. 1159 (A.D. 1746). [WM. ERSKINE.] I. Foll. 1–84. Favātiķ i Maibudī. Sce p. 19 b.

II. Foll. 85—95. A tract on the soul.
 Beg. اما بعد كلام سيد الانام كر يا على اذا تقرب
 الناس الى خالقهم

The author, whose name does not appear, states the opinions of various schools, such as the Ash'arīs, Mu'tazilahs, Sufis, the Greek philosophers, etc., as to the nature of the human soul.

العقيدة الاسلامية .III. Foll. 105 6–111 8. الكلامية

A rational demonstration of the Sunni Creed, in Arabic, by 'Abd ul-Hamīd B. Zakariyyā B. Muḥammad ul-Kūfī.

The rest of the volume contains short notes and extracts on religious and metaphysical subjects.

Add. 26,301.

Foll. 30; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 7; 11 lines, about $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the early part of the 19th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

I. Foll. 2—14. An account of some natural curiosities in the Maghrib, Spain, and other countries, translated from the Arabic of Sayyid 'Abd ul-Vahhāb.

منکه سید عبد الوهاب باشنده دیار عرب ام .Beg

It is stated that 'Abd ul-Vahhāb had written it at the request of his friend, Hāj Muḥammad Ibrāhīm Parkār. The translator says at the end that he had received it from the author.

It is endorsed نسخدء اخبارات نادردء اقليم مغرب and described on the fly-leaf by Mr. Erskine as "written originally in Arabic by Syud Abdul Wahab of Bushire, about A.D. 1803."

II. Foll. 15-23. A sketch of the political situation of Turkey, Arabia, Berbera, and the Somali coast, about A.D. 1803.

از اخبار کوبان بلاد روم چنان بظهور پیوسته Beg.

The author, who does not give his name, had visited Medina under the Vahhābī rule. The tract, which appears to have been written in Mocha, is endorsed نسخه احوالات عجيبه

بلاد روم

III. Foll. 24—30. The Vahhābī creed, عقيدة وهابى, apparently translated from the Arabic.

On the fly-leaf is written in Mr. Erskine's hand: "The above three tracts were translated into Persian by Kazee Shahaboodeen Muhuree of Bombay."

Add. 26,303.

Foll. 49; $12\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$; 15 and 11 lines; written in Nestalik, the first part, foll. 1—37, dated Sūrat, A.H. 1257 (A.D. 1841), the second A.H. 1219 (A.D. 1804).

[WM. ERSKINE.] I. Foll. 1-30. اخلاق ظهيريه, a treatise on ethics and politics.

سیاس و ستایش مر خدایرا کر بقدرت Beg. The author is named in the present MS. Fath Ullah B. Ahmad B. Muhammad Shirazi, and in another copy noticed in Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. iii. p. 493, Fath Ullah B. Ahmad B. Mahmud Shahristani, called Sabzavari. He says in his preface that the two best works on ethics, viz. the Akhlāk i Nāsirī (see p. 441 b), and the Akhläk i Sultani, written in India for Sultan Muhammad Junah (A.H. 725-752; see p. 73 a), had from their prolixity fallen with the lapse of time into neglect. The present treatise, abridged from those two works, is dedicated to Zahir ud-Din Amir Ibrahim Shah, whose enlightened rule is said to have given peace and security to the people of Yazd.

No notice of that prince has been found. The work is apparently earlier than the Akhlāķ i Jalālī and the Akhlāķ i Muḥsinī (see pp. 442, 443), both written at the close of the ninth century of the Hijrah. Contents :—Mukaddimah. Classification of the sciences, translated from Abū 'Alī Ibn Sīnā, fol. 2 b. Makālah 1. Ethics proper, fol. 7 α . Makālah 11. Duties of man towards his family and fellow men, fol. 10 b. Makālah 11. Duties of rulers, fol. 17 b.

II. Foll. 31—37. Risālah i Khwājah 'Abd Ullah Anṣārī. See p. 35 a.

III. Foll. 38–49. The moral poem known as Pand Nāmah i Sa'dī.

This poem, which contains in its last line the name of Sa'dī, is of doubtful authenticity: it is not found in the Kulliyāt of that poet. It is ascribed, however, to Sa'dī in the Tārīkh i Muḥammadī (see p. 84 a), a work written A.H. 842, fol. 134, and has been included in the Calcutta edition of the Kulliyāt. An English translation has been published in Calcutta, 1788. A French version has been given by G. de Tassy in his Exposition de la foi musulmane, Paris, 1822. The text has been edited with a Latin version by G. Geitlin, Helsingfors, 1835.

Add. 26,318.

Miscellaneous Oriental papers, written about the beginning of the 19th century.

WM. ERSKINE.]

The following are Persian :---

A. Two sheets, $17\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 12. A table of the Dīvān of Hūfiz, made, as stated in Mr. Erskine's Catalogue, on the copy kept at the poet's tomb, and giving the first line of each Ghazal.

B. Three leaves, 8 in. by 6, 12 lines. A panegyric on a Mr. Skene اسكين, by Ṣafdar 'Alī Shāh Munsif (see p. 725 a).

C. A single leaf, 19 in. by $8\frac{1}{4}$, with flowery designs in gold and silver. Application of a musician called Pirt'hāshankar پرتهاشنکر to the governor of Sūrat for permission to perform in his presence.

D. A single leaf, 13 in. by 8¹/₄. Letter of a Persian official to a Turkish Vazīr, acknowledging the receipt of a letter through Ahmad Chalabi, and informing him of the latter's gracious reception by the Shāh. It bears a stamp with the name 'Abd ul-Vahhāb ul-Mūsavī.

Add. 26,319.

Foll. 30; 9 in. by 5³/₄. [WM. ERSKINE.] I. Foll. 1—4. A vocabulary of familiar words and phrases in Lakī , a Kurdish dialect, with the Persian equivalents.

هات آمد هاتکه آمدداست تی آیت می آید .Beg.

