Introduction. This problem is interpreted in the folk pedagogy, in the teaching of great thinkers, in connection with intellectual education and learning. We know from history that the upbringing of our great thinkers is very early, i.e. 3-4 starting from a young age, reading books with the help of their nannies (educators) to listen to fairy tales, epics, stories, wise words, to make friends with books who gave great importance. So That is probably why our great scholars, scientists, poets, artists, and creators, in a word, were brought up as fully educated and perfect people. The main task of a master is to prepare his students to search for ways of happiness. It should be said that reading books, listening to hadiths, and reading various charming narratives and legends about the life of the people's heroes, relying on colorful and at the same time interesting content, reading treatises filled with stories exhorting goodness and humanity, and knowing them, as well as thinking about the works, is an honorable and sacred heritage left to us by our past generations.¹ Fiction has always helped young people to understand the world, make friends, and find their place in life. It is valued as the best means of perfecting the feelings of love for the Motherland, loyalty to the country, and love for people in the child's heart. The source of human maturity and knowledge is related to the book. He leads man to perfection. Spiritual perfection is a person's spiritual purification, having moral consciousness and emotions, living honestly and cleanly, and having strong faith as the highest goal. It should be said that our people have been paying special attention to issues of spirituality and morality since ancient times. No matter what field of science our ancestors were engaged in, they paid special attention to the formation of human spirituality and education problems. In particular, the issues of spiritual and moral education are widely covered in Yusuf Khos Hajib's "Kutadgu bilig", Kaikovus' "Qabusnoma", Ahmad Yugnakiy's "Hibat ul-haqayiq", Sahdi's "Gulistan", Alisher Navoi's works. In fact, this spiritual awakening enriches the outlook of our children, develops their speech, and strengthens their memory. A book is an advisor, a loyal companion, a best friend and a priceless treasure. Its role in child education is important. As in all ages, the role of fiction in educating young people in the spirit of love and loyalty to the country is incomparable. A child who reads books concentrates his knowledge, outlook, psyche and spirituality and begins to understand the world deeply. He learns to appreciate life and beauty, to preserve the heritage of our ancestors. In Uzbek families, the love of books, protection of books, and reading are one of the ancient traditions and occupy an important place in the spiritual development of our people. Most of the works that children of preschool age listen to are alla-songs, fairy tales, riddles, proverbs, and folk oral works. In addition, works created by writers that fully meet the above requirements are suitable for children of preschool age. Humanity came into the world, and throughout its historical development, it has paid special attention to the education of healthy, well-rounded and perfect people.² Our native nation has also been seriously engaged in the issue of the maturity of generations. In this regard, the Uzbek people have unique, wonderful traditions that have passed the test of long historical experience. The mature national spirituality of our people in terms of education has always been a component of universal human values and will remain so. One of the main goals of the reforms being carried out in our country today is to further increase the knowledge and spirituality of young people, to provide sufficient conditions for them to have a healthy outlook both mentally and physically. Especially in recent years, the positive use of the impressive power of fiction to shape the worldview of young people has been very effective. As the hero of Uzbekistan, Azod Sharofiddinov, said: "I am always surprised by one thing, whenever four people get together, we face the sadness of raising children, the pain of making them human. Brothers, the easiest, cheapest, most effective way to do this is right next to you: teach your child to read books, instill in him love and affection for fiction. , buy your children a good book for three or four soums! After all, is it possible to find any teacher in the world smarter than a book? After all, there is nothing that is not in the books! The total force that makes a person a person is written in the books of power, wisdom, beauty, intelligence and manners: "Here I am!" Do you think that it is possible to be a human without benefiting from this great blessing and priceless wealth?!" Since time immemorial, fiction has educated people, especially the young generation, in the spirit of humanity, love for the Motherland, truthfulness and honesty, hard work, politeness and humility. Independent thinking and creativity enrich the qualities reflected in the image of a well-rounded person. After all, these two qualities are recognized as the main criteria for the positive result of activities organized at a certain stage of social development. The first President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Islam Karimov, in his fundamental work in the field of spirituality, "High Spirituality - Invincible Power", touched on the topic of literary literature: "There is another powerful tool that discovers a person and his spiritual world, and that is the art of words, fiction.³ It is not without reason that literature is defined as humanities, and poets and writers are defined as engineers of the human soul.

Conclusion. In conclusion, it can be noted that fiction, which by its essence encourages creativity, imbued with the spirit of kindness, humanity, patriotism, and goodness, plays an important role in the formation of such beautiful qualities in people of the present time. Our artistic heritage, which has been created for thousands of years on our motherland, gives an idea and understanding about the high potential, strength, creative traditions of our people, and the glorious history of our homeland. Every person living in this holy land feels pride in their heart. As one of the main tasks of the national ideology is to realize identity in the thinking of our compatriots, loyalty to the historical memory, preservation of our sacred values, perfecting the sense of patriotism, artistic heritage and its ideas are one of the important factors in forming a sense of patriotism towards the country in our youth. there is no doubt. Therefore, our immortal artistic and literary heritage remains one of the most important means of ideological education.
