Log of Logs

And so to sea literature, almost as vast as the sea itself. It would be impossible for one man in a lifetime to discover all it contains, let alone find the time to read it.

Introduction

Let me begin with a little about the origin of the word "log" as in logbook (as opposed to the other log which is common afloat - the device to measure the ship's speed, and distance run, which information is of course regularly entered in the log - book). Log is said to have been derived from the ancient wooden almanacks of the bards whereby memoranda was cut or carved on a Staffordshire "clogg" or "log". Coincidentally the word "book" is supposed to have come from the Anglo Saxon "boc", meaning beech tree.

In the earliest days of navigation it soon became apparent to landsman or sailor that he needed to keep tab of time, wind, tidal currents, etc. & the vessel's progress, or lack of it, if he was to get anywhere or indeed survive. The need for keeping an accurate log was generally recognised by responsible mariners, & if others remained to be convinced, the Admiralty, commercial ship owners and their insurers also insisted upon it!

There are many various titles for logs, depending on who kept them - Captain's, Master's, Mate's or Chief Officer's, Lieutenant's, or Ship's, (written up by a succession of watch-keepers); where they were kept - Bridge, Deck, Engineroom, or Harbour; and finally, the categories of rough, fair, abstract, & official (latter only in merchant ships - see entry for same).

In the list they are usually all called logs, except for the official logs, or where more than one type is recorded for the same voyage, such as in warships. Of course the catalogue includes all forms of voyage narratives be they log, letter, journal, or shipboard diary, etc, irrespective of whether they are original documents, copies, extracts, precis, or published versions. Some simple definitions therefore may be desirable, although the entries generally reflect the description of material given by its author, or by the librarian who catalogued it:-

- Diary - a personal daily record of events onboard, etc.
- Journal - a volume containing an individual's description of events rather than a continuous personal record such as in a diary or private log. - (not a printed paper).
- Log - a detailed navigational record of courses & speeds, wind, weather, crew employment, main events, etc.
- Account - a general narrative. - (not a financial statement).

The study of old logs is not always easy due to the poor quality of ink and paper, particularly considering the effect of salt water and damp over the years. Dates and names are often difficult to decypher. Some are full of interest, - others are decidedly dull. The same variation applies to journals and passenger diaries, though they are usually more legible, but they all contribute to our knowledge and history. Many of the narratives have not been sighted by the author, let alone read by him. Entries have been made from information provided by custodians, or gleaned from any reasonable source, with a question mark if some details are in doubt. May I apologise in advance for entries which turn out to be for the wrong ship, or voyage, or which do not reflect the true nature of the narrative. In a few cases where I have not been able to complete research on some lead, e.g. the likelihood of finding a diary of a particular passenger, whose papers are now held in some collection, the bare clues have been retained in the entry for any interested person to pursue.

When I commenced compiling log references many years ago, I was concerned that so few logs of merchant ship voyages appeared to have survived, when there was such a full coverage for warships, & a reasonable selection for whalers, particularly in American collections, & many of each category were being microfilmed. As time went by more logs were found, as well as other types of narratives - surgeons' journals aboard convict and emigrant ships, passenger diaries, etc, including published accounts; & then, due to the advent of Official logs, which had to be retained, the imbalance was at least partly rectified. Nevertheless, countless trading & whaling logs have been destroyed, and ship owners are still doing this, after holding the logs for a set period of up to six years in case of legal action. Many private logs from merchantmen have also disappeared but, hopefully, more will continue to turn up. George Bayly, Third Officer in the "Calder" under the flamboyant Irish Captain Peter Dillon, tells us in his journal that his Captain taught him how to make musket charges using old logs and narratives of a dead mariner for the cartridge paper! Dillon was shrewd enough to retain his own journals for a future publication re the search for LaPerouse relics. Thus he became quite famous, though much of the glory was self generated.

In the 19th century published journals and accounts of explorers and travellers to the less well known parts of the world, notably the Pacific were popular reading, & the narratives have thus been preserved. With the advent of cables and radio, etc, newspapers began to ignore the mariner. Ships' logs and journals became less noteworthy; and also the practice of keeping personal diaries went out of fashion.

While official naval records are plentiful, they are much enhanced by the many private journals kept in warships. Today Midshipmen are still required to keep a journal at sea in peacetime (wartime diaries, etc, are prohibited on security grounds, but a few have been found). In Nelson's day a Midshipman's pay could be withheld if his journal was considered to be unsatisfactory, & stoppage of the young gentlemen's leave is still applied Ships' newspapers, hand-written onboard, were produced by volunteers in migrant ships and troopships particularly, & often published ashore later as souvenirs of the trip. Those located have been included in the list (see collective entry for same), & may provide further details of the voyage. Similarly, newspaper reports of a ship's arrival frequently give a brief account of the passage, often quoting the Master or the log, especially if there was some newsworthy item. Reports of navigational dangers, discoveries, wrecks, etc, were sometimes published in the form of a log extract. Such references have also been listed, but an exhaustive search of the main Aust & NZ papers has not been done & there would be many more relevant entries. For those who are disappointed that there is no reference for their ship or voyage in Log of Logs, it is suggested that they follow up shipping reports in the press of the day. Other ships arriving at much the same time may well have sighted, or sailed in company with the vessel in question, or she may feature in the "Unidentified Ships" list (see entries in date order).

Finally, to the List itself, which covers the period, 1788 to 1988, or rather, the voyage of the First Fleet to NSW, up to the latest batches of Official logs lodged with Archives in Aust & NZ in the 1960's, & 1980's. (It is felt that the era of discovery prior to 1788 is already well documented). Entries are largely confined to Australasian waters and the Pacific & Indian Oceans, with a few others of significance if material is in local collections.

The List, and Examples.

Ship entries are in alphabetical sequence, with voyages in date order, unless the same log reference applies to a series of passages & there is another ship of the same name and date, in which case the entry for the latter is listed following the succession of the first vessel's voyages, against the symbol #. Lettered and numbered ships, e.g. A1, & T1, are at the end of respective alphabetical sections. Collective entries for types of voyages such as Boat, Convict, Immigration, & Whaling, are included in the ship list, together with items for Companies, some specific Navies, maritime incidents like Actions, Wrecks, Overboard, Customs at sea, etc. The list is thus a form of Nautical index. A separate index of Authors of personal logs & narratives follows the main list. Explanation of the most common types of entry: -

ARAB, ship/CT, 403t, RR BROWN: Lon - Deal, 25.6 - HTn. 6.11. w.152 m. pris. 1822 + Jnl by Surgeon C. Carter * AJCP PRO reel 3188.

