Annex I: Case studies lists

1. Executive summary

This deliverable aims to offer an illustration of the web-based datasets that have been gathered up to M21 by the WP1 working group accessing a plurality of sources, and using a plurality of technologies. The purpose of this data is to provide a multitude of alternative views for the monitoring and analysis of the digitalization of cultural production.

We describe in detail the data sources that can be used to unravel the user (individual and organizational) behavior on the web related to cultural participation,, and in parallel also the data sources that allow for following and understanding the emerging participation trends in news portals and online social networks via WLT Visual Analytic Dashboard.

The analysis of these data sources can be informed by a set of domain-relevant keywords, web URLs, social media accounts identifying the cultural actors populating the digital space (as described in D1.4). To ensure reproducibility of our results, here it is presented the rationale behind the curation of these lists.

In this deliverable we also present a discussion of the limitations and advantages inherent with the various sources of data we identified, that might be, we hope, a useful reference for all stakeholders who will want to adapt our data gathering methodologies (discussed in D1.3) and our methodological toolbox (discussed in D1.1).

Finally, we report the organizational scheme that would guide our plans for integrating these datasets into the Open Observatory and release them to the public, when possible as open data.

2. Objectives

The objective of this deliverable is to provide a technical report describing the structure and characteristics of the data gathered between M1 and M21, and draw an organizational scheme that allows for their effective accessibility into the Observatory Platform.

The objectives of this deliverable are complementary to those of D1.3 and D1.4, in which are respectively discussed the parallel objectives of (i) reporting which data has been gathered at M14 and M21 and (ii) the methodological aspects of the process of data gathering, and some results arising from the analysis of the data. Future developments of the analyses based on the data presented here will be included in D1.5. Here, we instead deepen the details about the structure of the data by describing what information is available, their metadata, the licencing, how it has been collected and who are the stakeholders who could be interested in accessing that data.

We further provide a discussion on the usefulness and limitations of these datasets in the context of inDICES with specific information on the quality, reliability and accessibility of the data gathered. This comprises their connection with the indicators developed between M1 and M15, that can be found in D1.1, the integration of the data with the Observatory Platform, and information regarding the Visual Analytical Dashboard. Accompanying the technical discussion of this deliverable, and aiming at showing the utility of the data, we also offer some short use cases from different types of collected datasets (either manually accessed, automatically downloaded, or crawled by the Dashboard).

We describe, along with the data collection, the details of the data storage as of M21. The datasets collected in the context of the inDICES project, license permitting, will be made open, by the end of the project, in the Data Repository, with the goal of facilitating the discovery, reproducibility and the reuse of the data gathered, and sharing of the project's results by the inDICES target groups, namely Policy Makers, Cultural Heritage/Creative Sector Practitioners and Researchers. The Repository is currently under development, and we report in this deliverable its state, as well as the design process in which we have been involved in the last months.

3. Sources Description

In this section, we provide a description of the different datasets collected up to M21, describing their different characteristics in terms of sources, size and format, information provided and temporal framing, ownership, possible users and applicable indicators.

We divide this section into three parts. We first list in section 3.1 the data collected at FBK, whose primary goal has been to unravel the user (individual and organizational) behavior on the web. Then, in section 3.2, we describe the data gathered at WLT, whose main goal has been to follow and understand different trends in news portals and online social networks. Finally, in section 3.3, we discuss the rationale that has been chosen for the curation of a set of domain-relevant keywords, web URLs, social media accounts (namely, the so called “trend indicators” and the “case studies lists”) identifying the cultural actors populating the digital space.

3.1. Data Collected at FBK

Wikipedia

Wikipedia is a popular online encyclopedia containing free multilingual content released under an open license crowdsourced by a very active and collaborative community of editors.

What information is in this data?

As was discussed also in D1.3, Wikipedia is one of the largest platforms sharing Creative commons works, and this data provides an overview on a specific type of content that has characterized Web 2.0: the so-called free digital encyclopedias. Specifically, the Wikipedia datasets we collected include information on the creation and edition history of those hyperlinks allowing passage from a Wikipedia article to another. In particular, it is recorded, each time that a link is manually created or removed, thus excluding transcluded links, i.e. links automatically generated by templates defined in another page, which usually create all possible links within a given group of articles, producing big cliques and artificially inflating the density of connections. It is also recorded who created the link, either a registered user with his/her user name or an anonymous editor. Moreover, we track the information of the page name and if the hyperlink has been added towards another page or towards a section of another page.

What is the size of the data set?