II. Foll. 5—7. A similar vocabulary of the Kurdish dialect of Ardalān, كردى سند اردلاني

درد آمد هاتود آمدداست دیئی می آید Beg.

It appears from a short preamble, dated Bushire بوشهر, April 12, 1811, that both the above vocabularies were compiled by Muhammad Husain Khān for General Sir John Malcolm.

III. Foll. 9, 10. A short English-Kurdish vocabulary, containing a few common words of the latter language in the Roman character.

IV. Foll. 11—16. "A Glossary of Turkī and other uncommon words in the Memoirs of Baber," giving the words in the order in which they occur in the text, with their Persian equivalents.

V. Foll. 18—30. جام جهان نمای, a metaphysical tract on the various degrees of existence or self-consciousness مراتب وجود, with two circular diagrams; without author's name. Beg. حمد بیجد و شکر بسیعد سنرای ذاتی که وحدتش . This copy is dated Rajab, A.H. 1141 (A.D. 1729).

Add. 26,320.

Foll. 22; $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $4\frac{1}{4}$; about 12 lines; written in rude Naskhi and Nestalik, apparently in India, in the 18th century.

[WM. ERSKINE.]

A scrap-book containing invocations to Muhammad, and poems in his praise, in Arabic, Persian, and Hindustani.

Add. 26,322.

Miscellancous Oriental papers collected by Cl. J. Rich in Baghdad, early in the 19th century. [WM. ERSKINE.]

The following contain Persian texts:-

I. Specimens of penmanship in various characters, with dates ranging from A.H. 1098 to 1229, on 31 leaves of various sizes.

III. Forms of official letters, dated Baghdad, A.H. 1213 (A.D. 1798); endorsed by Mr. Rich: "The writing of Mirza Reza, Persian secretary to the Pasha of Baghdad. The character is Teressul."

V. A Kasīdah in praise of Mr. Rich, by Sayyid Kātib.

VIII. A circular table of the musical moods, with some Persian verses relating to the subject.

Add. 27,259.

Foll. 544; 11 in. by 7; 27 lines, 2 in. long, with 42 lines in the margins; written in a minute and neat Nestalik, with eleven highly finished 'Unvāns and gilt headings; dated Zulhijjah, A.H. 821 (A.D. 1419).

[Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

I. The Khamsah, or five poems, of Nizāmī (see p. 564), viz. :--

1. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 1. The date of composition, A.H. 559, is found in the following line, fol. 44b:

رحلت پیغمبر تا این زمان یانصد و پنجاد و نه افزون ازان

The first page has been supplied by a later hand.

 2. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 46. Dated A.H.
 576 (see fol. 160 a), as noticed above, p. 566 b.

3. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 162. The date of composition, A.H. 584, is found on fol. 170 b.

4. Haft Paikar, fol. 248. The poem is dated, as above, p. 567 a, A.H. 593 (see fol. 343 b). The name of the king to whom it is dedicated is written, fol. 253 b, Arslān, يادشاه ارسلان كشور كير

5. Iskandar Nāmah. First part with the heading شرف نامه اسکندری, fol. 345. Second part with the heading شرف نامه اسکندری, fol. 476. In the latter both prologue and epilogue are addressed to Nuşrat ud-Din, and the date of composition, A.H. 592, is found in the following lines, fol. 544 b:

The record of Nizāmī's death mentioned p. 564 b is not found in this copy.

The margins contain the following :---

II. The Khamsah, or five poems, of Amīr Khusrau (see p. 611 a), viz., Maţla' ul-Anvār (wanting the first page), fol. 2 a. Shīrīn ū Khusrau, fol. 66 b. Majnūn u Lailā, fol. 165 b. Hasht Bihisht, fol. 228 b. A'inah i Sikandarī, fol. 310 b.

III. کل و نوروز, the love-adventures of prince Naurūz and princess Gul, in Maşnavī rhyme, by Jalāl جلال, fol. 416 b.

Jalāl ud-Dīn Aḥmad, commonly called Jalāl Ṭabīb, is described in a contemporary work, Or. 165, fol. 107 (see p. 873 a), as a skilled physician and elegant writer, who left, besides the present poem, treatises on Arabic and Persian prosody, a work entitled Nuzhat ul-Arvāḥ, and an extensive Dīvān. He was much in favour with the princes of the Muzaffar dynasty, Shāh Maḥmūd and Shāh Shujā', and died, according to Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, A.H. 795. See Daulatshāh, V. 11, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 315, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 109.

The poem, the subject of which is stated in the prologue to be a story of the author's invention, is dedicated to a prince called in the text Ghiyāş ud-Dīn, and in the heading Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Kaikhusrau. The date of composition, A.H. 734, is stated at the end. fol. 44S a:

ربيع الاول و فصل بهارست ز هجرت هفصد و مسیه و چهارست

Ghiyāş ud-Dīn Kaikhusrau, son of Sharaf ud-Dīn Maḥmūd Shāh Injū, held some provincial government under his father. He established himself in Shīrāz A.H. 735, but was overpowered and thrown into prison by his brother Jalāl ud-Dīn Mas'ūd Shāh A.H. 738. See Shīrāz Nāmah, fol. 89.

A copy is noticed in the Upsala Catalogue, p. 103.

IV. Gul u Naurūz, by Khwājū (see p. 622 a), fol. 449 b. It wants the latter part, corresponding to foll. 103—117 of Add. 7758.

تورانشاد : Copyist

On the first page of the MS. is a note dated A.H. 1225, stating that it was then the property of an Amīr of the Ķāchār family, Muhammad Hasan Khān, Ishik-Aķāsī-Bāshī.

Add. 27,261.

Foll. 546; 7¹/₄ in. by 5; 25 lines, 3 in. long, and about 60 in the margins; written in minute Naskhi and Nestalik, and richly ornamented with 'Unvāns, gilt headings, illuminated borders, twenty-one whole-page miniatures, and some coloured drawings of smaller size, the whole of the finest work; dated from Jumāda I., A.H. 813 (fol. 110 b) to Jumāda II., A.H. 814 (A.D. 1410—1411). [Sir JOHN MALCOLM.]