Meaning: The ship ARAB of 403 tons, employed as a convict transport, under Capt RR Brown, sailed from London, & took departure from Deal, 25.6.1822, arriving at Hobart Town on 6.11.1822, with 152 male prisoners. Surgeon C Carter's journal of voyage is on AJCP microfilm reel 3188, ex orig in PRO Lon.

YOROO?, 1958, ship? + Official log, 22.7.58 - 29.11.58 * AA, Sydney, SP 989.

Meaning: The unknown type ship YOROO (name in doubt) was on a voyage from 22 July to 29 Nov 1958, probably terminating at Sydney, where an Official log is held in the Australian Archives, under Accession No. SP 989. Note that the Captain/Master's name, where known, is in CAPITALS; and if in command for further voyages, his name is not repeated but the fact is indicated by the term "etc" in entries following, e.g. same, etc; or ditto, etc.

Further Sources. Apart from the many sources I have probably missed, there are some where circumstances and time have precluded a listing: - The Australian War Memorial, Canberra; Queensland Maritime Museum, Brisbane; and new acquisitions in many libraries, but particularly the Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, NZ (- for new material since 1980).

Acknowledgements.

So many persons and organisations have provided assistance & advice, or contributed to this catalogue, over the 20 years of compilation, that a full & detailed list of acknowledgements would fill a further volume. To all those archivists, curators, librarians, fellow authors and researchers, friends, strangers, & correspondents in Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, United States, Fiji & elsewhere, I express my sincere appreciation. Your help & encouragement has sustained me in this marathon task. On a few occasions I have been about to close off the list prematurely to "publish & be damned", when more significant material has appeared. A year ago I decided to await the results of the Australian Bicentennial Historic Records Search. This was well worthwhile as 178 new entries have now been added. I am grateful to the staff of that project for their efforts.

There is one other organisation I must name, - the Australian Association for Maritime History, whose members have been most helpful, and whose Council has now voted to share the costs of publication with me. May I thank all of them; and all of you. Ian Nicholson.

The famous auxiliary ship Great Britain, of 3343 tons, at Circular Quay, Sydney, 1866. She was the first iron screw steamship in the world and was designed to carry over 600 passengers. On the England-Australia run from 1862 to 1876, she probably brought more settlers to Australia than any other ship. Photo from the author's collection. (See further illustration on page 214).

Admiralty Logs and Records.

Captains', Ships', & Masters' Logs of HM ships, & Official Despatches, incl Reports of Proceedings, are held in the Public Record Office (PRO), London, as are RN Surgeons' Journals for many CT/convict voyages, from 1816, and for some Government emigrant ships. Lieutenants' Logs, totalling 5205 volumes, from 1673 to 1809, are in NMM Greenwich, * ADM/L/A-Z, (and are indexed by ship's name in the Manuscripts Section). Exploration and Survey logs and journals, with ships' Remark Books, q.v, are held by RN Hydrographic Dept, Taunton, Somerset. It should be noted that the Australian Joint Copying Project (AJCP), has copied many relevant RN logs and Surgeons' journals, with plans for the filming of some Remark Books, in future, & references to all these are given in this list, together with details of known private logs & journals kept in HM ships, and now held by libraries & museums, etc, in Aust, NZ, & elsewhere. (However countless RN logs, not filmed by AJCP, & not listed here, will be found in the PRO Lon). AJCP reels are held by the NL, ML, & many libraries in Aust & NZ. See also:

Anonymous and Unknown Ships: Some diarists, for personal or other reasons, did not disclose the name of the ship. Some used fictitious names. A few have been identified by voyage dates & other details. Many more journals, etc, held by libraries, are not catalogued, nor indexed by ship's name, and this basic data is often omitted from access cards, though evident if the MS is read. The author has identified some of these & included them in this list, but others remain to be done. Researchers looking for a specific ship, or voyage, are advised to check the diary, etc, where cards give no name, if dates are roughly right. See Unidentified Ships for an incomplete list of anonymous or unnamed ships. Similarly, 160 cases have been noted where the name of the ship is given, but the diarist remains anonymous!

Clipper Ships. This fast class of sailing ships, developed and perfected in the 19th century, mainly for the China trade & the gold rushes to California & Australia, marked the "Golden Age" of sail. Some famous tea clippers are included in this list &, after steamers took over the tea trade, a few became Australian wool clippers. For examples, see the following, and the general references to the clipper ship era noted with them:- Ariel, Aristides, Ben Nevis, Blue Jacket, Chaa-Sze, Dharwar, City of Hankow, Cutty Sark, Flying Cloud, Gauntlet, Halloween, Hawkesbury, Hesperides, Highflyer, Illawarra, James Baines, Joseph Fletcher, Leander, Lord of the Isles, Murray, Nebo, Newcastle, Northfleet, Norman Court, Pakwan, Queen of Nations, Red Jacket, Sea Witch, Serica, Sobraon, Star of Tasmania, Star of the East, Strathmore, Theophane, Thermopylae, Thomas Stephens, Timaru, Torrens, Tweed, & Ziba.

Collections of Logs, Remark Books, and Historical Notes on Ships:

Most known Collections of logs, etc, available to researchers, or to the public, have been included here, with ships listed individually.

Exceptions are the many fine collections of whaling journals & logs in American Museums, etc, which are already adequately catalogued. (See Whaling Logs for details). Also, in the case of warships, where a great majority of logs and official records have been preserved in Public Record Offices or National Archives, this mass of information is not duplicated in this list. Where items in such overseas collections have been micro-filmed for local access, (e.g. by PMB or AJCP), the entry is generally included here. Relevant Remark Books held by the RN Hydrographic Department, Taunton, Somerset, England, are in the process of being copied by AJCP.

The precise contents of some individual collections held by the National Maritime Museum, Greenwich, London, are not known. The logs, etc, historical notes, and remark books in the following collections appear to be of some relevance for Australia and New Zealand:-

- + Captain HTA Bosanquet papers re HMS Paluma in Queensland waters, 1893 - 94, with notes on naval hydrographic surveys.
- + Commander JA Rupert Jones, RNR, on explorers & surveyors.
- + Cicely Fox-Smith, and Basil Lubbock papers on sailing ships.