The hyperlinks information for the Italian, Spanish and English versions of Wikipedia were downloaded and processed to be readily available for analysis. Different datasets were created (see Table below, with their names and sizes in compressed GB).

Dataset	Enwiki	Eswiki	Itwiki
Raw Wikilinks	746	111	92
Raw Wikilinks Snapshots	36	8	9
Resolved Redirects	4	1	1
Revisionlist	62	9	8
Snapshots	42	8	6
Wikilinks Graph	21	4	4
Total	911	141	120

The different data sets in the Table are described in the following;

- Raw Wikilinks: This data set contains the hyperlinks between the articles, plus a bunch of other data, such as information about the user that added the link, the timestamp of the creation, what is the ID of the article that has been modified, etc.
- Raw Wikilinks Snapshots: Same as the previous data set, but limited to yearly snapshots.
- Resolved Redirects: Redirects are those pages that represent an alternative title for an article, e.g., <https://it.wikipedia.org/wiki/MoMa> is a redirect of https://it.wikipedia.org/wiki/Museum_of_Modern_Art, so the former leads to the latter wikipedia article. We want to keep the principal article and their redirects as a single node in the network. In all the data sets, redirects have been tracked and resolved according to their timestamp. This information is stored in the Resolved Redirects data set.
- Revisionlist: Data set containing the list of all revisions for each article. A revision is created every time an edit is made.
- Wikilinks Graph: Dataset containing information the article from which a hyperlink departs from and the article at which the hyperlink arrives to. This is given as the identifier given automatically in the WikiDumps and as page titles.
- Snapshots: Same as the previous data set, but limited to yearly snapshots.

Where does it come from?

The data are provided by Wikimedia through the Wikidump portal. The data collection was performed via a script, modified from [C. Consonni, et al., Proceedings of the International AAAI Conference on Web and Social Media, 13

2019], that downloads the dump files, in XML format. A pipeline was devised: first the data collection, then the processing of raw data and finally we made use of Azure Batch, a cloud service to run in parallel several processes in an automated and very efficient way for storage.

Data Type/Format:

The final format of the processed data is CSV. For the storage of the processed data, we decided to adopt Azure's object storage because it offers unlimited space, it is object-based as well as cost-effective (see D1.1 and D1.3 for the detailed process).

Publication Date

The English, Spanish and Italian Wikipedia have all been active since 2001 and we recorded the evolution of the hyperlinks up to 1st May 2020.

How often is it updated?

The Wikidump portal is updated twice a month. At the beginning of the month all information historical revision is updated, while a second dump, starting the 20th of the month contains only the current revisions. Our collection has been however done only once, as the process is very demanding and the evolution of the network relatively slow.

Who owns it (rights statement if applicable)/License:

Wikimedia Foundation's mission is to create educational content that is freely available to all people. In keeping with that goal, all information on Wikimedia projects may be freely shared, copied, remixed, and used for any purpose in perpetuity. All datasets we collected and processed therefore also follow this criteria under a CC BY-SA licence.

What indicators might apply?

This dataset allows for the use of indicators borrowed from Network Science. Indeed, using this data, we can reconstruct networks defined by the hyperlinks between wikipedia pages. Using standard indicators from Networks Analysis such as community detection methods, it is possible to identify articles that are central for a specific topic and articles that bridge between different topics. Having a complete temporal overview of the evolution of the network, it is further possible to isolate the most natural connections between concepts as those that appeared the earliest.

IMDb

IMDb is a popular online database comprising information about movies, tv-shows, video games, and streaming content online.

What information is in this data?

For each title included in IMDb, it is listed a wide range of information including cast, production crew and personal biographies, plot summaries, trivia, box office, ratings, and fan and critical reviews.

What is the size of the data set?

It contains more than 8 million titles (visit <https://www.imdb.com/pressroom/stats/> for other statistics). The whole data collected is close to 75GB of data.

Where does it come from?

The data is collected through the IMDb API via an automated script and stored automatically in Azure.

Data Type/ Format:

We produced and stored CSV files.

Publication Date

IMDb It was launched online in 1990, and has been a subsidiary of Amazon since 1998.

How often is it updated?

The dataset is currently being updated on a weekly basis.

Who owns it (rights statement if applicable)/License:

All data is the property of IMDb, which grants its users a limited, non-exclusive, non-transferable, non-sublicensable license to access and make personal and non-commercial use of the IMDb Services. The code used to download the data will be made available.

What indicators might apply?

