

Poem

The Feeling of Knowing

Elias Claffey
Michigan State University

Michael Quail
Michigan State University

At first but a glimpse
Fleeting, yet resonant
A not yet certain, and subtle feeling
Tenuous, transient, yet tenacious

Then, like a sunrise, truth shines
Into these new eyes, to forge a new mind
Gaze and rays unite in meaning now
Both transcending space and time

Truth's new witness glows triumphant
Between shadows cast of doubt
Seeing further, aloft giant shoulders
And man's cruelty, not without

The elation fades, like evening light
Tucking knowledge into place
Knowing now, the truth they see,
With eyes that look deliberately

Acknowledgements

The authors would like to thank Dr. Gresilda A. “Kris” Tilley-Lubbs, who served as the Open Reviewer for this poem.