Companies/Shipowners & Shipping Line Records. Bridge or Deck logs of merchant ships, & Engine room logs, remain the property of the Company when completed, & are usually retained for a period of years, for insurance purposes at least, e.g. ANL logs below. It is hoped that Logs and Voyage Books will be preserved by Companies indefinitely, in their own archives, or transferred to the care of recognised library or museum collections. The histories have been written of many shipping lines. Such books, which are generally not listed here, may indicate where the logs, etc, of the company ships can be found. The following is a very incomplete list of whereabouts of Shipping Company records (more shipowners' papers are held at NMM, Greenwich, but are not included as they do not relate to Aust and NZ, or do not contain logs or voyage narratives). + See also Mathias, P, & Pearsall, AWH, Convict Transportation. Many of the convict voyages to Australia are listed in this catalogue, mainly through journals of Surgeon Superintendents of convict transports (CT's), filmed by the Aust Joint Copying Project (AJCP). Passages of note include the First, Second & Third Fleets, Asia, Coromandel, Edward, Egyptian, Lady Shore (only successful mutiny), Mangles, & Surrey. For further voyage accounts, & for general information on this subject, see:

 + Bateson, C * The Convict Ships 1787-1868. (Glasgow, 1959, etc)
 + Collins, D. * An Account of the English Colony in NSW. 2 Vols. Lon, 1798; Syd, 1975, w. some account of early convict voyages
 + Browning, Surgeon CA, RN, * England's Exiles: or, a view of a system of instruction & discipline, as carried into effect during the Voyage to the Penal Colonies of Australia. (London, 1842).
 + Historical Records of Australia, Series I, which often include a precis of CT voyages in the Colonial Despatches, reporting ship arrivals. Some Masters or Surgeons' reports are also given.
 + See Unidentified Ships, for further Convict transport passages to Australia in years c.1812, 1831, and 1840 - 41 (several).
 + For the autobiography of a man, who was transported to Aust twice, see * Experiences of a Convict. (Lon, 1864-5; Syd, 1965), by JF Mortlock. While his voyage narratives are not extensive, they have been entered under respective ship's names as his knowledge of the convict transportation system was unique.
 + For convict transportation to Bermuda, see Lord Wm. Bentinck

Convoys and Ships in Company. As well as wartime convoys, ships often proceeded in company in peacetime, when on passage through poorly charted waters and areas of tortuous navigation, e.g. the Great Barrier Reef & Torres Strait. For various examples, see the First, Second, & Third Fleets: Athenian, - (which was probably a record convoy as far as distance sailed), A1 to A72, (at end of A's); Ballarat, Blundell, Briton, Dryad, Dunera, Glatton, Hero, Hyacinth; Indefatigable, Iron Knight, Kedah, Limerick, Margaret, Mary, Marella, Maunganui, Minerva, Minorca, Montoro, Navua, NZ Star, Ormiston, Orvieto, Porpoise, Queen Mary, Shropshire, Wanaka, etc. + See also Troopships Logs of any ships sailing in company usually add to details re the passage and are worth consulting, particularly when the records of a specific ship's voyage are sparse. A good example of this is the whaler William which had six other London whalers as consorts during the various stages of her cruise in 1796 - 97.

For accounts of the major Australian and New Zealand convoys in World Wars I & II, see the following official histories:

Fishing Voyages/Trawling/Fishery Research, etc.

Apart from Whaling and Sealing, q.v. which were also termed "fisheries", very few narratives of fishing trawler voyages have been found.
Examples are: Albatross, Brolga, Endeavour, James Cook, Kaharoa, & Thetis.

A journalist's account of a prawn trawling voyage from Cairns, in Mar & Apr 1989 appeared in The Independent Monthly, (Syd, Oct 1989), entitled "Going Bananas". The author, David Foster, spent 8 weeks of a nine months' trip fishing in Princess Charlotte Bay, the Gulf of Carpentaria, and Torres Strait, in an unnamed boat. Other trawlers in the prawning fleet of almost 200 craft, were Amelia C, Bounty Hunter, and Misperception.

Immigrant/Emigrant Voyages. See individual ship entries for known narratives, including Surgeons' journals. Immigration Department records in AONSW include Reports by Surgeons on health of immigrants during their passage (Medical Journals), specifically for 1838 & 1880-86, * ref, 4/4698. Some ships' Matrons Diaries are included in Immigration Correspondence, & have not been separately listed by AONSW. Further medical journals may be in PRO, London, in Series MT 32. Also, of course, many passenger ships in this list brought new settlers, though not specifically described as migrant ships. A few evacuee and refugee voyages are listed, e.g. Arana, Duntroon, Kakugan, Kenilworth, Koolinda, Nestor, Oxfordshire, Zealandia & Boat people. Some of the many migrant ships include: Afric, Atlantis, Aurelia, Beejapore, Birmingham, Canton, Cheapside, Cheshire, China, David Clarke, Echuca, Eliza Jane, Elizabeth, Exodus, Fairlie, Fairsea, Florentia, Fortitude, Gambia, Ganges, General MC Herzy, etc, Georgic, Hercules, Hero, India, Irene, Kanimbla, Kent, Kelso, Lady Jocelyn, Lady Kennaway, Lady McNaghten, Maloja, Mooltan, New Australia, Palmyra, Parland, Pathan, Peeress, Platina, Rangitata, Rangitiki, Sarah, Saxon, Scotia, Sir Edward Paget, Strathaird, Sussex, Vanguard, Victory, Warrigal, Wennington, Western Monarch, Westland, Westminster, Winifred, W'm Davie, & other ships with names beginning with William, etc.

+ For early migrant voyages to Aust & NZ the following ref may be relevant * Settlers: Being Extracts from the Journals and Letters of Early Colonists in Canada, Australia, S. Africa & New Zealand, ed. Jn Hale, Lon, 1950.

+ Irish Immigrants: A collection of 31 diaries, letters + accounts, 1840 - 1935, (incl voyages), by Irish settlers in Australia, held by the PRO Northern Ireland, has been filmed by AJCP, on reels M 387-388. + See also Letters from Irish Australia 1825-1929, by Patrick O'Farrell, Sydney, 1984. The National Maritime Museum of Ireland, Haigh Terrace, Dun Laoghaire, County Dublin, may also be a source for further voyage narratives.