We can study the IMDb data from the perspective of time series analysis and network science. From the former, because we have longitudinal data about the careers of the directors, actors/actresses, etc, as well as the time evolution of the rating of the films. Since we also have access to the casts, the collaborations between actors can be tracked and mapped to a temporal collaboration network. If this data set is enriched with extra information, such as the revenue of the films, extra indicators could be used, such as those on economic impact.

TikTok

TikTok is an online social platform released in 2016 where users share short-form videos. In just a few years, it has become one of the most used worldwide, ranking first among the most downloaded free apps for long periods of time.

What information is in this data?

For each video posted on the platform we have information at the level of both the user and the video content, such as the video creation time-stamp, the text accompanying the video, number of comments and likes, the creator username. We also have a link pointing towards the video. Unless the video has been deleted by the users, also the video content can be accessed and downloaded.

What is the size of the data set?

In this dataset we have the information corresponding to 25,000,000 TikTok videos from 6,973,120 unique users, who might be associated with a TikTok Challenge if they have participated in it (26,245 of unique challenges in our dataset). The final CSV file is 5.7GB.

Where does it come from?

We downloaded the data from <https://files.pushshift.io/>.

Data Type/ Format:

The original data comes in JSON format and we have processed and filtered it creating a final CSV file.

Publication Date

The data cover the period from October 2016 to December 2019.

How often is it updated?

This dataset cannot be updated.

Who owns it (rights statement if applicable)/License:

This dataset can be shared with the proper acknowledgment of the original source (CC-BY).

What indicators might apply?

This dataset allows for the use of indicators borrowed from Network Science. Indeed, this dataset allows us to reconstruct networks describing different kinds of interactions, e.g., direct interactions via user mentions in the text, or indirect interactions via communities of practice for those participating in the same challenges.

DeviantArt

DeviantArt is an online social community, founded in 2000. This platform was created to exhibit, promote, and share pieces of art, from literature, painting and sculpture to digital art, pixel art, films, and anime.

What information is in this data?

We have the link pointing to the artwork plus a bunch of metadata. Regarding the user that uploads the artwork, we know its ID and whether or not it is a regular or premium user (DevianArt categories). Regarding the artwork, we know when it was uploaded, if the content is considered for adults-only, the dimensions of the artwork, and some statistics, such as the number of comments and the number of times an artwork has been flagged as favorite.

We do not have direct access to the text accompanying the artworks, but can be retrieved as long as the artwork has not been deleted. The same applies for the artwork itself, which can be accessed and downloaded in the uploaded format (png, jpg, etc.)

What is the size of the data set?

We currently have collected 780GB of data.

Where does it come from?

We prepared an automated script that downloads the information regarding the most popular artworks proposed by DevianArt's API, according to their own criteria, and the most popular artworks of a certain number of fixed categories chosen by us.

Data Type/ Format

This data set comes in JSON and parquet format, one file per day. It has not been pre-processed and converted into structured CSV files yet.

Publication Date

The data have been continuously collected between 1st May 2020 up to now.

How often is it updated?

The dataset is updated daily with the new most popular artworks.

Who owns it (rights statement if applicable)/License:

The dataset is subject to License compliance with the terms and conditions of the agreement found at the following webpage: <https://www.deviantart.com/about/policy/api/>. DeviantArt grants Licensee a non-exclusive, non-transferable and revocable licence to its access and content. The code used to download the data will be made available.

What indicators might apply?

Here we deal mainly with time stamped data which has a clearly artistic component. Therefore, those indicators deriving from time series analysis are suitable. Artworks in DevianArt can be also sold, so indicators on economic impact fit in the analysis. If properly crossed with other datasets, the reuse of cultural assets can be addressed.

Alltheater.es

Alltheater.es is a subscription-based streaming service which offers online streaming of a library of theater plays, mainly in Spanish language.

What information is in this data?

We have access to time series extracted from Google Analytics reporting (i) the origin of the platform visitors, as well as the drop rate as they navigate the site, and (ii) the flow of users from social networks (Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, etc.) and their drop rate.

We also have 4 months of the daily sales of the platform, including detailed information on the number of sold items and on the net average of the sales, among other elements.

What is the size of the data set?

The data totals 530KB.

Where does it come from?

We reached an agreement with the Alltheater.es' CEO and they shared directly with us some of their data.

Data type/format

The data is organized in CSV files.

Publication Date

The data covers the period between 1st January 2020 and 27th April 2020.

How often is it updated?

Automatic updates were not agreed upon: to receive a new dataset we would have to request it to Alltheater.es.

