INTRODUCTION

As society progresses from one stage to the next, the role of community members in this process, as well as their belief in the process of reform and development, is important and crucial. This is a characteristic of every society. The wide range of goals set by the society and its high goals make it one of the most important issues of the time to accelerate the individual's activity and mobilize him for the goals. "Historical goals have a wide range of personalities.

If he is well-rounded, works conscientiously and takes an active part in socio-political affairs, our society will develop and strengthen so quickly" [1]. In order to achieve this result, each society needs a system of ideas as the main mechanism for organizing people's practical actions towards these goals. This task is performed by the "system of national ideas". In general, the national idea is a set of ideas that have been side by side with it at all stages of the development of society and have evolved, expressing the views and beliefs of the people. The concept of national idea.

Although it has been studied by many scientists and researchers, the approaches to it as a system and the elements of the system and their analysis, the interaction of the elements, and their division into subsystems have not been conducted as a separate study. The "national idea that serves as a force for us" set by our esteemed President Shavkat Mirziyoyev.

This is one of the most important issues of our time. Of course, these issues are a very broad topic for a single article or scientific research. The connection with the human mind and thinking, the aim of which is to analyze its peculiarities.

MATERIALS AND METHODOLOGY

The national idea is a broad and multifaceted system based on their internal and external connections. One such element is the human mind and thinking. We can determine that this concept is an element of the system of national ideas we are analyzing by giving the following definition. "The national idea is a form of social idea that embodies the past, present and future of the nation, expresses its fundamental interests and goals, and serves development" [3]. As stated in the tariff, the national idea is a form of general idea that represents the goals of the nation. These ideas are produced by being expressed in the human mind, by thinking, or directed to other people. As stated in many philosophical dictionaries, the human mind is a personal spiritual world in general, reflecting social life through the specific views of the life and activities of a particular individual. The individual consciousness, in turn, is specific to a particular person the set of ideas; opinions, feelings, and its uniqueness determine the features that set it apart from other people. The process of formation of these ideas and views is divided into a two-way relationship with the national idea.

According to A.G.Spirkin, one of the modern philosophers, "consciousness is a function of the human brain, which is unique to speech, and is one of the constructive and creative changes that generalize, evaluate and purposefully reflect the truth. is a feature that consists of That is, its function of generalizing and evaluating the truth is the system of national ideas of the human mind element. In other words, all the main and basic ideas, principles, concepts, views in the system of national ideas perception and event assessment.

It is well known that the national idea, like all ideas, is created as a product of thinking illuminates a wide range of lifestyle guarantees. In turn, it serves as a basis for the development of forms of social consciousness that interact with the human mind.

The issue of the national idea has been widely studied by social researchers in our country, and these processes are still ongoing. Many of our researchers are working on its theoretical and methodological aspects. Some of our scholars say that the main goal of the national idea is to direct them to creative goals by introducing into the human mind and heart the ideas, concepts and principles related to its goals while other researchers describe it as a set of ideas, concepts, and goals that have been widely accepted, trusted, and believed in a country that has been passed down from generation to generation” [4].

The breadth of meanings in the definitions is due to the large number of factors influencing the process shows. In general, the national idea is "... in essence, it reflects the main goals of our people. It is a system of ideas that connects the future with the past and serves to achieve its age-old aspirations. ”

RESULTS

The national idea needs to be studied as a system because it combines its main and basic ideas, features, concepts, basic concepts and principles, organizational foundations, and many other features and concepts. So before we study it as a system, let's talk about the system.

It makes sense to stop. System is a fundamental concept. A system is a set of interconnected, controlled elements with a specific structure, each of which performs a specific function, is focused on a single goal [4]. In addition, various components of the system in the scientific literature and the structure that unites certain subsystems. "A system is a collection of components that interact in some way. A set is not a simple set, but a set of subsystems, components, elements that interact on the basis of certain relationships" [5]. From this definition we can see that the national idea as a system meets all the requirements and has a high interconnectedness of ideas and principles. The strength of this bond is separate from the components.