+ Annual Reports re Immigration for various Aust Colonies, & NZ may be worthy of reference, e.g.: * NSW: The Agent for Immigration [H. H. Brown] to Colonial Sec. submitting his Report on Immigration for 1855, 28 pages-Immigration (Moreton Bay), 8 pages, 3 vols, printed, Sydney, 1856-7.

+ Emigrant Tracts, No. v-vii. The Young Emigrants: Or a Voyage to Australia, Parts I, II & III (SPCK, London, 1850); and The Emigrant Voyager's Manual, by William H G Kingston, (London, 1850).

+ The Female Middle Class Emigration Society (FMCES), founded in UK in 1862, assisted unemployed women to emigrate. Its records include Letterbooks, 1862-82, with index and copies of letters from immigrants in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa re voyages out, etc * AJCP M 468.

+ A moving account of Australian immigration in the nineteenth century, based primarily on diaries kept by emigrants, three of which are reproduced in full, is Don Charlwood's book published in Melb & Lon, 1981:-

* The Long Farewell, which is also entitled, Settlers Under Sail.

+ See also 'Unidentified Ships' for numerous accounts of migrant passages to Australia, e.g. voyages in 1829, c.1838, c.1846, 1852, 1858, 1949; and for New Zealand immigration, in 1851-59, & 1881; plus many others.

+ A few sketchbooks, etc, of immigrant voyagers are held in the Australian National Gallery, Canberra; namely those by E Cambridge, 1958; G? Cossington-Smith, 1949/1951; and J D Moore, in 1949. + See also the illustrated diary of Edward Snell onboard the "Bolton".

Mail Ships - End-of-Voyage Reports. 19th century British sea mails were carried under Admiralty contract, which included a requirement for mail vessels to carry a Naval Agent to ensure that the terms of the contract were met. These Agents' End-of-Voyage Reports for the period 1855 - 1870 have been preserved in the * Record Room, GPO HQ, London. Many voyages to and from Aust - mainly by P & O Co ships, are probably included in the 40 volumes of these documents, which are supposed to include abstracts of Admiralty agents' journals, but it is not known how detailed reports are, & no doubt the information on voyages varies widely. + See "Sardanian"; &, for more details, see + Robinson, H * Carrying British Mails Overseas. Marriages at Sea. These were not unusual, but the incidence decreased after marriages by ships' captains ceased to be recognised. Weddings afloat continued of course, but the ceremonies were then mainly performed by clergymen amongst the passengers. Such marriages were recorded in the Official Log of British ships at least. A few examples in this list include:
 Herefordshire, Invererne (4 weddings), Nairnshire, Nourmahal, & Scimitar.
 Author Alan Villiers quotes an Official log entry, re marriage of a couple of Pitcairners, by the Master of the "County of Dumfries", off the island in Apr.
 1905. See the Preface of * The War with Cape Horn, pub, London, 1971, 1973.

Merchant Ship Logs. Apart from the traditional Ship's Log, or Deck Log, (required by Owners, & remaining the property of the Co, - many of which logs are listed here, - though many more of which are missing or have been destroyed), and private logs or journals kept by mariners, all British and Colonial ocean-going merchantmen were, from c.1850, directed to keep an Official Log-Book. These formatted logs do not contain general navigational and meteorological entries, or the routine shipboard events of the deck log, except in the case of collisions, groundings and other accidents onboard. The Official Log was also to record births, deaths, marriages, & matters of crew discipline. Together with Crew Agreements ("Articles"), & Crew Lists, which were also introduced by the Board of Trade, logs were to be handed in to Gov't Mercantile Offices at the next British Colonial or Commonwealth port, after completion of each log-book, (or voyage designated in the Articles of Agreement). Unlike British warships' logs, not all of these Official Logs have been retained in PRO, London, because of the sheer bulk of such records. The comparatively small number, pre 1860, have been kept, (BT/98), but only a selection since then, (BT/100, & BT/165). This century in particular, the UK practice has been to destroy logs after 7 years, except for some in which births & deaths at sea were recorded, those for 1902-1912, & the two World Wars, as well as PRO's historic sample of every tenth box. However, others have survived, as many UK Crew Agreements (with corresponding Official logs), surplus to the British archival requirements, were transferred to the custody of the Maritime History Group, Department of History, in the Memorial University of Newfoundland, St John's, Newfoundland, Canada, rather than all being destroyed, e.g. see the ship "Nineveh", 1866 - 74. This collection of Crew Lists, etc, covers the periods, 1863 - 1913, & 1920 - 1939, except for every tenth box of records, those for years ending in 5, (i.e. 1865, 1875, 1885, etc), which form a sample retained by NMM, Greenwich, and small selections of special interest made by County Record Offices in the UK & the Mitchell and National Libraries in Australia (e.g. ship "Yorkshire"). The Southampton CRO batch, mainly of Crew Lists, is on AJCP reels, M 2068-76. Unfortunately many Official Logs, not associated with specific Crew Lists and Agreements, after the mid 1870's, have also been destroyed in Canada.

To recapitulate, and in an endeavour to clarify this most confusing situation, the current holdings of Official Logs & Crew Lists, etc, handed in at British ports, are as follows :-

PRO, Lon: +1860 & before (BT/98), + every tenth box of records since; +1902-12, 1914-1919, & 1939 onwards (BT/165); + some Crew lists for celebrated ships, e.g. Great Britain, (BT/100).
NMM, Greenwich: +1861, 1862, 1865, 1875, 1885, 1895, 1905, etc; + some Official logs of special interest, 1909-13, & Cutty Sark.
County Record Offices, UK, Mitchell & National Libraries, Aust: + selection of Official logs and Crew lists, etc, of local interest.
Memorial University of Newfoundland: Balance of surviving records, 1863 to 1938, though many Official logs destroyed.
NB: Only those records underlined are itemised in this list. Indeed most of these British collections are not catalogued or indexed, and only a small proportion relate to Aust and NZ.

Some British merchant ships' Official logs, etc, were lodged at Australian ports this century, mainly in South Aust, up to 1960. These have been retained in the Australian Archives, together with Official Logs & Crew lists of Aust. merchant ships handed in at local ports since the Federal Government assumed responsibility for the Australian Mercantile Marine, with the Commonwealth Navigation Act of 1912. All such logs in the Australian Archives' catalogued lists are included here. In the case of coasters, Official logs were only kept for voyages off their normal routes.