This curious volume, which from its compactness and the great variety of its contents may be called a pocket-library, was written for a grandson of Tīmūr, Jalāl ud-Dīn Iskandar B. 'Umar Shaikh, who was at that time ruling over the province of Fārs as a vassal of his uncle Shāhrukh, and who, having rebelled against his suzerain, was vanquished and put to death in A.H. 817.

The following inscription, written in the Sulşī and Kūfī characters, and enclosed in a rich border, at the beginning of the volume, contains the name and titles of its princely owner : الاعدم والحام والحام والحام الاعدل الارضين الاكرم سلطان سلاطين العرب والعجم ظل الله في الارضين قهرمان الماء والطين المواثق بالملك الاكبر جلال الدنيا والدين اسكندر خلد الله ملكة الهم اعز الاسلام بدوام دولته وارفع اعلامه بخلود ملكه وابد على رؤس الانام ظل رافته وعلى صفحات الايام رسوم معدلته

The first portion of the volume was written by Muḥammad ul-Ḥalvā'ī, who calls himself, from the name of his royal patron, al-Jalālī ul-Iskandarī, and the latter portion, foll. 372 -542, by Nāsir ul-Kātib.

A page of the MS., fol. 340 b, has been reproduced by photography in the Oriental Series of the Palæographical Society, No. 49.

The contents are as follows:

I. The Khamsah, or five poems, of Nizāmī, viz., 1. Makhzan ul-Asrār, fol. 3.—2. Khusrau u Shīrīn, fol. 28.—3. Lailā u Majnūn, fol. 90.-4. Haft Paikar, fol. 138. The king for whom the poem was written (see p. 567 a) is thus designated, fol. 141 a:

> شاہ کرب ارسلان کشور کیر بہ از ارب ارسلان بتاج و سریر نسل افسنقری موید ازو اب و جد با کمال انجد ازو

5. Iskandar Nāmah. Part I., headed شرف, fol. 190. Part II., with the heading, نامد اسكندرى, fol. 259. The prologue of the latter contains the dedication to the king of Mauşil, 'Izz ud-Dīn Abul-Fath Mas'ūd, which has been noticed p. 569 a. Towards the end of the same part there is a lacune corresponding to pp. 174—187 of the Calcutta edition. The next leaf, fol. 294 a, contains the last lines of an epilogue addressed to the same king Mas'ūd.

II. Foll. 294b—301. Three episodes from the Shāhnāmah of Firdūsī. They relate to Siyāvush and Sūdābah, Bīzhan and Manīzhah, and Bīzhan's rescue from the well by Rustam. See Macan's edition, pp. 396—399, 755—760, and 795—799. To the above is subjoined, without any apparent break, an extract from the Humāi Humāyūn of Khwājū (see p. 620 b), in which it is related how Humāi slew the demon Rand and released Parīzād from captivity. See Add. 18,113, foll. 16, 17.

III. Foll. 301 b—309. Kaşīdahs in praise of Muḥammad and the Imāms, by the following poets:—Anvarī (see p. 554 a). Sūzanī (died A.H. 569; see Daulatshāh, ii. 10, and Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 16). Sharaf ud-Dīn Shafrūh (died about A.H. 600; see Daulatshāh, iii. 6, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 17). Fakhr ud-Dīn 'Irāķī (see p. 593 b). Nāşir Bajja'ī (of Bajjah, near Rāmjird, Fārs. He died A.H. 715; sec the Oude Catalogue, pp. 17, 85, Guzīdah, fol. 243, and Haft Iķlīm, fol. 96). Kisā'ī (he was born in Marv, A.H 391, and addressed a poem to Sultan Maḥmūd Ghaznavī; see Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 374, Haft Iķlīm, fol. 221, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 3). Hamzah Kūchak. Futūhī (of Marv, a contemporary of Adīb Ṣābir and Anvarī; see Haft Iķlīm, fol. 224, and the Oude Catalogue, p. 4).

Kaşīdahs displaying artifices of composition, by Rashīd ud-Dīn Vaţvāţ (see p. 553 a) and Shihāb ud-Dīn. Tarjī's by Fakhr ud-Dīn 'Irāķī (see p. 593 b).

IV. Foll. 309 b-313. مفاتيح الكلام في مدايج . A Kaşîdah ingeniously contrived so as to offer examples of all the Persian metres.

قوام Author: Kivām ud-Din Zul-Faķār, الدين ذو الفقار

چمن شد از کل صد برك تازة دلبروار . Beg.

This poet, whose proper name was Sayyid Kivām ud-Dīn Ḥusain B. Ṣadr ud-Dīn 'Alī, left his native country Shīrvān for Irak, and, having been recommended by the Vazīr Muḥammad Māsarī to the Atābak of Lur, Yūsuf Shāh, attached himself to that prince, in whose praise he composed many poems. He died A.H. 689. See the Atashkadah, fol. 26, and Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 17. Yūsuf Shāh, who ruled as a vassal of the Moghuls, lived under Abāķā Khān and Arghūn, and died, according to the Guzīdah, A.H. 680.

An earlier date is assigned to Zul-Fakār by Daulatshāh, iii. 2, and by the author of the Haft Iklim, fol. 538, according to whom he lived under Sultan Muhammad B. Tukush Khwārazmshāh (A.H. 596—617), and wrote a poetical history of his reign in the measure of the Shāhnāmah.

The Kaşīdah is addressed to the Vazīr Fakhr ud-Dīn Muḥammad ul-Māsarī, and forms an aerostich containing his names and titles. It is quoted by Daulatshāh as the prototype of the artificial Ķaşīdah of Salmān Sāvajī.

