As for the events in which a lower influx is expected, a case-by-case analysis will be made. The organizers will decide whether or not to take place and the administrations (general and communal) may cancel any of these events if they deem it necessary."

However, this did not constitute a return to school for "Most" students, and full reopening was not announced until May 28.  Quote from the Brussels Times:  "As part of Phase 2 of Belgium's exit plan out of lockdown, primary and secondary education were gradually restarted. Certain grades in primary and secondary schools have been allowed to return to class from 15 May, provided they each had 4 square metres to themselves.  However, many schools complained that guaranteeing sufficient space for social distance was not possible for each pupil, and that it would only become more difficult when more children would be allowed to return. (...) All grades in nursery schools will be allowed to reopen from Monday 2 June, according to the Consultation Committee's decision. (...) From Monday 8 June, all grades in primary schools can restart, and schools that wish to do so, can start pilot projects from Friday 5 June."

Administrators were told to prioritise instruction for children ages 5, 6 and 10. Due to the slow startup, as well as ongoing fears about Covid-19 in hard-hit France, school attendance will not be compulsory right away. (...) Education Minister Jean-Michel Blanquer estimated that 80 percent to 85 percent of France's 50,500 preschools and elementary schools will open this week. Secondary schools in regions with fewer virus cases are expected to reopen on May 18. A target date hasn't been scheduled yet for France's lycées, or high schools." HOWEVER, there were very severe restrictions on the actual number of kids allowed in each classrooms, and actual attendance has been so low that I wouldn't say it counts as reopening: As of May 24 "So far, around one in five primary school pupils has returned to class." BBC quote around May 28: "Still only a marginal part of the [primary school] pupils have returned to class, 22 percent in green zones and 14 percent in red." Actual reopening will happen in June. TheLocal quote: "As of June 2nd, all of France's elementary and primary schools will begin to reopen "for at least part of the week," the education minister said, while maintaining current practices of taking in smaller groups. Secondary schools (collèges), which had so far only been able to reopen in green zones, would begin to reopen as of June 2nd, "both in green and orange zones," Blanquer said. As for high schools (lycées), they would reopen in green zones only. As of Tuesday, individuals in Poland will be prohibited from leaving their homes except for essential activities. The prime minister also implemented a ban on gatherings of more than two people, excluding families. No more than five people will be allowed to take part in religious services, including funerals, and the number of people allowed to ride public buses and trams at one time will be reduced. These restrictions will remain in place until at least Saturday, April 11. "