Who owns it (rights statement if applicable)/License:

This dataset is owned by Alltheater.es. At the moment cannot be made publicly available as we do not have the permission from Alltheater.es.

What indicators might apply?

This dataset provides the unique opportunity of tracking the growth in the online media consumption associated with the COVID-19 lockdown of spring 2020, using indicators borrowed from time-series analysis.

Facebook and Instagram

Facebook and instagram are two of the most popular social media platforms, where huge volumes of messages and images are transmitted daily.

What information is in this data?

The data include all the messages of selected accounts, when the message was posted, the type of post (image, video, text) plus the content (link to image or video, or the text message), and different sort of interacting statistics (likes, reactions, comments, shares, video views).

What is the size of the data set?

The size of the data is 18MB compressed.

Where does it come from?

We accessed this data via CrowdTangle, a social media tracking platform that offers the possibility to search and download different sorts of content from Facebook, Instagram and Reddit. It gives access to the public content of these online social networks, as well as it is a tool implemented to follow, analyze and report online trends. Full CrowdTangle access is subject to a paywall for the general public, but it may become free for researchers if one's application is accepted, which was our case.

Data type/format

All files are in CSV format.

Publication Date

The current data set spans a time range of more than 4 years, from 1st January 2017 to 1st May 2021. This can be expanded both to older dates and to the present date.

How often is it updated?

This data set has been obtained manually, all at once, by selecting the time ranges and granularity that were suitable for us. It can eventually be accessed via API in order to regularly automatize the updates.

Who owns it (rights statement if applicable)/License:

Regarding the License, CrowdTangle grants a worldwide non-exclusive, non-transferable, freely revocable non-sublicensable license to access and use the Services (see Services here). CrowdTangle reserves all rights not expressly granted herein in the Services. CrowdTangle retains title and ownership of all rights (including copyright, trademark, patent, trade secret and all other intellectual property rights) in and to the Services.

What indicators might apply?

This data set mainly comprises time statistics of the followed accounts, therefore we can use the set of indicators related to time series analysis. If the data set is enriched with other data sets, it could eventually be explored with indicators on economic impact.

3.2. Data Collected at WLT

News Media Corpus

Intended as a generic, domain-independent content repository, the dataset represents a language-specific set of Web Sources (identified via their URLs) of major News Media outlets, e.g. The New York Times, Die Welt, Reuters etc.. For the inDICES use cases, the set was extended by a collection of about 50 Italian Online Media Sources which contains, for example, la Repubblica, L'Unione Sarda, and Today. As of September 2021 the News Media Corpus totals 1346 mirrored Web Sources across the different languages. The dataset is continuously updated through WLT's crawling architecture. The data collection process respects the Web site owner's robots.txt settings (a text file placed in the top directory, which is used by site administrators to restrict access to files and directories on a Web server).

The resulting dataset is an index of JSON serialized documents, following the WLT document model¹, where each document captures the textual content and metadata. The document metadata consists of both, extracted metadata and enriched metadata. In the first category fall, for example, author, published datetime, location and linked content. The enriched metadata consists of NLP tokenized sentences, extracted keywords, recognized named entities (persons, locations, organizations), polarity and sentiment.

The resulting data is made available for the project via REST APIs and the inDICES dashboard and stored persistently on the WLT server cluster. Between January 2020 and September 2021 a total of 30 million English, German, Spanish, French, Dutch and Italian documents were collected.

Web Corpus / CCS Corpus

Analog to the News Media Corpus, the Web Corpus is a collection of JSON serialized documents. Content is gathered from various Web Sites outside the News domain, e.g. online magazines, domain-specific journals, business websites, online blogs etc. Analogous to the news corpus strategy, the data collection process respects the Web site owner's robots.txt settings to avoid unauthorized access. Total sources mirrored amount to around 3600, including monthly and weekly magazines, online blogs, covering sectors such as IT (Internet Technology), travel or food.

Through the inDICES partners, sources from the Cultural and Creative Sector (CCS) have been collected and integrated into the Web Corpus (see section 3.3). Additionally a set of museums, archives and libraries based in the Netherlands has been extracted from Wikidata as part of a pilot case, and their respective Web Sites were added to the source configuration. They currently total at 2200 sources.

All documents are enriched with metadata and available through the same mechanisms as the News Media Corpus, providing a unified API-based access system. This dataset is intended for the analysis of term frequency distributions over time and across regions, term associations, average sentiment for a given time period, and for conducting impact evaluations.

Social Media Corpus

This dataset consists of a set of social media postings collected from different social networks. To gather the data, we use the official APIs provided by those networks, strictly adhering to these platform's usage restrictions and only accessing the public portion of the content.

