The following group of ten gold pentekontadrachma (50 drachms) was seen in commerce in Jerusalem in early 2013. Their find spot is entirely uncertain. It is also unclear whether this represents the entirety of the hoard. All are of the same variety, with no control mark (Sv. 604).

The chronology of this coinage remains, to a certain extent, murky. In their study of this coinage, Olivier and Lorber suggest that it could have been struck by c. 261 BC, after which it would have been replaced by the gold issues in the name of Arsinoe Philadelphus alone,<sup>38</sup> but they cannot rule out a terminal date as late as c. 245. The absence of Arsinoe issues might suggest a date before 260 for this hoard, on the high chronology for the coinage. However, this group is certainly not complete, and could conceivably represent a parcel of one particular denomination and type, hived off of a larger assemblage for commercial reasons. Moreover, the coins present do exhibit some wear. Given the lower chronology for the coinage, one could not rule out a burial date as late as the 230s. At best, therefore, we may suggest a date of deposit around the middle of the 3rd century BC.