While some researchers will be disappointed with a lack of nautical detail such as navigational data in Official Logs, compared with normal logs and journals, genealogists should find them more useful because of the record of births and deaths, etc, and for the Crew Lists, etc, which are often enclosed. Besides, in the absence of the ship's deck log, they may be the only record of the voyage available. Official Logs are still kept by British, Aust, & NZ merchant ships, & will be preserved in Archives, etc.

Note also that some batches of Official Logs in the Aust Archives have not been fully catalogued by that Authority, - and are therefore not included in this list, i.e. logs lodged at Port Kembla, 1928-52, and 1952-64, now in the Aust Archives, NSW, * Accessions SP 214/6, and SP 967/2, respectively; and Official logs, 1946-50, handed in at Melbourne, which are in Aust Archives, Victoria, * Accession MP102/1. However Crew Agreements for 1946 are in Series MP49/1, and a list of 1947 and 1948 Agreements from MP102/2 is held, so these have all been included in Log of Logs, in Italics, to partly fill this gap, and give an indication of what logs are available in unlisted MP102/1. Also, it is noted that there are no Official Logs for Aust merchant ships, etc, in Aust Archives, Sydney, for the year 1931, which should be in Series SP2. Due to the Depression, Aust interstate shipping was almost at a standstill, but there were some voyages, reflected by logs held for other ports in 1931. Note that there is a period of c.25 years before Official Logs of merchant ships, etc, become available in Archives.

The National Archives of New Zealand hold Official Logs, Crew Lists, & Articles of Agreement, lodged at NZ ports, mainly by NZ merchant ships in recent years (c.1983 - 1984). Details are included in this catalogue, but to obtain access to these through the name of the ship, it is necessary to first contact the NZ Ministry of Transport in Wellington, where the index is held, to obtain the relevant accession number.

Reverting to merchant ships' deck logs, some may still be found in shipping company archives, but most were destroyed after circa seven years, when no longer required for insurance purposes, etc, and only few have been located for this list. In the absence of actual logs, other company records, and reports by Masters, may be useful to researchers of merchant ships, eg: Voyage Books. See the separate entry, COMPANIES, etc. Before the advent of cable & wireless, shipping news and arrivals, etc, were very very fully reported in the newspapers. Details of many voyages, from overseas particularity, may therefore be found in relevant papers published soon after the ship's arrival at both intermediate & final ports.

The National Maritime Museum, Greenwich, Lon, has a few logs of merchant ships bound for Australia, & ships on Antarctic voyages, 1884 - 1940, in * RSS/10. + See also Troopships, & Wireless Logs.

Meteorological Logs & Journals. Some examples are noted in this list, e.g. HMS Alligator, Britomart, Margaret Galbraith, Nimrod, Queen of the Avon, Royal George, 1821, HMS Sulphur, HMS Terror, & William Davie, etc. Also, Meteorological journals were occasionally enclosed with Surgeon Superintendent's journals in Convict transports and immigrant ships.

Most merchant ship and warship Deck Logs, (including those for Naval shore establishments), contain regular meteorological readings such as barometer, wet & dry bulb, and seawater temperatures, together with general weather observations of wind, sea & swell, and cloud formations.

In the UK, the National Meteorological Archives, Bracknell, the National Maritime Museum, Greenwich, and the Royal Society, London, all hold collections of ships' Meteorological Journals. The latter also has a log of observations by Wm Dawes at Port Jackson, 1788-91, as well as records for Hobart Town, Macquarie Harbour, Parramatta and Port Macquarie for 1822.

Overboard. The incidence of persons falling or being washed overboard in bad weather was all too common; & the chances of safe recovery were slim. Both passengers & crewmen were lost, more often the latter when working on deck or aloft, & occasionally the Master as well. Over 30 cases have been noted in the logs examined in detail. The worst of these were: Ambassador, Captain and 4 men; City of Hankow, Captain; Countess of Seafield, 10 men; Earl Derby, 6 men; Gwalior, Capt; Soukar, 6 men. These accidents mainly occurred in sailing ships, as modern merchant ships are so much safer, but HMAS Nizam lost 10 men overboard in Feb 1945, and none were recovered. For some stirring accounts of ships' lifeboat rescues of men lost overboard in rough seas, see * Close to the Wind, by Sir William Creswell, (Lon, 1965). A number of man overboard entries from British Official logs are quoted in * The War with Cape Horn, by Alan Villiers, (London, 1971, & 1973, etc).

Quarantine. & Epidemics on Passage. Over 60 ships listed were placed in quarantine on arrival, & a few before the voyage really began! From the incidence of scurvy, fever, and infectious outbreaks during long passages & whaling cruises, etc, there were obviously many more cases of quarantine. Some voyage narratives include the period in isolation at the voyage's end.

Remark Books by HM Ships. Introduced by the RN Hydrographer, 1804. Remark Books were used by Captains & Masters of RN ships to record their observations re navigation, particularly in little known coastal waters and harbours, from which the official Sailing Directions were compiled. Although not a voyage narrative Remark Books often provide details of navigation in intricate waters, and also supplement the information in logs and journals.

The Australian Joint Copying Project, (AJCP), has embarked on a programme of filming many Remark Books referring to Aust, NZ, & Pacific voyages of HM Ships, and items are noted accordingly in this catalogue.

Royal Australian Navy/RAN Ships. Deck logs of most HMA Ships have been preserved and, when cleared & declassified by the Defence Dept under the thirty year rule, are available at the Australian Archives, Sydney (in the Villawood repository). Approval for access may need to be obtained from the RAN Hydrographer, Sydney, or from Navy Office, Canberra.

Individual RAN ships are only included in this list when the whereabouts of other material, such as Midshipmen's journals, is known.
The absence of a warships' name, (of any nation), should not be taken to mean that no logs exist as most do, in respective National Archives & PRO's.

Reports of Proceedings of Australian warships, which outline their significant movements and activities each month, are also retained by the Dept & transferred to Aust Archives after 30 years, with wartime copies in Aust War Memorial, Canberra. (ROP's for Balikpapan op. 1945, in PRO Lon)

All RAN Reports of Proceedings before 1939 are held in the Melbourne repository of Aust Archives, and include some very early copies including two from "Protector" for 1905, and one each from "Parramatta" and "Yarra" for 1912. Many Reports of Proceedings for World Wars I and II are in the Aust. War Memorial, Canberra, as are early RAN logs, e.g. 1910 to 1920's deck logs. *AWM, 2 DRL 1243. Some 1939-1945 ship and squadron Reports of Proceedings in particular, are still classified and there could be some delay in granting public researchers access to such records in the AWM and Australian Archives. For a diary, 1939-45, kept aboard unnamed warships by EC Reynolds, mainly in the Pacific, see *HRR1831 - Restricted access. c/o Historic Records Office, National Library, Canberra, ACT, 2600.