The core experiments are run on Twitter content as a result of queries on specified terms of interest and accounts of relevance, given the limitations of other platforms such as Facebook. Additionally, a limited amount of generic Facebook and Youtube content is part of the dataset. Should the need arise for additional non-Twitter content, the data gathering configuration will be adjusted in the coming months, in order to accurately reflect the topics of interest.

The dataset itself is an index of JSON serialized documents, where each document captures the content of one social media posting and associated metadata, including datetime, user information (user id, status, followers, thumbnail), geo location, and enriched metadata based on the processed text, i.e. keywords, named entities, sentiment. Between January 2020 and September 2021 a total of 77 million Tweets were collected (~95% of them after January 2021) and enriched across all languages, with the majority of 72 million being English tweets.

CHI Knowledge Graph - GLAM Entities (NL Pilot)

The dataset is a set of RDF (Resource Description Framework) – W3C² specifications for metadata modelling of web resources – statements that represent factual knowledge about cultural organizations of interest and associated entity-level metadata derived from Linked Open Data (LOD) sources. The initial set of Dutch entities was generated based on a SPARQL query, defining wikidata entity types and subtypes of interest, while excluding types that lead to undesired results. The main focus were Dutch GLAM organizations (museums, libraries and archives). The resulting set of ~2000 entities was provided to Dutch project partner NISV as a google spreadsheet for review, and extended with additional metadata, such as further associated social media accounts that are not available in the wikidata model. Afterwards the data was transformed into RDF triples and stored as part of the webLizard semantic knowledge base. In order to clearly identify and connect this new subset of entities, processes were put into place that allow for storing entities into different SPARQL graphs within one dataset.

Through an entity recognition and information extraction pipeline the new entities are associated when their surface forms, i.e. names or name variations are mentioned in document text and can be tracked for content analysis.

It is planned to further extend this set with relevant entities from other European countries.

The preservation of the original wikidata dataset is stored in a Blazegraph triple store and any customized metadata is stored in an Apache Fuseki triple store hosted by WLT, including information when they were created and with what associated provenance. Both follow predefined RDF schemas for representing and storing linked data. The triple store is synchronized with a distributed Elasticsearch index for faster querying and metadata retrieval.

Accessibility and Integration into the Open Observatory

The documents in the News Media, the Web and the Social Media corpora are accessible to project partners via REST APIs where access is granted via API key upon request, and through the inDICES dashboard that is part of the Open Observatory, with the option to generate PDF reports and download partial datasets as CSV. Embeddable visualizations, such as a tag cloud, a keyword graph and a geographic map, computed from the WLT collected datasets are integrated into the Participatory Space, both to contextualize user interactions, and as part of the Dashboard Lite to quickly visualize predefined topics and areas of interest for inDICES target audiences and stakeholders. The collected datasets themselves are only accessible as part of the inDICES project for authenticated users / client applications.

For collected data from the Web and social networks we respect all guidelines and limits of the content owners – i.e., the social network API terms and conditions as well as the instructions published via the robots.txt file for Web pages. A pointer back to the original content and the original URL is stored in the database and is always shown in conjunction with the search results, to both guarantee credit to the content owner and refer to the original source.

The gathered datasets provide a comprehensive overview of the current media landscape, encompassing world news as well as the specific debates and stakeholder communication highly relevant to the cultural sector - via institutional websites, magazines, blogs and social media channels, that are collected and processed in close to real-time. With it the latest trends and rising topics can be discovered and taken into account for planning dissemination strategies, optimizing public outreach activities and connecting with key audiences. Additional data metrics that are computed and offered through interactive components of the Visual Analytics Dashboard make it easy for the observer to assess frequency of content, impact of a document by taking the reach of the data source into consideration, or the sentiment associated with the coverage of a certain topic. Through the extraction of top keywords and associations the user can easily extend or restrict the search and change the topic of investigation, being guided by arising content connections. Possible use cases include tracking a single institutions coverage and perception in comparison to competitors, detecting promising strategies that are pursued by acknowledged institutions in the field or geographic area, or following the evolution of the public discussion on topics of interest, e.g. EU Copyright Directive, Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) or the digitization of cultural assets.