V. Foll. 314-340. Select Ghazals, about 200 in number, by various poets, among whom the most frequently quoted are the following:-Sa'dī. Fakhr ud-Dīn Irāķī (sce p. 593 b). Nāsir Bukhārī (p. 735 a). Nizārī Kuhistāni (died, according to Taki, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, A.H. 720. He is stated in the Riyāz, fol. 452, to have been a friend of Sa'dī; see also Daulatshāh, iv. 14, and Haft lklīm, fol. 335. His Kulliyāt are noticed in the St. Petersburg Catalogue, p. 365). Salmān (p. 624 b). 'Imād Fakīh (a holy Shaikh who lived in Kirman in the time of Shah Shuja', and died, according to Daulatshah, v. 1, and Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 298, A.H. 773. See the Oude Catalogue, p. 436, and Haft Asman, p. 77). Amîr Kirmânî, who uses Mir for his takhallus (according to Daulatshāh, iv. 20, a contemporary of Khwājū). Sayyid Ni'mat Ullah (p. 634 b). Sayyid Jalal (son of 'Azud ud-Din, of Yazd, Vazir of Muhammad Muzaffar. See Daulatshäh, v. 9. He died, according to Taki, Oude Catalogue, p. 18, A.H. 793). Hāfiz. Khusrau Dihlavi (p. 609 a). Hasan Dihlavi (p. 618 a).

VI. Foll. 340 b-342. A manual of astro-مختصر در علم هیأت VI. Foll. 340 b-342.

Author : Jamshid B. Mas'ud B. Mahmud, جمشيد بن مسعود بن محمود , surnamed Ghiyāş, الملقب بغياث

Beg.

للحمد لله الذى خلق السموات والارضين

The author states in a short preamble that he had written this treatise by order of Sultan Jalāl ud-Dunyā vad-Dīn Amīrzādah Iskandar Bahādur Khān (the royal owner of the MS.).

He was subsequently employed by Mīrzā Ulugh Beg, as has been above stated, p. 456, in the astronomical observations commenced at Samarkand A.H.823, and died shortly after.

The work is divided into twenty Bābs; but the present copy breaks off in the sixth. Six leaves, which probably completed it, are lost.

VII. Foll. 343-344. مختصر در علم اقليدس, elements of geometry, consisting of a few theorems from the first book of Euclid, with diagrams.

Beg. اما بعد این رساله مشتمل است بر جند شکل VIII. Foll. 344, 345. رساله کبریت احمر an alehemical treatise, written for Sultan Jalāl ud-Dīn Iskandar.

سپاس بی قیاس صانعی را که خاك درکاه او .Beg

IX. Foll. 345 b-348. نقه درمذهب شيعه a manual of Shī'ah law, according to Imām 'Alī B. Mūsā ar-Rizā.

اما بعداین کلمة چند است در شرح کلمات مرتضوى .Beg

X. Foll. 348—364. نقد ابو حنيفه, a treatise on the law of religious observances according to Abu Hanifah.

كتاب الطهارة قال الله تعالى يا ايها الذين آمنوا .Beg

XI. Foll. 365-372. معرفت تقويم و اسطرلاب a treatise on the computation of the calendar and the use of the astrolabe, with tables of the conjunctions of the planets.

It consists of two Babs, each of which is divided into ten Fasls.

XII. Foll. 372 b—542. روضة البنجمين, an extensive treatise on astrology, in fifteen Makālahs.

سپاس خدايرا که افريدکار جهانست و روزي دهنده .Beg

The author, who does not give his name, states in the preface that, although astrology was not his profession a_{a} , be had availed himself of a period of leisure to write this treatise for the use of beginners, and he dwells at some length on the manifold difficulties which former works presented to the student. He had submitted it, as he says at the end, fol. 542 b, for approval to his master Abul-Hasan 'Alī B. Ibrāhīm un-Nasavī; and it appears from another passage, fol. 531 b, that the last named astronomer lived in the fifth century of the Hijrah; for he had dedicated his abridgment of the Suvar ul-Kavākib of 'Abd ur-Raḥmān Ṣūfī to Sayyid Murtaẓā, who died A.H. 436.

The years 442 and 443 of Yazdagird which are given as examples of calculations, foll. 444 b and 479 b, and correspond with A.H. 465, 466, were probably the current years at the time of composition; and it must be noticed that in the chapter on eras, fol. 383, no mention is made of the Tārīkh i Jalālī instituted by Malak Shāh A.H. 471. The archaic character of the language and spelling is quite in keeping with that early date.

The work is divided into fifteen Makalahs, variously subdivided into Babs, with the following headings : • معرفت التقويم والاختيارات * ٣ اعياد الملل و التواريخ * ۴ معرفت التقويم والاختيارات * ٨ العلل و الاسباب • معرفت الاسطرلاب * ٧ الاختيارات * ٨ الضمير والخبى • زيج التقويم * ١٠ احكام سنى العالم * ١١ اعمال مواليد و تحاويل سالها * ١٠ النمودارات * ٣ در احكام مواليد *

The margins, which form a distinct series, contain :---

XIII. Foll. 3—112. The Ilāhī Nāmah of Farīd ud-Dīn 'Attār. See p. 576 α , art. ii.

XIV. Foll. 111—142. Mantik ut-Tair, by the same. See ib., art. i. It breaks off in the beginning of Makālah II.

XV. Foll. 142 b—287. An anthology containing select pieces of upwards of three hundred poets, from the fifth to the ninth century, classed according to their subjects or metrical forms under the following headings : Praise of God, توحيد. Praise of the Prophet, توحيد. Exhortation and advice, نصيحت و مدرم Praise of 'Ali, منقبت على Forms of adjuration, تسميات. Retirement and virtues, and the world. Descriptions of the four seasons. Bacchic poems, خبريات, Petitions, and various descriptions, ملتمسات و اوصاف. Laudatory poems. Artifices of versification, صنعت. Miscellaneous subjects. Ghazals. Tarji's. Mukatta'āt. Mutafarrikāt. Rubā'is.

In some of the first of the above divisions are found select verses ascribed to poets of the earliest period, as Firdūsī, Kisā'ī, fol. 144 b, Asadī, 146 a, Farrukhī, 147 b, 'Asjadī, 150 a, Minūchihrī, 146 a, 'Umar Khayyām, 148 b, Nāṣir Khusrau, 146 a, and Azraķī, 148 a.