Royal Mail Ships and Steamers + See Mail Ships.

Royal Navy (RN) Ships. The logs of most HM Ships are held by the Public Record Office (PRO), London, in three main classifications: Captains' logs, (Adm 51 series); Masters' logs, (Adm 52 series); and Ships' logs, (Adm 53 series). There are two Supplementary classifications: another Masters' log series, (Adm 54); and an Exploration series, (Adm 55). In addition, most Lieutenants' logs for the 18th and early 19th centuries are retained by the National Maritime Museum (NMM), Greenwich, under reference ADM/L. War diaries and Reports of proceedings may also be found in the PRO, Lon.

Captains' and Masters' logs, etc, of most RN warships associated with Australian and New Zealand history have been filmed under the Aust Joint Copying Project (AJCP), and these microfilm reels are held in libraries participating in the project. AJCP reel ref.no's are included under individual ship entries in this list, together with known journals, logs, & other narrative material in Australian & New Zealand collections. If a particular H M ship's log(s) are not listed here it does not mean that it is unlikely to exist. On the contrary, the log(s) will almost certainly be found in PRO London. See also: "British Naval Vessels in the Pacific Islands" - a provisional index to source material, 1800 -1900, by Catherine Dengate * PMB microfilm reel No. 516, with a separate Index to places visited.

In the 1840's Lt MF Maury, in charge of the USN Depot of Charts & Instruments, forerunner of the Naval Observatory & Hydrographic Office, distributed specially prepared log-books to ship captains, and masters of merchant vessels. Over a period of nine years more than 200 completed logs, with observations on winds, currents and water temperatures from all around the world were returned. From these Maury drew up his famous "Wind & Current Charts" & the volume, Physical geography of the sea, 1855.
These were the first major references in modern oceanography, & no doubt the simple ships' logs, which provided the basic data for this development, are still held in USN Hydrographic Archives! + See Met.Logs; + U/k ship, 1922.

Surgeons' Journals and Medical Journals, Logs & Diaries, etc.

Many of these records of convict and immigrant voyages have, fortunately, survived. The originals are generally to be found in the PRO London, under series ADM 101 and MT 32. Most of the relevant journals have been microfilmed under the AJCP project. References to such records, held in Australasian libraries, are listed under individual ship entries.

These Medical Journals, kept by ship's surgeon superintendents recorded the illnesses of convicts and passengers, including a description of the symptoms, treatment, date of discharge, cure or death, & a final column for miscellaneous remarks or happenings.

With regard to Matrons' Diaries, q.v, these workbooks record the single female emigrants, brought out to Aust by the British Ladies' Female Emigrant Society, in the Matron's charge. The diaries also document the behaviour of the women, incidents of the voyage, classes in reading, writing scripture & needle work, and the trials & tribulations of the Matron. Known examples in State Archives Offices are catalogued here, and it is possible that additional Matrons' Diaries could be found amongst the voluminous Immigration Correspondence in our various State PRO's & Archives.

Surgeons' or Medical journals in HM Ships in Australian & New Zealand waters, particularly in the period 1856 - 80, have also been copied by AJCP, in the series M 708 - 712, and are generally included in this list.

Surveys. Their are two distinct types of marine surveys, namely:-

Hydrographic surveys, or the charting of coastlines & oceans, of which there are many examples in this list, e.g: Bathurst, Bayonnaise, Dart, Beagle, Edith, Fantome, Fly, Geranium, Investigation, Investigator, Lady Rowena, Lusitania, Meda, Mermaid, Myrmidon, Penguin, Rambler, Samoa, Salamander, Sandfly, Stork, Sylvia, Waterwitch, etc. + See also Discoveries, +Whaleboat survey, Cape Leeuwin to Cape Riche, incl KGS, in 1877, by Staff Commander W E Archdeacon, RN * Documents in NMM, Greenwich, OD 64. +Narrative, NE Qld exped, 1873, by E Dalrymple in hired cutter * ditto, OD 82.

The other form of survey is the detailed inspection of a vessel for seaworthiness, etc. There are a few cases, e.g. Ambassador, Andreta, & Cockatrice, and others, mainly from the collection in the Royal Hist. Society of Victoria (RHSV), re insurance surveys, or Statements of General Average, etc, for ships damaged by weather, groundings & collisions, etc. For reports of ships condemned by surveys, see: Brodick Bay, Clyde, Doris, Lady Wellington, Lutterworth, & Rosalia, etc. See also vessels under Hulks entry.

Third Fleet, of nine convict transports, - sailed from Gt Britain as follows:-

1791 From Portsmouth, 27.3. Albemarle, q.v. (with naval agent, Lieut Young), Active, Admiral Barrington, Britannia q.v. and Matilda From Cork, early Apr, Queen, q.v. (with naval agent, Lt Blow RN). From Plymouth, 27.3. Atlantic, (with naval agent, Lieut Richard Bowen RN, embarked), Salamander, and the William and Ann The Portsmouth division was soon scattered by bad weather, so were not often in company, apart from periods in port, e.g. CGH. The Plymouth division spent more time in company - (but there are no known narratives for ships in this division). They became separated, but rejoined at Rio, only to be scattered again, enroute to Sydney direct, being the first convict ships to bypass the Cape. Thus Third Fleet ships arrived at Syd independently, or in pairs, with the Matilda in first, on 1 Aug, & the last straggler, Admiral Barrington, arriving 11 weeks later, on 16.10.91. It is of note that four of the 3rd Fleet ships, named in italics above, together with independent CT Mary Ann, were the first to go whaling from Syd + Apart from accounts of voyages of the 3 transports indicated, * See An Account of the English Colony in NSW, Vol. 1, 1798, 1975, by David Collins, which gives some account of the independent voyages, & of the subsequent whaling cruises off the NSW coast + See The Convict Ships, by Charles Bateson, (Glasgow, 1959, etc)

Transports/Convict Transports (CT's). Logs & other known narratives are listed under individual ship names together with references to Surgeon Superintendent's journals. Such Surgeons were regularly employed from circa 1815. Most of these journals in the Public Record Office (PRO) London & other British archives, have been filmed by the Australian Joint Copying Project (AJCP), and reel numbers are included in this catalogue. Inevitably, some medical journals are missing, particularly for the earlier voyages, but many have survived, and, if it was not for this source, narratives of Convict Transport passages would be sparse. + See Surgeons' Journals; & Troopships.