3.3 Case studies lists and Trend indicators

In order to set and implement the data analysis process on CHIs' social networks users' behavior, with a special focus on the Covid19 wave of forced digitization, WP1 partners prepared a set of lists of accounts whose past and current activity we aim to monitor. WP1, to M21, built a set of case-studies, made by lists of Facebook and Instagram accounts, per macro-sectoral areas of cultural and creative institutions. The sectors' case studies that have been outlined and analysed to M21 are (see D1.4 section 3 for further details regarding the criteria of selection of CHIs per each list):

- European National Libraries sector
- European Archives Institutes sector
- Most Visited European Museums
- Museums that employ the Virtual Tour tool on a global scale

The additional lists that have been realized, and that WP1 planned to analyze with the same research objectives, from M22 to M24, are:

- European Theatres
- European Archeological sites
- Fashion GLAMS
- a case study list regarding the macro-sector of the Audiovisual, which criteria have to be collectively defined via inDICES internal Hypothesis Assembly.

The lists of websites, aimed at being integrated within the Visual Analytics Dashboard, that have been realized and still need to be perfected, regards:

- Movie festivals
- Contemporary art and Art Market
- Performance/Theatre/Critics
- GLAM list
- wikidata GLAMs
- Lit-journals/blogs (on cultural content)
- Open Access Journals (on cultural content)

The content of the lists that have been finalized to M21 can be found in the Annex I to this deliverable.

Per each list, respectively CCS, WP1 partners defined "trend indicators" – collections of specific lemmas – to be investigated and related topics defined and analyzed via the Visual Analytics Dashboard, with the goal to perform trend and impact analysis for various CCS through web content and social media posts, shedding light on socio-cultural trends.

4. Usefulness and limitations

One of the goals of inDICES is to offer the tools to help researchers, CCIs, and policy-makers and decision-makers track policies and cultural trends over the long-term. To achieve this we need to approach the cultural ecosystem from different viewpoints and from different scales: from the micro (individuals), meso (CCIs, organizations, etc.), to macro (transnational, EU-wide, worldwide). An alternative classification of cultural dynamics is through the mode of production: from Culture 1.0, based on patronage, to Culture 2.0, typical of the cultural and creative industries, and to Culture 3.0, characteristic of open platforms [P.L. Sacco, Culture 3.0: A new perspective for the EU 2014-2020 structural funds programming. OMC Working Group on Cultural and Creative Industries (2011)]. The collected data discussed in Section 3 aims to offer a representative coverage of these types and modes present on the web.

The data collected, described in this deliverable, aim at achieving this goal. We envision their use by a wide audience of users (citizens, non-profit organizations, researchers, policy makers) interested in the possible implications of digital platforms on cultural production. In particular, the dissemination targets identified by WP4 being policy makers, practitioners and researchers, we can highlight here three different modes of use that could be the most common.

The first, and most immediate, concerns the direct consultation of research outputs in the form of figures, tables, statistics and research reports, suitably presented and organized to make them accessible, understandable and usable also by non-technical audiences, while at the same time providing materials that are of interest for more technically and research-oriented users. The user pool would include policy makers aiming at defining or improving policies on active participation via social platforms and practitioners (or artists) willing to understand the value of developing new digital strategies/tools or practices of bottom-up/collective co-creation. In this way, users have immediate access to the full array of complex information captured by the data, and can thus analyze and identify the trends regarding the impact of digital platforms and tools on the behavior of online users and the new forms of cultural production that the latter make possible in the virtual space of the Internet. The second is the integration into an Observatory Platform and an Interactive Dashboard that allows you to build one's own specific research question to which attempt to answer or to set the free parameters of analysis in such a way as to intercept trends or converging sectors that, at first, have not been deeply analyzed during inDICES. Finally, a last mode concerns the direct access to raw data, in this way the most advanced users will be able to create new autonomous ways of using data, leaving open future opportunities not explored at the time of the inDICES conclusion.

The possible uses of the collected data on inDICES are many: they range from the primary need to understand cultural trends, to the implementation of cultural policies aimed at specific sectors such as museums or contemporary art exhibitions, up to tiny niche sectors, such as, for example, the construction of film scenes using eco-sustainable paper materials. These heterogeneous modalities show how there is no single way to use the data and the analysis and tools provided by inDICES, but how in general a descriptive, exploratory and explanatory use is what we expect users to adopt. This is also dictated by the fact that inDICES will be providing one of the first tools of this kind in the cultural sector, while others exist for more consolidated sectors from this point of view, such as the economic or environmental sectors. Therefore, we expect a use similar to what has been done in the past within the more consolidated economic and social sectors. Finally, the workshops conducted so far have reinforced this point of view by showing how the same participants and stakeholders have emphasized and wished for a use that basically reflects the ideas behind the production of the research output of inDICES, that is, making use of appropriate computational tools to better understand the less obvious dimensions and aspects of the changes that the digital large-scale production and participation dynamics that characterizes the Culture 3.0 regime is bringing about in the cultural field.