The section of Ghazals, by far the most extensive, contains alphabetical series from the Divāns of the following poets :--Salmāń (see p. 624 b). Kamāl Khujandī (p. 632 b). Auḥadī (p. 619 b). Sayyid Jalāl ud-Dīn 'Aẓud (see art. v.). Jalāl ud-Dīn 'Atīķī (who died A.H. 744; see Taķī, Oude Catalogue, p. 18). Maulānā Jalāl ud-Dīn Khwāfī. Jalāl Ṭabīb (see p. 867 b). Hāfiẓ. Nizārī Kuhistānī (see art. v.). 'Imād Faķīh (ib.). Khusrau Dihlavī (p. 609 a). Fakhr ud-Dīn 'Irāķī (p. 593 b). Nāşir Bukhārī (p. 735 a). Ibn Yamīn (p. 825 b). Bisāṭī (p. 735 a).

XVI. Foll. 294—302. An abridgment of the Nizām ut-Tavārīkh (see p. 823 b), brought down to the reign of Abu Sa'īd, son of Uljā'itū.

XVII. Foll. 302 b—332. تحفة الغرائب, an anonymous compilation, in twenty-eight Bābs, treating of the properties and hidden virtues of natural substances, of various magical and cabalistic operations, and of ingenious devices and recipes for purposes of utility or amusement.

Beg. حمد و سپاس بادشاهی را که عجایب صنع او XVIII. Foll. 332 b-338. Madkhal Manzūm. See p. 801 a.

XIX. Foll. 345-396. Khafī 'Alā'i. See p. 475 a.

XX. Foll. 396 b—398. An anonymous treatise, in nine chapters (așl), on the diseases of the horse.

XXI. Foll. 398 a—403. آئينه سكندري, a treatise on alchemy, compiled by order of Sultan Jalāl ud-Dīn Iskandar, by Ghiyāş Kirmānī, غيات كرماني

XXII. Foll. 420-504. Jām i Jam, by Auhadī. See p. 619 b.

XXIII. Foll. 504 b—539. ..., a theological treatise in Maşnavi rhyme, containing an exposition of the Sunni creed, with Sufi comments and a refutation of heretical doctrines.

حمد و فضل خداي عز وجل Beg. هست بر بنده واجب از اول

The writer, who in the prologue designates himself only by the patronymic Ibn Karīm, is no other than the well-known author of Gulshan i Rāz, Maḥmūd Ibn 'Abd ul-Karīm Shabistarī. See p. 608 b, and Haj. Khal., vol. iii. p. 598.

He explains how he had been reluctantly induced by the prevailing taste of the age to stoop down to rhyming, although derogatory from his high station, in order the better to maintain the true doctrine in the midst of the ever increasing number of heresies. The work consists, he says, of eight Bābs, subdivided into Faşls. The latter comprise sections (aşl) alternately headed يعدى , علم اليقيى , according as they treat of the knowledge of the true doctrine, its essence, its spiritual significance, or the false doctrines opposed to it.

The present copy contains only three Bābs, viz.:—1. Knowledge of the nature of God, in three Faşls, fol. 506. 11. Attributes of God, in seven Faşls, fol. 516. 111. God's actions, in eight Faşls, fol. 525.

Add. 27,317.

Foll. 173; $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{2}$; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, carly in the 18th century. [DUNCAN FORBES.]

I. Foll. 1—134. The Divan of Shikūh, شكرة.

اكر نع عشق بودي هادي مقصد بيانهارا Beg. '

No record has been found of the author. His period is approximately indicated by a reference (fol. 49 b) to $S\bar{a}$ 'ibā, who died A.H. 1088 (see p. 693 α), while, on the other hand, an autograph poem written by 'Abd ul-Husain on fol. 135, and dated A.H. 1177, shows that the present copy cannot be later than that date. From another passage, fol. 133 a, it appears that the poet lived in Irak.

Contents: — Ghazals alphabetically arranged, fol. 2 b. Rubā'īs in the same order, fol. 128 a. Blank spaces of a page or two have been left at the end of every letter of the alphabetical series, apparently for further additions.

II. Foll. 135—171. The Divān of Ghani. See p. 692 a.

Or. 165.

Foll. 113; 9 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; from 27 to 32 lines, $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in small Nestalik, in the 18th century. From the royal library of Oude. [GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2—9. A fragment treating of the life and precepts of Plato and Aristotle.

خبر افلاطون و اداب او معنی افلاطون بزبان .Beg یونان باشد بسیار علم پر منفعت است It breaks off in the section headed, آداب, سطاطلیس

II. Foll. 10-77. حديقة الصفا, a work on general history, relating more especially to India, and brought down to A.H. 1173.

The present copy contains only the last of three volumes (Jild) of which the work con- . sists; it begins with the following rubric: جلد سیم حدیقہ الصفا مشتہل بریک مقدمہ و چہاردہ روضہ

The arrangement and even the headings are borrowed from the work of Firishtah, which the author, while abridging it, closely follows, and, to some extent, textually transcribes.

Contents :---Mukaddimah. Belief of the Hindus; war of the Kauravas and Pandavas.--Early Rajas.---Fā'idah. First appearance of Islamism.---Rauẓah I. Sultans of Lahore, or Ghaznavis.---Rauẓah II. Sultans of Dehli from Mu'izz ud-Dīn Sām to the downfall of Iskandar Shāh Sūr (for the history of the Timurides the reader is referred to the second volume).---Rauẓah II. Sultans of Deccan, in six dynasties.---Rauẓah II. Sultans of Gujrāt, and so on, as with Firishtah, down to Rauẓah XIII., and last, which treats of the rulers of Malabar.

The third volume was to be followed, as stated in the subscription, by the Khātimah.

In the Mukaddimah, fol. 10 b, the author refers to A.H. 1173 as the current year at the time of writing.