Troopships / Troop Transports. Known narratives of trooping voyages from early Colonial days and Maori Wars through to the Boxer & Boer Wars and World Wars are listed under individual ship's names, e.g. Afric, Andes, Beltana, Birkenhead, Bontekoe, Boonah, Borda, Canberra, Cospatrick, Devon, Demosthenes, Dick, Dunera, Elizabeth Ann Bright, Equestrian, Indarra, Isabella, Manchester Post, Manoora, Marathon, Maunganui, Miltiades, Niew Holland, Norman, Orari, Orvieto, Osmanieh, Paparoa, Persic, Port Hacking, Salamis, Sardinia, Seang Choon, Sinclair, Sir Robert Sale, Southland, Suevic, Takada, Taroon, Themistocles, True Briton, Ulimaroa, Ulysses, Vestalia, Vulcan, Westralia, Willochra, Zealandia, etc. + See also A1 - A72, at end of A's; & H2.

World War I & II Australian Troopship War Diaries, & some troop transport logs, are held by the Australian War Memorial, Canberra. Apart from these official records, soldiers' private diaries often include periods aboard troopships. While a specific search for these types of narratives has not been undertaken, it is known that the Canberra War Memorial also holds a substantial number, and others may be found in major libraries' manuscript collections, e.g. La Trobe Library, Melbourne. The Aust Historic Records Register (HRR), compiled in 1988 as a Bicentenary project, lists over 100 war diaries & some of these may cover trooping. Two shipboard diaries in the Register, kept in unnamed troopships, are: HRR 2565, Aust, 27.3-Eng, 3.5.1917, by Chas Bell, c/o Mrs J. Cole, 7 Chalmers Lane, Devonport, Tas, 7310; and: HRR 879, returning to Australia from War service, 1918, by WPK. Veron, c/o Mr & Mrs J.B. and M.G. Ryan, 32 Baker Street, Bundeena, NSW, 2230.

A further source of accounts of trooping voyages would be in soldiers' memoirs and Regimental histories, etc. including published works.

+ A precis of the World War I service of individual Australian merchant ships and troop transports, incl. captured enemy vessels, is given in * The Official History of Aust in War 1914-18: RAN, Vol. IX, by AW Jose, 1928;

Unidentified Ships/Voyages of Unknown or Unnamed Vessels:

See Missionary Ships & Voyages for unknown missionary ships, & unidentified voyages by missionaries in merchant vessels, warships, etc.
See Yachts for unidentified & unnamed sailing boats, yachts, etc.
As mentioned, some diarists and authors of voyages narratives preferred to remain anonymous, and others chose not to disclose the name of the ship in which they travelled. One reason for this, particularly with accounts in books, etc, or those likely to be published, was because of the possibility that uncomplimentary remarks about fellow passengers or crew would cause offence. In the case of private journals & personal letters, the correspondent often omitted the name of the vessel as all concerned at the time were well aware of it!

A few such shipboard narratives can be identified from dates & other details of the ship and voyage, e.g. Judge Baron Field's passage out in the Lord Melville, 1816-17, and his return to England in Competitor, in 1824.

RN Officers, travelling to Aust. and NZ in merchant ships, to join HM ships there, often remained on the books of HMS Victory, Portsmouth, for passage. Some Midshipmen's journals, etc, entered under the Victory, may well contain narratives of voyages in other ships.

Some manuscript journals & diaries, and even published works, are not catalogued by ship's name in libraries, nor is this mentioned in the description of the material, although it is a primary key in maritime and genealogical research, etc. Perusal of the contents may readily reveal the vessel's identity, but constraints of time and opportunity have sometimes precluded this in compiling Log of Logs. In other cases where the name is not divulged, it would take some further research to arrive at identification which may not be conclusive. This has been done in some instances, & the results entered in these pages, noting any doubt or alternative names.

If researchers have been unable to locate any narrative for the ship in which they are interested, it is probably worth studying this list of unidentified ships and pursuing those where the year and type of voyage, etc, roughly match their own information. The list is, of course, incomplete:

Warships' Logs and Records. Many countries, particularly recognised maritime powers, have preserved their naval logs & official narratives. These are generally held in respective National Archives, or Public Record Offices, and are available for research. Because these naval records, etc, are comparatively comprehensive and accessible, and as they are so immense, no attempt has been made to itemise them here. However all known and relevant private journals & logs are listed, together with those Royal Navy logs, remark books, & Surgeons' journals which have been microfilmed by the Australian Joint Copying Project (AJCP) for use by local researchers, etc. Logs of some HM Ships in Australian and New Zealand waters, and adjacent seas, have, understandably, been missed by AJCP. Other references in this catalogue may cover a few of these gaps, but, if not, recourse will have to be made to the original naval logs in the PRO London, or perhaps, the large collection of Lieutenants' logs, 1673-1809, in NMM, Greenwich. Hopefully, in future years, more of the relevant logs in PRO London, or at Greenwich, will be copied by AJCP.

Similarly, as most RAN logs are preserved in the Australian Archives at Sydney, they are not listed here, - only known personal naval journals, etc, kept in HMA Ships. RNZN logs held by the National Archives of New Zealand are included however.

Some journals & logs, etc, kept aboard warships in the Atlantic & other remote areas, outside the scope of this book, are listed if they refer to the RAN or RNZN, or if the material is held in Australia or New Zealand.

+ See also, Admiralty Records; Royal Navy; Royal Australian Navy; Royal New Zealand Navy; and United States Navy.

For other foreign Naval records, etc, the National Archives of the country concerned probably hold logs and proceedings of warship voyages, etc, e.g. For the Netherlands, contact the Naval History Dep't at the Hague; and for German ships, Naval HQ, Bonn, W. Germany. German Naval records for Asia/Pacific, 1854-1944, have been filmed by AJCP on reels M 291-336A. In addition, German Colonial Archives of the Reichskolonialamt, Potsdam, E. Germany, have been copied, inc warship movements in the Pacific, c1880's, and may be found in NL, Canberra, and ML, Sydney, on FM4/1021, etc.