Given that the study of their role in the organization of the structure of the system is a very broad topic, it leads to a lot of analysis, and we study the question of how one of the many elements of the national idea system is related to human consciousness and thinking. When we observe the social life of man, his participation in social processes, his participation in relations, in these processes the human consciousness, in general, we see that the question of consciousness plays an important role. This means that while uniting and uniting the people, the national idea must first and foremost function as a system, as well as other elements, to ensure the constant change and development of the human mind, its place and function in the system, its connection with other elements.

DISCUSSION

The fact that the mind is a "form of reflection of reality" [6] is a condition of creative change of existence, and that the human mind is inextricably linked with all social relations, and is in fact the product of the development of society [7]. When we turn to reefs, the features of consciousness are manifested as an element of the national idea system. Consciousness allows a person to understand the essence of the processes and properties of the objective world.

The national idea has many peculiarities, which are aimed at influencing the change of human consciousness and thereby influencing society. Among such features are:

First of all, the national ideological system is aimed at awakening the historical memory and serving as an ideological flag uniting the members of the society. This means that the national idea enters the human mind together with the historical memory.

Second, the fact that the National Ideological System has been able to show the best way to achieve good intentions has been proven many times throughout human history, and the fact of life proves that it enters the human mind directly as a force representing objective truth.

Third, the national idea is the unifying force of society being a source of faith influences the human mind in the form of a hymn of immortal ideas and ideas that can be the meaning of human life.

Fifth, the national idea, with its ability to absorb any advanced idea, influences the minds of people living with old stereotypes, and paves the way for the life of people living in harmony with the times. Will have the property of being an indicator.

Sixth, the system of national ideas is quick to adapt to the new demands and situations of the time to be able to adapt and meet modern requirements, to live a unique life in the rapidly evolving modern world, to resist various deviations and destructive ideas and ideologies in the "dress of modernity" 'enters the mind as a complex of verses. In addition to the above, the whole system of national ideas its goals and objectives are to directly affect the human mind, to change and improve it.

The national idea is not just about the formation, transformation and transformation of the human mind but also in the process of assimilation of social consciousness by the individual. As long as human consciousness reflects the existence of an individual to one degree or another, it certainly relies on certain ideas or ideologies in the process. The principle of diversity of ideas and opinions in the national idea does not exclude the possibility that the human mind becomes a subject of the process of idea creation beyond the boundaries of social consciousness. In the process of creating new ideas, "the idea is the human mind products."

At the same time, the national idea is the social consciousness only through the individual consciousness sees the human mind as its element because it manifests itself. The infiltration of ideas in the national ideological system into society due to the interdependence, interaction and enrichment of social consciousness and human consciousness is one of the mechanisms by which people become believers.

CONCLUSION

The human mind, as a mental process, is born, develops, and dies with the individual. It reflects the unique characteristics of each person's way of life, different political and ideological events. It defines the differences between the spiritual world and the spiritual world of other individuals, and the specific features of the individual's path of individual development, which represent all the diversity of human individuality. The national idea is the idea of the perfect man

Based on the differences identified, conclusions are drawn. The influence of the national idea on a person and the change of his way of thinking are the leading issues in the process of achieving the tasks of educating a perfect person [8]. Because in the individual consciousness of a person the characteristics of his life and activity in society, personal life experience, as well as his character, character, level of spiritual culture and other aspects of his social existence objective and subjective states.

Thus, when we talk about the human mind and its social significance, it is a two-way interaction with the social consciousness and they create opportunities for each other's development [9] converts. The leading role of the mind in the perception of a social being, in the assimilation of constructive ideas in society, and in the formation of all human views and beliefs the main factor is the high connection with the national idea. Only when the national idea of a society, which takes into account the peculiarities of the mind and understands that it is the leading element in the system, is formed, will that society be able to achieve its goals and objectives.