To serve this wide variety of users and use cases, we have gathered (and will continue to gather up to M36, that will be discussed in D1.5 and D1.6) a multiplicity of datasets useful to understand how cultural production spreads in the digital realm, give hints on the user behavior on these cultural platforms—which is something that has not systematically researched so far—, as well as to pave the way for future theoretical and applied research. Moreover, they are also helpful in that they can be employed as use cases to inspire future users of the Observatory Platform.

During these months spent in acquiring and analyzing data, we have found a number of obstacles. In some cases, we took steps to overcome them, but in other cases the very nature of the dataset necessarily limits its usability in terms of quality, reliability and accessibility.

The first dataset we got access to were already-available on-line sources and relevant reports on the CHI digitalization status and socio-economic impact across the EU (see D1.3). Although these resources can be useful so far for a wide range of researchers and practitioners (see D1.3), these datasets were created through a standard process of direct consultation with institutions through surveys, which revealed two limitations: first, that the number of participating institutions was in sharp decline after the first wave; second, that they lacked accurate data regarding the interaction between the digitized objects of their work and the web ecosystem. Finally, a final problem was inherent in the granularity of the data collected, which, of necessity, could not be temporally unpacked into micro periods (hours or days) nor for types of users or audience (citizens or the private).

Conversely, the datasets described in this deliverable attempt at capturing the complex nature of the global cultural digitalization process, that can be instead tracked in quasi-real time using the web-based methodologies. This alternative solution comes however with particular limitations, specific of each dataset:

Dataset	Limitations	Solution Implemented
Wikipedia	Huge data dimensionality.	We limited our data collection to one-shot download, not automatically updated.
IMDb	Non transferable licence.	We plan to share the data collection code
Tiktok	Technical limitation in analyzing visual content. Video data loss due to deletion by users.	Analysis focused on the networks of interaction between users and communities.
DeviantArt	Limited number of queries in the API. Non transferable licence.	Data collection limited to the top lists. We plan to share the data collection code.
Alltheater.es	Short period of collection. Sensitive economical data from a small company.	Use limited to case study analysis, that must be mindful of providing only relative trends and not absolute values.
Social media data (Facebook, Instagram, Twitter)	Content can contain personal data protected by the GDPR, and the platform's terms of use state that content cannot be openly shared as a bulk dataset.	We analyze the data in aggregated form via Crowdtangle and the Visual Analytics Dashboard. We offer authenticated access to stakeholders through the INDICES Visual Analytic Dashboard
News Media data	The publishing sites hold the copyright of the articles, which therefore cannot be made available publicly.	We offer limited access to the stakeholders through our Visual Analytic Dashboard

4.1 Use cases

We offer some use cases to illustrate how the datasets gathered so far could be employed and how they could target different profiles.

- Independent Researcher.
Impact areas: Culture 3.0, Cultural production, Digital commons, Internet studies
Dataset: Wikipedia

An independent researcher is studying the role of a cultural elite in the digital knowledge systems. The hypothesis to test is whether or not in horizontal, open digital platforms, such as Wikipedia, there is a set of users that become an elite of producers driving the peer-to-peer production process. There, he/she does not have neither the proper dataset nor the metrics to identify if there is an elite and quantify their influence on the other users and the process of knowledge production

With the Wikipedia dataset and some indicators developed in D1.1, such as Gini index about content production and the topological position of the actors in the network of content production, these questions can be addressed.

- Success of a cultural campaign

Impact areas: Social/Public marketing, public communication

Dataset: Twitter, Facebook

Cultural organizations seek to maximize the impact of a marketing campaign. Without data, it is difficult to know when it is the right moment to start the advertising of a public event and how to track the success of the digital campaign.

Looking at the online activity of other cultural institutions/organizations, we can learn and extract information of different patterns based on hit economy metrics (attention, time-series of total interaction, etc.) and propose and track different strategies of marketing gamification (e.g., hashtag races).

- Artists' coefficient of a self-employed artist

Impact areas: management, contemporary art, galleries

Dataset: Web Corpus

The artistic coefficient is used to calculate the market value of an artwork. It is a widespread practice in art galleries that want to include an artwork in a catalog. This coefficient, however, is a subjective measure based on the criteria of the gallerist and the market tendencies.