Whaling Voyages. Apart from warship logs & records of official voyages of exploration, which were usually conducted in men-of-war, narratives of whaling cruises are generally the most numerous, the best preserved and catalogued category of voyages in many national collections & archives, etc.
This is particularly so in respect of the United States' whalers and sealers.
Although there are many accounts of whaling voyages in this list of logs, as shown below, no attempt has been made to duplicate the inventories and catalogues of collections in overseas maritime repositories.

Whalers listed in these pages include :- Addison,
Alexander, Alfred, Arethusa/Potomac?, Argus, Britannia, Canton, Catalpa?, Cheyne II, Commodore Preble, Elizabeth, Emu, Fame, Fanny, Fanny Nicholson, Favorite, Florence, Florida, Flying Childers, Flying Squirrel, Fortitude, Frances, Genii, Grand Turk, Grecian, Gypsy, Hero, Hibernia, Highlander, Horn, Islander, Jane, Japan, Jasper, Jefferson, John Bull, Junior, Kent, Massachusetts, Matilda, Mayflower, Napoleon, Norfolk Whaler, Oeno, Offley, Sarah Ann, Sir William Wallace, Speedy, Spring Grove, Stratford, Terror, Tom, Tuscan, Victoria, Vigilant, Wallaby, Wanstead, Washonks, Waterwitch, William, Willis, Woodlark, etc.

If the whaling log or journal sought is not included here, researchers are advised to consult some of the following references for the ship and voyage concerned:-

+ Whaling Log books and other manuscript material of polar interest in the Central Reference Library, Hull, 1958, by Ann M Savours, (SPRI, Cambridge, 1958), * copy in ML, Sydney, Q 639. 28016 1A1.

+ A Compilation of the holdings of the Whaling & Marine Manu-script Archives, (Nantucket, 1971-8), * copy in ML, Q 016. 63928 1.

+ Yankee Maritime Activities and the Early History of Australia, by N Wace & B Lovett, (ANU, Canberra, 1973), which lists American vessels, mainly whalers, but also sealers & traders, in Aust waters, 1787-1850, with the location of relevant manuscripts & printed works, etc. It also describes the maritime records held in the various New England institutions & other collections on the East coast of the USA; and includes whaling and sealing references, bibliographies, & inventories.

+ American Whalers & Traders in the Pacific: A Guide to Records on Microfilm, edited by Robert Langdon, (PMB, ANU, Canberra, 1978); & also the supplement * Thar She Went, (ditto, 1979), - being an interim index to Pacific Ports and Islands visited by these US ships. The main book includes indexes to c.3200 logs copied on 420 reels of microfilm by the New England Microfilming Project, organised by the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau, Canberra.
Only a small proportion of all these whaling logs are listed in this catalogue, but the few USN & RN logs copied by PMB are included. The Guide also has a list of whaling logs relating to the Pacific, which are known to be held in institutions in USA & other countries, but which have not (yet?) been copied.

+ Whaling Logbooks and Journals, 1613-1927, - an inventory of manuscript records in public collections, compiled by S C Sherman, revised & edited by JM Downey & VM Adams, (New Bedford, 1986). - 5018 entries.

+ "Union List of Whaling Manuscripts", co-ordinated by the New Bedford Whaling Museum, to provide a computerized catalogue of logs and journals in public archives around the world (may be same as entry above) Also, most major American Whaling Libraries & Museums have published lists or inventories of their individual collections.

+ The South Sea Whaler, an annotated bibliography of published material re 19th century Pacific whaling, by H Forster, (Sharon, USA, 1985).

+ The Old Whaling Days, a history of whaling, etc, in Southern NZ, 1830-40, inc extracts of logs + narratives, by Robert McNab, (Auck, 1913 etc)

+ The Sea - Hunters: the New England whalers during two centuries, 1635-1835, (Philadelphia, New York, 1953; Westport & Lon, 1973)

+ The Whale's Wake, a comprehensive account of whaling in SW Pacific, with extensive list of log references, by Harry Morton, Dunedin, 1982.

+ A further book with multiple references to whaling voyages is:
* The Log of a Jack Tar, by James Joyce, (Eng, 1891; & 1971). While the title is misleading - as it is mainly the story of his hardships & adventures when a POW of the Spanish in S. America, & of the French - he vaguely and briefly traces his career in the Southern Whale Fishery, from apprenticeship in 1793 through all ranks to that of Master, 1820-23. There are a few discrepancies in the narrative, but basic details are confirmed from other sources such as Lloyds' Lists. He was in the following S. Sea whalers, with some RN service in between: "London", 1793-95; "Lydia", 1795-97, when captured; "Diana", 1802-04, & captured again; "Perseverance", circa 1809-11; "Inspector", 1811-13; "Asp" as Second Mate, 1814-16; "Eliza Frances" (actually called "Frances Eliza"), as Chief Mate, 1818-20; & "Sarah" (actually "Sarah Ann"), in command, 1820-23.

Women in Warships. While there are many voyage narratives by female passengers and crew members in merchant ships & yachts, etc, there were comparatively few instances of women keeping journals or diaries onboard a man-of-war. The only cases noted here are: Congress, Favorite, Gorgon, Seignelay, and Uranie. Nowadays a number of nations have mixed crews in some of their warships, but the habit of keeping diaries has sadly waned!

I. Farewell to England. 1851

Farewell, farewell dear England; the closing shades of night
 Still linger in the distance, revealing thee to sight;
 We gaze each one in silence, for 'tis the last fond view
 We'll have of thy fair country, the land we love so true.
 'Tis now an hour of sorrow: — 'tis now that each one's heart,
 Feels that 'tis hard to conquer, the pain that 'tis to part;
 To part, with loved companions, with friends, both true and kind
 To leave our home, our country, for fortune's smile to find.
 But while our hopes are kindled, by other countries' fame,
 No one shall remember, old England's far spread name;
 The land of our forefathers, the free and glorious land
 Which goes to every stranger: that gift — a friendly hand.
 And in the coming future, while seeking fortune's smile
 Amid the golden countries — We'll often think awhile
 Upon the home of childhood, and often will we cheer
 Each other, as recalling, the friends we love so dear.
 And pray that we may prosper, with honest wealth to earn
 That to our own dear country, we soon may each return.
 But look! — across the water, the land is seen on sight,
 The evening shades are darkening, 'tis red and orange light
 Farewell, farewell dear England, with thy name on thy fame,
 And look with admiration, on us that spread thy name.
