"The choice of tool in a collaborative setting is a trade-off between needs and functionalities, and is often a matter of common denominator between the competencies of the team members"

(Błaszczyńska, Maryl, Szulińska, Tóth-Czifra et al. 2021. „Future of Scholarly Communication . Forging an Inclusive and Innovative Research Infrastructure for Scholarly Communication in Social Sciences and Humanities". Zenodo. https://doi.org/10.5281/zenodo.5017705.)

Are you looking for a tool which is…

- designed for reporting bugs and ideas for improvements, new functionalities;
- free, open, transparent;
- modular, with a direct connection to the code of your project;
- requires NO CODING SKILLS

The New Panorama of the Polish Literature case study

- 7-10 digital humanists, 1 graphic designer, 2 developers
- Have been using Github Issues for 1 year and 3 months ;) during Dariah.Lab project - check: Lab.dariah.pl/en
- Projects around digital monographies, digital scholarly editing (literary texts) and biobibliographical data
- DH team: TEI, UX (all phases), manual semantic annotation
- Developers are from STEM and Arts departments

Golden rules

- Screenshots and links are a MUST for bugs issues
- Be sure that there is no ALREADY existing issue
- Use labels and pay attention to PENDING label
- Assign a coordinator of Issues (that's me btw) for contact with devs and ensure DH team writes issues properly
- and…

What Github Issues is not

- A place for DH team to discuss ‘early ideas’, brainstorm’ - at Github Issues we communicate with devs
- We use Slack for discuss ideas first within the DH team - and for everyday communication ;)
- You can investigate the “Discussions” section in Github for this step in your workflow - a more or less “forum” thing

Gaining skills in Q&A testing

- formulating bug reports in an adequate manner
- communicating clearly and efficiently
- creating evidences for issues (screenshots, links)
- ensuring that the project meets its goals