A problem that many self-employed artists face is the unavailability of calculating their own artist coefficient, especially for those working in the digital realm. They cannot trace their digital impact, e.g., in news and blogs on contemporary art and in social networks. The VAD offers a tool to trace these trends and thus help the artist better redefine the price of his/her artworks by suitably combining this source of information with more established ones such as those related to artistic reputation (e.g. as tracked by artifacts.net).

- Content Creator / Social Media Editor for a Cultural Institution

Impact areas: User Engagement, Marketing

Dataset: News Media Corpus / Web Corpus / Social Media Corpus

As a content creator or social media editor of my institution, I want to increase the reach and impact of my site - in general and in terms of specific articles - through content optimization. I can use visual widgets to illustrate ongoing campaigns and detect trending topics that I can then use to refine my strategy or incorporate into actual posts. With the help of sentiment analysis I can avoid topics with a negative connotation and focus on contributions to solution-based, valuable discussions that increase my institution's reach and improve public perception. I can further restrict my search to similar institutions in the field to see which topics or services they currently promote.

- CHI Professional with Interest in Digitalization

Impact areas: Digitalization, Business Intelligence

Dataset: News Media Corpus / Web Corpus utilizing CHI Knowledge Graph

As a CHI professional that is interested in digital transformation, I need to identify high-impact topics surrounding digitalization that can improve my institution's daily work. The interactive inDICES dashboard helps me to scout the latest technology trends, learn about related topics and organizations in my field, and identify leading experts to reach out to in order to learn about best practice and synergies or even establish a formal collaboration.

5. Data organizational scheme

As discussed in the deliverable D1.1 and D1.3, users will be provided access to the various datasets and content resources provided by inDICES partner on CHI digitization via the inDICES Repository and the Open Observatory Platform. This would require the integration of a variety of sources and formats as well as developing effective information architecture.

The Open Observatory Platform is distributed mainly in two independent places: The customized Decidim application for InDICES and the WLT Visual Analytics Dashboard. These two applications use different technologies and have different purposes:

Visual Analytics Dashboard

The Visual Analytics Dashboard is dedicated to ingest massive amounts of data and provides a frontend for analyzing it. Only a subset of the Open Observatory users, with the right permissions, has the ability to access the dashboard, however, the application also provides an API for InDICES to automatically integrate some of the widgets into the main platform, without requiring any special user privileges. For this purpose, custom tools have been developed on top of Decidim to integrate it with the Visual Analytics Dashboard. This includes, for instance, automatic analysis of posts uploaded in the platform users and relate them to external or internal content.

Decidim

Decidim is the public face of the project and handles all primary user interactions. It effectively acts as a social network providing several spaces with features like comments, creating posts, sharing with others, etc. It provides a framework for allowing users to insert content into the platform and a place to develop interactive applications. One of these applications will be a catalog of the different data sources, the “Data repository”, organized according to a structured criteria, with links to papers or any other relevant information. In some cases it will also allow users to download the datasets or a processed subset of them for external analysis. However, it will not be a dynamic source of datasets, as any content here needs to be curated and validated by a proper administrator to ensure the quality of the results.

Thus far WP4 has hosted several assemblies to begin to create the information architecture within which the ‘Data repository’ would fit as well as incorporated it within WP4’s user experience research and strategy development. To develop the platform WP4 engaged in user experience research creating, personas, user stories, user journeys, and facilitated sessions for partners to co-create and experiment with use cases. Much of the work done is detailed in D4.1 and D5.6.

Specifically concerning the data repository, several use case exercises were conducted amongst partners to test how they saw the data generated by FBK fitting into the needs of CHI practitioners and researchers. Ultimately, the data generated by the repository is not for a general audience but more towards a technical, research audience. Therefore, within the platform interface the data repository within the overarching architecture will be most easily accessible for those working within academic or technical knowledge oriented fields.

Another relevant application developed on top of Decidim, is the “self assessment tool” which will allow users to evaluate their own processes’ status of digitalization. The self-assessment bench-marking tool will allow CHI institutions to “measure” where they find themselves on the route to Digital Transformation and co-creative user-engagement. The SAT may also provide a pathway to those interested in the data observatory, because it may offer the data observatory as part of a series of recommendations depending on the user’s input of their needs.

Finally, the access to the Visualization Dashboard will be controlled by Decidim, assigning different roles to certain users and allowing them to seamlessly change between the two underlying technologies.

In summary, the Visual Analytics Dashboard will handle large amounts of data (ie: “big data”) returning digested results and visualizations and can be used by individual contributors to generate reports and curated datasets to be made available in the Data repository.