The Hadikat us-Ṣafā is mentioned in the list of general histories prefixed to Elliot's Bibliographical Index, but it is not noticed in the same author's History of India. An extract relating to the conquest of Assam has been published in the Quarterly Oriental Magazine, vol. iii. pp. 267-285.

III. Foll. 78—79. A fragment, probably a part of the above mentioned Khātimah, with the heading:

در بسیان احوال حکما مقدم به تعریف حکمه وبسیان مجملی از اقسام آن مشتعل بر سه باب It consists of the first and second Fasls of Bāb I. They treat of philosophical schools and of Logic.

IV. Foll. 80—113. A work treating of the lives and sayings of philosophers, without proface or title, beginning with the heading: قسم اول در فضيلت علم و حكمت و تواريخ حكما مشتملبر دو حرف

The author, whose name is written, fol. حا حمد [sic] بن على بن الحاج جمال الدين , 108 b , حسين الاتصارى , probably for Hājī Aḥmad B. 'Alī B. ul-Hāj Jamāl ud-Dīn Husain ul-Ansārī, was a son of Zain ud-Dīn 'Alī, the author of the Ikhtiyārāt i Badī'ī (see p. 469 a). In the notice devoted to his father, the last of the work, he gives some account of himself. He was born in Shirāz A.H. 760, and had spent forty years of his life in attendance upon his father, who died A.H. 806. He had written the following works: Miftäh ul-Kunūz on the names of medicaments, Dastūr ul-Mutaakkilin on sweetmeats, Tuhfat ul-Mulük on intoxicating drinks, Dastūr uz-Zirā'at on agriculture, Dastār us-Su'adā on the sayings of sages, and some shorter treatises.

The first Kism, the only complete portion of the work, is divided into two parts, called Harf, as follows:—I. On the value of learning. Notices on ancient philosophers, fol. 80 b. II. Lives and sayings of Muslim philosophers, fol. 94 b.

The last section, beginning with Muhammad and 'Alī, ends, according to the list given at the beginning, with Maulānā 'Alā ud-Dīn Manşūr, a physician who lived about A.H. 800. A brother of the above, 'Izz ud-Dīn Mas'ūd, is stated, fol. 107 b, to have died A.H. 813, and one of his nephews A.H. 817, the latest date mentioned in the work. The biographies are meagre and the text extremely incorrect.

Spaces, probably reserved for portraits of the subjects of the notices, have not been filled.

Foll. 109—113 contain a fragment, ap-4 vol. 11. parently belonging to the same work. It is a chapter, imperfect at the end, on the structure of the human frame, with the heading قسم دوم از فصل اول در تشریح بدن انسان

Or. 207.

Foll. 106; $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $4\frac{5}{4}$; 13 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastahāmīz, before A.H. 1182 (A.D. 1768). From the royal library of Lucknow.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 3—69. Tazkirat ul-Mu'āșirin, by Shaikh 'Alī Hazin. See p. 372 b.

II. Foll. 70—106. A treatise on the chase, designated in the endorsement as تذكرة صيديد, by the same author.

سپاس بیقیاس که مدارك اوهام از استقصای .Beg.

It is divided into two Mukaddimahs, three Bābs, and a Khātimah, as follows:—Legal prescriptions relating to the hunting and killing of animals, and to those which it is lawful or unlawful to eat. Bāb I., which forms the main bulk of the work. Notices on wild animals, arranged in alphabetical order according to their Arabic names, fol. 78 a. Bāb II. Origin of animals, and their nature, fol. 103 a. Bāb III. Faculties of animals, fol. 105 a. Khātimah. Legitimate object of the chase, fol. 106 b.

The MS. bears the seal of Sayyid Sibghat Ullah Khān, with the date A.H. 1182.

Or. 248.

Foll. 316; 83 in. by 5; 19 lines, 3 in. long; written in small Naskhi; dated Muharram, A.H. 1130 (A.D. 1717).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2-72. Takmil ul-Iman, by 'Abd ul-Hakk Dihlavi. See p. 827 b, i.

II. Foll. 72—77. سرنة الدنيا, a tract on the love of worldly goods, by 'Alī B. Husām 3 L ud-Dīn, known as al-Muttaķī (see p. 356 a).

للحمد لله الذي جعل الدنيا قنطرة الآخرة Beg.

III. Foll. 77—81. A Maşnavî, in ten Faşls, on ascetic life, headed مرغوب القلوب

In the last line the author, who calls himself Shams, gives to the tract the title of رساله مرغوب, and states that it was composed A.H. 757:

ز هجرش هفصد و پنجاه هفت است

If that date is correct, the work cannot be ascribed, as has been done by Flügel, Vienna Catalogue, vol. i. p. 526, to the great mystic Shams i Tabrīzī, who died A.H. 645. See p. 585 a, and Nafaḥāt ul-Uns, p. 535.

IV. Foll. 81—87. The story of Shaikh Manşūr Hallāj, from the Maşnavī of Jalāl ud-Dīn Rūmī.

V. Foll. 87—89. An Arabic poem on wine as a symbol of mystic love, ascribed to Ghauş ul-A'zam, i.e. 'Abd ul-Ķādir ul-Jīlānī, with a metrical paraphrase in Persian.

Beg. العب كاسات الوصال Beg.

At the end is a short fragment of the Vaşlat Nāmah of 'Ațțār. See p. 579 α .

VI. Foll. 91—114. An Arabic Kasidah entitled البادرات العينيه, by the same 'Abd ul-Kādir, with a paraphrase in Persian verse.

VII. Foll. 114—121. Miscellaneous verses on religious subjects, including pieces ascribed to 'Abd ul-Ķādir Jīlānī, or addressed to him, and a Ķasīdah in praise of Sayyid Shāh Muḥammad Muķīm.

VIII. Foll. 121—316. مخازن القادرية, a defence of 'Abd ul-Ķādir Jīlānī and of the practices introduced by him.

Author: Shaikh Shams ud-Dīn B. Vali Ullah Shaikh Ishāk B. Kutb ul-Anām Abil-Fath Shams ud-Dīn Muhammad ul-Kādirī

شيخ شمس الـديـن بن ولى الله الشيخ ,ul-Multānī اسمحـق بن قطب الانام ابي الـفتح شمس الدين محمد القادري الملتاني

An attack upon the Kādirī order having been brought under the notice of Shaikh Badr ud-Dīn B. Kutb ul-Anām, a paternak, uncle of the author, the latter was desired by him to write the present work in reply. He states that he had drawn largely from the Futūhāt i Makkiyyah of Muhyī ud-Dīn Ibn ul-ʿArabī, and from the Insān i Kāmil of ʿAbd ul-Karīm ul-Gīlānī.

The work is divided into eleven Makhzans, subdivided into Makāms, and treating of the following subjects: 1. Superiority of 'Abdul-Kādir to all other saints. 2. Dates of his birth and death. 3. Genuineness of his pedigree. 4. His holiness and his austerities. 5. His Zikrs. 6. His contemplation, مراقيات. 7. His prayers. 8. His litanies, اوراد 9. His spiritual concerts, سماع 10. His visions. 11. His teachings on Tauhīd.

Or. 282.

Foll. 95; $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 15 lines, 3 in. long; written in Nestalik and Shikastahāmīz, apparently in India, in the 18th century. From the royal library of Lucknow. [Geo. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2-81. The Divan of Hairati, ديوان حيرتي.

ای بجان بنده ات سفید و سیاه ما Beg. بر خداوندی تو خلق کمواه ما

Hairatī, who called himself a native of Tūn, but was brought up in Marv, became known by his panegyrics on the Imams and his pungent satires. The former won for him the favour of Shāh Tahmāsp, whose displeasure, however, he frequently incurred by his dissolute habits. He spent the latter part of his life in Kāshān, where he died A.H. 961 by a fall from a roof. The date is fixed by the chronogram شفاعت على, due to his contemporary Muhtashim. See Sām Mīrzā, fol. 98, Haft Iklīm, fol. 333, Riyāz ush-Shu'arā, fol. 125, Atashkadah, fol. 36, and Dr. Sprenger, Oude Catalogue, p. 424.

The Divan, which consists of Ghazals alphabetically arranged, breaks off before the end of the letter \uparrow .

II. Foll. 82—95. Two detached fragments of the Dīvān of Niyāzī, ديوان نيازى

دیوانه ایم و شور انا الحق صفیر ما .Beg. در دار و کمیر عشق نباشد نظیر ما

The author says, fol. 92 a, that he had received his poetical surname from his master Hazin (who died A.H. 1180; see p. 715 b).

پیر دانادل حزین مارا نیازی خوانده است

He relates, in a marginal addition, fol. 95, a poetical encounter in which he silenced some soi-disant poets in Ilāhābād.

This poet is not to be confounded with another Niyāzī, who lived in Persia, and whose proper name was Ahmad Mirzā. See p. 718 a.

Contents: Ghazals in ت, foll. 82—89. Ghazals in 1, foll. 90—95.

Or. 319.

Foll. 101; $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4; 9 lines, $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. long, with 26 lines in the margins; written in Nestalik and Shikastah-āmīz, with 'Unvān and gold-ruled margins; dated Shavvāl, A.H. 1222 (A.D. 1807).

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2-101. ليلى مجنون, Lailā and Majnūn, a Maşnavî by Hilālî (see p. 656 a).

در عشق تو کائذات مجنون

The epilogue contains a reference to the author's former poems, Shah u Darvish and Şifāt i 'Ashiķīn, and eulogies upon his great predecessors and models, Nizāmī, Khusrau, and Jāmī.

II. Foll. 2—57, margins. The following prose pieces by Tughrā:—Tāj ul-Madā'iḥ (see p. 743 a, xi.). Firdausiyyah (p. 742 b, ii.), fol. 16 b. Tazkirat ul-Atķiyā (p. 743 a, viii.), fol. 39 a. Mushābahāt i Rabī'ī (p. 743 b, xii.), fol. 43 a. Mi'rāj ul-Faṣāḥat (p. 744 b, xxviii.), fol. 49 b.

The margins of foll. 57—79 contain miscellancous short pieces and letters by Mīrzā Muḥammad Sharīf and others.

Or. .320.

Foll. 129; 8 in. by 5; 15 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, apparently in India, about the close of the 17th century.

[GEO. WM. HAMILTON.]

I. Foll. 2-69. A Sufi Maşnavî consisting of detached anecdotes.

Author: Ahl i Baitī, اهل بيتى.

The poet says in the prologue that he had written in his youth many Ghazals and Kaşīdahs, but had put off till his old age the composition of a Maşnavī. Further on, fol. 6, he addresses a panegyric to the holy Shaikh, Muḥammad B. Shaikh Aḥmad, "whose presence filled Dehli with joy," and in another passage, fol. 40 b, referring to Aurangzīb as the reigning sovereign, he declares his intention of devoting a poem to his praise.

The present copy was written during the reign of Aurangzīb, for it bears a stamp dated A.H. 1109.

The poet concludes with an appeal to the liberality of the illustrious Khān, not named, in whose service he had spent his life, and with moral counsels addressed to his own son. II. Foll. 69 b—129. The Dīvān of Hilālī (see p. 656 a), wanting the latter part of the letter ω .

Or. 1164.

Foll. 87; 8 in. by 5; about 20 lines in a page; written in small Nestalik, apparently in the 17th century. [ALEX. JABA.]

A volume containing Turkish poems, and the following Persian tracts:—

I. Foll. 57—63. رساله معميات, a treatise in verse on riddles, by Jāmī.

چواز حمد و تحمیت یافتی کلام [کام Beg. [read بدان ای در معما طالب نام

In the Vienna Catalogue, vol. iii. p. 542, three tracts of Jāmī on the same subject are noticed, but all with different beginnings.

II. Foll. 64—73. The Lavā'iḥ. See p. 44 a.

III. Foll. 75—78. الرسالة النائيه, a tract by Jāmī on the mystic sense of the reed mentioned in the first verse of the Maşnavī. See p. 863 a, xiii.

IV. Foll. 79—81. رسالة في معرفة للضرات. 18. Foll. 79 a tract on the various degrees of existence, مراتب الوجود. This tract, attributed in the heading to Jāmī, is ascribed in another copy to Sayyid Sharīf. See p. 864 a, i.

V. Foll. 83, 84. On the meaning of the Hadis, من عرف نفسه فقد عرف ربه

اى طالب علم توحيد و اي راغب فن تجريد .Beg.

VI. Foll. 85 a, 86 a. مسالة في طريق خواجه VI. Foll. 85 a, 86 a. رسالة في طريق خواجه , a tract on the rule of Bahā ud-Dīn Naķshaband, by Jāmī.

سر رشته دولت ای برادر بکف آر Beg.

Or. 1226.

Foll. 107; $6\frac{1}{4}$ in. by $3\frac{3}{4}$; 12 lines, $2\frac{1}{5}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, with two 'Unvāns and gold-ruled margins; dated Rajab, A.H. 877 (A.D. 1472). [ALEX. JABA.]

I. Foll. 2—46. Gulshan i Rāz, by Maḥmūd Shabistarī; see p. 608 b.

II. Foll. 47—107. Zād ul-Musāfirīn, زاد by Amīr Ḥusainī; see p. 608 a.

Or. 1286.

Foll. 343; 12 in. by $6\frac{1}{4}$; 17 lines, 4 in. long; written in Nestalik, in the latter part of the 18th century.

I. Foll. 1—309. Tazkirat ul-Umarā, by Kevalrām (see p. 339 a), wanting the first page.

II. Foll. 310-343. An account of the area, divisions, and revenue of the Sūbahs of Hindustān.

دامی کل و حال حاصل تمام ممالک ^محروسه .

It is stated to have been taken from the note-book of Rae Nūndah, از روی بیاض رای Historical notices of each Ṣūbah are prefixed to tabulated accounts. The work was written after the death of Aurangzīb, who is designated by his posthumous title, Khuld-Makān.

Or. 1410.

Foll. 102; 9 in. by 8; 15 lines, $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; written in Nestalik, in the 18th century.

I. Foll. 1-51. A collection of letters written by, or to, the Timurides of India from Humāyūn to Bahādur Shāh. It is designated in the title prefixed to the table of contents as the first third of the first volume of the 'Ināyat Nāmah: نامة نثر كه مبنى است از اخبار و مجلد اول عنايت نامة نثر كه مبنى است از اخبار و اثار كزيدة

In a contemporary endorsement it is called Ruka'āt 'Ināyat Khānī, رتعات عنايت خانى, from which it seems probable that 'Ināyat Khān was the name of the author of the compilation. He appears to have been a son of Lutf Ullah Khān Ṣādiķ, whom he calls, fol. 40 b, پير ومرشد دو جهانی, and to whom he gives the titles of Shams ud-Daulah Bahādur Tahavvur Jang, conferred upon that Amīr by Muḥammad Shāh.

Luțf Ullah Khān Ṣādik died, according to Maāşir ul-Umarā, fol. 435, under Ahmad Shāh. Two of his sons are mentioned, viz. 'Ināyat Khān Rāsikh, apparently the author of the present work, and Shākir Khān (see p. 279 b).

The letters of Aurangzib, which form the larger portion of the collection, are in part taken from two earlier compilations already mentioned, the Raķā'im Karā'im and Kalimāt Țayyibāt. See pp. 400 b, 401 a.

II. Foll. 52—102. انشای خانه زاد خان, letters and other prose pieces of Amān Ullah Khānah-zād Khān Fīrūz Jang, son of Mahābat Khān Sipahsālār, collected by himself. See p. 509 b.

The work is divided into the following four Faşls:—1. Letters to superiors and equals, حرايض و مكاتبات, fol. 53 a. 2. Familiar notes, رتعات, fol. 94 a. 3. Marginal notes, رحواشی, fol. 99 a. 4. Prefaces and miscellaneous pieces, متفرقات, fol. 101 a.

The Ruka'at of Aman Ullah have been lithographed in Lucknow, and printed in Calcutta, without date. See Biblioth. Sprenger., No. 1593.

Or. 1433.

Foll. 253; 9 in. by $5\frac{1}{4}$; 12 and 11 lines, $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. long; written in fair Nestalik, in two gold-ruled columns; dated Safar, A.H. 1147 (A.D. 1734).

I. Foll. 1–202. Yūsuf u Zulaikhā, by Jāmī. See p. 645 a.

II. Foll. 203—253. بهرام و گل اندام, the story of Bahrām and Gul-andām, in Maşnavī rhyme.

After a few verses in praise of God and the Prophet, the author enters at once upon the story, which he tells in very plain and familiar language. The hero's adventures turn mostly on encounters with various Divs, and Gul-andām is not, as in the usual version, a Chinese princess, but a Peri.

In the concluding lines the poet addresses himself by the poetical surname of Amin.

There are forty-one miniatures in the Indian style in the first poem, and twentyseven of inferior execution in the second.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

- P. 440 a, Add. 25,869, read : Commentary upon the Kubrā, a treatise on Logic, by Shārīf Jurjānī. See p. 812 a.
- P. 441 b, l. 12, read: Nāşir ud-Din Ţūsī was born A.H. 597, and died A.H. 672.
- P. 551 b, l. 35, read : A poem entitled Sūz u Gudāz, by Nau'i. See p. 674 a.
- P. 722 a, l. 34, add: Saba's proper name was Fath 'Alī Khān Kāshī. See p. 850 b.

P. 768 a, l. 28, add: Minūchihr Khān succeeded his father Ķarchaghāi Khān in the government of Mashhad, A.H. 1034. See the 'Alam-ārāi, fol. 570. The Maḥbūb ul-Ķulūb cannot have been written very much later.

END OF VOLUME II.

LONDON : GHIBERT AND RIVINGTON, ST. JOHN'S, SQUARE CLERKENWELL., E.C.

,